University Players' Present American Premiere Tomorrow

"The University Players" will present the premiere American performance of Helge Krog's "On Life's Sunny Side" tomorrow night, 8:30, in Southwick auditorium. A second performance is scheduled for Saturday night. Mr. Krog is a Norwegian playwright and drama critic.

In connection with the "University Players'" production of "On Life's Sunny Side", a workshop discussion will be conducted Sunday afternoon under the auspices of UVM's theatre group and the New England Theatre Conference.

The afternoon's program will consist of a third performance of Helge Krog's production and a discussion of contemporary, and little-produced, playwrights.

Invitations have been extended to theatre personalities in the New York and New England theatre.

The afternoon's program will begin at 2:30 with the play's production; the discussion program will follow.

Well known in London theatre circles and on the Continent, Mr. Krog, has not been widely read in America. His lone work produced on the American stage is "On The Way" which was done by two professional groups; one in California, the second in Michigan.

Heading the cast of six is Richard Ireland, who appeared in the group's production of "Oedipus Rex". Ireland played Choragus in that production and will appear tomorrow and Saturday as Hartwig Biibe. Playing opposite him will be Ross Faber as his wife, Esther. Others in the cast are Ann Terry as Wenche; Kathy Dimock in the role of Lady Margaret; Bob Smith, Uncle Severin; and Arnold Goran, Preben Klingenberger.

The play is a comedy, in four acts.

Tickets have been on sale in Waterman, 75 cents, all week and will be available at the door.

In charge of lighting is

Plan Drive For Theatre

Plans are now underway to raise $15,000 for the construction of an arena-type theatre for the University of Vermont. Heading the drive is Professor Greg Falls and the "University Players". Falls is a member of the Speech department and is director of the "players".

John Van Blarcom, publicity chairman for the fund raising campaign, said "the idea of an arena theatre is not a new one, although fund raising plans were not formulated until two weeks ago."

$15,000 Not Enough

According to VanBlarcom, "the $15,000 goal will not meet construction costs in full. However, such a sum will signify that the project is being undertaken in all earnestness and it is hoped that others, not as directly concerned with the project, will have their interest aroused and will aid the

SA Elections Set For Wednesday; Petitions Due

A new president of Student Association, seven councilmen and six justices of the Student Court will be elected Wednesday when the UVM electorage goes to the polls. In addition, a treasurer, sub-treasurer, secretary and sub-secretary are to be elected.

According to Phil Murphy, SA president, all petitions for elective offices had to be completed and handed in by 4 PM today. Murphy said, "a meeting of all candidates will be held today in order to explain election and campaigning procedure."

Any College

"The candidates for the presidency of UVM's Student Association can come from any College of the University and may be members of any academic class," a spokesman for the SA Elections Committee said.

Three freshman, two sophomores and two juniors are to be elected Wednesday.

All the members of the Student Court to be elected will be members of the junior class. Regulations make it mandatory that only juniors and seniors sit on the Court's bench.

All candidates who have submitted petitions by today must have secured at least 100 signatures on a petition-for-office. The only exception to this rule occurs in the matter of officers of Student Association. Those vieing for officerships must have petitions which contain, at the minimum, 150 signatures.

UVM Student Court Deciding Legality Of CYNIC Petition

"To be, or not to be;" that was the question before the Student Court this week. The question of the legality of a petition which is intended to cut off Student Association funds from The VERMONT CYNIC, official student weekly, was thrown right into the lap of the student judiciary group at last Thursday's SA meeting.

The entire question dated back three weeks, when Richard Adams, '56, submitted a petition signed by 150 students which read, "We, the undersigned students... Request that at the annual Student Association spring election, the question of continuance of financial assistance to The VERMONT CYNIC by the Student Association be referred to the student voters for their decision."

Vague Wording

Because of the vagueness of the wording, i.e. no definite affirmative or negative statement as regarding the continuance of funds, the petition was tabled to the next meeting so that a more definite petition might be circulated.

The new petition read: "Resolved that The VERMONT CYNIC shall not receive further financial assistance from the UVM Student Association." The petition was then circulated. However, the necessary 115 names (five percent of the enrollment) could not be attained by Mr. Adams.

Tough Spot

As a result of the failure to forward a new petition, Student Association found itself deliberating the original draft last Thursday. In doing so, the Council found itself in a rather difficult position.

If a negative stand were taken on the question, the petition would be forwarded to the students for their decision. This procedure follows from the SA Constitution.

However, if an affirmative stand were taken, the question would still be put to the Petition Void JPB States

The Joint Publication Board has unanimously recommended that the petition presented to the Student Association by Richard Adams, calling for the removal of student financial aid to the CYNIC, be voted down.

Meeting in Waterman building, Monday afternoon, the board drew up the following statement and recommendation to the Student Association Council: The petition does not apparently state the aims of the signers. As a remedy for their complaints it seems unworthy of further consideration. The recommendation will be placed before the Council at its meeting this evening when it meets to vote on Adams' referendum petition.

The statement of the board concludes: The JPB, however, will proceed to examine such criticism (of the CYNIC) as has been offered.

Gordon Directs New CYNIC Staff; UVM Debaters Pay Way To Tourney

Vermont Orators Improve Record In BC Tournament

UVM improved its record of last year but failed to place among the top four teams at the annual Brooklyn College debate tournament held this past weekend.

Andy Karp and Leonard Kronman, negative, compiled a 4-1 record and Cynthia Wooster and Leonie Strachen, a 2-3 slate as the Lawrence Debate Club debaters complied a 6-4 record.

Karp, Kronman Wins

Karp and Kronman topped New York University, (Heights) and N.Y.U., (Washington Square College), Amherst and St. John's Fisher (Rochester, N.Y.) while Wooster and Strachan defeated Tufts and Dickinson and lost to Canisius, Georgetown and Rutgers.

Karp and Kronman met another men's duo from Vermont, Marshal Kroot and Sheldon Horowitz, Tuesday and are now traveling to the Georgetown University tournament. On the way to the District of Columbia meeting, the debaters stopped at Princeton Tuesday and Annapolis yesterday to debate. The debates start tomorrow.

Staring Heads Business Staff

A new senior staff of the VERMONT CYNIC was elected to office Thursday night. The new board of editors for the 1954-55 CYNIC will be headed by Bradley Gordon '55 who was named Editor-in-Chief.

Coming into office with Gordon are Frances Raphael and David Spector, Co-Managing editors; Max Ansbacher, News Editor; Marvin Nierenberg, Feature Editor; Donald Kidder and Nancy McCone, Co-Production editors; Gerry Goldman, Sports Editor; Joan Breslin, Society Editor; Matthew Evans, Rewrite Editor; Leslie Staring, Business Manager.

Gordon has been a member of the CYNIC for the past five semesters. He served initially as a sports reporter and was named Sports Editor his sophomore year. He was a Co-Managing Editor this year.

Of the ten-man senior staff, the paper's editorial board, five did not serve in an editorial capacity during the editorship of Donald Forst, the retiring editor. The new members of the board are: Ansbacher, a freshman, Nierenberg, a sophomore, Kidder, a freshman, Evans, a sophomore.

Three members of the board retained their old positions. Joan Breslin '56, was re-elected Society Editor, Gerry Goldman '56, retained the sports editorship, and Nancy McCone '56, remained in the position of a Co-Production Editor.

In addition to the election of the Senior Staff, the retiring board elected 10 reporters to the position of "Senior Reporter". A reporter in this category is considered one of the paper's top staffers and is looked to for assistance by the various editors under which they work. Elected "Senior Reporters" were: Feature, "Sandy"

Expect To Gain New Views

"We want the experience we can gain by debating the top teams which will appear in this tournament" is the answer Herzl Spiro gave when asked why he and his debate partner, Kevin Kearney, are paying their own way to the University of Notre Dame Invitational Tournament which begins tomorrow and runs until Saturday.

The Notre Dame tornament is strictly an invitational affair. The top 30 debate duos of the nation will meet in South Bend tomorrow. The only two teams from the East to be invited were UVM and Dartmouth. UVM topped Dartmouth, 4-f, in a debate here Wednesday.

Weak Sisters

According to Spiro, Eastern debate teams are looked upon as "weak sisters by the teams of the Mid-west. The Mid-west turns out better and in greater number than does the East, said UVM's top-notch debater. "For this reason" he continued, "we'll probably be regarded as underdogs in this tournament."

Such a position will be a Change Wording For Memorial Scholarships

"Worthy students who are in need of funds and who meet the qualifications of scholarship, character, leadership, and indicated athletic promise, are recommended to the Student Aid Committee..."

The above quote is taken from the still unprinted 1954-55 Bulletin of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. The words, "and indicated athletic promise," have been substituted for the original "...and participation in student activities..." in the new statement of qualifications for the Alumni Memorial Scholarships.

The alteration came as a result of President Carl W. Borgmann's disagreement with the original wording, which theoretically qualified many more students for the scholarship than were actually allowed to receive it. Although the phrase "participation in student activities" covered a multitude of activities, the scholarships invariably were channeled to athletes. The principle of "saying one thing in print and doing another in actuality" was

Festival Of Fine Arts And Crafts Combined With Founders Day Weekend' April 30

In celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of UVM's first graduation, students and faculty of the University will entertain visitors from within and without the state at a three-day Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts which is being planned for Friday through Sunday, April 30, May 1 and 2. The Festival, which will bring to the campus outstanding artists and craftsmen of northern New England, will coincide with the University's annual Founders' Day ceremonies, and with a special service designed to honor UVM's first president, Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders, whose birthday was May 3, 1768.

Since the festival will emphasize the vigorous activity now going on in northern New England in the fields of the arts, crafts, and industrial crafts, exhibits and programs will represent a variety of colleges, museums, business firms, and individuals in the area. A number of institutions and individuals are cooperating with the University in planning and staging the festival.

Open Founder's Day

The festival will open with the Founders' Day Convocation Friday morning, April 30, at which the Class of 1954 will wear its caps and gowns for the first time, and will continue through the three days, with a break Friday evening so as not to conflict with fraternity dances scheduled for that night. All exhibits and programs will be free except for the annual UVM opera, which will be presented by the Department of Music under the direction of Professor Howard Bennett, assisted by Professor Gregory Falls and the drama group. Professor Bennett had advanced the date of one performance of the opera, "Trouble in Tahiti" by Leonard Bernstein, which is to be preceded by Sundgaard's and Wilder's "Sunday Excursion," to Saturday evening, May 1, in order to present it during the festival. The second performance will follow the usual pattern by falling within Junior Week after the "Pee-rade" which annually takes as its theme the theme of the opera being presented.

Students are invited to attend all events and exhibitions, and to invite their relatives and friends to the campus for the festival. Featured non-University musical event will be a concert by the Vermont Symphony Orchestra Sunday evening. Alan Carter will conduct, and a member of the faculty of a sister Vermont college, Max Pollikoff of Bennington College, will be violin soloist. An exhibition of paintings by outstanding northern New England artists, a dance program, and exhibition of handcrafts and of industrial crafts will be other features of the festival. The Vermont Arts and Crafts Service of the Department of Education, under the direction of Miss Ruth W. Coburn, is cooperating in preparing the crafts exhibition, as is the Fleming Museum, in which both exhibitions and demonstrations will be located. The Shelburne Museum, many business firms, and individuals are cooperating with the committee which is preparing the exhibition of industrial crafts--called "Tools and Processes, Then and Now"--which will be held in the Gymnasium, and which will emphasize the ingenuity, the inventiveness, and the artistry of toolmakers and similar craftsmen throughout New England's history.

Assistance

Many members of the University are assisting in working out details for the festival. On the main committee are Rev. R. A. Hall, chapel ceremonies; Prof. Howard Bennett, music; Prof. Gregory Falls, drama; Prof. Isabel Mills, crafts; Prof. Francis Colburn, art; Miss Martha Howe, dance; Prof. E. C. Schneider, industrial crafts; Prof. Jane Wamboldt, radio; Miss Majorie Rowell, Staff and Sandal; Ken English, senior class; Prof. Betty Bandel, chairman. Assisting Prof. Schneider in preparing for the industrial crafts exhibit is a sub-committee consisting of W. A. Dodge, Prof. R. G. Sidle, Prof. D. B. Johnstone, Prof. A. Bradfield, Miss Susan Merrow, Dr. Charles Okey of the Medical College, and Dr. Herbert McArthur.

Honor First Arrivals

The festival, with its emphasis upon New England's progress today, was selected by the University as a fitting means of honoring the one man and four youths who were the University of Vermont up until its first graduation in 1804. When the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders, Harvard graduate and Congragational clergyman, came to Burlington in 1799, he assumed the presidency of a frontier institution which has existed, since its chartering by the State of Vermont in 1791, largely in the imaginations of some patriotic planners in the legislature of the "New State." Undeterred by Burlington's unpainted houses or her population of just seven hundred souls, the Reverend Daniel collected four boys--Charles Adams, Wheeler Barnes, Justus P. Wheeler, and Jairus Kennan--to teach. First, however, he took off his coat, and bent his six-feet-four-inches, plus the brawn of his four scholars, to the job of clearing the pine trees off the college "green," so that the forward-looking people of Burlington could build a four-story brick college building to tower over their village. From that day in 1799, neither Sanders nor his colleagues nor his charges ever turned back from the idea of progress based on faith, liberalism, hard work, and ingenious use of the materials at hand. "Studies et rebus honestis--for studies and other worthwhile pursuits"--this was the practical motto which they selected for their college; and throughout the century and a half which have followed the University has contributed leaders to the "worthwhile pursuits" of an increasingly diverse American life.

Vermont Conference Dates Announced By Fred Hackett

Keynote Address Friday, April 15

The third annual Vermont Conference, to be held on April 15, 16, and 17, will be concerned with the question of: "What is the greatest threat to American Liberty?" Fred Hackett, '55, conference chairman for 1954, has announced that this year's event will feature notable authorities in various fields of national importance, and on either side of the question at hand.

The purpose of the conference, which has been exceptionally successful in the past is "to create an opportunity for leaders in the social, political, and economic fields to express clearly their opinions on current vital issues ... and to allow the students and faculty to digest and reflect upon these viewpoints," in the words of chairman Hackett. Previously, such noted speakers have appeared as Michael Straight, Editor of New Republic; Senator Owen Brewster, of Maine; Representative Adam Clayton Powell of New York; Dr. Alex Bebler, Yugoslav Foreign Minister to United Nations; Sumner Slichter, nationally known Harvard Economist, and others equally eminent.

As in prior years, the conference will begin with a keynote address on Thursday evening, April 15. Friday will be occupied with panel discussions and informal gatherings, and the conferences will close with the summary and rebuttal on Saturday morning. As usual, plans are being made for the speakers to meet and dine with groups of students and townspeople when not occupied with formal sessions.

Hackett, who has been busy obtaining speakers for over a month, is assisted by a committee of: Joan Solomon, Secretary; George Lucchina, Treasurer; Andy Gerber, Publicity; and Professor Harold Schultz, Faculty Advisor. Others acting in an advisory capacity are Professor S.N. Bogorad, Professor Milton Nadworny, Professor Jay Gould, Mike Abdalla, Jim Anderson, Austin Carter, Phil Murphy, Don Novick, Dick Viets and COSA Scott Mahoney.

Announcements of speakers and panels are expected in the near future.

'Skeptic' Dies Of Financial Starvation

The "Skeptic" is dead. The independent publication, which appeared on campus for two issues before publication was suspended, folded because, according to "Skeptic" publishers, they were unable to secure advertising revenue from Burlington merchants.

Published by a group of UVM students, the "Skeptic" was formed as a protest to the Kake Walk coverage of the CYNIC and the paper's editorial campaign against "black-face".

According to "Skeptic" personnel, the second edition of the paper was published because the paper's backers felt they could turn out a good student newspaper.

Funds for the first two issues came from individual students on the UVM campus.

Question: From the reports of the United Nations meetings, do you think that the UN has, in any way, accomplished its purpose?

Saenz . . . . Beebe

Nancy Beebe, '54.

Yes, I'd say the UN has accomplished many important projects but the organization has a long way to go before it accomplishes its major objective---world peace.

Manuel Saenz, '54.

I am not acquainted with previous reports of the United Nations; but it is my impression that the organization accomplishes no real practical purpose in its present stage of existance. It is, however, a good beginning toward some form of world order.

Richard W. Cowles, '55.

Yes, I do believe the organization has, in many ways, accomplished its purpose. Although this has not been done with the success I would like to see, it has brought about the only means of free world unity that is possible. This unity is the only repellent force against the overthrow of our cherished freedoms.

Suzanne Irons, '57.

I believe that the stated constitutional purpose of the UN is to further world peace. Certainly it is difficult to say that this organization, in its short lifetime, has succeeded in dynamically achieving its goal; however, Americans should be world-conscious enough to recognize that the UN has furthered peace in the hearts, minds and stomachs of thousands less fortunate. Whenever a hungry mouth is fed or a diseased body healed, there is peace of mind. This is the first step to world peace.

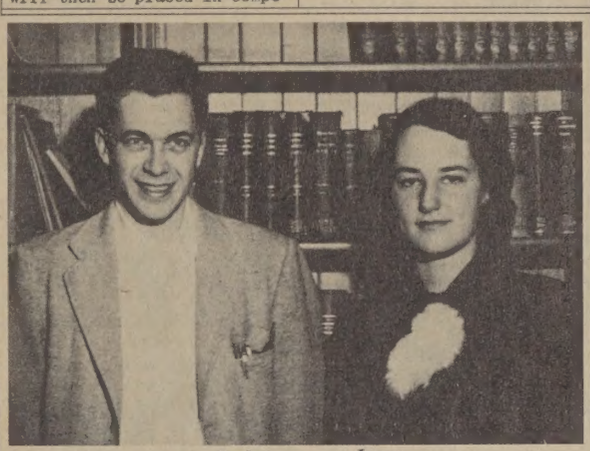
Ten Co-eds Vie To Represent UVM In Contest

A bouquet of the Vermont state flower, Red Clover, was sent to the "New York-Journal-American," special delivery, today in the form of photographs of the loveliest co-eds of the UVM campus. Picked by the Senior Staff of the CYNIC, the 10 young ladies are to be part of a full-page picture spread, which the "Journal-American" is doing on the University of Vermont and its co-eds. The spread on Vermont is one of a series which the paper is doing on colleges in the eastern seaboard area and New England.



James Morton, "Journal-American" staffer in charge of the project, told the CYNIC that "six of the girls' photographs will probably be used sometime next week."

Six To Be Used

Of the six pictures which are to be published, one will be picked by a panel of judges of the "Journal-American" as the finalist among UVM's entries. The UVM finalist will then be placed in competition with finalists of other schools and a winner will be picked and announced.

The finals will be held April 7. The girl selected will be awarded a $1,000 United States Savings Bond and will also be given one week vacation at the Castle Harbour Hotel in Bermuda.

Those selected by the Senior Staff for the contest are: Bev Chase, Nancy Hawkins, Sally Hickock, Ileane Kenny, Barbara Laurell, Joan Leviness, Jane Martin, "Marty" Marvin, Heddy Mitchell and "Liz" Whitcomb.

DeVoto Decrys Nation's Timidity

An audience of 1,100 filled Ira Allen Chapel to near capacity Tuesday night and heard Bernard DeVoto, historian and Pulitzer Prize winner, decry the growth of anti-intellectualism in the United States.

Devoto said the United States emerged from World War II the most powerful and freest nation in the world. "Today however," he said "we are only the most powerful."

The Pulitzer Prize winner called the present American public one which differed, radically, from the American people of the past. Americans once were proud and confident. "Now Americans are a scared and cautious group" he said

DeVoto based the change in the contemporary American character, and more particularly the growth of American timidity on the following:

-realization of our position as a world leader.

-realization of the responsibilities which exist.

-frustration brought on by the Korean fighting.

Mr. DeVoto told his audience this was the first time in the nation's history that it had doubted its power to withstand criticism

"This fear," DeVoto continued, "has caused us to cease doubting, to cease dissenting, to cease pursuing independent ideas and finally to fear ideas themselves."

Speaking under the sponsorship of the Program Series, Mr. DeVoto ripped into Senator Joseph McCarthy. He advocated that every attack made by the Wisconsin senator should be answered. "Only in this way can we lick him. On every occasion where he has been challenged, he has failed to attack a second time" DeVoto stated.

The most damaging blow against the movement to surpress intellectual curiosity can be struck "not at the Congressional clowns and 'yahoos' but at the local level;" DeVoto said.

The audience heard DeVoto voice confidence that the tide sas turning. He felt positive stands by the American Library Association, against book banning, and the universities and colleges of this nation, led by Harvard, had stemed the steamroller effect of the Jenner and Velde committees.

As for Senator McCarthy, DeVoto felt he was a cleverer foe than either Velde or Jenner, but that the persistant use of the same methods which have served to curb these two men, counter-attacking every charge made, could also stop McCarthy.

Editorial

So another Student Association election will be written into the books next Wednesday.

Do you know who's running? Do you know how many candidates there are? Do you know what each candidate thinks about any one of a number of controversial subjects which are of interest to the student voters?

Our guess is that a large percentage probably answered " no " to each of those questions. With only six days left before you go to the polls, that appears to be a rather sad state of affairs. Under those conditions you will be incapable of making an intelligent decision. This is not the fault of the voter. It is the fault of our electoral system.

The twenty-odd students that you elect Wednesday will administer approximately $45,000; This is your money. We don't usually entrust our money to complete strangers. But that is exactly what you will be doing when you elect the next slate of Student Association officers.

Now don't get us wrong. We are not saying that the people you put into office will be incapable of administering your funds. The point we are making is, " How do you know whether the candidates for office are capable of administering your funds? And if there is more than one candidate for any given position, how do you know who is the best for the job?"

Certainly the present system of elections does not enable you to answer those two queries, the basic questions involved in any election, no matter how large or small.

Earlier this year, the CYNIC brought the suggestion of a party system into the lime-light. We feel that the state of affairs of the present SA elections merits our once again urging that the party system be instituted at UVM.

Do you know that at this writing there is but one candidate for the SA presidency? If we jumped to conclusions, we might say that there is a lack of interest in student affairs on the part of the general student body. But we are not jumping. We do not believe that there is a feeling of apathy on the part of the students. The recent explosion over this paper dispels that idea from mind. We do, however, believe that there is a lack of incentive to arouse the latent interest which lies dormant in a large number of students.

The party system is the answer to this problem; it is not an infallible answer, but it may go a long way towards supplying an answer.

There are many aspects to be considered in the establishment of a party system, but going into them in this corner will accomplish little. To whomever the next Student Association President is, we make the following suggestion: establish a committee to look into the feasibility and mechanics of the party system.

The sooner the system is put into effect, the sooner you may be able to vote intelligently.

A Tribute

This is our first editorial. A new Senior Staff was elected last week. It is difficult to step into the shoes of Don Forst. He is small in overall stature, but he wears a large pair of shoes. We sincerely believe that his guidance and leadership, the CYNIC reached its highest peak in several years. The overall coverage was good, the writing was much better than average. We intend to continue serving the UVM campus as a high level college newspaper; we hope to at least maintain the level to which Don brought the CYNIC. With the experience gained in working with the past Senior Staff, we even hope to improve.

students; this procedure would follow from the wording of the petition itself (".. the question of continuance of financial assistance... be referred to the student voters for their decision.").

Contrary to Constitution

The latter action would be contrary, however, to the SA Constitution, which states that affirmative action on a petition, by the Council, is the final action. Only if a negative decision is handed down on a petition, does the Student Body receive it.

Therefore, Adams' petition would, in effect, relieve the Council of all jurisdiction in the matter. This would be unconstitutional, the SA Council decided last week. On that basis, the petition was referred to the Student Court for their decision re its legality under the provisions of the Constitution.

At the same time the entire question upon which the petition was founded was referred to the Joint Publications Board for an open hearing. It is hoped that the decision if this board will enable the SA Council to vote intelligently on the petition tonight. (See JPB story, page one this week).

Mr. Adams later expressed his intention to withdraw the petition. However, this was not within his power, as 150 other signatures are also on the paper. Unless Adams is able to have 36 names withdrawn, which will bring the signatures to 114 (one under the required names), the Council must act tonight on the petition, dependent, of course, on the decision handed down by Student Court.

letters to the editor

Irreligious?

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In regard to the letter concerning discrimination by Messrs. Howard, Brown and Little this writer finds that some brief and inadequate comments are necessary. Are these gentlemen threatening the University by mentioning the "explosive results which will attend the adoption of these proposals? " It is this writer's wish that the authors of the aforementioned letter explain what is "irreligious" about the proposals? Since they have made the above allegations it is only fitting that they clarify what they mean.

So much for questioning. A great American, James Madison, pointed out that legislation out of sentiment with the wishes of the people is ineffective. Removal of discriminatory clauses by the University's Senate will not in itself reduce discrimination as soon as it is passed. However, does the role of the University end, in relation to fraternal groups which play so large a part in the total University picture, at condoning actions which are not in the spirit of fair play, democracy or the glittering generalities used to praise our country?

If we are to accept the point of view expressed by these gentlemen the role of University is not to educate its students and faculty, pointing out to them by words and deeds the evils of unjustly discriminating against individuals because of race or religious belief, but rather to allow the insidious cancer to eat at the "moral fabric." What they are urging is "mind your own business and we'll mind ours." Is it possible to discriminate and mind your own business, or for that matter, is it possible to live and contribute to society without minding other people's business? Of course not. A society in which racial discrimination is gradually eliminated is certainly more preferable than one in which it is allowed to run rampant. It is not necessary in this day and age to point out that racial and religious discrimination detract from the community and in the long run the persecuted and persecutor both suffer.

This writer wholeheartedly agrees that discrimination is "drilled " into many people from birth to death. However, are we to sit on our hands and "mind our own business " while groups in our midst openly continue the practice of senseless discrimination? This country was not founded by people who sat on their hands. Racial discrimination by groups should not be as socially rewarding as acceptance and mutual understanding of those whose beliefs are different. In conclusion, we are here to learn about, and improve, our faults rather than reinforce them. In this task the University is our friend, guide and, when necessary, leader.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

My sincerest congratulations to Mr. Horowitz on the first installment of his new humor column in the CYNIC. Without a doubt, Mr. Horowitz and his busy little pen have produced the funniest bit of writing since "Titus Andronicus."

It is indeed a pleasure to see that there is someone on this campus who has such a deft command of the more delicate aspects of subtle wit, and has the ability to use it, not as a club, but more like a rapier.

I'm sure that we are all very much in debt to Mr. Horowitz for his earnest efforts on behalf of God and man at UVM. Qualified as he is (no doubt) for the job of trash disposal, we are solidly behind him in his effort. Thank God that there is one above us to show us the way!

I'm anxiously awaiting the next installment. Keep up the good work!

Their campus-wear styles are governed largely by their easy-going spirit. In the classroom ties are taboo and the most popular shoes are the loafer or moccasin. For lounging and study sessions blue denim pants are a favorite and the SMUers have taken both long and short sleeved sport shirts to their hearts. Hats are out completely and the vital requirement for practically any occasion is a sport jacket two-button model with patch pockets of some soft material. At the neighborhood movie or downtown nightclub the favored white button-down and the light gray single-breasted, two-button flannel put in their appearance.

A swing towards a less casual more careful appearance gets a nod from the girls. Men laugh at us who have closets filled with clothes and still have "nothing to wear " because we very often have quantity not quality - a conglomeration of uncoordinated basics and accessories. Actually men are in the same boat, but they have been wearing nothing and calling it "casual."

Spring is coming. Smile not. Almost every day, the curse of warm weather pokes its nasty little nose into our faces, and sneers and snickers at us. "Ho ho, " it seems to say, "I'm going to come soon and melt all the nice snow at Stowe!" Curses on it.

But we shall outsmart the foul season. Before it manages to send the beautiful white stuff down the river, it turns it into corn snow for a little while. Even when that's gone, there's still the old reliable at Tuckerman's. Then, when those who don't know any better have abandoned the skis for bathing suits and beach parties, the fanatics--we diehards--can begin to indulge in that most delicious of pastimes, the spring skiing we've been waiting for all winter.

Though winter skiing often brings out the best in people, spring skiing always brings out the most eccentric. This phenomenon is especially noticeable in terms of apparel. First, the trim tailored ski pants are mothballed, while everyone fishes out the dungarees. As the weather gets warmer and the snow gets cornier, the jeans are in turn cashiered for Bermuda shorts and leather liederhosen. Parka's are replaced by T. shirts. Mittens disappear. People who are carried down the mountain with acute frostbite demand to be treated for sunstroke. It's an insane time all around.

Clothes are not the only thing that reflect this seasonal attack of giddiness. Parties move outdoors--into the middle of Spruce Peak, for instance. People are seen carrying milk-cans full of some unnamed punch up the T-bars. Individual antics are noticed--like the time Stratty Corsones skied down the Nose Dive in a Tuxedo, with a pair of beer cans where most people ski poles. People attempt to of beer cans where most people carry ski poles. People attempt to ride up the chair lift five at a time--and succeed.
the famous Easter Parade takes place. This event, a costume party on skis, was won last year by UVM'er Johnny Hooper, who came as a can of Budweiser. One gentleman of our acquaintance has figured out an unbeatable costume for this year. He's wearing nothing but a piece of chocolate in his navel, and coming as a toll house cookie. Got any better ideas?

$7,500 Estimate Submitted For UVM Lounge Alteration

Floor Plan And Fabrics Included

By Max G. Ansbacher

A consultant from Paine's Furniture Co. in Boston has submitted a floor plan for the student lounge to the Student Facilities Committee. The floor plan was accompanied by swatches of fabrics and a cost estimate of $7,500. In view of the fact that the lounge cost $5,000 to furnish originally, the members of the committee felt that this estimate was reasonable.

The student facilities committee also agreed that its long range goals should be (1) to investigate the problem of vandalism, (2) to study the need for a Student Union, (3) to decide on the future use of East Hall and the Old Mill, (4) to find out about using the museum for social facilities, (5) to study the social and study facilities of the men's dorms, (6) and to explore the possibility of the Student Association purchasing some equipment which it must use frequently.

No SA Surplus

Dean Robert Kroepsch reported that although it had appeared as if the Student Association would have a surplus of between $15,000 and $20,000 this year, a furthur study showed that the Student Association would have no surplus this year. Because of this fact, it will be more difficult to get SA funds for facilities.

The committee felt that it would be desirable to have a comfortable study room in which smoking would be allowed. The suggestion was made that room 211 Waterman, East Hall and the Old Mill could be used for this purpose, it they were not being used for other purposes.

To Furnish Room

The facilities committee also felt that the Student Association Town Meeting Room should be furnished at the expense of the Student Association. It was further suggested that a place be provided for typing.

During the discussion of the student lounge it was pointed out that present arrangement of the lounge with the rows of small tables having four chairs at each table obviously indicated a card game set-up, and therefore, if a great deal of card playing went on it was only as one could expect. It was also mentioned that the present lighting was not suitable for study. There seemed to be a difference of opinion on how the lounge should be utilized.

At the present time Professor Helen E. Beresford of the Home Economics Department is working on plans for the student lounge with the help of some students in the department. Mr. W. Scott Mahoney, Coordinator of Student Affairs, has called this, "An excellent example of interdepartmental cooperation in the University."

Professor Robert Huber, chairman of the Speech department, said he thought "the debating at the Brooklyn tournament would sharpen the Karp and Kronman duo for this weekend's Georgetown debating."

Each team will debate seven rounds; Kroot and Horowitz will debate the affirmative on the question Resolved: That The United States Adopt A Policy of Free Trade.

Don't Do Well

Vermont teams have failed to do well in this tournament over the years. According to Huber, the last time a UVM team did anything of note in this tourney was 1950. He thought "we will improve over the past year's record at Georgetown."

Winner of the Brooklyn tourney was Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Second place went to Temple University, third to Notre Dame, and fourth to George Washington.

'Lounge Scrounge' Gives Schedule

By Arleen Mayer

Friends, Romans, taxpayers, dogcatchers, ditch-diggers, and fellow coffee-shoppers, lend me (and suffer no loss), your ears.

Dr. Xavier E. M. Blushbottom B.A., B.S., Ph.D., and P.S., head of the Coffee Shop Department, announced recently at the Board of Director's meeting that he had devised a unique curriculum and time schedule for his students. He presented the plan as follows:

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday

9---10 A. .---Students take their assigned tables--morning juke-box music sets desires mood---at 10 or thereabouts, class begins.
10---10:30---Art of appreciating jassical clazz music.
10:30---11:00---Break for morning tidbits; coffee, gossip, "Skeptic," smoke, and the like.
11:00---11:30---Proper techniques for carrying trays from cash register to unoccupied (or otherwise) table.
11:30---1:00---Coffee hour and one-hals served with meals.
1:00---4:00---Independent study and application of material covered.

Tuesday and Thursday

Once again classes begin approximately at 10:00---full schedule until 12:00.
10:00---11:00---Concentrated study on smoking and drinking coffee harmoniously.
11:00 ~-11:30---A quick process of recounting change returned at the cash register.
11:30---12:00---Coffee shop closed to all except Sigma Phi Epsilon, for the "Sig Eps of the Round Table" secret meetings. (On Thursday, brothers may bring dates).
12:00---1:00---Lunchtime Rendevous---special on coffee ---$.08, with presentation of I. D. card.

Afternoons devoted to hobbies, relaxation, or any other constructive doing.

Dr. Blushbottom feels confident that this plan will find much favor among his students and asked that any objections be made directly to him.

Alumni Grants

looked upon with displeasure by the President, hence the change.

Under the original wording, those students unfamiliar with the nature of the Alumni Memorial Scholarships often applied for them by virtue of participation in debate, student government, or publications. They were, in virtually every case, refused. This was particularly true of applicants for freshman admission who, in reading the Bulletin, considered themselves active in student activities and applied for the scholarship on that basis.

It is expected that the new wording will clarify the intent of the Alumni grants, thereby eliminating the falacious impression imported by the previous statement of qualification.

MEET YOURSELF—
10 YEARS FROM NOW

Ever wonder what you'll be like when the class of '54 holds its 10th reunion? If you started to work for one of the Bell System companies after graduation, here's a pretty good idea.

INTERESTING, RESPONSIBLE WORK: Perhaps a Commercial Manager, the company's representative and spokesman to as many as fifty thousand customers. Or a Transmission Engineer, helping to provide the telephone needs of an entire state. Or a Supervisor in the Traffic Department, responsible for the speed and quality of local and long distance service in several cities and for the personnel relations of a large number of employees.

WE MAKE SURE THERE ARE PLACES TO GO: The number of college men hired is related to the number of administrative and technical positions expected to be available in the next 10 or 15 years. It is our policy to fill these positions from within our organization.

ARTS, SCIENCE, BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION AND ENGINEERING GRADUATES are among our particular needs. The specific degree is not as important as the total effect of your college training.

NO MATTER WHAT YOUR MILITARY STATUS, contact your Placement Officer soon for details on the opportunities for employment with the Bell System.

THE DU PONT DIGEST

What do YOU look for in an employer?

Undoubtedly, you'll want most of the following characteristics:

1. Job satisfaction—the chance to do work you really enjoy.
2. Recognition—the assurance that good work will be noticed, appreciated, and properly rewarded.
3. Opportunities for advancement—a growing company can provide them.
4. Security—the knowledge that a company is both stable and progressive.
5. Pride—a feeling that your company is respected by the public and produces goods which contribute to a better way of life.
6. Good companionship—a factor which contributes greatly to happiness on the job.
7. Good pay—not in salary alone, but also in terms of vacation plans, pensions, and other benefits.
8. Safe working conditions.

How can you obtain this kind of information in advance?

One of the best ways is to discuss the matter with an acquaintance already working for the company you are considering. You will also find it helpful to consult your college placement officer, your professors and company representatives visiting your campus.

The selection of an employer is one of the most important decisions you'll make. It justifies considerable thought and effort.

Cancer Grant Awarded UVM; Smoke Corrolation Low

By Al Nufson

Recently, the University of Vermont College of Medicine received approximately $45,000 to carry on experimentation into the causes of the nation's number one killer, cancer.

Leading the group of cancer researchers here at UVM is Dr. B. Pearson, a graduate of the College of Medicine, Minnesota University, and a foremost pathologist. Dr. Pearson, who has taught at Vermont for eight years, is now endeavoring to compile vital data as to the clinical manifestations of the disease.

Tests Used

Animals, such as rats, are injected with substances which are known to produce malignancy. Then, at various stages in the growth of the tumor, chemical and enzyme analyses are performed in order to note any discrepancies from the norm. The sooner researchers can determine the exact changes a malignancy effects in the normal tissue, the closer they will be to ultimately finding that substance which will retard this scourge.

However, the difficulties of pursuing this research are numerous indeed. Most of the money which is allocated to carry on this work is in the form of a restricted grant. The term "restricted" denotes the fact that the money is to be used only for certain type of cancer research, and forbids the employment of any money to follow up various leads which may overlap into another branch of the study.

Need Researchers

Perhaps the greatest obstacle to ultimately conquering the disease is the scarcity of capable men who are willing to devote their lives to research, because of the low stipends they receive.

Despite the fact that UVM has received enough money to purchase adequate equipment, the funds are so restricted are so restricted and non-accumulative that it is fast becoming difficult to hire doctors to carry on the cancer research.

However, if local interest does increase, Dr. Pearson is extremely optimistic of future expansion both in personnel and in subject matter.

The Tobacco-Cancer Question

There is at present a definite campaign being launched by periodicals such as "The Reader's Digest" against the usage of tobacco, for it is believed by this journal that smoking directly leads to lung cancer.

Dr. Pearson presented this reporter facts which did in no way point to tobacco as the direct agent causing lung cancer. Yet, we all know the occurrence of lung cancer has increased since the turn of the century. This startling increase can be partially accounted for by the vast improvements made in the diagnosis and detection of the disease. However, there has been a real increase since 1900, and it is for this rise that tobacco has been alleged guilty. Yet, statisticians in England tell us that 20% of all deaths caused by lung cancer was comprised of non-smokers. It is also interesting to note that four out of every five cases of the disease occur in the male, and that urban areas seem to contain a higher rate of affliction. The fact is that with the increase in industrialization people have become more susceptable to malignancies of the lung because of the inhalation of such known carcinogenic agents (agents which cause cancer) as coal tar and chromium dust. This is evidenced by the marked increase of carcinonia of the lung in the rural areas of England which have recently been industrialized.

Voice Of UVM On The Air-Dial 570

HELEN McKUSKIE

Have you been listening to the radio lately? Have you tried 570? Silent isn't it?

But not for long--for a group of students has been enthusiastically planning for the beginning of a new campus radio station. This will be station W.R.U.V., at 570 on the dial.

After much planning, the personnel of the station have succeeded in preparing themselves for the airing of the programs. The first important issue was to procure enough money so further plans could be executed. This problem was solved last year when the S.A. agreed to give $3,000 for the birth of the new station. But before they were allowed to give this large sum, it was required that a written report be handed in to the Student Advisory Committee, made up of some of the members of the faculty. The main purpose of this report was to show the faculty group that the S.A. was right in presenting this large sum of money. The report was examined thoroughly, and after much discussion, it was approved just last Christmas. Since then, there has been much preparation to get on the way.

Trial Week

From Monday, March 1, to Friday, March 5, the personnel of the station witnessed a trial week. At this time programs which will be typical of WRUV were tape recorded. They will be replayed for the purpose of discovering errors and receiving comments for approval. Those working as members of the staff are Mike Hauptman, Manager of WRUV; Carl Notkin, President of the Radio Workshop and Chief Announcer; Bunny Fitz Simons, Continuity Manager; Carol Coen, Traffic Manager who writes up the program log; Tony Vydra, Sales Manager; Ann Terry, Business Manager.

Dave O'Brien, Treasurer of Radio Workshop who is now busy signing purchase orders for WRUV; Bob Newcomb, Chief Engineer in charge of all technical aspects; and Howie Ross and Ed Nugent, members of the Engineering Staff. Most of these people are new at this type of work, but are doing very well, as was shown from the trial week.

Station Heard Only On Campus

All of the broadcasts will be on the air for the main purpose of pleasing the students, for they will only be received in the dorms, and fraternity and sorority houses. During the greater

Spectrometer Installed For Inskeep Research

A spectrometer was assembled in the basement of the Williams Science Hall, last week to aid Dr. R. G. Inskeep in his research on "chemical equilibrium as it depends on temperature." Quantitative measurements will be made to study the change in molecular structure of compounds during reaction. The spectrometer will be used to determine the structure of different chemical compounds at diverse temperatures. The process involves the emiting of a beam of infra-red light which is absorbed by the compound to a certain extent, thereby indicating the compound's structure.

Dr. Inskeep said: "I think a study of this kind will increase our fundamental knowledge of the behavior of molecules."

In 1859, Vermont farmers had nearly a million sheep. In 1950 only about 15,000 were left.

Around The Green. . .

By J. Breslin

What is this thing called golf?

Golf is a form of work made expensive enough for a man to enjoy it. It is a physical and mental exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to drees for it in a $200,000 clubhouse.

Golf is what letter-carrying, ditch digging and carpet beating would be if the three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon in short pants and colored socks by gouty-looking gentlemen who require a different implement for every mood.

Golf is the simplest looking game when you decide to take it up and the toughest looking when you've been at it for ten or twelve years.

It is probably the only known game a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover it was too deep for him in the first place.

The game is played on selected grass with little white balls and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from 75¢ to $25 and it is possible to support a family of five (all adults) on the money represented by the balls lost by some golfers in a single afternoon.

A golf course has eighteen holes, seventeen of which are completely unnecessary and put in only to make the game harder. A "hole" is a tin cup in the center of the green. A green is a small parcel of grass costing about $1.98 a blade and usually located between a couple of apple trees and a brook, or a lot of unfinished excavation. The idea is to get the golf ball from given points into each of the eighteen cups in the fewest strokes and the greatest number of words.

The ball must not be thrown, carried or pushed. It must be propelled by almost $200 worth of curious-looking implements specifically designed to provoke the owner. Each implement has a specific purpose and eventually some golfers get to know what that purpose is -- they are the exceptions.

After each hole is completed the golfer counts his strokes and then substitutes six and says, "Made that one in five. That's one above par. Shall we play for 50¢ the next hole, too, Ed?"

After the final or eighteenth hole the golfer adds up his score and stops when he has reached 87. He then has a swim and a pint of gin, sings The Whiffenpoof Song with 6 or 8 other liars and calls it the end of a perfect day.

The CYNIC, on behalf of her friends at the University, extend the heartiest and best of wishes for a very happy birthday to Mrs. MARY BRAUER, our favorite Sigma Nu housemother.

Formally initiated into the brotherhood of Delta Psi on Monday evening March 8, at eight o'clock were Ronald F. Larrow, '55, South Hero, and D. Patrick Fagan, '56, Rutland.

Delta Epsilon Fraternity of Lafayette College, Easton, Pennsylvania is going to present on their campus, Delta Psi's skit, "Frankie and Johnny."

The Irish Party of March 13, was a huge success and enjoyed by all.

Jim Cleary was selected as the new I.F.C. representative for Delta Psi at last Monday's meeting.

The new officers of Delta Delta Delta have recently been elected for the year 1954-55. Jane Morrison of Danielson, Conn., is the new president. Other officers are: vice-president, Elizabeth Melloon, Concord, Mass., treasurer, Katherine Ballou, Essex Junction; recording secretary, Peggy McGowan; corresponding secretary, Ellen Pirie, Barre; assistant treasurer, Be Cameron, Chatham, N.J.; marshall, Zoe Steimnetz, Ithaca, N.Y.; chaplain, Carolyn Craig, Peekskill, N.Y.; rush chairman, Ann Harriman, Glen Ridge, N.J.; assistant rush chairman, Roberta Baker, Flushing, N.Y.; social chairman, Sandra Geer, Roslyn, N.Y.; assistant social chairchairman, Lynn Egar, Ardmore, Pa.; social rush chairman, Ann Edlund, Staten Island, N.Y.; and assistant social rush chairman, Cynthia Cobb, Springfield. Also: publicity, Helen McKuskie, Nashua, N.H.; historian, Shirley Rowe, Johnson; librarian-custodian, Virginia Siemer, Roslyn, N.Y.; scholarship, Connie McKee, Burlington; house president, Ann Edlund, Pan-Hellenic representative, senior, Elizabeth Melloon and junior, Dolores Buehler, West Orange, N.J.; extra-curricular activities, Nancy McGoughran, West Orange, N.J.; fraternity education, Anne Ward, Glen Rock, N.J.; song leader, Jane Morrison; sports, Katherine Oram, Benson; art chairman, Marcia Young, Somers, N.Y.; and service projects chairman, Marilyn Cooper, West Orange, N.J.

ACACIA RECENTLY INITIATED seven new members. They are Sydney Barnard, '55, Vergennes, Vt.; Frank Carr, '56, Kew Gardens, N.Y.; Thomas Johnson, '57, Ithaca, N.Y.; Allan Smalley, '57, Johnson, Vt.; Dave Walker, '57, Morrisville, Vt.; Lawrence Williams, '57, Hawthorne, N.Y.; David Curwen, '57, Ridgewood, N.J.

THE INFIRMARY CLAIMED three students this past week. They were: Basil Percy, Victor Scotese and Gary Vervoort.

Phi Delt is happy to announce the acceptance of an open bid to Bill Beek, of Orono, Maine. Recent new brothers are: Frank Macinni, Ray Flannery, Mike O'Brien and Gene McLean.

Paul Harasimowicz is the new pledge class president. Dick Jones is secretary and Bill Harthe is the chorister.

The volleyball team has high hopes for a good season under the tutelage of Ray Flannery.

Last week Phi Delt had exchange dinner with Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Delta Delta.

Best of luck to Charlie Rocknak who is leaving on his southern trip to Bainbridge Naval base on March 15.

Dave O'Dwyer and Ken Wadley are in charge of the sing this year, and have started to work on it.

Welcome back to Joe Teta who was out of school last semester due to sickness. Also to John Mahoney who took a "time out."

AT OLD MILL a party was held in honor of Mrs. Lewis Bair, the former Ellie Pincus, on Sunday, March 7. Refreshments were served.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON'S initiation was held on Sunday, March 7. The following men were initiated: Hugh Bemis, Westminster Station; Edwin English, St. Albans; Robert Jones, Richford; Victor Kendall, North Springfield; Richard Martin, Bellows Falls; Stephan Plumb, Brattleboro; Gary Richardson, Springfield; Herbert Russell, Rutland; Robert Spence, Springfield; David Tiley, Williamsburg, Mass.

These men spent Saturday afternoon cleaning and painting at St. Joseph's Orphanage as part of Help Week. Following initiation a banquet was held in honor of the new brothers in the Apple Orchard Room of the Hotel Vermont.

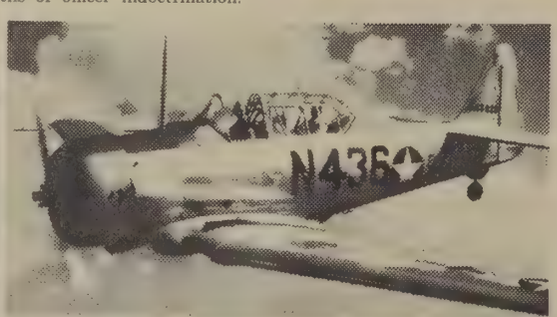
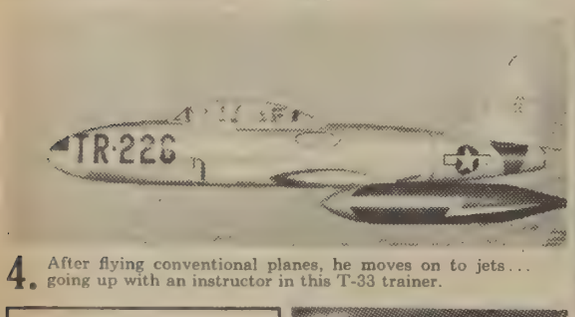
1. Pilot training begins at Lackland Air Force Base, where Aviation Cadets get 3 months of officer indoctrination.



College Men!

Fly with the Finest in the Air Force



QUALIFIED APPLICANTS WIN WINGS AS AIR FORCE LIEUTENANTS, EARN OVER $5,000 A YEAR!

2. It's a hard grind, but Cadets also find time to relax.

3. In primary training the Cadet flies his first planes, a Piper Cub, and this T-6. Later he will fly the more advanced T-28.

4. After flying conventional planes, he moves on to jets . . . going up with an instructor in this T-33 trainer.

5. He wins his wings as an Air Force officer, earning over $5,000 a year.

● For a fast, exciting and rewarding career, make your future in the sky as an Air Force pilot. As a college student, you are now able to join that small, select band of young men who race the wind in Air Force jets. You'll have the same opportunities to learn, advance and establish yourself in the growing new world of jet aviation.

Fly as one of the best

The pilot training you get in the Air Force is the best in the world —the kind that makes jet aces. You'll learn to fly the fastest, latest planes in the air—and fly them safely and well. Those who look to the skies will look to you for leadership and confidence.

Into a brilliant future

You'll graduate as an Air Force lieutenant, earning over $5,000 a year. Your Air Force wings will serve as credentials for important positions both in military and commercial aviation. Air Force wings mark you as the very best in the flying profession.

How to qualify for Pilot Training as an Aviation Cadet!

To qualify, you must be at least a high school graduate. However, you will be of more value to the Air Force if you stay in college, graduate, and then volunteer for training. In addition, you must be between the ages of 19 and 26½, and in top physical condition. If you think you are eligible, here's what you do: Take your high school diploma or certificate of graduation together with a copy of your birth certificate down to your nearest Air Force base or recruiting station. Fill out the application they give you. If you pass your physical and other tests, you will be scheduled for an Aviation Cadet Training Class.

WRUV IS ON THE AIR

YES...IT'S TRUE! AT LONG LAST, AFTER YEARS OF PLANNING AND HARD WORK, WE CAN ANNOUNCE THE OPENING OF UVM'S OWN CAMPUS RADIO STATION. WRUV, WITH STUDIOS AND OFFICES IN POMEROY HALL WILL BRING PROGRAMS OF MUSIC, NEWS AND SPECIAL INTEREST TO THE AIR FROM 7 TO 11:15, PM, MONDAY THRU FRIDAY, BEGINNING THIS MONDAY, MARCH 22. BUT UNFORTUNATELY THERE'S A CATCH - AND IT'S JUST THIS. BECAUSE OF THE NATURE OF WRUV'S CARRIER CURRENT SYSTEM, EACH DORM, FRATERNITY AND SORORITY HOUSE MUST BE WIRED INTO THE WRUV CIRCUIT INDIVIDUALLY. OUR HARD-WORKING ENGINEERS PROMISE THAT YOUR DORM OR HOUSE WILL BE CONNECTED JUST AS SOON AS IS HUMANLY POSSIBLE.

STARTING MONDAY MARCH 22, THOSE IN ALLEN HOUSE WILL RECEIVE OUR PROGRAMS. WATCH FOR THE DATE THAT YOUR HOUSE WILL BE ADDED TO THE NETWORK!

$25,000 Grant Given Engineers Anonymously

An anonymous grant of $25,000 has been accepted for UVM by the Board of Trustees for improvements in the Department of Mechanical Engineering.

Professor Robert G. Sidle said that this is the largest gift to the Department in the past few years.

Most of the money will be used for shop equipment, including modern high-production turret-lathe and an optical comparator. The latter instrument checks visually the cross-section shape of parts being manufactured. Some of the grant will be allotted to a new combustion fuel research engine. These machines are more modern than those that the Department now possesses.

Col. Jacobsen Announces AF Enlistments

Col. Earl H. Jacobsen, Professor of Air Science and Tactics of the Air Force ROTC Detachment announced this week that college students, who do not complete one of the Army, Navy, or Air Force ROTC programs, are now eligible for enlistment in an Air Force Reserve Wing.

Col. Jacobsen, pointed out that such enlistments will provide students with credit towards their eight-year military service obligation, and will also entitle them to enlist in the regular Air Force ahead of any applicants on the waiting list. Such an enlistment in the regular AF would be in grade E-2 (Airman Third Class) provided they hold that rank or higher in the Air Force Reserve.

According to the production's director, Prof. Greg Falls, Mr. Krog is the closest thing to Henrik Ibsen to appear in Norwegian drama circles since Ibsen passed away.

Numerous critiques have appeared in the foreign press and theatre world about the Norwegian playwright.

Mr. Krog does not limit his theatre to one side of the footlights, writing a drama column for the "Dag Bladate," a Norwegian daily. He is called, by some, the "Dag Bladate-Terror"--the terror of the "Daily Blade."

Sigma Alpha Eps Celebrate 25th Anniversary

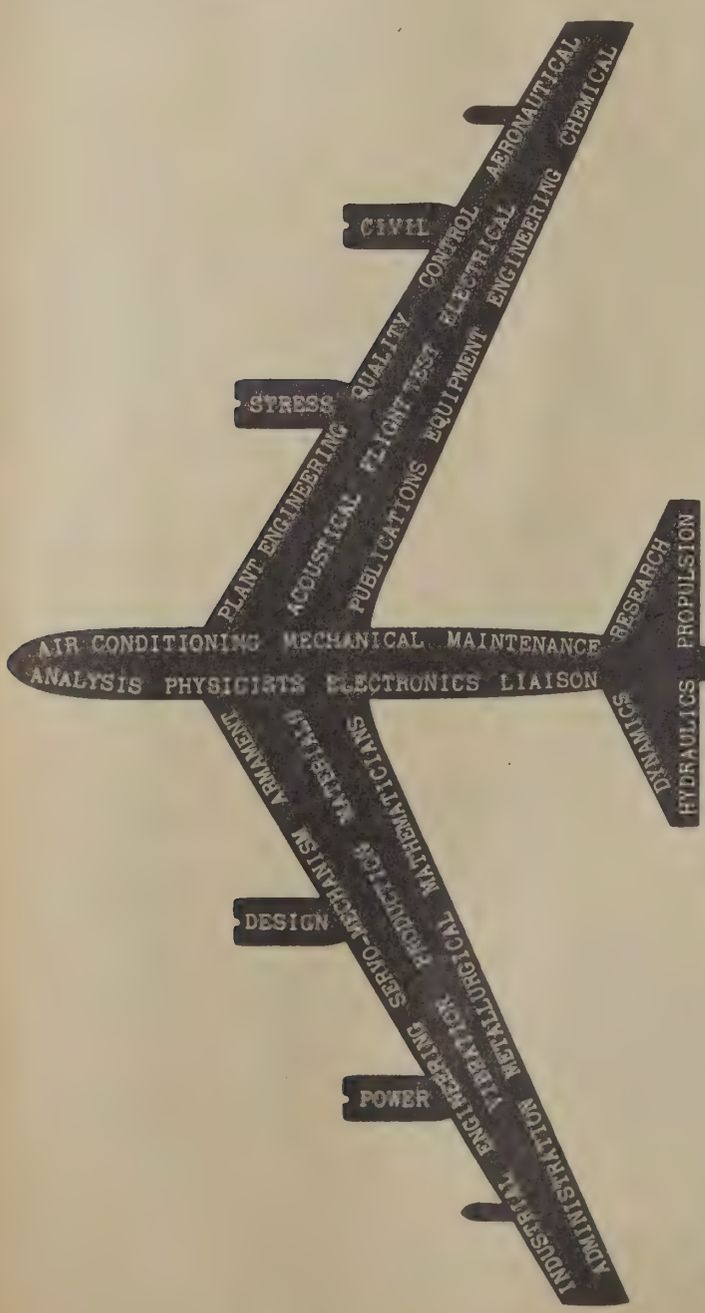
Twenty-five years on campus for Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity will be duly celebrated this weekend, when old alums and active brothers and pledges alike join together to commemorate the founding of Sigma Alpha Epsilon on the University of Vermont campus.

It was in March, 1929, that the brothers of the local fraternity, Sigma Alpha Chi, were received into the national fraternity of S.A.E. at their Miami Convention.

Starting off with forty-one actives, the SAE's began their climb and descent, from the first forty-one, to one during the war, and up to 115 in 1951.

At the present time the SAE's have 76 brothers and pledges, each of whom will have a part in the celebration.

Saturday afternoon the fraternity will initiate fifteen pledges into the brotherhood, the ceremony to be held in the main ballroom of Southwick Auditorium.



The initiation will be presided over by William O. Paddock, Province supervisor to the national. A banquet will be held at Oakledge Manor following for all brothers, pledges and alumni, at which time the awards for outstanding senior brother, and best pledge will be presented.

Following the banquet, there'll be a coffee hour back at the SAE house, 56 Summit Street, and a buffet supper at 7:30.

Happy Acres will be the scene of a dance and informal party, with dancing to an orchestra till 12:00.

Sunday afternoon, the fraternity will climax the weekend activities with an all-campus coffee hour at the house, everyone invited.

Engineers of virtually EVERY type are needed on the Boeing team

Mechanical, electrical, civil, aeronautical—in fact, graduates in virtually every field of engineering—find rewarding career opportunities here. There are openings in design, research, in the many phases of production, and for physicists and mathematicians with advanced degrees.

All engineering careers at Boeing have one thing in common: they provide plenty of opportunity to get ahead. Regular merit reviews are held. Advancement is keyed to your individual ability, application and initiative.

The aviation industry offers you a unique opportunity to gain experience with new techniques and new materials. It offers a wide range of application, from applied research, to product design and production, all going on at the same time.

What's more, you can expect long-term career stability in the aviation industry. Boeing, for instance, is now in its 37th year of operation, and actually employs more engineers today than even at the peak of World War II. Besides designing and building the world's most advanced multi-jet aircraft (the B-47 and B-52), Boeing conducts one of the nation's major guided missile programs, and such other projects as research on supersonic flight, and nuclear power for aircraft.

Boeing engineering activity is concentrated at Seattle, Washington, and Wichita, Kansas—communities with a wide variety of recreational opportunities as well as schools of higher learning. The Company will arrange a reduced work week to permit time for graduate study and will reimburse tuition upon successful completion of each quarter's work.

Men's College Fashions

Even though the Cliff Dweller Dan has changed his "casual for every occasion" to a conservative though dressier fashion attitude, the boys on the college greens over the country are sticking by their guns and gray flannels. Though, personally I would not care to see the "Man of Distinction" or for matter, "Joe College," done up in lace ruffles, velvet knickers and silk stockings, I do think formal occasions, on and off the campus, deserve more formal attire than is being worn at present.

The college man's wardrobe reveals the oxford gray flannel suit as almost a trade-mark except places like U.C.U.A. and Miami U., where Mr. Sun demands even more casualness. While the "gray" are tops, this casual swing of the pendulum can come (and from the news of the "Mr. B. and Mr. E." styles which are sweeping the high schools today, already has) dangerously close to the sloppy mark. Man need not be a peacock of the eighteenth century variety, but these conservative limits most Northeastern collegiates put on their clothes can be overdone, too. It's encouraging to see some of the boys reaching out for more individuality. Just how far they go remains to be seen. The essence of good taste in clothes which applies to the welldressed woman applies equally to men. We should wear sport clothes for sports, business clothes for business and formal clothes for formal affairs. Contrary to masculine complaints and the loudest gripes when forced semi-annually into a tuxedo or dinner jacket, most of you boys look very nice in them...

The boys at Princeton tell us there's nothing to beat the single-breasted, three-button suit with the natural shoulders. They don't like front pleats or wide cuffs in their pants; and are fast losing their affection for argyles, in place of solid colored socks and the round tab collared shirts are running the classic oxford button-down a close race. Loafers and white bucks while still with us, are no longer regulation. Stanford and Southern Cal have passed on the news of the wing tip in

'I'm Just Plain Good'

By David Spector

"The finest slide rule engraver in the United States" visited UVM's Waterman Building last week. Thats what Philip Milhendler calls himself, modestly claiming that he is also the only slide rule engraver in the United States.

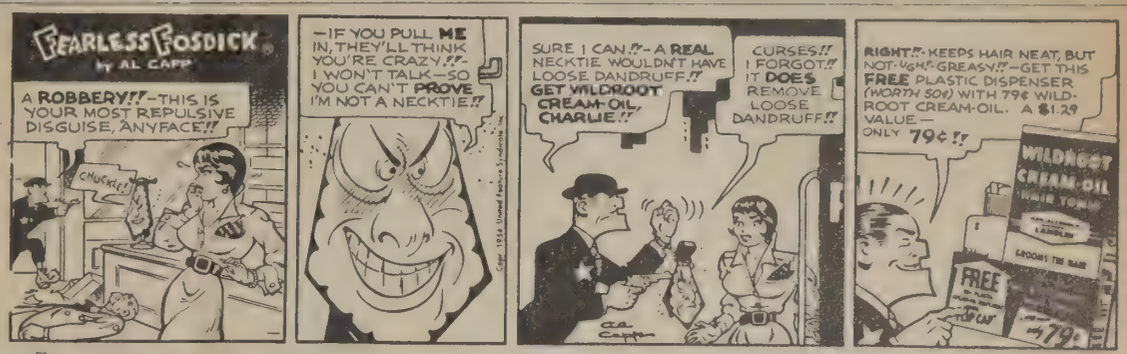
As a matter of fact Mr. Milhendler has been a slide rule engraver for twenty-seven years, and it was only recently that rising prices of materials have forced him to raise his prices from 25¢ to 35¢.

However it would be incorrect to call Mr. Milhendler just a slide rule engraver, for he does pens, eyeglasses and similar material. However he has had only twelve calls for engraving toothbrushes in all this time. He travels by car to all the leading campuses in the East. He is fully acquainted with Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Carnegie Tech; but mainly engineering schools where there are an abundance of slide rules. He says there is a great demand for his sort of work, but so far has not been bothered by any Anti-Trust laws.

His machine is called an Engravograph, and was made in New York. At the time it cost $300, and works on 9 volts of stored battery power in six large dry cells. The entire process takes less than three minutes, and the work is guaranteed.

In the past Mr. Milhendler traveled to offices of large firms and industrial plants, but now is kept busy by just colleges and prep schools. He has a definite route that he follows each year and arrives at each school at about the same time.

Debaters Top Dartmouth Duo In Lounge Match



For the first time in four years, a University of Vermont debate team topped the best Dartmouth College debate duo. Last Wednesday night, UVM's Kevin Kearney and Herzl Spiro met and defeated Joseph Wortheim and Thomas Waddell, Dartmouth's number one team and winners of the Boston University tourney, a tournament which saw Kearney and Spiro finish fifth.

A panel of five judges, Prof. Samuel Bogorad, English department, Julius Cohen, Psychologist of the Medical School, Prof. George Little, Political Science department, Guy Page, Jr., Speech department, and Bernard Lisman, Burlington attorney, gave Vermont a 4-1 victory. The one judge voting for Dartmouth was Dr. Cohen.

The debate was held in the Waterman lounge and was witnessed by about 75 persons.

Both teams knew the briefs of each other and so the debate resolved itself into, not a matter of convincing the audience, by means of evidence, but a display of debate technique and lines of argumentation which were aimed at winning the favor of the judges.

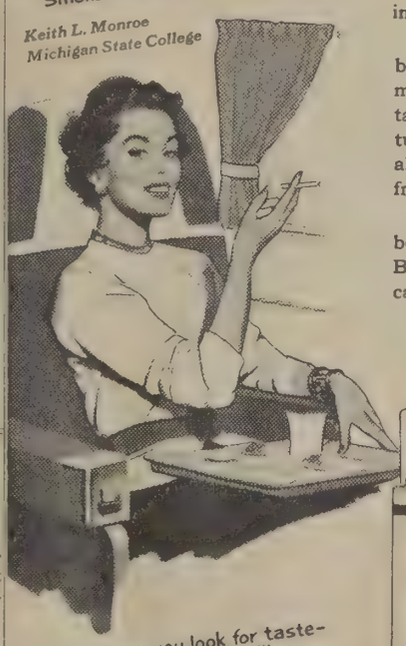
IT'S ALL A MATTER OF TASTE



When you come right down to it, you smoke for one simple reason . . . enjoyment. And smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste. Yes, taste is what counts in a cigarette. And Luckies taste better.

Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco . . . light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better . . . always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.

So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, Be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

Marketing Series Speaker McCann - Erickson Exec

By Max G. Ansbacher

Mr. Fred M. Zeder II, Vice-President and Associate Marketing Director of McCann-Erickson Inc., will address the American Marketing Speaks series this Tuesday at 7:30 in Room 239 Waterman Building on the topic "You Too, Can Make your Advertising Pay."

According to Professor Charles Edwin Greif of the department of commerce and economics, "Mr. Fred M. Zeder II represents one of the outstanding advertising agencies in the world." The talk will be illustrated by many visual aids, and will be followed by an informal question and answer period. Everyone is cordially invited.

In explaining why he had chosen an advertising man to speak at the series, Professor Greif said, "Certainly with the return this year to the full buyer's market where the consumer is king, advertising, which is an essential ingredient of sound promotion, requires careful attention from every alert businessman, manufacturer, and industrialist."

Air Force Pilot

Mr. Zeder graduated from the University of Michigan, and received graduate degrees from the University of California. He was president of the Zeder-Talbott Advertising Agency for many years. From 1941 until 1945 Mr. Zeder served as a pilot for the United States Army Air Force in the Pacific Theater of Operations.

Upon his discharge from the Air Force he became President of Zeder Motors until 1949. At that time he became associated with McCann-Erickson Inc., as account executive. In 1951 he was promoted to general vice-president. Mr. Zeder is also a member of numerous civic and fraternal organizations.

'The Flowers That Bloom-' But Not Here In Vermont!

By David Spector

'The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra-la' Mikado.

'Come, fill the cup, and in the fire of Spring
Your Winter-garment of Repentance fling:
The Bird of Time has but a little way
To flutter-and the Bird is on the Wing'

Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

Yes, the poets certainly had the word for spring, but what does it mean in Vermont, in a climate where it snows late in March, and is still cold in April? Not much, I'm afraid. For you see the transition from the season of the cold to the season of the warm is merely a change from deep snow to deep mud.

This fall the University did us a great favor when they paved most of the roads, but there are still many paths which will afford us opportunities to bemud ourselves.

However, even here in the Great North, spring comes. It is a feeling that gets into everyone. It can be felt in the air, and even is registered, somewhat grudgingly, by the professors. It infects the student body, and makes students attempt the impossible. It is the season of competitive journalistic attempts, and class cutting, and all other sorts of folly.

And then, just when we feel Spring is really here, as evidenced by the ROTC drilling outdoors again, we have more snow. But at best these are temporary setbacks, for who can hold back progress?

One of the best features of Spring is the Spring recess. People talk of dropping Kakewalk, a sacred institution, no doubt, but who would dare to tamper with this recess? Noone let us hope. Spring also marks the second round of hour exams. It is in this period that the teachers scheme to have them all fall within one week. "It leaves the student more time to study for the finals."

Transportation facilities are rapidly being filled for points such as New York and Boston, and many choice flights are already filled.

And, of course, let's not forget this profound statement:

'In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.'
Tennyson.

Choir Offers Excerpts From 'Messiah'

The University Choir, assisted by members of the University Orchestra and of the Baptist, College St., First Congregational, Methodist, St. Paul's and Unitarian church choirs, will present Lenten and Eastern portions of Handel's "Messiah", preceded by excerpts from Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" Sunday afternoon at 4, in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The soloists will be Barbara Weinrich and Josephine Thompson, sopranos; Marion Chadwell, alto; George Merritt, tenor; Francis Weinrich and Bruce Butterfield, basses. Out-of-town participants will include George Merritt of New Haven, who has sung the Evangelist in Bach's "St. John Passion" and "St. Matthew Passion" and the tenor solos in Handel's "Messiah" and "Jephtha" on former occasions, and Hubert Brooks, '51, of Montpelier, Music Supervisor in Plainfield, Marshfield and Cabot, who will play the trumpet obbligato in "The trumpet shall sound."

A newcomer is Josephine Thompson, who studied in New York and Fontainebleau, France, and has taught voice at the Bangor Conservatory and the University of Maine. The soloist will be Marion Chadwell, alto, who sang at the Vermont Varieties and the Christmas concert. She is a graduate of Green Mountain Junior College and is a junior in the Music Education Curriculum. Nancy Nott, '55, will play the flute obbligato for Mrs. Weinrich and Miss Thompson. Sadah Shuchari Start will be concertmaster and play violin obbligatos, and Howard Bennett will direct. The concert is free.

'Arab-Jew Tension Taut,' Says Fairfax; War Very Possible

"Tension between the Arabs and the Jews in the Middle East is so taut that war may break out at any moment," Miss Jean Fairfax told the International Relations Club at its last meeting. Miss Fairfax spoke on "Arab and Israeli Tensions". Her knowledge was gained from the the summer she spent in the Middle East working for the Friends Service Committee.

The tension springs from the different political and cultural concepts of the two societies, rather from religious grounds, according to Miss Fairfax. When she visited the two groups she was surprised at the bitterness and intensity with which the two sides hate each other.

Compromise Difficult

She felt that both sides thought that they were one hundred percent in the right, and consequently that the other side was completely wrong. This makes it very difficult to reach any compromise or agreement. In fact, now the Arabs and the Jews will not even sit down at the same conference table with each other. If any branch of the United Nations wishes to have both the groups represented, it must hold two meetings; one at which the Jews attend, and another one at which the Arabs are present.

Miss Fairfax gave a brief history of the situation, beginning with the British mandate of Palestine after the First World War. In an effort to please both the Arabian and the world Jewish population, Britain made irreconcilable treaties which led towards trouble.

"If the United States had opened up its doors more towards the Jewish people in the thirties it would have greatly helped the situation," Miss Fairfax thinks. Because we did not, the millions of Jews fleeing Europe were forced to go to Palestine. When the British withdrew from Palestine, after the Second World War trouble broke out.

U.N. Plan Adopted

The United Nations proposed a solution which was refused by the Arabs. The Jews established an independent state in 1948, and to the surprise of many, were able to wage a successful defensive campaign against the Arab attackers. Then the Arabs were willing to except the original U.N. plan.

"I felt that it was a real victory for the United Nations," Miss Fairfax said. However, she found out, along with many other people in the world, that an armed truce is not the same as peace.

At present there are many Arabs in Jerusalem. There are Jews living in the Arab states. There are thousands of refugees living in displaced persons camps under the care of the UN with no purpose or hope for the near future. The Arabs say that they have no objections to the Jewish communities, but they feel that one should not solve the problems of some people by hurting others.

group was drawn up after an hour-and-a-half's discussion at an open meeting, also, held in Waterman. During this meeting to which the public had been invited, Richard Adams, the force behind the call for withdrawl of SA funds from the CYNIC, explained the motives which caused him to take his action.

Adams said the purpose of the petition was to:

- -get the student body's views on the CYNIC.
- -indicate that there was dissatisfaction with the newspaper's coverage of some areas of the campus.
- -indicate a protest of alleged slanting of news stories.

Present at the open meeting were about 15 students. Some criticism was voiced with the CYNIC's editorial policy on "black-face" a strong protest coming from Anthony Rockhill who maintained that the CYNIC should reflect the opinion of the majority in its editorial columns. Rockhill said the paper was, in pursuing the abolishment of "black-face", championing a a cause which was in disfavor with the majority of the student body.

Other criticisms of the paper, which came from those attending the session were:

- -poor coverage of some aspects of interfraternity sports.
- -poor coverage of basketball.
- -too much coverage of basketball.
- -insufficient coverage of skiing.

The Joint Publication Board went into closed session following the hearing. Following an hour's discussion, and upon the motion of Mr. Richard Hopwood, faculty advisor to the "Ariel" and Director of the UVM News Bureau, the recommendation, which will be presented to the SA Council tonight, was drawn up and adopted.

relatively strange one for Kearney and Spiro. Regarded as one of the East's top debate teams, the UVM students are generally rated the team to beat in any Eastern tourney.

Spiro and Kearney are paying their own way to the Notre Dame debate meeting, funds for such an excursion not being available. Spiro said his fare was being paid by an uncle and Kearney's mother was giving him his train fare.

The two debaters left Burlington yesterday afternoon and boarded a 6 PM train, in Albany, for South Bend. They arrived early this morning.

The only fees which will be paid by the University are an entry fee, and a fee for a judge. In debate tournaments, debate coaches serve as judges for debates other than ones in which their charges are participating. In-as-much as no coach is going with UVM, Kearney and Spiro will have to pay Notre Dame officials to secure judges for their debates.

This is the first time UVM has been invited to the South Bend tournament. They will debate eight rounds, four negative and four affirmative. The question is: Resolved That the United States Adopt A Policy of Free Trade.

According to Spiro and Kearney they are glad to be going into this tournament as an unknown factor and an underdog. They feel "the pressure, in such a situation, is no longer on us but is instead placed on the shoulders of the teams which are more highly thought of."

UVM's top two debaters compiled a 4-1 record in the Vermont Invitational tournament, won the St. Michael's tourney, finished fifth, out of 30 teams, in the Boston University debate meeting and won the Tufts tournament. In this latter meeting, Kearney was named the outstanding negative debater, and Spiro was pronounced the top affirmative speaker.

Last year Kearney and Spiro finished third in the National Invitational Debate Tournament which is held annually at West Point.

No formal plans for the actual building desired have been drawn up. However, Mr. Falls, at a meeting with the Vending Machine Committee, Monday, did submit plans of what an ideal arena theatre would look like. Falls plans to petition the committee for funds.

Falls and the "University Players" have drawn up the following plan for raising funds.

- the production of additional theatrical presentations this spring and next year; to include a Spring variety show.
- the production of a children's theatre play which will tour the state.
- attempt to secure concessions (coat check, programs, refreshments) at Kake Walk.
- petition the Kake Walk distribution committee for some of the $5,000 realized from Kake Walk revenue.
- petition the Joint Vending Machine committee for part of the $5,000 it has available.
- solicit donations from individuals on and off campus.

First Made Known

Mr. Falls first made known his plan, for the separate theatre building to the University when, at the Speech department's regularly scheduled meeting with the President recently, he broached the subject to Mr. Borgmann. Mr. Falls said, "the President was in favor of the idea and went as far as to suggest two University structures which might be used for the theatre."

Falls indicated that some consideration was being given two barns which are owned by the school. One is located in back of the Infirmary on Main Street; the other is a second barn in back of Pomeroy Hall, the building which houses the Speech department.

VanBlarcom said an arena theatre would allow the "Players" to finally establish a home. As things now stand, the group has its properties scattered in buildings throughout the campus. In addition, it was pointed out, a theatre would facilitate productions and rehearsals which now have to be arranged to fit in with the scheduled events planned in Southwick auditorium, the site of almost all the "Players" endeavors.

A spokesman of the project said, "UVM was one of the few state universities which did not have a theatre for its acting group."

An arena theatre would be designed primarily for the production of theatre-in-the-round, the type of staging employed in the production of last year's presentation of "Pygmalion".

WAA

Allen House and Gamma Phi lead in the woman's badminton league. Games are being played every Monday and Wednesday, 4 p.m. at Southwick. In addition to the two top teams, Alpha Chi, Adsit, Wamer's House, and the Independants are also represented.

The Badminton Club also meet on Monday and Wednesday, encouraging all interested to participate.

part of the broadcasting there will be music, both popular and classical. There will be news programs every hour, and there will also be news about the many different campus groups.

The staff has a definite aim, which is very precisely stated in Mike Hauptman's words: "WRUV hopes that we can justify everybody's faith in us; we'll do everything we can to get on the air as fast as possible and to provide the students of the University with all the services that a good campus station should provide."

scotch grain and cordovan, which blends well with suits and holds a good polish.

Hats are being widely worn at Yale and tweed caps are again popular on the out-of-town campuses. The Yalies and Brown "Bears" are gaily mixing their weekday khaki wash pants - "gangies" - with sockless-dirty white bucks (Boyton's tells us for a slight extra charge you can now buy these with the dirt already ground in) dark blue sport coats, plaid vests and straw hats for that so-desired "tweedy" effect.

The real "tweedies" are swinging to sport coats and plain dark-colored slacks, exemplified at the University of Wisconsin and other northern campuses. Though the men out there are conscious of eastern trends, their brand of conservatism is born of frugality more than a desire to keep up with the "Ivy Leaguers." Here they continue to wear two-button single-breasted suits and dark blue gabardines run a close second with the more popular medium shade of gray. It's safe to say these northern lads are not so near the conservative mark as their eastern counterparts, and plan to stay in the "be not first nor last" school.

Those southern rebels are probably the most sensible of the whole "dress circle." For hot weather they dress accordingly; says our brother

Grange Offers Capital Trip

Would you like to win an all expense trip to the state of Washington this fall? Would you like to win a $25 or a $100 War Bond? Would you like to bring honor to our University?

Catamount Grange #564 completes its first year this month and its members are looking forward to an even more successful second year.

The Grange meets in 010 Morrill Hall the first and third Friday of every month. Although it is a Student Grange, it is recognized as a regular subordinate by the National Grange. We are one of 13 University granges in the United States.

By belonging to a grange, there are many contests which the individual can enter with very worthy prizes. There are also many Home and Community projects which the group can enter for State and National awards besides doing good for others.

Entertainment is a big part of the grange, consisting of square dancing, games, group singing, skits and readings. Occasionally, guest speakers will be present.

The ritual is very impressive and something always to be remembered.

If you are already a Grange member, you are welcome to attend the working of the third and fourth degrees in full, this Friday night at 7:30 P.M. If you are interested in finding out more about the Grange, contact either Lois Jones, 4-9563, or Charles Mason, Ext. 288.

(any dissenting opinions will be accepted in person or by mail) It's time to open the 1954 UVM baseball book. . . . . If the weather keeps up the way it has, the Cats may have to switch to the Winter League. . . . . It's a far cry from the barren wastes, icy blasts, and snow clad topography of Vermont to the warmer region down in the Southlands, a region noted for its green pastures, more beautiful coeds, good hard liquor and, every Springtime (springtime?) the scene of an invasion by the UVM baseball team. . . . . Although the Cats face tough, better conditioned foes, and return to Burlington with only fair records, the result is undoubtedly advantageous; for it gives the boys the experience which enables them to produce their fine play in New England competition.

Fencers Feature Foils For Fun At Fencing Club

Each Tuesday evening in the Southwick gymnasium the click of foils can be heard. No, it's not Douglas Fairbanks defending some fair maiden, but the newly formed Fencing Club and their fencing master Perry Seigel. A master he is to; a member of the Amateur Fencing League of America and New York State Scholastic Fencing Champion in 1952. Perry who is a sophomore and hails from the Bronx, New York received his training from Georgio Santelli coach of the American Olympic Team, and Italian-Austrian Sabre and Foil champion.

Foil Specialty

There are three types of fencing; Foil, Sabre, and Epee which is the dueling sword. Perry teaches only with the foil since it is the basic of all the dueling instruments. Fencing requires some agility, but more than agility it requires a great deal of concentration and practice. Fencing gives the participant a feeling of self-confidence and accomplishment for one is his own master with the sword in hand, and it is he alone who wins or loses.

Besides the fencing club for men and women, Perry also teaches a women's class on Monday and Wednesday from 3:00-4:00 p.m. sponsored by WAA.

The newly formed club is slowly acquiring equipment, and new members are joining each week. What used to be taught as a means of self defense has now become a popular sport and pastime.

So if you've a yen for a taste of those bygone days of chivalry or just the desire to learn something wonderfully new and exciting, drop over to Southwick any Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. and watch or join the new UVM Fencing Club.

a stealing base runner. He has played three years of Varsity ball and will graduate this June. The boys on the team always kid Ed about the one thrill he's been telling for the past three years. On the southern trip two years ago, he hit a home run with the bases loaded to win the ball game.

JAMES "Jim" HOAG - Jim is a pitcher who does most of his work in relief. Last year Jim compiled a 2-0 record. This is his second year of Varsity ball and also his last as he is also a senior. He pitched last year in five out of seven games on the southern trip. Jim expects some help from soph pitchers Deitch, Ashline and McAllister.

JAMES "Diamond Jim" MONTGOMERY - Montgomery is one athlete who excels in whatever sport he undertakes. "Diamond Jim" plays shortstop and batted .327 last year. This is his last year of collegiate competition as he is a forthcoming graduate. Last year's thrill for Jim was knocking in the winning run against Mass. Ironically enough his buddy Swanson was pitching against him at the time.

KEITH SPAULDING - Spaulding is playing his third year of Varsity ball. He had been playing first base the last couple of years but Coach LaPointe is switching him to the outfield this year. Last year was a bad one for Keith and he expects this, his senior year, to be the best. Keith looks for a hustling ball club with Ed Rynn hitting the long ball.

RICHARD RUSSELL - Playing his third year of Varsity ball, Dick serves the team mostly as pinch hitter and bullpen catcher. He feels that if the team gets good pitching it will mean a strong team.

VERN "Slim" CURRIER - Vern is seen mostly around the "hot corner" or as it is most frequently known, third base. He is a Junior and is playing his second year of Varsity ball. To be able to start in the opening game of the season has always been Vern's greatest desire.

RONALD "Ronnie" LARROW - Besides pitchers Plender and Hoag, Ronnie is the only returning pitcher who is a letterman this year. Most of the burden will fall on Plender and Larrow as far as chucking goes. Ron is a Junior and is playing his third year of Varsity ball. His record last year shows a 2-1 record.

Batmen Prepare For Southern Sojourn

Coach Forecasts Lineup; Strong In All Positions

In just eleven days from today the University of Vermont will open its 1954 campaign, traveling to Washington, D.C., to face George Washington University on its 43rd annual southern migration.

Indoor Workouts

For the past few weeks baseballs have been flying around the cage in preparation for this season's schedule. The boys are waiting and full of enthusiasm to swing bats on the green of an open-air diamond. The Cats were scheduled to go outdoors last week, but old man winter refused to grant permission. The way things look now Coach Lapointe will have to be content on giving the boys their final grooming indoors.

Lost Seven Lettermen

This will be the third season for Lapointe as coach of the Vermont nine and all indications are that it will be a successful one. Although they lost seven out of nine of last year's starters the Lapointe men will be counting on veterans Jim Montgomery, Keith Spaulding, Vern Currier, Ed Rynn, Dick Russel, George Plender, Ron Larrow, Jim Hoag and Jim Vincent. Ralph will also be hoping heavily on some rookies up from last year's successful frosh.

Strong In all Spots

At this point, the Catamounts seem to be strong in all spots "and with some good pitching we'll go places," says Lapoint. In summarizing the teams debits and credits Ralph declares that; "we have a lot of speed, a strong middle defense, fine hitting except for some concern about facing left handed pitchers."

In commenting on the various positions Lapointe started off with the catchers who pose no strong problem. Captain Ed Rynn, strong both offensively and defensively will be the backplate man, and probably bat fourth. Dick Russel will back Rynn up. Russel is "a good kid to have on a ball club. He's a hustler, and will be used much as a good left handed pinch hitter."

Wark At Initial Sack

The colorful bat mentor then switched to first base. "Joe Wark, a sophomore, will probably be at first. He's a good glove man and will come as a hitter. He has all the tools needed to become a fine ball player." Keith Spaulding will be the utility first baseman.

McLam at Keystone

"Al McLam has nailed down second base. Al, another soph, runs well, has a good baseball instinct, and will probably bat in number two slot.

Short and Third Switch

As of now, senior, Jim Montgomery will start at short, with Vern Currier dominating the hot corner. "But after the southern trip Jim and Vern may switch positions because with Currier at short only a junior, I figure that my two middlemen will have a year's experience next season. Currier, a lefty will bat third or sixth. He's the steady eddy on the club. "Diamond" Jim, an expert in the clutch, will swing either third or fifth. Art Solomon and Bob Shuttle will serve as utility inner defense men.

New Faces in OF Turning to the outer garden, the Catamounts will have some new faces. "Ed Beck, a swift runner and powerful sticker, hasn't played the outfield much but I think that he'll come around. George Gilbert, soph, earned his centerfield position. He's good defense, the 'quarterback' of the OF, hits lefty. Ball hawking George will probably leadoff. Spaulding, the most improved batman on the club, will gander the RF garden.

Plender Possible Starter

"Veteran, George Plender, a righty, will probably start our first game against George Washington. Plender is the most reliable, most experienced and he has a good knuckler combined with a fine changeup." Jim Vincent and Ron Larrow will also see quite a bit of action below the state line. "Jim Hoag, a control-pitcher, may be my ace reliever."

Sophs Show Stuff

There are four sophomore chuckers who have been retained on the squad on merit of their showings during workouts. "Lew Deitsch has good stuff all around and with a little experience he will be ready for first rate action. Carl Ashline, a burly Vermonter, Bruce McAllister, a portsider, and Bob Gorman round out the second year prospects. John Robinson and Warren Ulrich, upperclassmen, complete the versatile pitching staff.

Jerry Samuels, of basketball fame, has recently come out for the team and, along with Don Maynard, will possibly aid Lapointe in the pinch.

16, The Magic Number

Sixteen men will make the southern sojourn. The athletic department has not yet revealed the names of the men who are making the spring vacation trip, but the list will be printed in next week's CYNIC.

Ralph's Record Tells Own Tale

by Bob Brown

Ralph Lapointe, the easy going, affable coach of the UVM varsity baseball nine perhaps fits the picture of this writer's conception of an athlete as well as any one he can remember. Ralph, a rugged six foot, two hundred pounder handles, in addition to his baseball coaching duties, Freshman basketball, backfield varsity football and his physical education classes.

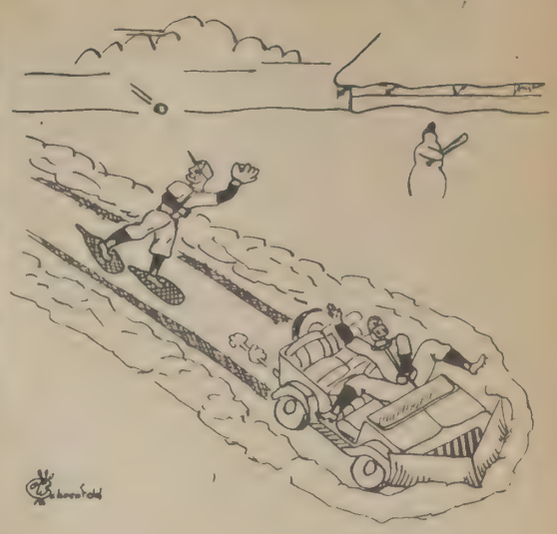
Ralph is included among the ranks of the ineligibles and has a daughter, 2, and a future major league prospect, 7. He originally hailed from Winooski and now makes his home there.

Tutored by Evans

Among his interests, Ralph includes sports in general, winter sports in particular and shooting a consistantly lower game of golf than our varsity basketball coach.

He graduated from Winooski High in 1940, attended Vermont Junior College in 1940-41 and entered UVM in the fall of 1941. Under Fuzzy Evans tutelage he won numerals in basketball, football and baseball.

Major Leaguer



The following year Ralph left school, joined the Army and served in the Intelligence Corps. Discharged in 1946, he signed a pro ball contract with Wilmington and hit .327 over the season. In 1947 he signed with the Philadelphia Phillies and hit .307 for the year. He was with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1948 and in successive years with Baltimore, Toronto and Rochester of the International League.

Between seasons Ralph returned to UVM, but the fact that he was playing pro ball made for an interesting fact; he was never able to play varsity baseball at Vermont.

Here at UVM, Ralph's record speaks for itself. During his two years as coach he has compiled a better than .600 record. In 1952 the Catamounts posted a 13-7 figure and in 1953 finished with an 11-7 mark.

Intra-mural Basketball officials come to Athletic Office and collect your fees for officiating games this year. Please do this by March 27. Money not collected by March 27 will be returned to the treasurer.

UVM Baseball Team Plows into Spring Practice.

Eight Vets Give Lapointe Fine Nucleus

by Mark Bernstein

While snow is still found on the UVM campus, evidence of spring may be seen bursting forth at the cage in the boys gym. Within the past two weeks Coach Ralph LaPointe has been working diligently in order to prepare his baseball squad for the coming season. This year's schedule includes top notch college teams from the South and East. The following are returning lettermen whom Ralph will probably be counting on to make this year's baseball season a successful one:

GEORGE PLENDER - He is now a Junior at Vermont and is playing his third year of varsity ball. His position is pitcher and he held a 3-2 record last year. This year Plender's face should be a familiar one, as he is slated to be one of LaPointe's main starters. George recalls, as one of his greatest thrills while at UVM, two games that he won on the southern trip in his freshman year.

ED "Tex" RYNN - One of the most flashy catchers ever to be seen on the campus is Ed Rynn. Ed last year sported a 317 batting average and his strong arm threw out many

Let's tie the knot on this year's Catamount basketball season. Of the starting five only Keith Jampolis will be back next season. . . . Graduating are Captain Nat Campana, Al Malinverni, Marv Woolf, and Jerry Samuels. . . . . Campana's breaking of the all-time scoring mark which stood for 33 years is almost sure to be broken next season by Jampolis who needs only 123 points to surpass Nat. . . . . Both Billy Mann and Skippy Burkhardt will be up from the freshman squad and are sure to aid Fuzzy in his quest for under-the-board strength. . . . . Reports have it that high scoring Earl Steinman will be back with the Varsity next season. . . . UVM may have some new clubs on next year's Varsity basketball schedule, possibly including Williams and St. Anslem's. . . . . Vermont Skiers Fifth In EISA; Panthers Win

The University of Vermont Ski Team was host to the top ski powers in the East last Saturday and Sunday as UVM and the Lyndon Outing Club co-sponsored the Senior Eastern Intercollegiate meet held on Burke Mountain near Lyndonville.

The UVM Ski Team placed fifth with 521.40 points as Middlebury retained its EISA title. A last minute rush by the University of New Hampshire Nordic combination in Sunday's cross-country and jumping was held off, thus enabling Middlebury to annex its second straight title.

Campana Cops Berth On Second Team Of YC All Star Club

Nat Campana, Vermont Basketball Captain was placed on the Yankee Conference second team, by a poll of the YC varsity coaches. Nat, UVM's high scoring ace who broke this school's all-time scoring record with 855 points, was the only catamount chosen of the 10 men selected.

The University of Connecticut, this year's conference champs, placed two players on the first team, Worthy Patterson and Art Quimby, who were also the only repeaters from last year's squad.

Billy Pappas, University of New Hampshire, was high scorer in conference games this year. The 5' 6" forward scored 164 points for a 20.5 per game average in eight contests.

St. Lawrence University nosed out Dartmouth for third place as the Hanovermen were hampered by the loss of two of their all-around, four-event skiers who were in Colorado,

Thurman Arnold, Harry Cain Signed For Vermont Confab

Ten Speakers Will Appear

Ten noted speakers have agreed to appear at the 1954 Vermont Conference, according to Chairman Fred Hackett. The conference, to be held on April 15, 16, and 17, will be jointly sponsored by Student Association and the International Relations Club. Invitations to participate have been accepted by the following figures:

Thurman Arnold, anti-trust lawyer during the Roosevelt Administration, now engaged in private legal practice.

Clinton Golden, national expert on labor relations and currently Executive Director of the Harvard University Trade Union Program.

Jerome Davis, former faculty member at Harvard, Dartmouth and Ohio; writer of numerous magazine articles; did extensive diplomatic work in the U.S.S.R. under Presidents Hoover and Wilson; first American correspondent to interview Stalin.

Rev. A.J. Muste, noted pacifist clergyman, clerical labor leader, author. Secretary Emeritus of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. Active in the Peacemakers, Ghandian pacifist group Henry Hazlett, journalist, columnist for Newsweek Magazine.

Harry Cain, former U.S. Senator from the State of Washington, now a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board.

Mrs. Jane C. Carey, Professor of Modern History at Barnard College.

James Warburg, Director of the Polaroid and Fonteney Companies; author of "Hell Bent for Election" and other books.

Rev. Robert M. Brown of the Union Theological Seminary, formerly a U.S. Navy Chaplain.

James M. O'Niell, Professor of Speech at Brooklyn College. Author of "Catholicism and American Freedom," an answer to Blanchard's controversial "American Freedom and Catholic Power."

The International Relations Club, represented on the Conference committee by Jim Anderson and Nick Carter, is inviting representatives from various Eastern Colleges to attend and participate in the Conference.

The name of the keynote speaker has not as yet been revealed. Keynoter for the first conference was UVM's Professor Robert Babcock; the 1953 event was piloted by Professor Earl Latham of Amherst College.

Escaped Polish Delegate Is Town And Country Days Key Speaker

Korowicz Article In LIFE; Appears Here 8:00, April 9

"I escaped to speak for the enslaved," wrote Dr. Marek S. Korowicz, key speaker for Town and Country Days, in the March 1 issue of Life MAGAZINE.

Dr. Korowicz will speak at 8:00 PM, Friday, April 9, in the Ira Allen Chapel. His tentative topic is, "What's Behind the Iron Curtain?"

Korowicz made headlines last September when he fled the Polish Delegation to the United Nations to seek political asylum in the United States. He became a member of the faculty at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy last month. The Fletcher School is a graduate college administered by Tufts College in conjunction with Harvard University.

" Fortunate " – Kroepsch

At present, Korowicz is lecturing on "the political and legal organization of the Soviet satellite countries." He is a Research Professor of International Law and International Organization.

According to Dean Robert H. Kroepsch, "We are fortunate that, through Professor George Little's connections with the Fletcher School, we have been able to obtain Dr. Korowicz as our feature speaker for Town and Country Days." Dean Kroepsch is chairman of the weekend endeavor.

In an address to the Fletcher students, Professor Korowicz said: "I am very happy to be free in a free world. For the first time in seven years I have been able to say what I truly think."

Escape At Night

A scholar whose work in international law and diplomacy is widely known in international circles, Dr. Korowicz is a former professor at Yagellonian University in Krakow, Poland. He stole out of his New York hotel six months ago, shortly before he was to have assumed the post of president of the United Nations Committee of Jurists.

"But I could not, of course, sit beside such 'respresentatives' of our country as the Soviet agents, Dr. Suchy and Mrs. Naszkowski," Korowicz said in a speech to Poland over Radio Free Europe. "I did not want to manifest my solidarity with Poland's oppressors by appearing even on this legal committee.

"Under the dead hand of Soviet totalitarianism," he continued, "true creativeness, especially in the domain of the humanities, is paralyzed.

Lucchina Elected SA President

Special To The Cynic

George Lucchina '55, was swept into the Student Association presidency yesterday as 1020 UVM students went to the polls. "George won by a fairly sizeable margin," according to Bill Battles, Elections Committee Chairman.

Assistant to Lucchina in the coming SA year, is sophomore David O'Brien, who nailed down the vice-president slot. Carl Brown '55, and Liz Semans '56, were elected, respectively, treasurer and secretary.

Two frosh, Doug Burke and "Tinker" Meehan, are the new sub-treasurer and subsecretary.

"The campaign and voting were as successful as in the past four years," stated Battles. "The student turnout was ten over last year's figure."

Also elected were six new Student Court Justices. The Arts and Science posts went to Ted Howard and Dick Hooker. On the bench for Technology are Martin Siegel and Robert Park. Education and Nursing, and Agriculture are represented by Ginne Rosse and Jim Slade, respectively.

Student Court Declares Void CYNIC Petition

A petition designed to deprive the CYNIC of financial support from the Student Association was found invalid on three separate counts by the student court last week. Richard Adams, who presented the petition, said that since the CYNIC was now the only paper on the campus, "I would have been the first to protest if the petition had been passed."

The student court based its action on three charges; (1) The petition did not propose a specific course of action. (2) If transferred to a ballot the petition would not allow specific action to be taken because it did not constitute a coherent statement. (3) The petition would invalidate the power of the Student Association Council

Spiro, Kearney Place Second At South Bend

Jy Max G. Ansbacher

Herzl Spiro and Kevin Kearney, Vermont's top debaters, ranked second and third respectively at the Notre Dame National Tournament, which Professor Charles R. Helgesen, director of Debate, has called "a tournament of winners and district champions." The team was second best in the tournament, losing in the semi-finals to Notre Dame which was the tournament winner.

Both members of the team were picked for the all tournament team of four, and awarded a plaque. Professor Helgesen said that this was roughly equivalent to making All American in football. Vermont was one of the only two teams invited to the tournament from New England, the other being Dartmouth.

Last year's top fifteen schools in the nation were at the tournament, which had only 17 different entries. Invitations were based on

Communist Not Automatically Disloyal, Says New Resolution

Four points are on the University Senate agenda this afternoon. Two of them run especially high in University interest.

Prime in importance to most students is the Student Advisory Committee's resolution concerning discriminatory clauses: "Resolved that no fraternity or sorority be allowed to maintain a discriminatory clause (relative to race, religion, or color) in its charter. Further resolved that seven years be allowed for those fraternities or sororities affected to eliminate said clause."

The second point to be considered is a policy committee motion regarding faculty loyalty to the United States and the procedure for dismissal of a faculty member.

This point is one which was tabled at the Senate meeting of January 21. The loyalty portion of the tabled motion follows:

" (Suggested substitution for policy on Communists adopted by the Trustees on April 10, 1953.)

"1. Since loyalty to the United States of America is expected...and since Communist discipline is inimical to that loyalty and to the intellectual freedom which must characterize institutions of higher learning in a democracy, no person known to be a Communist or to be subject to Communist discipline will be permitted on the staff of the University.

"2. Furthermore the loyalty of all staff members who may be included in one of the following categories will be subject to investigation with a view to determining whether or not dismissal is warranted: (a) those who admit previous membership in the Communist party but maintain that they are no longer members; (b) those who are suspected of falsehood in denying Communist connections; (c) those who refuse to testify before properly-constituted governmental bodies, claiming constitutional privilege against self incrimination; (d) those who are reasonably suspected for other reasons of disloyalty to the United States....."

By Variance

However, it is expected that in addition another resolution will be proposed as a possible substitute for the Policy Committee resolution. This second resolution is at variance with the former, particularly on loyalty definitions. It follows:

"1. ....Disloyalty to the Constitution of the United States shall be regarded as the overt illegal act against the government; not criticism of it, no matter how unpopular the criticism.

"2. No person, Communist or otherwise, who submits in his academic work to the discipline of an organization inimical to free inquiry will be permitted on the staff of the University.

"3. In order to determine whether a member of the staff is submissive in his academic

Newman Club Will Sponsor April Retreat

The Newman Club will sponsor its annual retreat April 9th, 10th and 11th. This year's retreat will conducted by Rev. John F. Rennehan, C.S.S.R. (Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer). Father Rennehan is a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., where he attended the parochial schools for his elementary education. His studies were completed at Esopos-on-the-Hudson. He spent the war years as chaplain with the U.S. Army, and is currently attached to the mission band of the Mission Church, Roxbury, Mass.

A general definition of a retreat might be: a period of time, either short or long, during which an individual endeavors to withdraw from his or her ordinary pursuits to pray, meditate and receive instruction in the life of the spirit. The major portion of a rétreat is usually spent in a church or chapel. Sufficient time is set aside for the retreatant to consult privately with the retreat-master, a priest, or any other priest on problems concerning his or her spiritual life.

Retreats are of two types: closed retreats, usually

'Town And Country' Program Filled With Student Interest

By Marvin Mierenbery

While UVM's third annual Town and Country Days are primarily an adult education program for the residents of the state of Vermont, they also present an excellent opportunity to students for broadening their interests, April 9 and 10 are the days during which numerous lectures, demonstrations, panel discussions, movies, and exhibits will be presented. In addition to several prominent outside authorities, representatives of the University family will present the program.

One of the outside authorities who will deliver his address at 8:00 P.M., Friday, in the Ira Allen Chapel is Dr. Marek S. Korowicz. Dr. Korowicz, an (ex) delegate to the United Nations who fled from Poland and sought political asylum in the U.S., will probably try to clarify "What's Behind the Iron Curtain? "

"What will the St. Lawrence Seaway Mean to Vermont?" is the topic of the panel discussion at 11:00 A.M. on Saturday in the Student Lounge. Participants in the discussion will be Professors Robert S. Babcock, Philip H. Lohman and James A. Root.

Frolics, International Relations.

A change of mood will be provided by the University Players in presenting Spring Frolics, a variety show, both Friday and Saturday nights. Tickets will be sold at the door in Southwick Auditorium for 75 cents to raise money for their Arena Theater Building Fund.

Participants in the Town and Country Days will hear Dr. Michel Mouskhely, Professor of Political Science at the University of Strasbourg and Sec'y General of the Commission of European University Teachers, speak at the regularly scheduled meeting of the International Relations Club. This open meeting will take place at 4:30 P.M., Friday in Waterman -room 239.

"Diversification In Vermont's Agriculture " is to be discussed by an eminent panel of agricultural and industrial experts led by Leonard S. Hill and Professor Donald C. Henderson. Hill is Business Supervisor of the Dep't of Administration of the State of New Hampshire and Professor Henderson is UVM's Associate Professor of Poultry Husbandry. It will be held in room 24, Hills Hall at 10:30 A.M., Friday.

Atoms to Art

"A " is for Atom is the title of a motion picture shown in room 239, Waterman on Friday at 11:00 A.M., and discussed by Wilbur L. Steinman, Ass't. Professor of Electrical Engineering and William N. Ellis, Ass't Professor of Physics. This is closely correlated with the lecture-demonstration on "Using the Atom In Agriculture " given by Dr. R.A. Monroe, Senior Scientist at the Univ. of Tennessee, and a staff member of the agricultural research program of the Atomic Energy Commission at Oak Ridge. The lecture will be given at 1:30 P.M., Friday in room 24, Hills Hall.

UVM's Associate Professor of Art, Francis P. Colburn, will explain what modern art is to whomever comes to Fleming Museum's Art Gallery at 11:30 A.M., Friday. He will illustrate his talk with slides showing the extremes and less radical aspects of modern art.

Paul A. Moody, Professor of Zoology, will discuss race prejudice from a biologist's point of view in an illustrated lecture similar to his popular contribution to the current World Problems Course. This will take place in room 300, Williams Science Hall.

Special exhibits and displays will be on view during Town and Country Days in Waterman's second floor corridor, Waterman Memorial Lounge, the Fleming Museum and Billings Library. It is hoped that students will take advantage of this interest-packed weekend and participate in as many activities as possible.

work to the discipline of the Communist party or any other organization inimical to free inquiry, the Administrative Council may request the President of the University to initiate the formation of a committee to investigate persons .... including: (a) those who are suspected of falsehood in denying Communist affiliation, (b) those who take any illegal or disloyal action against the government, and (c) those who refuse to testify before properly constituted governmental bodies on any grounds except self-incrimination...."

Dissatisfied

The former resolution, that presented by the Policy Committee, resulted from a dissatisfaction with the procedural entanglements which occurred in the Novikoff dismissal last year. The Committee was, at that time, asked by President Borgmann to revamp the mechanics of the dismissal procedure and to reevaluate the University stand on Communist membership.

The latter resolution grew from a group dissatisfied with the revised statement as presented by the Policy Committee. Rough drafts were first drawn up individually by Professors Robert Babcock, Andrew Nuquist and Harold Schultz. Through four open faculty hearings, the present form was arrived at. It has been emphasized by all concerned that the resolution in its present form has a long way to go before it becomes University policy, if, indeed, it ever does. At present, it is impossible to tell how the resolution will fare in the Senate, as the attendance at the formative meetings was relatively sparce; the resolution may therefore represent the opinions of only those who were in attendance at the open hearings.

"It is a tough problem;" stated Professor Robert Babcock, "there is no simple solution."

both this and last year's records. Both the Vermont debators got superior ratings, which is the highest debate grade. Kevin Kearney was even awarded a perfect score of 50 out of 50 by one judge. UVM met and beat the University of Pennsylvania, Michigan State, Purdue University, and Georgetown University. We lost to Wisconsin State as well as to Notre Dame.

Herzl and Kevin left today for the regional tournament which will decide which teams will represent New England in the National. Vermont won this regional last year with a 6 - 0 record, and the team hopes to come out on top again this year.

WSGA Council Installed Wed. At Mass Meeting

WSGA held its final mass meeting yesterday in the Southwick Auditorium at which time the new officers and council were installed. The new WSGA council for 1954-55 is composed of Alayne Tomlinson, '55, president; Frances Kidder, '55, chief justice; Claire Battles, '55, first vice-president; Nancy Brown, also a junior, second vice-president.

Other officers installed were Marilyn Skinner, '55, house chairman; Patricia Kolk, '55, assistant house chairman; Carolyn Silsby, '55, scholarship chairman and Anne Mitchell, '57, assistant scholarship chairman.

Kathryn Ballou, a junior, is the new social chairman-Donna Newhall, '56, assistant social chairman; Jane Stickney, '56, secretary; Anne Harriman, also a sophomore, treasurer; and Sally Smith, '56, town representative.

Honoraries Elected

After the installation, there were elections for junior honorary, Staff and Sandal, and sophomore honorary, Sophomore Aides.

Immediately following the outgoing WSGA council sponsored a coffee hour in the Ballroom. Marty Edson served as general chairman for the installation of officers and coffee hour. The purpose of this social was to give the women students an opportunity to meet and become acquainted with the new council members.

Three Leave Vermont, Hitch To Harvard, Hear Stevenson

Three University of Vermont students Donald Forst, Richard Lapidus and Richard Viets crossed the borders of Republican Vermont and hitchhiked 225 miles to Boston, Democratic stronghold, and Harvard University to hear the head of the Democratic party, Adlai Stevenson deliver three lectures. Stevenson gave the annual Godkin Government Lectures, a series of three talks on government. The Godkin Lectures, last year were delivered by John J. McCloy, former United States High Commissioner in Germany.

Leaving Burlington late Wednesday afternoon, the trio arrived in Lee, Massachusetts, after four hours. They were unable to continue to Boston that night because they were unable to secure rides after dark. They remained in Lee over-night and hitched to Boston Thursday.

Some Stir

The trio caused some stir Thursday when, while standing in line awaiting admittance to the lectures, it became known that they had left the traditionally Republican Green Mountain state to hear the 1952 nominee of the Democratic party.

Friday, the arrival of UVM's trio became known to officials of Harvard's Government department. The three were given early admission passes to the lectures and were permitted to pick any seat in the auditorium they desired.

About 1,300 people were admitted to each of the lectures; 3,000 were turned away each evening.

When asked if they had ever seen lines at UVM like the ones waiting to hear Mr. Stevenson, the trio said the only thing comparable was the people queued-up on the noon-time cafeteria line.

In addition to those who saw Governor Stevenson, thousands more heard his lectures which were carried over Harvard's radio station. Stevenson spoke in Sanders Theatre, Memorial Hall.

Viets, Lapidus and Forst sat in the seminar of the Government department Friday afternoon. They hitched back Saturday.

Atomic Agriculture Topic Of Town And Country Address

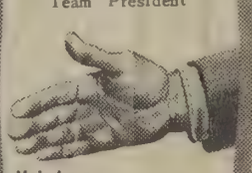
Atoms aren't used to level fields or to make farm ponds, but they are being used in agriculture.

Research by the Atomic Energy Commission's agricultural research division will be explained in an illustrated talk at the Third Annual Town and Country Days on the University of Vermont campus. Dr. R.A. Monroe, of Oak Ridge, Tenn., will speak at 1:30 April 9.

Dr. Monroe, a senior scientist in the AEC farm project, will tell of research with radioactive materials in plant and animals growth. He'll also demonstrate the use and detection of radioactive materials in plant and animal tissues.

Not unfamiliar with Vermont, Dr. Monroe worked for a St. Albans dairy plant in 1944.

As staff members of the University of Tennessee, Dr. Monroe and his associates operate the research program under the Extension Division supported with AEC funds.



He reports that nearly all of the work is concerned with the application of radioactive isotopes to agricultural research.

Dr. Monroe has worked on calcium metabolism in poultry and dairy cattle, vitamin B_{12} metabolism and effects of whole body irradiatfon on thyroid function.

"Chrome Clad" STEEL TAPES
are preferred by engineers

When you go out on the job, you want the most durable steel measuring tapes you can get — Lufkin "Chrome Clad." The jet black markings won't wear off, for they are bonded to the line and protected by multiple electroplatings that further build up the fine tape steel from which the line is made. The resulting line is heavier, stronger, and most rust and corrosion resistant. It is easier to read, easiest to clean, and won't surface crack, chip, or peel. Only Lufkin tapes are available with Chrome Clad.

Would you want to work under the honor system? Remember that this would mean reporting others as well as not cheating yourself.

I believe that an honor system will only be successful if the people for whom it is working are honest in regard to themselves and each other. Such a system must have a firm basis in the college. The students must all believe in it and try to make it work for themselves first. If all the students do this I think that it will work for the whole university. If each student had his own honor code there would be no need for reporting each other as the wrongdoer would report himself. Complete honor systems seem to have worked in other schools and I think that it would work here too if everyone cooperated.

Betty Peach Class of 1954

I believe in the honor system and think it the best system to live under in college. In order for the honor system to work effectively each person needs to understand it and want it to work. Actually it makes possible much more freedom, but it operates under the theory "What is best for the group must be upheld," and every person has to be willing to sacrifice some personal freedoms for the group. If each person realizes that he has broken his honor when he breaks a rule he should be willing to report himself and take the consequences. When someone breaks his honor this weakens the entire system and is harmful to everyone else. In order for the system to work efficiently for everyone's benefit the wrongdoers must be reported.

Karl Greenman Class of 1954

Yes, I would want to work under the honor system here at the University. I feel it is an excellent way to help prevent whatever dishonesty there is. It will make each student responsible not only for himself but for his fellow students. The big question is, however, will everyone carry out the duty of reporting a fellow student or will he tend to overlook cases of cheating?

Ed Walker Class of 1957

No, I wouldn't want to work under an honor system. My reason for this is that one of my friends has been ostracized because he had to turn in a fellow student at his college. I know that it would be pretty hard to turn in your best friend after two or three years at college because you thought you saw cheating. If a person cheats all the time the chances are that he will be caught sooner or later. Therefore, I like things the way they are now.

Color And Design Authority Is Next Marketing Speaker

Mr. H. Creston Doner, director of design andcolor for the Libbey Owens, Ford Glass Co., will speak to the American Marketing Speaks series on Tuesday April 7, in room 239 Waterman at 7:30. The internationally known authority on color and background design will discuss the topic "Stop 'em, Hold 'em, Sell 'em?"

The talk which Mr. Doner will give on April 7, is to be illustrated with Kodachromes which will illustrate the latest types of interior and exterior design for stores and factories. Everyone is invited to attend this talk. In announcing the speaker, Professor Charles Edwin Greif of the department of commerce and economics said, "Because of the great popularity of Mr. Doner's lectures, we are very proud to be able to have him address our American Marketing Speaks series. His lecture should be of special interest to retailers, builders, and designers.

Mr. Doner is the co-author of the book "Trademark," which he and six other experts recently wrote. The much seen Libbey Owens Ford "Kitchen of Tomorrow" was designed by Mr. Doner. Although it was created in 1942 it was the forerunner of the present trend in kitchens to use more natural wood, brick, and stone in order to create an informal atmosphere. According to authorities in interior decorating the kitchen is still ahead of most of the present day kitchens in many respects.

A new approach will be used in the talk, which will explain what a "visual-front store is, and what its advantages are. Mr. Doner will also tell about a new method of displaying merchandise, and how to design a store layout for the most traffic.

"....bad teacher, or good communist?"

A substitution for a proposed University policy on Communists was presented today to the University Senate. The substitution differs, in three basic and important concepts, from both the present policy of the University and from the Policy Committee's suggested revision of said University policy.

These concepts are dependent on the answers to the following questions:

Is a Communist, by virtue of being such, automatically disloyal to the Constitution of the United States?

Is a Communist, by virtue of being such, automatically inimical to free inquiry?

Is a person entitled to claim constitutional privilege against self-incrimination?

Let us examine the three statements which have thus far been advanced regarding a policy on Communists. In order, there is the present official policy of the University; there is the Policy Committee's suggested revision of the official policy; there is a proposed substitution for the Policy Committee's suggested revision.

The official University policy, as outlined by President Borgmann and adopted by the Trustees, states:

"No known Communist shall be permitted on the staff of UVM.

"Any faculty member who refuses to answer questions concerning possible Red ties will be suspended immediately and investigated by a faculty-trustee committee.

"Any faculty member who admits previous membership in the Communist party, but who claims that he is no longer a member, will be investigated by a faculty-trustee committee....."

This present policy does not even lend itself to consideration under the three questions presented at the out set. We do not doubt that the statement, "No known Communist shall be permitted on the staff of UVM," infers that a Communist, by virtue of being such, is automatically disloyal to the Constitution of the United States. It probably also implies that a Communist is inimical to free inquiry.

However, these are only inferences. For this reason, President Borgmann asked the Policy Committee to come up with a more lucid statement of policy.

The Committee, therefore submitted the following statement to the Senate last January. It was at that time tabled and is scheduled for action at today's Senate meeting.

"Since loyalty to the United States of America is expected of all members of the staff...and since Communist discipline is inimical to that loyalty and to the intellectual freedom which must characterize institutions of higher learning in a democracy, no person known to be a Communist or to be subject to Communist discipline will be permitted on the staff of the University.

"...the loyalty of all staff members who may be included in one of the following categories will be subject to investigation with a view to determining whether or not dismissal is warranted: (a) those who admit previous membership in the Communist party but maintain that they are no longer members; (b) those who are suspected of falsehood in denying Communist connections; (c) those who refuse to testify before properly-constituted governmental bodies, claiming constitutional privilege against self-incrimination....."

How does this statement answer our three initial questions? Communist discipline, it is stated, is inimical to free inquiry and inimical to loyalty to the Constitution. Therefore, it continues, a Communist, or one subject to Communist discipline, is both disloyal and inimical to intellectual freedom, and on that basis should not be permitted on the staff of the University.

Several questions are raised as a result of this conclusion. Since the distinction is made between a "Communist," and "one subject to Communist discipline," is it not possible for one to be a Communist, but not subject to Communist discipline? Then, we ask, if one is not subject to the discipline of the party, and if he can teach in a manner which is not inimical to free inquiry, why dismiss him from the staff of the University? Is not a University a bulwark of free inquiry?

Furthermore, since the loyalty question is raised, is it not feasable for a Communist who is, himself, not subject to Communist disciplines to remain loyal to the Constitution?

As for invoking the fifth amendment, this policy stipulates that any person so doing is liable for investigation. It appears, then that the investigation is being conducted not because of (c)...refusing to testify...claiming constitutional privilege against self-incrimination, but because of being (b)...suspected of falsehood in denying Communist connections.

It seems to us that (b) eliminates (c). Now, how does the third statement of policy handle the original three questions. First, free inquiry---"No person, Communist or otherwise, who submits in his academic work to the discipline of an organization inimical to free inquiry will be permitted on the staff of the University," the statement puts forth.

In this statement, then, a distinction is made between the person who submits to a party discipline, and one who is a member of a party (or any other organization) but does not submit himself to its disciplines. It is possible in this case to have a Communist teaching on the faculty, so long as he permits free inquiry.

Second, loyalty to the Constitution---"Disloyalty to the Constitution...is the overt, illegal act against the government; not criticism of it, no matter how unpopular the criticism."

No Communist has ever been convicted merely for "advocating the overthrow of the government by violence." This would be in direct opposition to the first amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech. He has, however been convicted of secretive conspiracy against the government (Smith Act). As long as a Communist voices his opinions openly, we need have no fear of him for we can refute him if we so desire. It is only when he goes underground that we have to worry. This is the "overt, illegal act" in our interpretation of it. If he criticizes openly, let him; this is not disloyalty.

Third, self-incrimination---"...investigate those who refuse to testify on any grounds, except self-incrimination..."

We feel that the University should possess the power to investigate those who invoke the fifth amendment. We do not, however, believe (as was implied above) that the investigation should be based upon the invocation of the "fifth". It should be based upon the possibility of falsehood. The invocation of the fifth amendment is irrelevant to the question, for we believe that the individual is entitled to call upon it. Unfortunately, it has been abused many times since its inception; it still stands, nevertheless.

We have drawn certain conclusions which we believe merit restating.

A person is not disloyal to the Constitution by virtue alone of his affiliation with the Communist party; if he secretly conspires to overthrow the government, then he is disloyal.

A person is not inimical to free inquiry unless he submits in his academic work to disciplines which are inimical to free inquiry. Mere affiliation with an organization whose disciplines are inimical to free inquiry, does not automatically subject the individual to those disciplines.

A person is entitled to invoke the fifth amendment, but this does not eliminate the possibility of an investigation based on falsehoods in testimony.

Any dismissal of a faculty member should be made not on the basis of his political views; it should be made only on the basis of his teaching ability, i.e.- his ability to present material in a manner which is not inimical to free inquiry. This does not, of course rule out the possibility of dismissal based on disloyalty.

Fire him because he is a poor teacher, not because he is a good Communist.

letters to the editor

Mechanic On: Dilemma

To the Editor of The CYNIC:

This has been a year during which the administration, students and faculty have started to look seriously at their own university, asking themselves "What is wrong with UVM and how can we improve it?" This question is not a new one in respect to physical or educational facilities. However it is only recently that the intangible "social values" and non-academic activities have come to the forefront.

There can be no doubt that this re-orientation of social values has been spearheaded by President Borgmann, either directly or in spirit. There also can be no doubt that his general aim is to effect a closer relationship in the student body. For example, the President has initiated "fraternity reform", both in respect to the use of liquor and discrimination clauses. He has also formulated the plan for "all campus nights". Although many have shrugged off these innovations as merely "anti-fraternity", I prefer to view them not as anti-fraternity measures, but rather as attempts to effect an over-all revaluation of student life. Rather that eliminate or restrict fraternity activities, President Borgmann is attempting to consolidate the fraternities with the rest of the student body, and to transfer some of the strong fraternity spirit into school spirit.

Following the lead of the administration, the students themselves have begun to revaluate their own non-academic life. UVM is unique in one very important aspect. There are very few universities in which the student government commands such a powerful and autonomous position as does our Student Association. Not only does it disburse the students' money, but it also lays down many of the rules regulating the non-academic aspect of student life. (In most universities the administrations make up the rules, and the students have little say in the matter.)

The Joint Social Activities Board is a student-faculty committee sponsored by the Administration This representative committee, as its name implies, not only formulates rules of social conduct, but also acts as the immediate guardian and inspector of these rules.

Another committee, distinct from student government, but which nevertheless represents a large segment of the student body, is the Interfraternity Council. This committee also formulates rules regulating the non-academic life of the campus.

Not only are the students represented formally by the above named organizations, but they also have inherent power to direct their own

SAE Angry

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

A trial was held recently. Now, this in itself isn't much of a surprise to this campus, since this sort of thing seems to be part of the regular routine...trials, charges, countercharges, etc.

What made this trial unique was the fact that THE DEFENDANTS WERE NOT ALLOWED TO BE PRESENT.

It seems that W. Scott Mahoney, presently serving in the "capacity" of COSA, gathered "direct evidence" that S.A.E. had a party on December 12th. (last semester).

W. Scott presented the "facts" to the judge and jury, the Joint Social Activities Board. S.A.E. presented a report on the episode.

W. Scott could have easily found evidence that we had a party...you see, we did have a party, it was announced, and invitations were sent out to various groups on campus. This was reported to r. H.

Now the confusing thing about the whole deal, is that the JSAB, tried the case without telling us, and judged us guilty on Mr. Mahoney's word, thereby docking us two parties this semester.

Mind you, we weren't even notified of the meeting, not

"Education is a process of deadening one end in order to liven up the other." - Cavalier Daily of the University of Virginia.

Bogus Prof.

The University of New Hampshire recently dismissed Marvin Hewitt from his position of Assistant Professor of Physics after learning that he had assumed the name of a prominent physicist when applying for his job. Hewitt is self educated and has no college degrees, but has held high positions at several universities during the past ten years. His dismissal after a year of teaching at UNH was precipitated by the suspicious of one of his students who suspected the "Professor" because of his lack of certain knowledge required of every Ph.D. candidate.

Union Rushing

"In a move unprecedented in its history, the Student Council...upheld a motion to take a referendum of the entire student body on the rushing problem," stated the Union College Concordiensis last week. The poll's results will determine whether rushing will be a first or second semester event. It was felt by the Union College student council that the entire student body should have final say on the "crucial problem."

Smith Sophs Cut Most

A recent poll of Smith College students revealed that 58% of the sophomores cut at least once a week. Highest ranking as a class in this respect, the sophs' reasons are mainly: exam-cramming, dull classes and out-of-town weekends.

Students Want Religion

One of the results of a study entitled "American High School Students Evaluate Their Public School System" revealed by the Purdue Exponent was that the students favored classes in religion in public schools, while adults opposed such a practice.

invited to give our defense... a simple case of trial without the defendant (wanna know where else this is done?).

Naturally we appealed the verdict of the court (JSAB) since the party was held as a legal party, no matter what Mr. Mahoney might say. He did not notify us that our affair was cancelled AS HE TOLD THE JSAB, and we did call him up the morning of the party THOUGH HE SAYS WE DID NOT. If W. Scott desires, we can tell him the exact nature of the conversation, as more than one person was present when the call was made.

Our appeal was not even considered, we were not given a chance to state our case, and Mr. Mahoney's word was taken without a single question of whether or not we had a case.

Without a doubt, the Joint Social Activities Board has called Sigma Alpha Epsilon a liar, since they would not even consider what we said, rather accepting W. Scott's testimony "as given".

This testimony is incorrect.

Since the office of Co-ordinator of Student Affairs is being turned into a DIRECTOR of our affairs, and the JSAB has taken it upon itself to be both judge and jury (heck gang, let's forget the defendant, they don't count), we feel a better (and, mind you, less rigorous) system might be worked out.

Could the Faculty Advisors be given more of a task than just signing our petitions (your petitions, they took most of our parties away).

It seems that the COSA and JSAB have outlived their usefulness, by forgetting their functions, and devising more ways to do less, with wider and stickier red tape.

Let's find a system which WILL earn the respect and admiration of the student body with its honest attempt at solving our social problems.

In accordance with Article 7, Section 3 Part B of the Student Association bylaws.

This part of the bylaws says that a petition will go to the students only if the Student Association Council votes it down. This petition would have gone to the students whether the Student Association Council voted for, or against it.

The vote of the court was unanimous. According to Paul H. Sherlock, court chief justice, "Once everyone understood the situation, there was almost no disagreement. "The court has the power to interpret the Student Association bylaws, and the Student Association Council had decided that the court should pass a decision on this case.

Dick Adams said, "As long as I saw a chance for improvement I wanted the petition to go through. However, I do think that the situation could have been much worse with no paper on the campus. Also, the last two issues of the CYNIC have been better than any I've seen so far."

Dick Adams also felt that the ideal situation was to have two newspapers on a campus. However he felt that a campus with one paper was not nearly as bad off in comparison to a campus with two papers, as a campus with no paper was in comparison to one that had a paper.

At the court session Phil Murphy, Student Association Council President, said that as it stood, the petition was merely a public opinion poll.

Andy Karp and Leonard Kronman won 4 and lost 3 on the negative debate team, while Sheldon Horowitz and Marshall Kroot won 3 and lost 4 on the affirmative side at the Georgetown Tournament this weekend. Sheldon Horowitz was named fifth best speaker in the tournament.

On the trip down to the tournament the teams met Princeton and Navy, with the affirmative coming out on top both times, and the negative taking two losses. In the tournament the affirmative lost two of its decisions by one point, while the negative team lost every one of its decisions by a single point.

Professor Charles R. Helgesen, who accompanied to the tournament said, "I was very impressed by the quality of the debating. We did better in the tournament than we had done in previous years."

Affirmative Disadvantage

The negative team won 5 superior ratings and 2 excellent, and the affirmative gained 3 superior ratings and 4 excellent grades. In the over-all debate the scores of all teams showed that the affirmatives lost 70% of their debates, and won only 30%. This gives added meaning to the score achieved by our affirmative team.

Claire Battles, Ed English, Jacques Mitchell, and Pauline Wescott are in the mid-west where they will attend the National TKA tournament in Kalamazoo, Michigan. TKA is the national debate organization. Professor Robert B. Huber is going along as coach.

Abdalla, Frank Elected To Head '54 Senior Week

Michael Abdalla and Lee Frank were elected co-chairmen of Senior Week at a meeting of the Senior Class held last week to discuss plans for the coming ceremonies. Phil Murphy was elected senior class representative for the Founders' Day observance.

The decision to hold a senior week this year was unanimous. A committee of volunteers was set up to investigate possible class gifts and report its findings at the next meeting. Serving on this committee are; Nancy Jean Beals, Bobbie Bach, Matty Baigell, and Martha Edson.

There was a good contrast here.

Kathy Dimick was all Victorian with her upturned nose and revulsion for the younger set.

Terry Tough And Tender

Ann Terry acted as well as she could with the lines she had. She was tough and tender almost inspite of the poor writing.

This is the type of a play that would help Broadway get out of the rut it is in. The play has great audience appeal, but more important, it is not a collection of gags and jokes. It is serious in intention.

The acting, directing, props and lighting of our production were excellent for an amateur group. It is to the credit of the group, that with no precedent to go on, they were able to make a living play out of the material.

B'nai B'rith Head Speaks At Confab April 11 Weekend

On April 12, the University is sponsoring a Religious Activities Conference. The guest speaker at that time will be Rabbi Alfred Jospy, acting head of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

He will speak at a brunch Sunday, April 11, at the Ohavi Zedek Synagogue. The following day, Monday, he will attend a luncheon in the third floor dining room of the Waterman Building, at which he will speak on the topic of "Religious Co-operation on the Campus." The luncheon is by invitation only. President Borgmann heard Rabbi Josby speak at a recent conference which he attended, and decided that he wanted the University to hear him.

Jampolis Elected 1954-1955 Hoop Captain; Battles And Damon To Lead Ski Team

High Scoring Ace In Fourth Season

by Dick Lewis

Keith Jampolis, a junior from Brooklyn, N. Y. was elected Varsity Basketball Captain for the 1954-55 season. Keith will see his fourth year of varsity action next season as a result of the one year NCAA relaxation of the Freshman eligibility rule in 1951. Jampolis lead the Catamounts in scoring this past season with 294 points and he needs only 123 digits next season to break Nat Campana'a all-time Vermont scoring record.

The "neck", as he is called by his teammates, is a product of Erasmus High School, Brooklyn, N. Y. where he played three years of varsity basketball on a team which won the league championship two years in a row and the city crown one year. "Jamp" was co-captain in his senior year.

The 6', 170 lb. guard is enrolled in the college of Technology, majoring in Industrial Management. He is a member of Tau Epsilon Phi.

13 Hoopsters get medals

It was announced by the Athletic Department that thirteen UVM hoopsters received letters for the 1953-1954 season. Seniors Al Malinvemi, Nat Campana, Marv Woolf and Gerry Samuels, Juniors Vern Currier, Ray Flannery, Hal Greenfader, Keith Jampolis and Ronnie Ward and Sophomores Bob Lovejoy, Bill King, Barry Stone and Rollie Massimino received lettermen awards.

At the same time, the Council approved the election of William Blakeman of Bethel, Vt. as Varsity Manager for next season.

The UVM Varsity compiled a 13-7 record this season. In his twelve years of coaching at Vermont, Coach John C. "Fuzzy" Evans's teams have won 139 games, while losing only 69, for an excellent 66.8 percentage. In these 12 years, UVM has won the mythical state title seven times, and tied for it once.

Two Four Event Men Chosen Captains

The UVM ski team elected Bill Battles and Larry Damon co-captains for the 1954-55 season.

Damon, a junior, was this year's captain. The 120 pound six footer, from Burlington was Vermont's crack four event man this season. He was outstanding in Cross Country, Track, and Skiing at Burlington High. Larry has also earned his letter on Coach Archie Post's Cross Country Team. He is a member of Key and Serpent, and enrolled in the College of Technology.

Bill Battles, also a junior, was one of Charlie Traverse's mainstays this season. He and Damon stood out as four event men. Bill, a Vermonter from Rutland, is a member of Key and Serpent and chairman of S.A. elections committee.

Nine varsity letters and ten class numerals were awarded to the members and managers of the Freshman and Varsity ski squads.

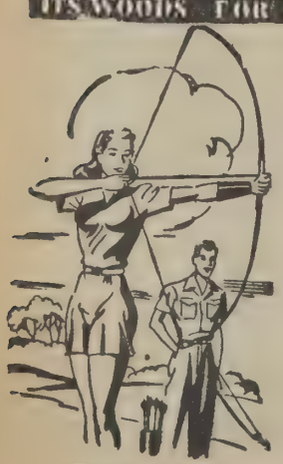
Five of the nine letter-men named have previously received letter awards. Besides Battles and Damon, Don Grady, Fred Hackett, and Clint Thompson, all have received varsity sweaters before.

The four new recipients are Gerry Baril, Al Duval, Frank Evans, and manager Roland Gould.

Frosh numeral winners were Larry Williams, Bill White, Gerry Baily, Ron Hill, Bill Purcell, Bill Stark, Pete Manning, and Edwin Eaton.

Nimrods Qualify For N.E. Finals In 1st Army Meet

by Ed Walker



The Army ROTC Rifle Team qualified for the 1'st Army Intercollegiate Finals by placing fourth out of 30 competing schools. The ten qualifying teams are from the New England States, N.Y., and N. J. Going into the last of the 4 shooting stages, the nimrods have picked up 138 points on their qualifying score of 7096. Yesterday, the last round was fired, and the final results should be known sometime next week. Norwich was the first place qualifier with a score of 7313. The top ten men who have been firing for Vermont are Long, Hing, McKnight, Soshnick, Hibbard, Norcross, Allen, Leblanc, Bartels, and Raymond.

The following are the February rifle scores:

	UVM	OPP.
Stout Inst.	1406 (Var.)	1140
M.I.T.	1406 (Var.)	1427
LaSalle	1831 (ROTC)	1810
Norwich	1409 (Var.)	1408
Dartmouth	1831 (ROTC)	1825
Colorado	1881 (ROTC)	1785
Wash. Univ.	1881 (ROTC)	1875
New Hampshire	1375 (Var.)	1413
Mass. Univ.	1412 (Var.)	1396

Besides compiling a 3-2 record last month, the varsity rifle team has learned that a member of the team, Jimmy Vincent, had the highest over-all average of any varsity riflemen in the New England area, posting an amazing average of 288 out of a possible 300. Jimmy has to shoot in one more tournament, which will decide whether or not he will make the 1954 All-American Intercollegiate Rifle Team.

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

Last Saturday night the students of the University witnessed the perpetuation of a reign -- a reign which began a little over a year ago when Kappa Sigma won the Interfraternity Basketball Championship. The winning ways of the "Sigs" carried over to this season as they compiled a fabulous composite 29-2 record. On the way they copped their second straight L. F. crown, went undefeated in the downtown Men's League (10-0), and last Saturday night they put the "whip in the cream" by winning their fourth straight game, to take the YMCA Gold Medal Tournament. If the reign rains for another year, we'll be calling them the "Kentucky of Vermont".

It astonished me. Then it made me think. And then it made me mad.

Last week a sportswriter from the "Daily News" stated "One local basketball player from a local college team bet on his own team in more than one game this season".

If this writer has the facts to back up his one sentence charge, then let him publish them. If not, then a retraction is in order. To place a stigma on all local players just on hearsay isn't playing fair in our book!

While most of us are home next week taking advantage of late to bed and later than late to rise, Ralph Lapointe's boys will be doing diamond duty down in Lee's land. But come mid-week, the boys will be up around the big city. Don't miss them.

The marquis reads Columbia on Friday, Upsala Saturday, and West Point on Monday. From all predictions, this three day stand promises to be a dandy. It's a chance to catch a preview of "New Faces of 1954". Try to get out of bed early one afternoon and see the show.

An answer to Miss Joan Breslin, CYNIC Society Editor, regarding her column of March 18, 1954. For those who read this letter, it would be advisable to first read Miss Breslin's column of last week.

Dear Miss Breslin,

We men mean to defend our integrity. We believe that you have been lead astray in your interpretation of the "bug", better known as golf.

You ask, "What is this thing called golf?"

We answer, (conversely to your column) "Golf is a form of relaxation made inviting enough for a man to work at it. It is a physical and mental expense made attractive by the fact that you play it surrounded by nature's open air.

Golf is what enjoyment, participation and self-satisfaction would be if the three were performed on the same sunny afternoon in cool attire.

Golf is the toughest looking game when you decide to take it up and the simplest looking when you've been at it for awhile. -Ask Ben!

It is probably the only game that a man (or woman) can play for as long as a quarter of a century and still not tire of it.

In regard to your description of the game - absurd.

But as far as we men being liars - you're right. (But we are only trying to be consistant.) All in all, a day at the golf course is a perfect one.

Yours 'till we break 80

Tales; Ron Dombosch should break some of his own UVM field records for this year's Post edition. . . . . Net Coach, Fred Carpenter says that Vermont should take Yankee Conference tennis championship.

Bill Thomson, Jay Selcow Lead Experienced Group Of Netmen; Carpenter At Helm

by Ted Muller

The 1954 Tennis season is again under way and from the looks of things UVM will have a fairly strong team with some depth behind it this year.

With Captain Bill Thompson taking over number one man on the team and Jay Selcow following in number two position, the team will have some experienced talent. Both Thompson and Selcow had excellent seasons last year. Thompson lost only one match and Selcow dropped two. However the team will be at a loss for two of their starters, Sam Jones number three man and Bill Randolph number four man have graduated.

Coach Carpenter said that he hoped to fill the empty slots on the team with some of the promising talent which is moving up from last years junior varsity and freshman squads. Last year was the only year that Vermont had a junior varsity. This year there will only be a Frosh squad as there has been in the past.

Soph Hopeful

Out of the group from last years under classmen teams comes "a very sharp boy", said Coach Carpenter, "who looks like he may fit in with the regulars". This was in reference to Ken Sevala who has shown some promise already this year. "Eugene Mowry looks pretty good", Carpenter said. Others who hope to make the squad this year are Don Kaplan, Sheldon Rosenthal, and Karl Joseph; all are from last years Freshman team.

The team has been practicing four nights a week. They use the gym now and will be outdoors on the open courts sometime in the middle of April if the weather warms up. Last year they were able to get out earlier than usual and the team hopes they will again be able to hit the sunlight as soon as possible.

When Coach Carpenter was asked what his toughest matches will be this year, he replied that for all he knew Middlebury would be the strongest competition. He stated that this year the team will enter in the New England Tournament and out of all the teams competing he figures Dartmouth will prove toughest, followed by Yale and Harvard. However; he doesn't expect the team to do much against these larger colleges which put more emphasis on the sport than UVM does.

"For the first time in the teams history, they will enter the Yankee Conference this year and if all goes as expected Vermont should do something there", said Carpenter. The team has eleven matches on deck this season, the first home match being St. Lawrence on May 4.

This year there are quite a number of Frosh hopefuls out for the Kitten Team, but as of yet there are not any matches on file. However, the Frosh are not beaten yet because there may be a few matches with near by St. Mikes, Middlebury and if possible a few of the State Teachers Colleges here and in New York State.

Self Sustaining Sail Team Spring Season Starts Soon

If someone asked you whether we had a Sailing Team or not, would you know? Probably not! Well we do, and a pretty good one at that!

In 1949, the University of Vermont Sailing Club was inaugurated. It was started by a few students, who thought it would be nice just to get together on a Saturday afternoon and do a little sailing on Lake Champlain. The Sailing Club is open to all those who can fullfill the requirements and pass the sailing test. Members of the club are allowed to sail at any time, and on Friday afternoons there are intraclub races. The officers of this years Sailing Club are: "Bambi" Wigton, Commodore; Jesse Sweet, Vice-Commodore; Bill Day, Secretary; Helen Wills, Treasurer.

Today, UVM not only has this same Sailing Club, but also a Racing Team which competes in intercollegiate meets. This Racing Team was recognized by the Athletic Association, as a Varsity sport in the Fall of 1953, and now is an Associate Member of the New England Sailing Club (they hope soon to become a full member). Although it was only their first season of competition, the team compiled a very notable record.

Five years ago when the club first started, four boats were purchased. These same four boats comprise the entire "fleet" today. A lack of equipment is only one of the handicaps the Catamounts of the sea sail under. Another is that there is no boathouse on the lake in which to store the vessels; at the present time they are being kept at the Sigma Nu Fraternity house. Although the University refused to grant the team any financial aid, the members kept it in the "race" by financing it out of their own pockets.

The 1954 Varsity Sailing Team schedule is:

Apr. 10 Triangular meet at St. Michael's (Frosh) (Vermont - St. Michael's - Merrimack)
Apr. 11 Associate Championship at M.I.T.
Apr. 17 Quodrangular meet at Middlebury
(Vermont - Holy Cross - Middlebury - Merrimack)
Apr. 18 Freshmen Elimination Meet
Apr. 24 Triangular meet at Middlebury
(Vermont - Dartmouth - St. Michael's - Middlebury)
Apr. 25 Quodrangular meet at Vermont
(Vermont - Dartmouth - Williams - Middlebury)
May 2 Triangular at St. Michael's - Merrimack)
May 8 Quadrangular meet at Vermont
(Vermont - Babson - McGill - Middlebury

Frosh Hoopsters Receive Awards

The University of Vermont Athletic Council confirmed the awarding of fifteen class numerals in Freshman basketball, it was announced last week by J. Edward Donnelly, Director of Athletics.

Eleven of the numerals went to members of the UVM Freshman basketball team, which wound up its season with a 5-5 record. The Kittens named were: Bill Mann, Barre, Vt., Arthur Burkhardt, Rutherford, N. J., Don Henning, Elkland, Pa., Ronald Grossman, Great Neck, N. Y., Herbert Brown, Long Beach, N. Y., Arthur Lambert, Budington, Vt., John Galascione, Montclair, N. J., Fred Rex, Little Falls, N. J., John Lafave, Malone, N. Y., Richard Dennis, Summit, N. J., and Peter Perkins, Rutland, Vt.

Four managers who served with the Freshman team were also awarded numerals. The four were: Ralph Healey, White River Jct., Vt., John Smith, Albany, N. Y., Mark Plotnick, Stamford, Conn., and Bruce Evans, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dodgers vs Red Sox At Local Park; Bartlett Arranges

Dodgers versus Red Sox! No you don't have to travel to Boston or Brooklyn to see them play. You can see them right here in Burlington when the Little League opens its season in the middle of June. They play in Schmanska Park with two four team leagues battling it out for the championship.

This year's Commissioner of Little League Baseball is Ed Bartlett Program Director and Administrative Assistant of the UVM Athletic Department. It is Ed's fifth year in Little League Baseball. The Commissioner expects at least 150 tryouts for the eight teams in the Little League.

The teams assume Major League Names, and are outfitted with uniforms by the Local Kiwanis Club and merchants in the area. They play about 18 games a season and usually draw a good crowd of cheering enthusiasts.

We wish you good luck Commissioner Bartlett, when you throw in that ball on opening day.

Kappa Sig Cops IFC Tourney; Harasimowics Breaks Record

by Hal Moore

Kappa Sig, is the only term to describe the 1954 Interfraternity Track Meet. The Kappa Sig's placed at least one man in each of 11 events and climaxed the day by sweeping all four places in the broad jump. Bob Lovejoy with three victories and Dick Jannoni with a double victory led the victorious team. Paul Harasimowicz a young giant from Phi Delt broke the only record as he threw the shot 42' 11 3/4", busting the old mark of 41' 4½".

The results:

35 LBS. WEIGHT Talbot (Kappa Sig) 2nd Harasimowicz (Phi Delt) 3rd Duffy (Sigma Nu) 4th Hill (Phi Delt) 37' - 5"

Archie Post Track Coach For 25 Years

by Bob Brown

If experience is the best teacher, then Archie Post, head coach of track and cross-country at UVM for 25 years, has had a full education. Born in Hinesburg, Vermont he now makes his home in Jericho, Vt.

Archie completed high school in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. and picked up letters in baseball football and basketball. Entering UVM in 1923, he continued to make his mark in sports playing basketball for four years and running on the track team, which he captained his junior year, for three years.

During his sophomore year Archie sat out most of the season and then with but one meet remaining finally got his first taste of competitive running. He made the most of it, setting a state record for the mile which stood for many years.

After college Archie worked for two years with a men's and boy's athletic club in Proctor before returning to his Alma Mater for good.

Due to the nature of the meets, records and statistics of cross-country and track are rather difficult to assemble but in 22 state cross-country meets the Postmen have compiled a 16-6 record. 1937 saw the track team grab off the highly valued Eastern Intercolligent Meet trophy. But it was in 1951, with a team built around the fabulous Messrs. Mahoney and Howard, that the Post-coached team reached its ultimate, as they walked off with everything but the Yankee Conference and New England meets in which, however, they placed near the top.

Coach Archie Post is a hard driving perfectionist of the old school whose will to win is tempered nicely with an abundance of dry wit and homespun philosophy. As we were about to take our leave Archie made, what seemed to me, a fine comment which I'd like to pass along.

"Athletics", he said, "are not exclusive and it's the function of a university to provide the maximum facilities in order that every man who wishes to participate in competitive sports may have the opportunity".

This, I believe, sums up Archie Post's sports philosophy in a nutshell.

The 1954-55 varsity basketball schedule was approved this past week with only a few changes in the teams that the Catamounts will meet. The new teams include Colby College of Waterville, Me., Univ. of New Hampshire, Williams and St. Anselms. The Kake Walk game will be played again with Trinity College of Hartford, Conn.

Vermont Conference Opens Tonight

'Clauses Must Go,' Declares University Faculty Senate

by Pat Curran

"Resolved: That the University Senate recommend to the Administrative Council and to the Board of Trustees that no fraternity or sorority at the University of Vermont receive or retain its charter if its constitution contains any clause which restricts its membership by some requirement as to race, religion, or national origin. Resolved further, that a period of seven years be allowed for all fraternities and sororities to make appropriate adjustments of their constitutions."

At a meeting three weeks ago today, the Student Advisory Committee considered the above motion by Professor Lewis Fever.

The proposal was passed by the committee and presented in the above form to the University Senate, a faculty body, by Prof. Frederick Marston, Chairman of the Student Advisory Committee. The proposal was passed by the Senate in the form of a recommendation to the Administrative Council and the Board of Trustees.

Council to Consider

This resolution will next be submitted to the Administrative Council, which is composed of the Deans of the Colleges and the President. Here it will be discussed for the benefit of the President. The Administrative Council does not act on the resolution. The members only give it careful consideration and discussion. When the Council is through examining the resolution, it is recommended to the Board of Trustees.

Board Decision Final

The Board of Trustees may decide to pass the resolution as it stands, or to take no action at all. The Board is free to modify, change, and enlarge the resolution. The conclusion which the Board reaches is final. If they pass the resolution, it will then become the policy of the University of Vermont. In the event the Board decides to change the resolution, it does not have to be reconsidered by the Student Advisory Committee or the Administrative Council. And, if the Board of Trustees takes no action on it, the resolution is "tabled."

Dean G.V. Kidder

Initial Address At 7:30; Panel Moderated By Pelletier

The third annual Vermont Conference will open tonight in the Ira Allen Chapel at 7:30 P.M., when Dean George V. Kidder of the College of Arts and Sciences will deliver the opening address on the conference topic of: "What is the greatest threat to American Liberty?" Dean Kidder's address will be followed by the first panel of the conference, tobe moderated by Lawrence Pelletier, Professor of Political Science at Bowdoin College and of the Citizenship Clearing House of New York University.

This year's conference is expected to afford extremely enlightening and stimulating discussion, as some of the speakers have already indicated to Chairman Fred Hackett the stands which they intend to take. Professor Jane C. Carey of Barnard College will maintain that the greatest threat confronting our liberty is that of Communist expansion in the free countries of Europe.

The four other speakers who have indicated their stands will discuss internal threats to American liberty. Rev. Robert M. Brown of the Union Theological seminary will speak against McCarthyism and it's main protagonist, Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. Senator Harry Cain of Washington will discuss the necessity for maintaining a balance between police methods used for hunting subsersive persons, and the maintenance of our civil liberties. Professor James O'Niell of Brooklyn College will attempt to show that the recent defiance of precedent and of the Constitution in our courts will radically weaken our civil liberties by permitting a sort of "creeping Fascism." Author-businessman James Warburg will claim that the recent tendency toward "witch-hunting" and internal hysteria is a threat which we are imposing upon ourselves.

Other speakers, who have not yet indicated their proposed stands, are journalist Henry Hazlett. Lawyer Thurman Arnold, writer Jerome Davis, and pacifist clergyman A. J. Muste.

The second and third panels will take place on Friday, at 9:00 A.M. and 3:00 P.M., respectively. An informal session will be held in the student lounge at 8:00 P.M. on Friday, at which students, faculty, and townspeople will have an opportunity to meet and speak personally with the speakers. The summary address by Moderator Pelletier and the final rebuttal will take place Saturday morning, at 9:00. All students, faculty members, and members of the Burlington community are invited to attend any or all of the functions comprising the conference.

Vermont Honors New England With Fine Arts Festival

The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College will celebrate the 150th anniversary of its first graduation by sponsoring a three-day festival of Fine Arts and Crafts designed to honor New England's present and future as well as its past.

The Festival, set for Apr. 30-May 2, coincides with the University's annual Founders' Day ceremonies, and with special services designed to pay tribute to Vermont's first president the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders, whose birth date was May 3, 1768.

Honors New England

Festival exhibits and demonstrations will be devoted to northern New England's significant contributions in the world of fine arts and crafts and in industrial crafts which depend upon individual creative talents.

Exhibits of paintings, of handcrafts and of industrial crafts will demonstrate the activities going on in these areas in Vermont and in neighboring states. There will also be a program by the Vermont Symphony Orchestra, an opera presented by the University, and a dance program.

The event, with its emphasis upon New England's progress today is being undertaken by the University as a fitting means of honoring the one man and four youths who were the University of Vermont until its first graduation in 1804.

Cleared Trees

The Rwv. Daniel Clarke Sanders, president, and his four charges displayed the spirit of true pioneers when they took off their coats and cleared the pine trees off the college green so that a college could be constructed and an institution of higher learning provided for the "New State."

Thus Vermont no longer had to look to Harvard, Yale, and the other colleges in older communities for intellectual leaders, but soon joined the nation's early colleges in supplying trained leaders in every field of endeavor.

Founder's Speaker Relative of First Vermont Graduate

A direct descendant of one-quarter of the University of Vermont's first graduating class will speak at the annual Founders' Day convocation Friday morning, Apr. 30, which this year will open a three-day Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts celebrating UVM's 150th graduation.

Charles Sullivan Adams, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, great-grandson of Charles Adams, one of the four youths who were graduated in 1804, will follow in the original Charles's footsteps. The first Charles, a prominent Burlington lawyer and member of the Vermont legislature, was a principal speaker at the fiftieth anniversary of this class's graduation, when semi-centennial celebrations were held in 1854.

Westward, Ho!

The 1954 speaker, who operates an insurance agency in Dallas and who served as a lieutenant commander in the Navy during World War II, demonstrates in his life a tendency which has characterized the descendants of many UVM graduates--the tendency to push always westward, and yet to return to New England for education. He received his preparatory school training at Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, and then attended Amherst College, from which he was graduated in 1930.

War Not Inevitable, Expert States

By Herzl Spiro

"The 'cold' war can be turned into 'cold' peace and eventually 'hot' peace," an expert European political scientist told the members of International Relations Club and their "Town and Country Days" guests last Friday. Dr. Michel Mouskhely, the Secretary-General of the Commission of European University Teachers, set forth the basic contention that despite ideological differences between East and West, "I do not believe in the threat of immediate war."

He pointed out that the West would not wage defensive war and the East is neither capable of, nor desires to wage a war of aggression. To back this up, he cited the tensions between the Communist nations, and even within Russia, herself. "The Communist interpretation of history calls for the self-destruction of the capitalist states. Why should they wage a war, if they believe our system is bound to collapse?. ..We are dealing with a calculating people, not romantics."

Dr. Mouskhely, spoke extemporaneously, for an hour. The University of Strassburg professor has been on a lecture tour sponsored by the American Friends Services since last February.

Top Debate Duo In Nationals; Spiro Declared Best Speaker

By Susan Wakefield

UVM's ace debaters Herzl Spiro and Kevin Kearney are eligible to participate in the West Point National Debate Tournament for the second consecutive year, having qualified in the Regional Tournament, at Dartmouth College three weeks ago. In addition, Herzl Spiro, a sophomore, won his second extemporaneous speaking championship of the New England States in the New England Forensic Tournament at Merrimac College, Andover, Massachusetts, during the weekend.

In the eight rounds of debate at the regionals, UVM won 13 out of 16 decisions. Other schools that have qualified for the April 22, national tournament are Holy Cross College, Dartmouth College, Harvard University, and St. John's University of Brooklyn.

Reach Semi-finals

Vermont and Dartmouth tied in the seeding rounds of the New England Forensic Tournament, winning 7, while losing only one.

Farmers And Church Resist Reds In Poland - Korowicz

Escapee Forsees Russian Downfall

by Don Forst

Dr. Marek S. Korowicz, of the Fletcher School of Diplomacy, an escaped Polish delegate to the United Nations, Ira Allen Chapel told an audience of 700 last Friday night that "the Russian rule of Poland found favor with only about two per cent of the population."

Dr. Korowicz' appearance was part of UVM's third annual Town And Country Day program. The former Polish delegate said that Russia rules Poland by force of guns. Security measures are extremely strict "and the philosophy of ruling employed is that it is better to punish 10 innocent persons than to allow one guilty person to go free."

Farmers Resist

Giving a vivid picture of "Life Behind The Iron Curtain," the title of his lecture, Korowicz told the audience that the two biggest factors fighting Soviet rule in Poland are:

-the farmers and
-the church

Mr. Korowicz said only five per cent of the farm land had been collectivized, so fierce had been the resistance of the agricultural population.

With regard to the Church, Korowicz said it is the sole institution in Poland in which the people are able to place their faith.

The balding diplomat said "the government made no attempt to stifle freedom of worship and did not attack the church outwardly." However attempts "are made to corrupt the clergy" and intimidation has reached the point where "more than 1,000 priests have been jailed."

Spread Propaganda

With regard to the West and the Soviet technique, Korowicz said Russia "attempts to undermine capitalist countries from within and utilizes international podiums as a means of spreading its propaganda. The Russians feel time is on their side."

"The Wests's fight for peace can end only when civil and political rights are maintained and a policy of self-determination implemented" Dr. Korowicz stated.

The Fletcher School of Diplomacy professor told the gathering "political freedom doesn't exist in Soviet Dominated Poland. One votes in Poland, one doesn't elect."

Communists Decrease

The Soviet has recruited 1,300,000 members for the Communist Party. However the "number grows smaller and smaller instead of increasing. Polish resistance has failed to materialize in the form of guerrilla warfare and open resistance because, surrounded by nations friendly to the Soviet, East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Russia, the Polish people feel it would be fool-hardy to attempt to rebel, using stones as weapons."

The Ira Allen audience was told that economic conditions in Poland were so poor that 60 per cent of the mothers worked; moreover no latitude is allowed the individual in securing a job. The job is selected for the individual; the individual is not permitted to choose his own position.

Sees Russian Collapse

Attempts to passively strike back at their rulers are made by the Poles. According to Korowicz, official Russian broadcasts and newspapers are seldom utilized, except to obtain official messages; instead the "Voice of America," "Radio Free Europe" and the programs of the British Broadcasting Company are avidly followed.

Korowicz foresaw possible struggles between the Russian Army and the NKVD (Russian Secret Police) or internal fights between various forces in the Soviet government arising and vausing revolution in Russia, and eventually its downfall. In the event these possibilities did not occur, Dr. Korowicz thought it would then "be up to the nations of the West" to save the world.

Prof. Doll Elected Head of Geology Association of NE

Prof. Charles G. Doll of the University of Vermont was elected president of the New England Section of the Association of Geology Teachers at the first annual meeting of the Section held on the Vermont campus last week.

Other officers elected include Prof. Robert L. Nichols of Tufts College, vice-president; and Prof. Marshall Schalk of Smith College, secretary-treasurer.

Executives And Students To Meet European Leaders

Summer Workshop Means Of Education

The proposition that "Know-how is a two-way business" will be demonstrated this summer through a series of workshops and on-the-spot discussions with leaders in European industry, labor and government for a group of American executives and students of business administration and management on an Industrial Tour sponsored by Travel & Study, Inc.

In recent years leading educators in Schools of Business Administration have been concerned that executives, and in particular members of middle management, should be drawn together for periodic discussions of common problems and have developed a series of Management Clinics based on some of the major universities in the country and catering to the needs of local firms and industries. This idea has now been extended to include analysis of developments abroad and a comparison between European and American practice in certain key areas of management.

European Labor Tour

The 1954 Industrial Tour will leave New York on June 21 and will visit England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Italy and France. There will be visits to factories and plants of all kinds according to the main specializations in the various countries -- engineering, vehicles, aircraft, shipbuilding, light and heavy electrical, food processing, transport and service industries, textiles, etc. But the main emphasis will be on discussions with management, at shop floor as well as front office level, with labor leaders, with government representatives, bankers, merchants, members of the major political parties and with officials of United Nations Specialized Agencies, not only on individual and different problems of management but also on the general climate of opinion of Europe, on relations with the United States and on broader issues having an impact on industrial and business organization.

Boeing eight-jet B-52 global bomber

Which field of engineering interests you most?

Whether it's electrical, civil, mechanical, acronautical or any related field, you'll find a rewarding career opportunity at Boeing.

Engineers of virtually every type are in increasing demand here—for Boeing is growing continuously, and today employs more engineers than even at the peak of World War II. That's the kind of situation in which positions up ahead keep opening up. Boeing fills them from within its own organization, and holds regular merit reviews to give you steady recognition.

As a Boeing engineer you'd be part of a team that, for 37 years, has pioneered successful, trail-blazing types of airplanes. You could look toward a stable future with such long-range Boeing projects as a pilotless aircraft program (one of the largest in the country), development of America's first jet transport, research on supersonic flight and nuclear power for aircraft, and the world's fastest multi-jet bombers, the B-47 and B-52.

You'll find a wide range of experience and contacts available to you at Boeing. The aviation industry is unique in its variety and breadth of application —from applied research to production design, all going on at once. Boeing is constantly alert to new materials and new techniques, and approaches them without limitations. In addition, Boeing's vast subcontracting program—requiring engineering co-ordination—offers an opportunity for contacts with a cross section of American industry.

At Boeing, you'd work in Seattle, Washington, or Wichita, Kansas—two fresh, modern cities with a wide variety of recreational facilities as well as universities which provide excellent graduate study courses. The company will arrange a reduced work week to permit time for such study and will reimburse tuition upon successful completion of each quarter's work.

Miss Mary Sullivan Dies; Was on UVM Faculty 20 Years

Miss Mary B. Sullivan, 65, for 0 years associate professor of ed- ication and English at the Univer- ity of Vermont, died Saturday in a ocal hospital.

She was director of student eaching in elementary education or 10 years and for 25 summers vas a member of the UVM Sum- ner Session faculty and director f the Summer Session demon- tration school.

She was born Aug. 20, 1888, in Newport, R.I., daughter of James J. and Mary F. Sullivan. She is a graduate of Rogers High School here and Rhode Island College of Education in Providence. She re- ceived her B.S. degree in education and also her M.A. at New York University.

Assistant to the director of train- ng at Rhode Island College from 1909 to 1919, she came to Vermont that year as instructor in teacher training under the State Depart- ment of Education.

She was one of the founders of the State Delta Kappa Gamma so- ciety.

After serving as instructor in education and supervisor of stu- dent teaching at Castleton State Teachers College from 1922 to 1923, she was assistant superintendent of schools in Southington, Conn., for a year, before returning to Cas- tleton where she instructed Eng- lish until 1934.

She was president of the Tri- County Teachers Association, pres- ident of the Champlain Valley Teachers Department of the NEA.

She also belonged to the Ver- mont Women Teachers Club, American Association of Universi- ty Women and American Associ- ation of University Professors, Del- ta Kappa Gamma, University Club, National Council of Catholic Women and the Bishop DeGoesbri- and Hospital Aid.

She leaves a sister, Mrs. Wil- liam H. Honnen of Newport; two nephews, Rev. James S. Honnen of Florida and William H. Honnen Jr. of New York City; two nieces, Sister James Francis of the Or- der of Sisters of St. Joseph of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Wini- fred V. Honnen of Newport.

Dr. Raab Presents Papers In Chicago

Dr. Wilhelm Raab, professor of experimental medicine at UVM, was in Chicago last week to present two papers.

Dr. Raab presented one paper to the American Heart Association concerning the "Bioassay of Epinephrine and norepinephrine in the Normal and Diseased Heart Muscle," and a second to the American College of Physicians con- cerning "The Role of Hormones in the Origin and Treatment of Heart Diseases."

On April 11, Dr. Raab left for Miami, Fla., where he has been invited to deliver the annual lecture of the Wohl Foundation. This lecture will be entitled, "Long-range Treatment of Angina Pectoris, Rationale and Results."

May Interviews For Pre-Meds

All premedical and predental students who plan to apply to a college of medicine or dentistry during the next academic year for the entering class of September 1955, should register at the Pre- medical Advisory Committee Office, 147 Waterman Building, announced L.S. Rowell, Chair- man of the Premedical Ad- visory Committee. Questions concerning applications should be discussed with your ad- visor.

The UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT COLLEGE OF MEDICINE will be- gin interviews for applicants for 1955 early in May and continue with these through June. All premedical students wishing to apply at the Uni- versity of Vermont should sign for an interview at the Premedical Advisory Committee Office, 147 Waterman Building. These interviews will be con- ducted with groups of three or four applicants. Students outside the New England area who wish to be considered at the University of Vermont may sign for a spring interview.

Lucky Lamb's Wool Woven

A black caracul lamb will send his wool but a white angora rabbit will appear in person to help the University of Vermont celebrate the 150th anniversary of the first graduating class at next weekend's Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts.

Mrs. F. Lynn Thompson of Rochester, Vt., will leave her lamb behind when she comes to the Vermont campus to partici- pate in the handcrafts demon- stration by weaving goods from the wool of the caracul lambs she raises.

Mrs. Paul Doolin of Georgia, Vt., will bring the angora rabbit and a spinning wheel to demonstrate the preparation of yarn.

The University dairy and animal husbandry departments will also star animals in an exhibit which will show how butter was once churned through the use of a sheep on a tread- mill.

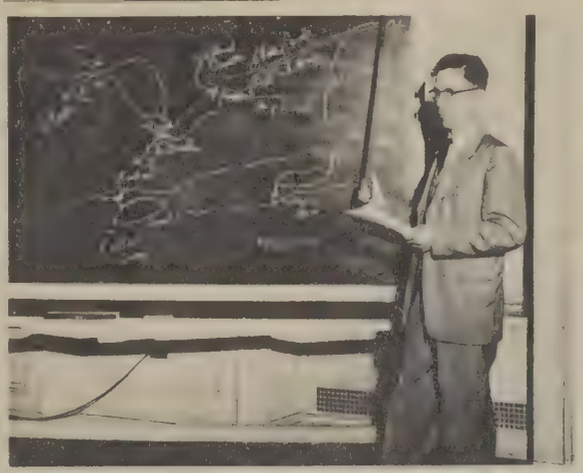
'Nature Has Made 90 Percent Of Seaway Already' - Root

Lohman Cites Need For Power

By Max G. Ansbacher

The scientific and economic aspects of the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway were dis- cussed last weekend as part of the Town and Country Days program by Professors James A. Root and Philip H. Lohman of the departments of Civil Engineering, and Commerce and Economics, respectively.

Professor Root pointed out that although the Seaway had been supported by every presi- dent for the past 37 years it was still only in the future. Because the Seaway "has already been built 90% of the way for us by mother nature," it seemed to him that it was not asking too much of man to build the remaining 10%. Professor Root described the present system, and what changes would be made in it if the project were enacted. He estimated the total cost for both the United States and Canada to be about one billion dollars.



Need For Power

Professor Lohman emphasized the "tremendous need for further power production in the United States" due to the expanding manufacture of aluminum. The St. Lawrence Seaway would be able to provide this power. Professor Lohman also pointed the great savings which could be had by using water transportation instead of land means. In a long haul, he estimated that the cost per ton mile was ten times as expensive by rail- road as it was by water.

In the question and answer period which followed the talks, it was mentioned that because Vermont had no govern- ment electric control board it would be unable to obtain any of the electrical power which would be developed by the project. Furthermore, Lake Champlain would only benefit if a special cutoff were added to the project. This cutoff would cost about 400 million dollars. When asked if atomic powered generating stations might not make the Seaway generating plants obsolete before they could even begin production, Professor Root replied, "In my opinion hydroelectric power will never outdate itself."

Professor Lohman looked upon the project as a techno- logical improvement, which would harm a few people for a temporary period for the advantage of society. He said that a cutoff for Vermont "could change the picture for Vermont considerably," by bringing new industries to the state.

Communists In The Colleges---2

Is a Communist automatically disloyal to the Constitution of the United States? Is a Communist automatically inimical to free inquiry?

The entire problem of Communists in the college system revolves around the above two questions, and their answers. Those opposed to communist professors invariably say that an individual, by virtue of his belonging to the communist party, is disloyal to the constitution. These same people usually also say that an individual who is a Communist is inimical to free inquiry. Unfortunately, those who are not Communist party members, but who are in sympathy with Communistic or Marxian principles, are also put in the category of opponents to free inquiry.

What is there about a communist that puts him in this situation? Those who oppose him say that an opinion voiced against the constitution or against the government is unconstitutional. They further reason that a communist expresses opinion against the government--and it's rather strong opinion, at that they say. Conclusions: Disloyal to the constitution.

But what is this rather strong opinion, we ask. Well, a Communist advocates the overthrow of the government.

So what. He's entitled to his opinion---that's what the first amendment says ..freedom of speech.

But not every communist limits his activities to advancing opinions. There are those who conspire against the government. There's a difference, certainly, between opinionating and conspiring...that is what the Smith Act is for; it bases disloyalty on conspiracy, not on opinion.

We wish to stress the distinction. Not every communist is a conspirator. Furthermore let us not proclaim a communist guilty until the court proves the conspiracy charge. Let us realize the existence of communists who are not guilty of conspiracy, and who therefore are not disloyal to the constitution.

How about the " free inquiry" question? Is a Communist automatically inimical to free inquiry? The issue is confused here because there is a failure to differentiate between Communist doctrine (or discipline) and a person's submissiveness to that doctrine.

People tend to line up on two sides of the street on this question. One group believes that a communist must submit to party disciplines, and of necessity be inimical to free inquiry. Across the street are those, and this is where we stand, who do not grant that every communist submits to the discipline of the party. For, there are those communists who are not members of the communist party, i.e.-are not card carrying members, but sympathize with communistic or Marxian principles of government and or economy.

Furthermore, we do not wish to automatically rule out the existence of card-carrying members who do not submit to the communistic doctrine. We have given two examples of communists who are not necessarily submissive to party discipline. Yet there are those who prefer to rule out even the possibility of their existence; there are those who make the sweeping statement that every communist is automatically inimical to free inquiry. In other words, " He is guilty" rather than " innocent until proven guilty."

If a college professor can be a communist yet remain loyal to the Constitution of the United States, and if a college professor can be a communist yet not be inimical to free inquiry, then we see no reason for his dismissal from a college faculty on the basis, alone, of his communist affiliation.

Mr. George E. Sokolsky, popular news columnist and radio commentator, delivered the final address at a lecture series at St. Johns. He, spoke on " These Days ", stressing the need of absolute faith and fearlessness to rebuild the world that has sustained this country in freedom. He emphasized the fact that Americans should be conscious of the principles at stake in the struggle against the Marxist threat, instead of being blinded by the "politics and personalities presented in daily newspapers.

Albany State From the Staid College Gnus:

The Campus of City College

Mr. Bernard M. Baruch reportedly told Sen. Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wisc.) that if he persisted in unfair attacks on the College, Mr. Baruch would consider it a personal attack and conduct himself accordingly. It seems that Sen. McCarthy has made only one attack on the College and that one had been answered. Last year, while the senator was conducting investigations at Fort Monmouth, N.J., he questioned an alumnus of the College who had been a student the same time as Julius Rosenberg. Senator McCarthy suggested that there be a " reunion " of alumni of the College whom he had investigated. His comment was immediately answered by the College officials stating that there also be a reunion of all the alumni who fought in Korea and World War II.

After lengthy debate the student body has unanimously approved, with the administration's consent, the abandonment of the semi-annual practice of giving examinations. A huge bonfire took place obliterating exam files, text books, and any dissenters (mostly State instructors) to the movement who were foolish enough to be in the vicinity. The one significant fact in the whole incident was that it occurred on April' Fool's Day.

White Protests Showing Of TV 'Amos 'n' Andy'

The British Broadcasting Corporation's plan to televise the "Amos' n' Andy" film program brought a protest yesterday from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Walter White, executive secretary of the association, branded the program "a gross caricature of the Negro which has done much harm in the United States " and said it may do even more harm in England. He asked the B.B.C. to reconsider its purchase of the American film.

The program is scheduled to be seen in England beginning April 21.

To The Editors of the CYNIC:

I have heard a fairly wel substantiated rumor that certain group of students fro the University have bee " chiseling " at the Coffe Shop at the Mary Fletche Hospital by altering thei checks so that they would no have to pay the full amoun for their meals.

I assume that this i probably being regarded b the students involved as mor of a sophomoric prank than a attempt to be completel dishonest. Let us hope thi is the case at any rate Needless to say, this coul be a reflection on the chara cter and integrity of th student body.

I should like to point ou that the net income from th Coffee Shop goes to assis the patients and patient car at the Mary Fletcher Hospital In addition to this, th women who work at the Sho are volunteering their tim and receive no pay for it These students are actuall taking away medical benefit which are badly needed. I fee that students at the Uni versity who are publi spirited enough will attemp to see that this practice i corrected whenever they hea about it, either throug public opinion or actuall reporting the students in volved to the proper au thorities.

UVM Grad In Line For Top Aggie Post

A graduate of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College is in line for one of the top agriculture posts in the country effective July first, it has been announced by W.I. Myers, Dean of the College of Agriculture at Cornell University.

Maurice C. Bond, professor of marketing at Cornell, has been named director of Extension of the New York State College of Agriculture and Home Economics located on Cornell's campus at Ithaca, N.Y. He will succeed L.R. Simons.

Born On Farm.

Dr. Bond, an authority on marketing farm products, was born and raised on a dairy farm in Thetford, Vt., and attended UVM, receiving the B.S. degree in 1920 and M.S. degree in 1925.

He holds his Ph. D. degree from Cornell, 1923, and was appointed assistant professor of marketing there in 1928, being made a full professor in 1934.

Research Worker

A veteran of Army service in World War I, he has served the Federal Extension Service several times during his career, and his many other special assignments include service as director of research for the N.Y. State Temporary Commission on Agriculture in 1945-46; research consultant for the Grange League Federation; and work for the Quebec Dairy Commission.

Dr. Bond also served as head of the department of agricultural economics at the Experiment Station of the University of Puerto Rico, where he established a trained research staff to work with the Extension Service in helping farmers in farm management and marketing.

In 1953 he was appointed to the Puerto Rican food advisory commission.

In recent years at Cornell, Dr. Bond has spent considerable time working with managers of regional farm markets, cooperative agencies marketing farm produce and buying farm supplies, and with federal and state organizations helping producers.

Gorton To Discuss Distribution At Marketing Series

Mr. E.H. Gorton, sales manager for the Washburn Co. will address the American Marketing Speaks series this Tuesday at 7 P.M., in room 239 Waterman, on the topic " The Selection of Channels for Product Distribution."

In announcing the speaker, Professor Charles Edwin Grief of the Department of Commerce and Economics, said that, " We feel certain we could hardly get a more emminetly qualified person based upon his business experience than Mr. Gorton."

The Washburn Co. is located in Worcester, Mass., and manufactures hardware and housewares. Mr. Gorton joined the company in 1936. According to Professor Greif he " has certainly a most rounded experience in this field, having devoted his entire business career to selling."

Tonight's Vermont Conference is the third in recent years. An outstanding group of speakers has gathered

The University Senate has recently recommended that fraternities and Sororities which maintain discriminatory clauses in their charters should no longer be recognized by the University if, after seven years, the clauses are not removed. What is your opinion of this recommendation?

Patricia Clements Class of 1956

I think that the discrimination clause in fraternity and sorority charters should be eliminated because they cause so many hurt feelings. However, I feel that this recommendation might seriously affect the standing of any group on campus with such a clause, because they will not be able to change their national rulings in spite of their own personal feelings. If the law is passed, I think the time limit is about right as it allows for a complete turnover of members, thus avoiding all difficulties due to the new rulings.

Prof. Florence Woodard

Respect for human beings, regardless of race, creed or color, is my basic reason for supporting the recommendation of the University Senate that chapters of national sororities and fraternities maintaining discriminatory clauses not be recognized at the University of Vermont after a designated period of time has elapsed.

Seven years seems a fair and reasonable period of time for the local chapters concerned to deal with their respective national organizations in respect to this issue. It allows for several annual national conventions for some national organizations and three biennial national conventions for others to rid the national charter of discrimination clauses.

Janet Cady Class of 1957

I do not think that removing or retaining the discriminatory clauses will make much difference. Similar groups of people are apt to stick together in which case nothing would be gained. I do not believe in discrimination against races but in this case, I truthfully feel that removing the clauses will not change anything. As for the seven years, this is too long because if the clauses were to be removed, it would not take that long.

Patricia May Class of 1957

I believe that the Senate recommendation to exclude discriminatory clauses is a wise idea. As Americans we should practice tolerance at all times; however, under the discriminatory clauses, the very people who are being trained to be the leaders of America are living intolerance daily. Although frequent statements from Greek letter groups declare they are tolerant and progressive young Americans, their actions speak much louder than their words to the non-college public.

Seven years would seem a rather long period for the removal of the clauses. About three years would allow time for local and national action on the recommendation and would insure that present active members could not avoid their responsibilities and force the decisive action upon future members.

George Hansen Class of 1956

Feeling the period of time irrevelant, I agree that any form of malicious discrimination by social fraternities or sororities should be abolished. However, affiliation with a fraternity by a person whose racial or religious beliefs are contradictory to those of that fraternity is folly and may, I feel, be the only reasonable basis for discrimination.

Antonia Panos Class of 1954

I believe the Senate recommendation is a very good one, but think the term is too long. If it is at all possible, the fraternities and sororities having discriminatory clauses should eliminate them as soon as possible-in one or two years at least.

Marvin Lowry Class of 1956

I believe that such a recommendation would give a truer meaning to our democratic which we all advocate so strongly. Maybe it would be some time before fraternities and sororities would actually practice this doctrine, but it is a sure step in the right direction.

Present Opera As Festival Performance

An opera which had its premier performance at the first graduation of New England's newest University, Brandeis, will be presented as a feature of the Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts which is being sponsored by University of Vermont, fifth oldest college in New England, in honor of the 150th anniversary of its first graduating class.

The University will present Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti" on Saturday evening, May 1, as a mid-point feature of its three-day anniversary celebration.

The student presentation, under the direction of Prof. Howard Bennett, will also feature "Sunday Excursion" by Arnold Sundgaard and Alec Wilder, Music students will be assisted by members of the University drama group under the direction of Prof. Greg Falls.

Junior Week Too

The two operas will be repeated on May 4 as the annual Spring opera production which every year sets the theme for Junior Week festivities on the Vermont campus.

Bernstein, who wrote both words and music for "Trouble in Tahiti," is well known as conductor and composer and his works include "On the Town," "Fancy Free," and symphonic works such as the "Jeremiah Symphony" and "Age of Anxiety."

Sundgaard, librettist for the short comic opera, "Sunday Excursion," also wrote the libretto for "Down in the alley" and "The Lowland Sea." Alex Wilder, composer of the music for "Sunday Excursion," also collaborated on "The Lowland Sea."

Students will take all parts in the opera performances.

Ellis, Steinman Head Discussion On Atomic Energy

By Marv Nierenberg

As part of the annual Town and Country program, a film-discussion entitled "'A' Is For Atom" was presented last week. Wilbur L. Steinmann, Assistant Professor of Electrial Engineering, and William N. Ellis, Assistant Professor of Physics headed the program presented to an audience, two-thirds of which consisted of visitors and the rest, students.

In the film, the rather complex topic of nuclear physics was explained for a quarter of an hour by Dr. Atom, a professor with an atom for a head. The film, a cartoon, discussed the most basic facts of atomic physics as well as the intricacies of atomic piles and chain reactions. It ended on an optomistic note by describing the newly found atomic power as a "many-sided giant" capable of being man's most useful tool.

Mystery Substance

The discussion-lecture which followed featured a demonstration of a geiger-counter whose audible signals warned the audience of the presence of a radioactive substance in the room. The mystery substance turned out to be a harmless capsule of material which the lecturer had in his pocket.

It was stressed that the struggle to conquer the atom has been an international one with the United States reaping the first harvest. By the time the lecture closed, the audience had been informed about isotopes, atomic piles and engines, chain reactions and the difficulty and means of obtaining fissionable material.

A CAMPUS-TO-CAREER CASE HISTORY

"I didn't know there was such a job"

EMMETT SMITH, E.E., '50, never heard of telephone traffic work, but what he saw of the job intrigued him. He explains how it worked out.

(Reading time: 40 seconds)

Emmett Smith supervises operation of this training switchboard, which he originally helped to design.

"Communications have always been one of my main interests—in the Navy and at the University of Michigan. So I was very happy when the Michigan Bell Telephone Company invited me to visit their headquarters to talk about a job.

"In Detroit I had a chance to look at a number of departments, including one I'd never heard of before, the Traffic Department. I found that, in addition to the engineering of switchboards, its work involved the supervision and the actual handling of customer calls. It struck me like a wonderful opportunity to combine staff engineering and field management.

"My first impression was right, too, because my work covered both. First, I had on-the-job training assignments in several different kinds of offices—local, Long Distance, dial and manual. Then I worked in engineering, translating estimates of future growth into the actual number of circuits and switchboard positions required.

"Now I'm supervising the operation of one of the boards I helped engineer. Briefly, my job is to see that my district gets the kind of equipment it needs and that what we have is functioning properly. Working with people is another major part of my job, too, because I serve in an advisory capacity to the supervisors of the Long Distance operators.

"Needless to say, I'm happy with my job. A job I didn't even know existed."

Emmett Smith's job is with a Bell Telephone Company. There are similar opportunities for college people with Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation.

Reactions To Senate Recommendation

Most Feel Clause Change Necessary

Pres. Borgmann:

Doesn't Expect Immediate Elimination Of Practices

By Max G. Ansbacher

"The intent of the proposed regulation concerning restrictive clauses in social organizations, as far as I know, is not to stop discrimination, per se, but rather to give the local chapters the freedom to pledge whom ever they desire without limits imposed by national charters which the local had no part in making."

This is the opinion of President Carl W. Borgmann as expressed last week in a CYNIC interview concerning the regulation which has been recommended by the University Senate. The president would not say whether he favored passage of the regulation by the Board of Trustees.

"I won't say whether I favor the bill until after the discussion of the Board of Trustees because I don't want anyone to think that the decision has already been made. I will speak out fully when the trustees are discussing the bill, and after they have acted upon it," the president said.

When asked to comment upon the probable effect of the bill if it were passed, President Boegmann said, "I don't feel that it will have any immediate effect on discrimination, because I don't feel that this sort of change can be legislated."

The seven year period which local fraternities would be given to get rid of restrictive clauses in their charters seemed to the president to be a "reasonable" amount of time.

Although President Borgmann had not given any previous thought as to what would happen to fraternities from the financial point of view if they were forced to withdraw from their nationals, he said that he supposed that the nationals were good businessmen and would have adequate collateral when making loans to the locals for the purpose of buying a house. If this were the case, the president felt that it would merely be a matter of changing the mortgage from the national organization to a bank.

The president also said that as far as he knew there were no regulations of the State of Vermont which prohibited discrimination in similar situations. He thought that if this bill were passed it would be a completely independent University action.

Fraternities:

Principle Good, Majority Agree

By David Spector

"I believe a man should be judged on merit alone! His race, religion, or nationality should not be a factor," stated John Viets, President of Delta Psi. Thomas Mundie, President of Sigma Phi, stated "The school is correct in carrying out this act of modern day thinking." Lawrence Epstein, President of Alpha Epsilon Pi, felt that a person should be considered only on value alone, and that discrimination should play no part in the selection of members. None of the above fraternities would be affected by a ruling against discriminatory clauses.

But what about the fraternities that do have discriminatory clauses in their charters. How have they reacted to the University Senate's recommendation which calls for the elimination of such clauses.

The majority believe that the discriminatory clause is "outmoded," "unfair," and "bigoted," and "unnecessary!" They feel that if the clause was removed it would definitely cut down on discrimination. Most of them agreed that the clauses are completely unnecessary in the charters and should be removed if possible.

No sorority at UVM has a clause which restricts membership.

One small group felt that a fraternity should retain discriminatory clauses, on the grounds that "a fraternity is a select group in the first place, and the members realize what they are getting into, and therefore, by joining, they wish to keep that group select."

As for the seven year time limit set down by the University, some of the affected groups said that while the limit was sufficient, it would still do no good. These groups have large numbers of southern chapters, which therefore control the group on the national level, and this "Southern Block" would vote down any attempts to liberalize the constitution. These chapters therefore, may be forced to "go local" at the end of seven years, even though they personally would be willing to go along with the university order.

It was pointed out that several of these local chapters also have chapters in Dartmouth, and are in the same situation on that campus. At Dartmouth they have only four years to comply with the same general order. These groups are trying to work out methods to point out their problem to their respective nationals, but had no statement to make at the present time concerning their progress.

Educators And Civic Leaders Combine To Combat Discrimination In Fraternities

A national campaign to combat discrimination in fraternity membership was launched last Thursday by a group of college educators and community leaders who organized the National committee on Fraternities in Education at a dinner in the Yale club in New York.

"We believe that discrimination in fraternity membership can and should be overcome, so that campus groups may perform their rightful role as valuable adjuncts to college education," the new group's board of directors declared in a joint statement announcing the committee's formation.

The board also adopted a five-point program as a basis for the organization's work which calls for: keeping informed of developments in fraternity and sorority policies and programs, undertaking appropriate research and study, including further examination of the damage to educational objectives and personality development already indicated by preliminary evidence.

The third point of the program is to make information and consultation services available to fraternities, sororities, colleges, student organizations and the general public.

The last two points of the program are aimed to stimulate conferences among alumni undergraduate fraternity leaders and college administrators and trustees to promote understanding of the problem and corrective action, campus by campus; and to encourage colleges, national organizations and alumni to recognize the importance of permitting young people to select their own companions, free from outside pressures.

IFC Presidents:

Recommendation Not Means Of Solving The Problem

By Herzl Spiro

"Initiation into a fraternity should not depend upon the color of a man's skin or the church he attends," stated Stan Stein and Jack Burke, top I.F.C. officials of the last two years, "but the proposed anti-discrimination ammendment is not the way to solve the problem," they continued.

Burke, last year's president of the Interfraternity Council and a member of Sigma Nu pointed out, "It took the U.S. Government one hundred years to eliminate discrimination within its own army; how can we be expected to do it in seven years? Some nationals have well over one hundred chapters. Vermont as one of the delegates could not expected to change the views of an entire convention," he concluded.

The core of the problem seems to be the intensely antagonistic attitude of the southern chapters towards any changes in the discriminatory clause of the national charters. Burke argued, "If the discriminatory clauses could be removed without causing a rift between the northern and southern parts of national fraternities, I would strongly favor their removal. Unfortunately, this appears to be impossible. What can we expect of national fraternities faced with a choice between the widespread opposition of all their southern chapters or the demands of one Vermont chapter?"

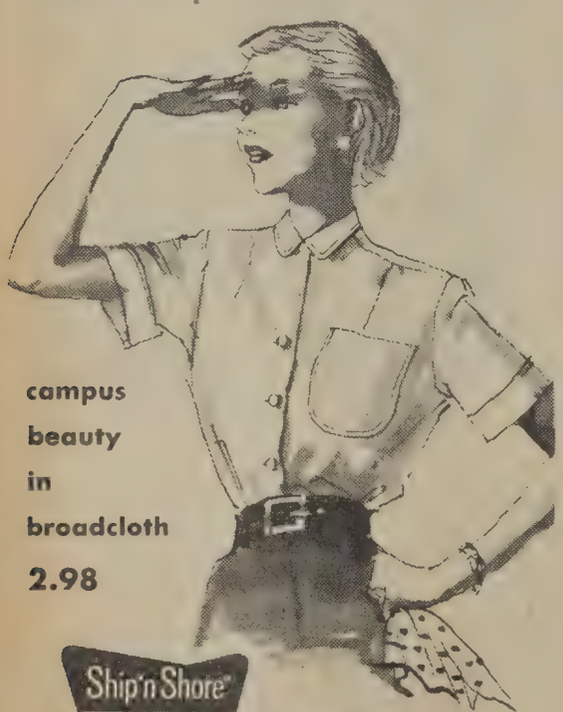
Stein, this year's president, claimed that "Seven years is not enough time to bring about such a radical change." He went on to say, "Many fraternities would be forced to give up their national affiliations, which are often necessary to the economic survival of fraternities."

Pan Hellenic

Unwritten Law, National Groups

By Carol Cleaves

"I believe that the problem has a lot to do with unwritten customs. Even if the restricted clauses were done away with, sororities might continue to follow their past behavior as to discrimination," stated Sue Van Wagner, president of Pan Hellenic Council. "Pressure brought to bear on the Nationals instead of their separate chapters would be striking at the root of the problems," she continued.



The question of discrimination in Greek chapters, has been attacked on other campuses, and is not being originated on ours. As to just why it is being probed into at the present time, Sue said," "It may possibly be due to our progressive President, who, in doing his best to better the college whenever possible, is leaving no field of improvement untouched."

If the elimination of such clauses becomes a university law, and sorority having such a clause would be forced to strike out the clause from its charter within seven years, or lose its University charter. A local chapter would have little trouble changing its charter.

"It is the national organizations which would face a serious problem," she pointed out. Forced off the campus if they refused to abide by the new law, they might also be presecuted by their Nationals if they did agree to change their charters.

Greatest Threat To American Liberty?

University Of Vermont Professors Venture Answers

Borgmann

Carl W. Borgmann, President

If there is any special threat to American Liberty and of this I am not convinced, it is to be found in loss of faith in ourselves and in our fear of the future. Our Country is a great one; its ideals are properly so high that they are not yet fully achieved; it rewards us well for our work. All we need to remember is that the same motives, aspirations and actions that gained us our liberty are the best ones to preserve it. American Liberty was achieved by men - sure of their own abilities and the rightness of their ideas and unafraid of future challenges. It will be maintained by men of similar courage and conviction.

Hopwood

G. Richard Hopwood
Director of Public Relations

I have just finished reading the opening chapters of a history of UVM written by Professor Lindsay. In the opening pages he has a quotation from UVM's first president, Daniel Clarke Sanders, "....many shrank away from the bold and arduous labor of founding a College in a wilderness."

The greatest threat to American freedom at the present moment, in my opinion, is that there are far too many who shrink away from all bold and arduous ideas. The general characteristics of our age seem to be the overwhelming desire to be secure, to be apprehensive of change, to be fearful of technological developments, to eschew intellectual curiosity.

It is understandable that in a wilderness there should be little enthusiasm for a college when the ordinary problems of survival were acute. But it is not so easy to understand why we find today, in basically a more secure world, the supremacy of fear.

Carrigan

J.E. Carrigan, Dean of the College of Agriculture

By maintaining high trade barriers, we in the United States are refusing to buy from other countries as many goods and services as we sell to them. How do they get dollars with which to pay for the goods and services they buy from us, over and above what they sell to us?

We give them the dollars. We have been doing this, in one way or another, for about forty years, ever since we have been a creditor nation. Recently, these grants have been made through Marshall Aid, the Point Four Program, military aid, and the like.

We cannot continue indefinitely (or can we?) to give five or six billions of dollars to the other nations annually. If and as we reduce our grants, we need to lower our trade barriers so that our friendly neighbor nations may trade with us, may sell us more goods and services. Otherwise, we will force them to trade with our enemies behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains. That will be the only way they can obtain certain goods that they need. This, in turn, will tend to bind our friends and enemies together. I believe such a bond would constitute a real threat to us and to our liberty.

Nadworney

Milton J. Nadworney,
Professor of Economics

In my estimation, the "greatest threat" consists of three parts: (1) ignorance; (2) unwillingness of individuals to think independently; and (3) lack of social awareness.. The existence of these three factors permits and encourages the growth of economic, political, and social cancers. They permit the fantastic abuses of our Constitution and distortions of justice so prevalent today; they cause even universities to surrender their integrity before the demagogue; they foster economic, social, and intellectual waste and poverty; and they prevent the uniting of communities and the nation for the purpose of meeting the major basic problems of economic and social improvement and welfare, and peace. Our acting to preserve our rights, our integrity, and our dignity is long overdue.

Gregg

Donald C. Gregg,
Professor of Chemistry

One of the greatest threats to American liberty in recent years is the increasing tendency exhibited by many Americans to either actively foster or passively assent to certain insidious practices and tenets which boldly disregard the rights, privileges and immunities of the individual. The behavior of these persons is motivated in part by fear and distrust and a reluctance to evaluate critically certain so-called patriotic actions. Apparently many of these people fail to realize that these very practices and tenets which they embrace as weapons to combat alleged threats to democracy are actually a potential menace to their own liberty. Public forums and discussions such as the Vermont Conference of this year can do much to emphasize the reality of this threat to American liberty.

Hall

Raymond A. Hall,
Professor of Religion

The chief threat to American freedom seems to me to be an unreasoning fear which has taken possession of our people and has made possible the power of McCarthyism which both feeds on fear and creates more fear: a loyalty "cult" with unscrupulous high priests whose workings show a neo-fascist pattern unfolding, directed at the universities, the Protestant churches, the civil service, our diplomats and the Army.

This danger of abandoning democratic procedures and of demoralized by fear is a greater danger than the discovery here or there of a Communist.

Cox

Lt. Col. William E. Cox,
Professor of Military Science and Tactics

The greatest threat to American liberty? Some "ism" from the extreme right or extreme left? Some creeping malignancy from within? Fear of encroachments (piecemeal or otherwise) by a foreign mania?

None of these threaten American liberty -- unless we let them.

And we won't let them, so long as we all appreciate that our dynamic democracy is the key to human freedom, dignity, and the pursuit of happiness; so long as each of us shoulders his responsibility to keep vigorous and unfettered those principles which have been our basic faith since 1776; so long as we watch for and destroy any complacency, any self absorption, any indifference which might blind us to the worth and force of our incomparable heritage.

Moody

Paul A. Moody
Professor of Zoology

Among all our problems, political, social, economic, intellectual, religious, solution of one would go far to ease the pressure of the others. That is the problem of race prejudice. Race prejudice as we know it, based on color of the skin and the geography of one's ancestry, arose as a means of justifying the institution of slavery and the subjugation by Europeans of peoples in other parts of the world. Slavery has long since ceased to be morally respectable, and the colonial empires of European nations are crumbling, which is another way of saying that non-Europeans are coming into their birthrights as men. As they attain full political and economic stature are they going to tolerate us, the minority with bleached skins? The answer depends upon the climate of racial relationships that we create during these their formative years. Race prejudice is not only "old hat," it is an explosive that will destroy us unless we destroy it first.

Coit

J. Knox Coit,
Professor of Philosophy

It goes without saying that another war would doubtless leave American democracy in ruins, and I take it the question is not about the possibilities of another war. Also, I assume that the question is not about our professed political ideology, but about the prevailing complex of practices known as American way of life. If, then, it is our practices which are in question, the answer cannot be a simple one.

What is the greatest "threat" to our prevailing medical and public health practices? I suppose it lies with those who are convinced that we can afford better health protection than we are getting and who are allowed to agitate for some sort of collection solution to the problem.

What is the greatest "threat" to the prevailing treatment of the negroes? One can cite the gradual elimination of discriminatory practices through education, court action, and so forth, which is bringing greater numbers of negroes to the polls, to non-segregated universities, etc.

If it is "freedom of discussion and inquiry" one is concerned for, the greatest "threat" might lie in that very complex set of developments which have created widespread fear of being thought "subversive," and one thinks of persons engaged in spying for foreign powers, of those who equate social salvation with the Russian system, of irresponsible congressional investigating committees (including committee chairmen), of loyalty oaths, and so forth.

I would suppose the greatest threat to the health of any dynamic society lies in all those factors which make people less interested in, and unwilling or unable to engage in, critical appraisal of the aims and methods of society, and disinclined to make needed changes.

Schultz

Harold Schultz,
Professor of History

What is the greatest threat to American liberty?

I believe it is the readiness of too many Americans to justify any means that promise to bring them security.

No large group of Americans is entirely free of a tendency to justify whatever seems to protect them from what they fear the most. To gain security of income, farmers demand government-guaranteed prices for their crops, college graduates seek careers in the giant corporations that cannot fail, corporation managers say nothing to displease superiors who grant promotions, and college professors speak not too freely when they may offend those who finance university education.

To be sure of having an impregnable defense against Russian attack, there are those who would maintain a permanent, fully-mobilized, war economy, without regard to whether such an economy brings enlarged government controls over the decisions of business men, without regard to the effects of taxes on business investments and consumer morale, and without regard to the militarization of the civilian mind. To enable the United States to deal quickly and secretly on the diplomatic front against the Russian imperialist, there are those who would free the President from the restraints of a slow-moving, deliberative, and divulging Congress. In quest of a foolproof system of defense against Communist espionage and subversion, there are those who would hand over to government powers to invade the individual's privacy, question his political opinions, jeopardize his job, and restrict his speech; who would permit demagogic politicians to interrupt legally-prescribed and orderly methods of administration; who would permit one branch of government to usurp functions properly belonging to another; who would push into oblivion all other questions of national import; and who would overlook all wrongdoing by anyone who is thought to be a great crusader against the Communist spy and propagandist.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Let us also remember that it is impossible to be vigilant about liberty without being vigilant about means.

AT KAPPA ALPHA THETA

On Saturday, March 13, nine girls were initiated into Lambda chapter. The girls were: Gail Angotti, South Orange, N.J.; Julie Brown, Alexandria, Va.; Lorna Dean, Burlington, Vt.; Janice Fayen, Granville, N.Y.; Kay Fernald, Verona, N.H.; Beverly Jones, New Rochelle, N.Y.; Joan Kienast, River Edge, N.J.; Anne Mitchell, Ridgewood, N.J.; Nancy Moul, Buffalo, N.Y. The initiation was followed by a banquet at Happy Acres Inn. Mrs. Charles H. Stevens, District President, was the toastmistress, and the main speaker was Dean Mary Jean Simpson.

The new president of Kappa Alpha Theta is Hope Keeler '55, of Wethersfield, Connecticut. The other officers are: Frances Kidder, Burlington, Vt.,--Vice-president; Carol Crossman, New York, N.Y.--Corresponding Secy.; Mary Lee Hoilman, Burlington, Vt.--Treasurer; Claire Battles, Rutland, Vt.- Panhellenic representative and Rush chairman; Barbara O'Hara, Wethersfield, Conn.--Recording Secy.; Mary Pfotzer Glen Ridge, N.J.-House President and House Manager; Rita Johnson, Proctor, Vt.,--Chaplain; Mary Pfotzer,--Marshal-Barbara O'Hara, Song-leader; Mary Hagar, Burlington, Vt.--Archivist and historian; Jane Engel, Staten Island, N.Y.--Social chairman; Pat Clements, West Orange, N.J.--Scholarship chairman; Alice Millis, Cleveland Heights, Ohio--Deputy Panhellenic representative; Leonie Strachan, Burlington, Vt.--Deputy treasurer; Mary Hagar,--Public-relations chairman; Beverly Jones, New Rochelle, N.Y.--Deputy marshal; Nancy Moul, Buffalo, N.Y.- Deputy marshal; Janice Fayen, Granville, N.Y.--Activities Co-chairman; Kay Fernald, Verona, N.J.-Activities Co-chairman.

The Thetas celebrated the "wearing of the green" with an informal open house on Friday, March 19, at the Theta House.

On Thursday, March 18, the Thetas held an exchange dinner with the Kappa Sigs, The Thetas and Sig Nus exchanged dinners on Wednesday, March 24.

Delta Delta Delta initiated into membership twelve girls before vacation on Thursday, March 25.

Tri-delt, enjoyed a busy week with the Spring Formal held at Oakledge Manor, on April 9; the Easter Orphan's Party on April 10; and the Traditional "Butterfly Breakfast" Open House on Sunday, April 11.

SIGMA NU

Sig Nu fraternity held an initiation banquet at Ireland's Happy Acres celebrating the initiation of the following members into the brotherhood: Dwight Kahlo, Brookfield, Conn.; Ken Savela, Fitchburg, Mass.; John Duffy, Bryn Maur, Penn.; Leo Greco, Bronx, New York; Richard Sharkey, Carteret, N.J.; Douglas Burke, Rutland, Vt.; David Ireland, New Milford, Conn.; Charles Mudge, Westfield, N.J.; David Henderson, South Weymouth, Mass.; Joseph Butler, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; and James Zifchock, Ithica, N.Y.

Elections were held at the Sig Nu house recently. The new officers are: Edwin Hebb, Eminent Commander; Dwight Kahlo, Lt. Commander; John Willey, Treasurer; Rudy Deetgen, Recorder; Richard Ireland, Chaplain; Peter Lauderbach, Alumni Contact Officer; David Ireland, Reporter; James Zifchock, Assistant Treasurer; Michael Morse, Marshall; Ronald P. Ward Jr., Sentinal; Douglas Burke, Historian; Edwin Hebb, I.F.C. Representative; Executive Council Representatives; Douglas Burke '57, Michael Morse '56, and Peter Lauderbach '55.

OWLS

The OWLS will once again convert their game room into a sandy beach replete with beach umbrellas, lifeguards, and kegs that flow underwater for their semi annual "Beach Party" which will be held on Saturday, April 10th. This is always a very successful affair, so don't miss it!!

Hugh Sullivan, '57, from Bellows Falls and Jim Lancaster, '57, from Burlington were recently pledged to Lambda Iota. Pete Wood, '55, Schroon lake, New York has been elected athletic chairman of the Owls succeeding Gene Boyle, '54, from Melrose, Mass., who is entering the service.

The brothers of Lambda Iota would like to congratulate the pledges on the wonderful job they are doing in remodeling the house. They have completely redone the cafeteria, kitchen and all the corridors. An excellent job well done.

Hoots from the Owl House have it that Gene Boyle '54, from Melrose, Mass., has been elected Athletic Chairman of the Owls.

Hugh Sullivan, '57, from Bellows Falls, has been pledged to Lambda Iota.

TAU EPSILON PHI announces their newly elected officers for this year, Chancellor, Stan Stein; Vice-Chancellor, Fred Solomon; Scribe, Larry Klein; Bursar, Bob Feitelson; Steward, Norman Cohn; House Manager, Harvey Shlafferman.

Tau Epsilon Phi extends a pat on the back to Stan Stein on his recent election to President of the I.F.C.

Tep's bowling squad composed of Dave Sussman, Don Shoenbrun, Mike Wagreich, Jerry Glassman, Bernie Roth, and Fred Soloman finished the current inter-fraternity league in second place. Congratulations!

Social Chairman, Al Weisman, is planning a whopping party to take place soon after the Easter Vacation.

The TEPs held an old clothes party at the house last Saturday night, April 10. Their Spring Formal is scheduled for Friday, April 30.

THE ALPHA DELTA PI's held a tea for Mrs. Rex Van Aken and Mrs. T. McCorkle on March 16. Mrs. Van Aken is the province president of Gamma Tau from Worcester, Mass. Mrs. McCorkle, National vice-president, came from Ft. Worth Texas.

Sally Sherman of Schenectady, N.Y., accepted an open bid to Alpha Delta Pi.

The initiation of nine pledges was held on Sunday, March 21. They are: Carolyn Barton, Jeannette Butterfield, Kathryn Carangelo, Arleen Mayel, Carolyn MacNeil, Frances Pedusey, Ann Terry, and Jane Van Dusen.

New officers were elected by the pledge class. Jane Newton, President; Jean Trudell, Secretary; Dolores Barea, Treasurer.

A tea was held by Alpha Delta Pi Sorority Sunday, April 11, in honor of Miss Mary Jean Simpson. It was opened to all The University. Deanne Kiessling was the chairman of the affair.

Phi Sigma Delta initiated ten into the Fern Hill brotherhood last week. The new fraters are: Lew Reische, Ronald Grossman, Rudy Keimowitz, Bill Infeld, Dick Stein, Don Greenhouse, Ed Walker. All were freshmen. In addition, three sophomores were initiated, Marv Nierenberg, Bob Litsky, Larry Schlager.

Graduate schools and Fern Hillers seem to go well together. The following seniors have been accepted to date: Karl Greenman, University of Pennsylvania Law; Martin Steven Brodie, Georgetown Law; Matthew Baigell, N.Y.U. Graduate School of Fine Arts; David Faigell, Norman Gootman, Leslie Chusid, University of Vermont Medical; Donald Forst, Graduate Journalism; Mortin Barkan, Boston University Law; Harry Rutten, N.Y.U. Graduate Business; Marvin Cooper, Boston University Law.

The Phi Sigs held elections for "minor officers" last week. Results show the following: Al Mufson, Senior IFC delegate; Gerry Goldman, Junior IFC delegate; Jay Selcow, Member-at-Large; Izzy Zalkin, Historian; Dick Goldstein, Social Chairman and Alumni Secretary; Brad Gordon, Corresponding Secretary; Lew Dan, Assistant Treasurer, Gerry Goldman, Financial Steward.

The Fern Hillers and their head resident, Mrs. Val Austin, have held several teas for other head residents recently. Three teas have been held to date. The first was attended by the Tri Delts Mrs. Selma Guthridge, and Converse Hall's Mrs. Gladys Severance.

Phi Sig played host next to Mrs. Kathryn Moore of Adsit, Mrs. Kimball Allen, of Allen House, and Alpha Chi's own Mrs. Agnes Weber.

The most recent tea found Mrs. Phyllis Mather, Mrs. Emily Billhardt, and Mrs. Winifred Palmer guests at Fern Hill. The three women are from Elmwood, Grassmount, and Kappa Alpha Theta, respectively.

Acacia recently elected new officers. They are: venerable dean, P. Wayne Clark; senior dean, Allan A. Tyler; junior dean, Frank A. Carr; secretary, Allan A. Smalley; treasurer, John L. Noe; senior I.F.C. representative, Robert C. Stetson; junior I.F.C. representative, George H. Hanson.

The Sigma Nu pledge project has been completed and the interior appearance of the house has been greatly improved due to this.

The engagement of Bill Thomson to Jane Martin of the Theta house was announced over the spring recess.

Chick Healy, Rudy Deetjen, Don Bossa, and Jim Ballard spent the spring recess in Florida.

John Conant and Rudy Deetjen are once again hard at work in preparation for the coming Interfraternity Sing.

Ron Bowman, from Orleans, Vt., spent the spring recess in New York City and saw all the big "buildens".

W. Robert Dahl, '52, of Scarsdale, N.Y., graduated a newly commissioned officer on April 2, from the Naval O.C.S. at Newport, Rhode Island.

DELTA PSI

Delta Psi is extending congratulations this week to George Hard, '55, Burlington, who was recently initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. George recently received his acceptance to med school and will join the boys in white next fall.

Plans are now being made for the annual Singapore party which will be held at the house on Saturday evening, April 10th from eight until twelve.

Under the leadership of Phil Whitney the Delts are now practicing for the Inter Fraternity Sing.

The pledges are working on the annual pledge project. This year they are redecorating the third floor ballroom and plan to haveit completed in time for the spring formal.

Also, the alumnae room on the main floor is being redecorated by the Delta Psi's Woman's Club.

The Infirmary had three guests this last week. They were Ann Harrina, Robert Newcomb, and Gerald Glassman.

A fifteen man delegation from A E Pi attended the New England Regional Conclave which was held at Boston University this past weekend. Activities included an interchapter basketball and bowling tournament, and sweetheart dance which was held Saturday night.

David Spector resigned as Scribe in order to give his "all" to his new position as Managing Editor of the CYNIC. Matthew Evans was elected Sentinel to fill the Matt's old position.

Pi Beta Phi initiated the following girls on Sunday afternoon, April 11.

Patricia Cheney- '57.
Nancy Chapin- '57.
Sandy Waugh- '57.
Carolyn Davenport- '57.
Marilyn Falby- '57.
Sally Cook- '57.
Rosemarie Eurich- '56.
Jane Gregory- '57.
Ann Duncan- '57
Sally Smith- '56.
Midge Haffinger- '55
Mary Alice Leete- '56.

Pi Phi's "Chooch" Janice Bailey, '57, Hanover, N.H., won the Pico Derby by taking first in the Junior Division and then beating the winner of the Senior Division.

AT ALPHA EPSILON PHI the initiation of ten girls and the installation of new officers took place at the Hotel Vermont on Friday, March 19. The new sorors are: Nat Braunstein, Phyllis Buckheim, Myrna Feldman, Marlene Ginsberg, Harriet Prichep, Gail Rogan, Ricky Rockoff, Phyllis Sackman, Ellie Slatkin and Ethel Ward. Nat Braunstein was awarded the Best Pledge Award.

The new officers are: Joan Soloman, Dean; Judy Victorsohn, Sub Dean; Leone Bernstein, Scribe; Linda Brettler, Treasurer; Myrna Feldman, Assistant Treasurer; Harriet Prichep, Courtesy Chairman and Historian; Marlene Ginsberg, Activities Chairman; Ethel Ward, Scholarship Chairman; Nat Braunstein, Editor.

Another feature of the night was a gala slumber party held at Southwick. Next on the agenda was a party given by the pledge class for the sorors on Saturday afternoon, March 20.

Jim Danigelis, a Phi Delt, is the new representative to the IFC.

Jack Cowle '54, was back last week for a short visit after completing his basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Cloud 7 Dept.

Nobody "bad stole the wedding bell" the day Lambda Iota's Jan Curran, '56, of Golden's Bridge, N.Y., married Faith Angevine, '56, of West Newton, Massachusetts. Dan Cupid (not Hart) informs us that Dave Depatie, '56, of Enosburg Falls, is pinned to Corrinne Becker, '56, of Norwalk, Conn.; Bob Benoit, '56, of Enosburg Falls, to Jeannine Lebeau, of Burlington; and Bob Hartman, '54, of Burlington, to Nancy Gatcomb, '53, of Nashua, N.H.

Phi Sigs made their mark in pinnings and engagements over the Spring vacation. Les Chusid, a Barre senior, pinned Helene Widder, a Coolidge junior from Long Island. Al Epstein, a senior from Brooklyn and Naomi Meisels, a NYC Elmwood Hall frosh, are engaged. Birchwood Lodge's Izzy Zalkin, a junior, is ringed to Bobbi Weiss, frosh from Forest Hills, N.Y. She is a Lyman Haller. Dave Hershberg, a town boy, pinned Judy Sarian at 9 P.M. last Saturday after a courtship of one year and 27 days.

During spring vacation Jane Martin, '54, a THETA was engaged to Bill Thompson, '54, from SIGMA NU.

AE Phi's Affaires de coeur are represented this week by "Rickey" Rockoff, '56, being pinned to Marty Pompadur, Treasurer of Chi Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity at Williams College, and Lynne Soloff, '55, announcement of her pinning to Abe Gordon, a Duke University Law student. Lynne is now attending the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut.

The recent Pi Phi contributions to the moonlight and roses department are: The pinnings of; Lois Marvin, '55, of Essex Junction, to George Brophy, Sigma Chi at Dartmouth, and Carole Jean Foss, '57, to Paul Miller, Theta Chi.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI's Pat Solod, '57, from Worcester, Mass., was "ringed" to Charles Feder, '57, Phi Sigma Delta from Jersey City. Russian People Kept Hungry Skapski Reveals

By Max Ansbacher

Professor Adam Skapski addressed the John Dewey Club at its last meeting on some aspects of life in Russia. He explained that the standard of living in the Soviet Union was kept at such a level that the people were hungry most of the time, and therefore had to spend their time trying to get food, so that they had no time to think of revolting.

Professor Skapski said that in order to really find out what the Russians thought one had to live in the prisoner camps. This is because free citizens are afraid to speak their mind for fear of being thrown into prison while those already there need have no such fear.

Professor Skapski traced a Russian from a cradle to the graveyard. He did say that if a person in Russia shows talent, he will be given great opportunities for an education. The communists have a great need for talent, and they train everyone who has any talent. In this way the communists are able to get all the people capable of leadership on their side, and there are no leaders left to lead an uprising.

According to Professor Skapski, the Russian people are not cruel, but it is their system which is. In fact when the Germans attacked Russia in the Second World War they were looked upon as liberators and friends until the Russians found out that the Germans were no better than the communists.

Men's Dorm Proctor Assistantships

Graduate students are assigned as Head Student Counselors in one of the men's residence halls. A Head Student Counselor assists the Office of Student Personnel in establishing and supervising programs of education, orientation, and recreation; in counseling; and in general administration of the residence Hall. He also supervises the work of three undergraduate Assistant Student Counselors who are assigned to help carry out these programs.

Appointments are for one academic year. Re-appointment for the second year will depend upon satisfactory work as a counselor and as a graduate student. For their services Head Student Counselors receive $1,000 plus tuition and room rent. A maximum of eighteen semester hours of academic work may be carried each year.

To be eligible for appointment, men must be single, hold hold a Bachelor's degree, and qualify for admission to the Graduate College in a field in which graduate work is offered. Preference will be given to those who have had experience working with boys of high school age as a camp counselor, teacher, playground supervisor, etc.; who have shown leadership in extra-curricular, community, or similar activities; and who have demonstrated an interest in the problems of others.

To apply, send a letter of application with all pertinent data and references to

are preferred by engineers

When you go out on the job, you want the most durable steel measuring tapes you can get — Lufkin "Chrome Clad." The jet black markings won't wear off, for they are bonded to the line and protected by multiple electroplatings that further build up the fine tape steel from which the line is made. The resulting line is heavier, stronger, and most rust and corrosion resistant. It is easier to read, easiest to clean, and won't surface crack, chip, or peel. Only Lufkin tapes are available with Chrome Clad.

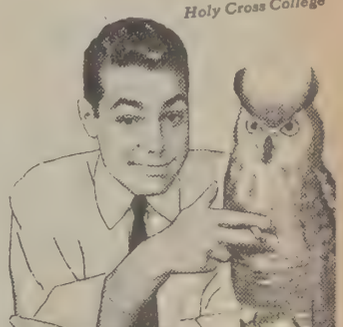
IT'S ALL A MATTER OF TASTE

When students burn the midnight oil
While cramming for a test,
The smooth, fresh smokes they reach for most
Are Luckies...always best!

Marilyn Sergeant
University of Arizona



When you come right down to it, you smoke for one simple reason . . . enjoyment. And smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste. Yes, taste is what counts in a cigarette. And Luckies taste better.

Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco . . . light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better . . . always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.

So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, Be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

If cleaner, fresher, smoother taste
Is that which you would prize,
There is but one solution, friend,
Buy Luckies if you're wise!

CLEANER, FRESHER, SMOOTHER!

Mouskhely

Even as he held out the hope that war is not imminent, he drew a lucid picture of the underlying ideological differences which continue to cause "acute forms of adversity between East and West." The Western ideology "is the product of three currents, Christian, Greek, and Roman," and "Respect for the human personality, for individuality procede all else." These ideas "are deduced from a universal spirit," On the other hand, "Eastern ideology does not believe in man, because to them man is not universal, transcendental. Man is the product of society....and he must conform to society." The speaker held that these ideals cannot be completely harmonized.

Housecleaning

After presenting these conditions, Dr. Mouskhely suggested a course of action for the Western nations. "We must put our own house in order." He scored the terrible economic conditions which exist the Free world today: "If twenty-five representative men got together, only four would be well dressed, five would be dressed in fair clothes, but sixteen would be skeletons dressed in rags." He did not insist that we give up our entire armaments effort, but simply that we weigh and carefully consider social, economic, and political conditions in the interest of developing a well balanced program which would live up to Western ideals.

English, a sophomore from St. Albans, and Herzl Spiro, from Burlington, won all 4 debates. The negative team of Pauline Westcott, a senior from North Poultney, and Kevin Kearney, a senior from Newport, Vermont, won 3 debates and lost 1.

Kearney and Spiro combined to go on to the semi-finals, where they lost to MIT by a 2 to 1 decision.

Four freshmen debaters will face varsity competition from 36 southern and eastern schools in the second annual Eastern Tau Kappa Alpha Speech Conference April 14 and 15 at New York University, Washington Square. The affirmative team will be Marvin Levy and Max Ansbacher. Beth Bowen, and John Burgess, are the negative team.

"The four freshmen, as a result of their excellent records and progress, have been advanced to the junior varsity squad. I believe that they will make a fine showing in their first competition with varsity teams," said Professor Charles Helgesen, director of debate and discussion.

John Burgess will take part in the extemporaneous speaking contest. In addition, U.V.M. will enter the discussion group and congressional session in which Dick Lapidus, a senior, was selected one of ten outstanding speakers.

Professor Charles Helgesen will deliver the initial address at the speech conference. He accompanied the debaters to the Regional Tournament.

lived out his life in Burlington. His son, John Sullivan Adams, was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1838 and became prominent as Vermont's superintendent of public instruction. In this capacity he did much to establish a modern system of education in Vermont, and Adams School in Burlington is named after him.

Newsman

Like many another adventurous UVM graduate, John Sullivan Adams took a trip out to California in '49, but he returned to Burlington and lived here until 1867, when he went to Jacksonville, Fla. There he became Commissioner of Immigration and Collector of Customs, and there he established the NEW SOUTH newspaper.

John's son, Charles Sullivan Adams, also became a lawyer, and was prominent in the civil and cultural life of Jacksonville.

Prof. Marston:

Professor Frederick C. Marston Jr., faculty advisor to the Interfraternity Council, thinks the University Senate's passage of the proposal for the elimination of discriminatory clauses in the constitutions of the fraternities and sororities at UVM is a worthwhile step. "The proposal may be rough on some fraternities but it had to happen" Marston said.

The legislation passed by the Senate calls for the eliminttion of discriminatory clauses in UVM's fraternities and sororities whose charters contain such statements. The Greek-letter social organizations were given seven years in which to eliminate clauses.

Marston felt that the proposal will effect changes in houses which pursued discriminatory policies. However the effects "will probably not be immediate but will take effect in the future," Marston said. "Nevertheless" he continued, "the passage of the legislation will hasten non-discriminatory practices. Without the Senate's action, discrimination would not have ended for an even longer time."

Professor Marston thought the Senate's move, with its seven year period, was a fair one and would permit those fraternities affected, sufficient time to alter their charters.

GEORGE WASHINGTON - 10

A disappointing seventh inning marked by seven costly errors cost the UVM Catamounts dearly as they went down to defeat in the opening game of the 1954 season losing to George Washington by a 10-9 score. The first six innings were all Vermont as starting pitcher George Plender mowed down the G. W. batters. Home runs by Jim Montgomery and Ed Beck featured the Catamount attack with Vermont building up a commanding 9-0 lead going into the last of the seventh inning. The roof fell in here and Plender was relieved by Jim Hoag. Two hits, three walks and seven Vermont errors gave the winners eight runs with Vermont still leading 9-8. George Washington scored one more run in the eighth and ninth innings to ice the game 10-9.

Vermont lost another tough ballgame, this time to Villanova 6-3 bringing their Southern Trip to 2 wins and 2 losses. The loss was especially tough for first time starter Lew Deitsch as he had a one hitter going into the bottom of the eighth inning. Here, two walks, two scratch singles and two base hits broke up a 2-2 tie. Reliefer Jim Hoag came in here but was greeted with a 2 run double to ice the game for Villanova. The Cats loaded the bases in the ninth but pinch hitter Ron Larrow popped up the rally yielding only 1 run.

Another case of erroritus threw the hex on the Catamounts as they went to defeat before Columbia 13-9. An enthusiasgroup of UVMers saw the Cats outhit their big city rivals with a barrage of solid hits only to suffer several fielding lapses in the first and fifth innings. Columbia got off to a five to one lead in the first inning. But Vermont, aided by George Gilbert's home run and a timely double by Jim Montgomery, got four runs in both the fourth and fifth innings to lead 9-5. Starter George Plender was lifted after five innings having given up ten hits. From here on it was Columbia as the Lions built up a 13-9 lead in the closing minutes of a cold windy New York day.

ARMY - 8

The Catamounts went into the last game of their southern trip against Army's Black Knights with high hopes of evening up their 2 and 3 record. West Point however, jumped on starter Ron Larrow in the first inning and from here went on to fashion an 8-3 victory with Army chucker LeGates pitching a fine three hitter against the Cats, the first pitcher to handcuff Vermont hitters on the southern trip. On the bright side for Vermont was the somewhat wild but effective pitching of Lew Deitsch who gave up only two hits in five innings.

Montgomery Top Batter; Four Hit Over .300 Avg.

Coach Ralph Lapointe and his University of Vermont Catamounts are back to daily practices at Centennial Field, after returning from the 10-day 43rd Annual Southern Trip.

Montgomery Leader

Offensively, Vermont has four men batting .300 or more. Leading hitter on the club so far is shortstop Jim Montgomery who is clubbing the ball at a .400 clip. Montgomery is also the club leader in RBI's, with 10 to his credit, and has hit one of the team's four home runs.

Other hitters over .300 are Ed Rynn, at .381, first baseman Joe Wark, at .357, and second baseman Al McLam, who is hitting .308.

Wark R.B.I.

Wark is second on the club in RBI's with eight, followed by left fielder Eddie Beck with seven. Four of Wark's RBI's came against American University, when the stocky first-sacker slugged a long grand slam home run to right center field to completely ice that verdict.

Also hitting homers for the Cats were Beck, who poled a four baser with one on against George Washington, and center fielder George Gilbert, who hit a solo blast against Columbia.

Righthanders Jim Vincent and Jim Hoag pace the UVM moundsmen in earned run averages so far. Vincent gave up one earned run in his 5-inning stint against Fort Dix, while relief pitcher Hoag, who appeared in four of the six games, gave up two earned runs in the six and one third innings he worked.

The next varsity game will be played on April 23, against UConn. at Storrs.

Vets And Rookies Enjoy Trip; Beck Snowed By City

By Mark Bernstein

This year was the 43rd annual Southern Trip for the UVM Baseball team. For some of the players it was their first time and for others it was a chance to go again and renew old experiences. The CYNIC has interviewed six players, who were picked at random, to give their impressions of this year's trip so that the students would have a better idea of what occurred.

ED BECK - For Eddie this was his first southern trip and his first year as a varsity ballplayer. Like most of the other ballplayers, Ed thought the trip was terrific but felt most of the weather wasn't fit for baseball. Ed appreciated the guided tour which was given to the team when they arrived at Washington, D.C. It was also Ed's first time in New York City and he was astonished by the big buildings and prices. As Ed commented himself, "I was completely snowed."

JOE WARK - Joe is another new varsity ballplayer and so this was also his first Southern Trip. The highlight of the trip for Joe was his grand slam homerun which he hit against American University. It was his first time in Phila., Baltimore and Wash., D.C. Joe thought the best meals of the trip were at George Plender's and Lew Deitsch's homes, where he was a guest. After playing Fort Dix Joe claimed he had his taste of army life and remarked, "I'll stick to Air Force ROTC."

LEW DEITSCH - Another new face on the Catamount baseball team is pitcher Deitsch who saw plenty of action for the first time on the southern trip. Lew was very excited in starting the Villanova game, going eight innings and only giving up three hits. He also pitched relief ball against Army but was lifted later for a pinch hitter. As a summarization of the trip Lew made this comment, "The team has a lot of potential, but not being able to get outdoors sooner we weren't playing up to par."

KEITH SPAULDING - This was Keith's second southern trip at UVM. Keith started off hitting well but thinks he lost a little confidence at the end and he slowed up a little. After playing Fort Dix and living there for one night Keith said that he would like to go to any other camp but Dix. He felt that the trip was once again good but that in most of the games the fellows beat themselves. In his opinion Villanova was about the best, but all the rest could have gone either way.

JIM MONTGOMERY - For "Diamond Jim" this was his third Southern Trip and it could be said a quite successful one. For slugging, Jim's batting average as of now is .400, including one homerun. Although Jim's hitting was a standout he still thought that the team didn't play good ball. Jim's prediction for future games is "the team's going to play a lot better ball now that we have a chance to get outside and have good weather."

AL McLAM - This is Al's first year of varsity ball at UVM, but he is no stranger to the sport. This being his first southern trip Al was very grateful for the opportunity of playing. He thought the team made a lot of mistakes but will have profited from them.

Thinclads Meet Bowdoin Saturday

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

UVM's Southern trip spelled victory for the Catamounts despite their 2-4 record.

LaPointe is optimistic; the players are optimistic; the statistics are optimistic.

Ralph and most of the boys agree that the only tough club they faced was Villanova. In the other games they beat themselves--in a sense, they won--and lost.

If the contests were only of five inning's duration we would have had a reverse 4-2 record. We had a lead at one time or other in every game--conclusion; poor poor under pressure.

As Ralph says: " Inexperience and poor defense is what killed us. We made many elementary mistakes which helped us to beat ourselves. We have a strong potential which needs to be worked upon."

Watch this! The Catamounts batted .273 minus the pitchers. They scored 40 runs in six games, that's more than six per game. They out-hit their opponents in all their games but one, and in that exception they were only edged by Army, five hits to four. Five hitters batted over .300. Base runners stole ten sacks. Pitchers struck out an unusual amount. They held the opposition scoreless 30 out of 46 innings.

Do statistics lie? Never!

Watch this! Twenty-four errors in six games, seven misplays in one inning (the G.W. nightmare). No double-plays executed. Six times the opponents scored more than four runs in one inning. Two infielders with five or more errors.

That's it. The Southern trip was merely a practice affair. We found our strength and our weakness. The records don't mean a thing. The object of the trip was to gain experience. From here on in its for real.

"You can't tell the players without a scorecard." So goes the saying, but we're going to try and ruin the scorecard sales by introducing to you a member of the varsity baseball and a member of the varsity track squads via this column each week.

DAN MANSON

The captain of the 1954 track squad is soft-spoken, easy going, 100 and 200 dash ace Dan Manson of Grosse Point, Michigan.

Dan, a senior and a member of Delta Psi fraternity, graduated from Grosse Point High where tennis and not track was his main interest. Dan didn't begin his track work at UVM until his sophomore year and this will be his third year.

Tennis, fishing and hunting take up most of Dan's spare time. During the past few summers he has worked at farming but plans to try his hand as a camp counselor this summer.

No slouch at the books, Dan made the Dean's list last semester and is majoring in chemistry. Plans for the future call for graduate school next year

Coach Post Puts Harriers Through Seventh Week

Coach Archie Post and the University of Vermont track team is finishing out its seventh week of training activity.

The Catamount track men will open their '54 season against Bowdoin College on Saturday at Brunswick, Maine.

Coach Post has been working out with 37 candidates daily in the UVM Cage, seven of whom are lettermen from last year's team, with three cross-country lettermen, also, out to win varsity assignments.

Twenty-one of the candidates are sophomores, most of whom saw service with the UVM freshman track team last season. Nine juniors and seven seniors finish out the team roster.

Rounding up the returning lettermen, they are Captain Dan Manson (sprints), Dave Stephens (220, ¼mile, and perhaps hurdles), Clint Thompson (hurdles), Ellie Bryant (Broadjump), Ronnie Doornbosch (Shotput, Discus, and Hammer), and Jerry Joyner (½ Mile, and Mile).

The three cross-country lettermen are Bud Sauerwein (Pole Vault, Highjump and Broadjump), Ken Wadley (¼ Miles, 220 or 880), and Don Grady (½ Mile, Mile, or 2 Mile).

Coach Post's Catamounts, unlike most of their opponents, work under the disadvantage of not having had any winter indoor competition. The Green and Gold will take part in seven meets this season, two of which will be held in Burlington.

Golf Tryouts To Start Soon; Donnelly Coach

Ed Donnelly, UVM head athletic director announced yesterday that tryouts for the golf team will take place as soon the Burlington Country Club is available for use. Donnelly, who doubles as golf coach, will carry on an eight man squad. The team will be chosen according to individual trial round scores. Freshmen are not eligible to compete. Vermont has lost two lettermen from last year's undefeated State Championship team. Both Paul Boudreau and Mort Kaufman, 1953 individual state champ, have both graduated.

Donnelly requested that no University students practice at the golf course until it officially opens. He stated that the same membership procedure as last year will be used. Season's membership costs $ 12. Those who compete for the golf team will be given free membership.

SERIES ONE. . . by Hal Moore

The crack of the bat, the cry "Play Ball" usher in another spring and with it the interfraternity Softball Leagues. This year, as in the past, 14 Fraternities will battle for the campus championship and the coveted Traynor points that go with it. The Cynic will preview three Fraternity teams each week, this being the first of the series of interviews with coaches from each team.

Sigma Nu. . . This year the Williams Street Gang will field a strong club. Last year the White Stars lost a 4-3 thriller to Kappa Sig in the playoffs. Front-line pitching is the main problem at present for Coach Hal Moore, as Sid Rossuck, the workhorse of last years mound staff, is the only starter with any experience. Behind the plate the Sigma Nu's boast two fine performers in Bruce Judd and Dwight Kahlo, both of whom have proved capable stickmen. The infield is solid defensively with hustling Dean Farr holding down the hotcorner. The keystone combo of shortstop "Butts" Butler and Dick Ireland should be a big asset in giving the club a strong defense. Ronnie Ward rounds out the infield at the initial sack. In big Dave "Bulldog" Wright S N has a mighty slugger who moves well on defense for his size. Tiger Gage will patrol centerfield again with the same ground covering ability he showed last year. Angelo Pizzagalli and John Dowing will also help with their heavy hitting. The club boasts three new men who should help a great deal in infielders Dean Johnson and Richie "the Cat" Sharkey both of whom are outstanding glovemen. Heavy-hitting Charlie Mudge will also see a great deal of action in the coming season.

Kappa Sigma. . Last years Champs are loaded again and will make a strong bid to repeat as champs. Only at 3b is there no returnee as the infield of Al Stevens behind the plate, first-sacker Bud Dacey, Bob Lovejoy and Frank Osmun hold forth at 2b while Al Malinverni will be back at short. In the outfield, Clem Forte, George Bardis and Bill Olden return from last years team. Dick Jannoni and Tait McSparrow will help as will Dick Congdon and Pete Knox. The big addition to the team is Skippy Burkhart who will toe the mound along with versatile Nar Campana.

Phi Delta Theta. . last years second place club is building but there are high hopes for a successful season. If the new men come through to complement their returning regulars the Phi Delt's could run into the class of the league. On the mound will be the big man of the club, Tony Calorusso, along with his battery mate Vic Scotese. The infield will be led by Jack Dalton at 2b, Big Ken Keating at the initial sack, Frank Maccini at short and Bruce Walgren at third. Infielders O'Donnell and Ray Flannery will also see action. In the outfield are Nick Victor Dan Milloy and Buz Nessbit. Tom Unsworth, Don Cutler, and Bill Hartke will also see action this season.

Vermont 1954 Ski Team Finishes Successful Year

The University of Vermont Ski Team closed out a successful season at Lyndonville, placing fifth in the Senior Intercollegiate Championship meet, which was co-sponsored by the UVM, Ski Team and the Lyndon Outing Club. The team standing of fifth place, at Lyndonville was contributed to the lack of snow in the Burlington area, for two weeks prior to the meet, as the skiers did not have a chance to keep in condition. The season's over-all record was two second places, a third, and two fifths in their Carnival and Championship meets, against the top colleges and Universities in the East and of Canada.

UVM's crack Cross-Country entry turned in the best results during the season as they placed first, in the Middlebury, Norwich and St. Lawrence Carnivals, and second in the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association Cross Country Relay Championship at Lebanon, New Hampshire. The Cross Country team was paced by Clint Thompson and Captain Larry Damon, Al Duval and Donald Grady. The UVM'ers ranked as one of the top teams in the East in this division.

Frank Evans, a sophomore, was the ski team's best Alpine scorer (downhill and Slalom events), and was consistantly high in these events. Bill Battles (one of the Co-captains elected for the 54-55 season), was one of the most improved competitive skiers on the team, teaming with Frank Evans in the Alpine events, with Larry Damon and Jerry Baril.

UVM jumpers were Fred Hackett Jerry Baril, Larry Damon, Bill Battles, and Clint Thompson, the last four named, combining their efforts in the Nordic events (cross country and jumping.)

These skiers, Capt. Larry Damon, Jerry [illegible], and Bill Battles, were four-event men, and placed well throughout most of the season.

With the Intercollegiate Ski Season over, the downhill and slalom men will compete in championship races which are to be held in the latter part of April

Frosh Athlete Outscores Nine;

by Ed Walker

Ronnie Hill, a rugged 200 pound, 6 foot freshman, won the 1954 Hexathlon Championship held on March 23 and 25 in the gym. Murray Guy and George Hard finished second and third, respectively. The Hexathlon consists of the 110 yd. dash, rope climb, one mile run, shot put, high jump, and broad jump. Each man competing in the Hexathlon must participate in all six events Under the scoring system, 1000 points are awarded to the contestant meeting the required time in that particular event If he should do better, he will receive less points.

This year's Hexathlon attracted 9 contestants of which 4 were juniors, 2 seniors, 2 sophs, and 1 frosh. In the first event, the 110 yd. dash Dave Stephens' 13.7 beat Murray Guy's 13.9. Dave also won the rope climb in 7.7, but finished fourth to Jerry Joyner's 5:10.2 mile. After three events it was Stephens, Hill, Hard and Guy in that order. On the second day, March 25, Ron Hill just about clinched the championship by throwing the shot 39' 1½". Stephens' best toss was only 26'. The high jump and broad jump were both won by Murray Guy, but the shot put had been the deciding factor.

By winning this championship, Ron will receive The James E. Donahue Trophy which is given in memory of Professor James E. Donahue who devoted much of his time and energy to both academic teaching and to Athletics at UVM. Ronnie graduated from Burlington High where he was on the football, ski, and track teams. He consistently made scholastic honors at BHS.

and after that, a job in industry.

ED RYNN

A catcher has got to be a take charge guy, and the captain of the Catamount nine Ed Rynn, otherwise known as "Tex", is just that.

Ed, a stocky 5' 8" 175 pounder of Irish descent, hails from Woonsocket, R. I. . At high school he picked up letters in hockey and baseball, made All-State and All-New England hockey, All Class "A" baseball and in 1949 captained the Providence, R. I. Legion Nine

Catches No Hitter

For two years Ed caught for the now defunct Burlington Cardinals of the Northern League It was with the Cardinals that he caught his only no-hitter and it was thrown by none other than one Johnny Antonelli, now of Milwaukee fame.

His biggest moment sportswise, however, occurred at West Point, N.Y. on the spring swing of two years ago when he helped a grand slammer to beat Army.

Pro Ball

Ed's a senior and a member of Kappa Sig. He is in the college of Technology and majoring in accounting. Future plans? "Pro ball as long as I can go, with the accounting to fall back on."

Varied Program Is In Store For Arts Festival Visitors

Combined With Founder's Day

Members and friends of the University of Vermont will find a varied bill of fare provided for them at the Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts to be held on campus April 30-May 2, in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the first graduation.

Festivities will begin Friday morning, April 30, with the annual Founders' Day convocation in the Ira Allen Chapel. Traditionally the first event of the spring at which seniors wear their caps and gowns, the convocation features an address by a visiting speaker.

This year, the University has invited Charles Sullivan Adams of Dallas, Tex., to speak. Mr. Adams is the great-grandson of Charles Adams, one of the four students in the first graduating class of 1804.

Friday Dance

The Festival program will continue with a dance program Friday afternoon, saluting New England's rich tradition of country dances. A group of Vermonters from the Montpelier-Barre area will present a program of country and contra dancing. The Vermont Board of Recreation is cooperating with the University in arranging this program.

On Saturday, the spotlight will fall on the various exhibitions of hand and industrial crafts which will be open through the threeday festival. Special demonstrations will be given on Saturday in the Fleming Museum on campus.

Besides demonstrations on weaving, pottery-making, jewelry making and early printing, there will be an exhibition of industrial crafts showing development of the arts of industry in New England, with emphasis on Yankee ingenuity.

Opera And Exhibits

On Saturday evening, visitors to the Festival will be invited to attend the annual spring opera to be presented by the University Music Department assisted by the University Players. The group, under the direction of Prof. Howard G. Bennett, will present "Sunday Excursion" by Arnold Sundgaard and Alec Wilder, to be followed by Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti."

On Sunday, Festival exhibits will open at 1 p.m. and there will be a special service in the Ira Allen Chapel honoring the University's first president the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders. The Rev. Raymond A. Hall, University Chaplain will preside and two members of the Class of '54, the 150th class at Vermont, will take the parts in a dialogue designed to show the vision of the man who almost singlehanded established a college in the near wilderness of the then frontier town of Burlington.

Members of the University Choir under Dr. Bennett will provide music, including excluding examples of the "fuguing tunes" which were a distinctive American musical development of the Revolutionary period.

Trustees Name New Coordinator; Appointment Effective Sept. 1st

Donald Hardy Takes Post

Donald P. Hardy

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College have announced the appointment of a new Coordinator of Student Affairs effective Sept. 1.

Donald P. Hardy, a graduate assistant at Springfield College, has been named to the UVM post of Coordinator.

Hardy, who holds his B.A. degree from Springfield and who has been active in student personnel activities at Springfield College and served as a counselor in several summer camps, will be responsible for the non-athletic, extra-curricular activities of organized student groups at the University.

In general, he will assist student leaders with their problems and encourage interest in student-self-development through participation in extra-curricular activities and in campus social life.

He is a member of the Staff of the Dean of Administration, and will administer policies and regulations related to student activities.

A veteran of World War II, he has served as activities director for the Child Study Home in Baltimore, Md., as recreation leader of the Children's Study Home of Springfield, Mass., and as a graduate assistant in the Guidance Department of Springfield College.

He is a native of Aberdeen, Md., and married.

As a student at Springfield College he served as treasurer of the Student Council, as a member of the Freshman Orientation Program, as a class officer and as a member of freshman camp staff. He also participated in interclass soccer, basketball and softball.

Student Court Adopts Less Formal Legal Procedures

Operating procedures of UVM's Student Court have been altered.

The Court no longer functions in the formal and legal fashion which marked its activity in the past.

The judge's bench, and the magistrates' black robes have been abandoned. The technique of cross-examination has been abandoned.

In place of the formal judicial bench, a round-table type of discussion, between defendent and magistrates, has been substituted. Moreover, no longer are there defending and prosecuting attorneys.

In the past the Court, the body which on occasion interpreted Student Association rulings, declaring them legal or illegal, but which more often was involved in judging the guilt or innocence of students brought before it by faculty members for alleged cheating, operated along regular judicial lines. Cross-examination was a regular device, professors and students alike being questioned. Witnesses, character and otherwise, took the stand.

According to Paul Sherlock, Chief Justice of the Court, "a more flexible device was desired for hearing cases. We believe the new setup, a panel arrangement, allows for greater flow between the defendent and the jury of Judges."

Impetus for the alteration in the body's procedures came as a result of a feeling among the judges that an improved structure should be instituted.

Sherlock said the idea of a new type of Court had been talked of the past few years but a reluctance to change the status quo prevented action until now.

Annual IFC Sing To Be Held Sat. At Memorial

The Interfraternity Council of the University of Vermont will present the annual IFC Sing this Saturday at seven PM at Memorial Auditorium.

This year all fraternities, excepting ATO and A E Pi, new fraternity, and all sororities will take part. According to Dick Ireland, chairman of the Sing, "This year the Sing has the greatest number of participating fraternities and sororities; showing the growing amount of spirit on UVM campus. This Sing is one of our biggest events for it enables so many students to take an active part. The prospects for the 1954 sing are most promising."

New Cups

This year a cup will be awarded to the third place winners in the fraternity and sorority divisions. In previous years, cups were awarded only to the first and second place winners in both divisions.

The participating fraternities and sororities in the order of their singing are: Delta Psi, Sigma Gamma, Theta Chi, Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Acacia, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Nu, Pi Beta Phi, Sigma Phi, Alpha Chi Omega, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Delta Pi, Phi Sigma Delta, Gamma Phi Beta, and Lambda Iota.

No One Threat To Freedom

The Third Annual Vermont Conference, which began last Thursday night and ran until Saturday morning, brought forth a varied response to the Conference's theme: What Is The Greatest Threat To American Liberty?

The nine man panel, Thurmond Arnold, Robert Brown, Harry Cain, Jerome Davis, Henry Hazlitt, A.J. Muste, James O'Neil, Max Salvadori, James P. Warburg, told Ira Allen Chapel audiences Thursday night, Friday morning and afternoon, and Saturday morning that the America's liberty was threatend most by:

-congressional investigation and the use of F.B.I. reports which are not revealed to defendents. (Arnold)
- "McCarthyism" (Brown)
-congressional investigating committees. (Cain)
-moral decadence. (Davis)
-totalitarian ideology in our thinking and a trend toward central control, directly correlated with economics. (Hazlitt)
-Communism and War. (Muste)
-encroachment, by the United States Supreme Court, of civil liberties, through Court decisions during the last six years. (O'Neil)
-Soviet Union and Communism. (Salvadori)
- "Scape-goatism," a tendency to blame all our troubles on Russia. (Warburg)

Moderator Lawrence Pellitier, in opening the Conference Thursday night, said "he hoped the proceedings would not end up a three day debate on McCarthyism."

Heeding his plea, all the speakers save Rev. Robert Brown, avoided attacking the Wisconsin senator, except for incidental references.

"Big-Lie"

Brown told the Chapel audience he believed "McCarthyism": fostered an atmosphere in which the right to dissent was greatly lessend, perfected the technique of the "big lie," weakend the moral fibre of the nation, and severely injured the prestige of the United States in foreign countries.

Brown was joined in his attack on McCarthy by Thurmond Arnold, former U.S. assistant attorney-general from 1938-43, who claimed the current wave of investigations, while spear-headed by Senator McCarthy, was touched off by former President Harry Truman's loyalty program. "This" said Arnold "was done in order to placate those who thought the government was riddled with subversives."

The former attorney-general reviewed the history of the introduction of F.B.I. evidence in files which were not open for examination by the individual against whom the material was derogatory.

Arnold went on to attack the present day investigating committees saying that "as long as a man's reputation can be ruined by secret evidence you won't have freedom of speech and that situation exists today."

Also Attacks

Also attacking congressional investigating groups was Harry Cain, former Senator from Washington and presently a member of the five man Subversives Activities Control Board. Mr. Cain told the Chapel audience that "we must use methods in bold support of the Constitution." When questioned on the tactics of Senator McCarthy Cain would not attack him, saying that "like most people Joe has done some bad things, but a lot of good things also."

James O'Neil, who has devoted the last 12 years to the question of civil liberties, claimed the Supreme Court, in the past six years, has encroached drastically on civil liberties of the nation by its interpretation of the first and 14th amendments of the Constitution.

Claiming a passionate love of civil rights, O'Neil said the sole excuse for war was "the defense and extension of civil liberties."

Students Assist State; Run Survey Of Vermont Aged

A large group of students at the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College will volunteer their services to the state for a three-day period beginning Apr. 29 as they join other college students in the state in conducting a survey of Vermonters over 65-years-of-age.

The UVM group, captained by students in the Problems of Citizenship course, will be knocking on Burlington doors Thursday through Saturday, next week, seeking information for the Legislative Commission on Chronically Ill and Aged established by the last Legislature. Prof. Rolf N.B. Haugen of UVM is director of the Burlington Survey.

St. Michael's College and Trinity College students have already conducted a survey of persons over 65 in Winooski.

Haugen reported that Dennis Lambert of Burlington, UVM

Board Of Trustees Announce New Faculty Appointments

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, meeting on campus last Saturday, announced the appointment of several new faculty members.

Appointed in the College of Arts and Sciences effective September, 1954, are three instructers in English and an instructor in zoology.

New members of the English Department are Jack Ryan Brownfield, who is currently a teaching assistant at Lehigh University; Robert Willard Cochran, teaching fellow at the University of Michigan; and Pierre Guiet, instructor in English at Simmons College. Guiet has also served as an instructor in English at the University of New Hampshire.

Named instructor in zoology is Rodger David Mitchell, who is presently a fellow at the University of Michigan.

Appointed in the College of Agriculture effective September, 1954 are Miss Martha Marie Caldwell, as associate professor of home economics, and Miss Olga Pecheniuk as instructor in home economics. Miss Caldwell, a graduate of Kansas State College, has been a teacher in home economics since 1939 and has held a number of high school and college posts. Miss Pecheniuk is a graduate of Morehead State University and has held posts at Iowa State College and at Morehead State College.

Appointed assistant professor in the College of Education and Nursing effective September, 1954, is Leo W. O'Neill, Jr., who is now an instructor in education at the University of Colorado. He is a graduate of The University of Chicago with the M.A. from the University of Kansas City, and formerly served as teacher and principal in the Missouri public school system.

Appointed instructor in commerce and economics in the College of Technology effective September, is Eric Colville Sievwright, a graduate of London University and McGill University, he has held teaching posts at McGill and is presently employed as economist by the Shell Oil Company of Canada and has done various research for Canadian industrial concerns.

Appointments in the College of Medicine include that of Dr. Joseph Clayton Foley as instructor in radiology effective July 1. Dr. Foley is a graduate of the UVM College of Medicine, Class of '49, and this year served as resident in radiology. He will instruct medical students at the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital.

Also appointed in the College of Medicine is Miss Sheila Briscoe as instructor in pharmacology effective Sept. 15, 1954. Miss Briscoe is a graduate of Cambridge University and holds her Ph.D. from Oxford University.

All-University Socials Depend On JSAB Report

By Herzl Spiro

President Borgmann said recently that although the administration is willing to do its part in putting on All-University socials, it can not be expected to initiate these functions. According to the President the continuation of these events is contingent on two things: (1) The Joint Social Activities Board must give a favorable report on those dances which have already been held, and (2) Sponsoring groups must be found.

This year three socials were arranged. The "Campus Kick-Off" drew well over one thousand students; while the "Spook-Off" and "Cat's Meow" were far less successful in terms of numbers attending. Dean Kroepsch well summed up the negative attitude with the question, "Why weren't more independents there?"

A quick sampling of student opinion would seem to indicate that it takes time to make an All-University program work and that one year's figures do not present a true picture. Other students pointed out that, if more people didn't come it was their mistake, because those who attended had a wonderful time. Scott Mahoney, Coordinator of Student Affairs, and a member of the J.S.A.B. commented, "these 'pioneering' efforts should be evaluated in terms of how much those attending enjoyed themselves, not in terms of how many came." The J.S.A.B. will weigh these opinions and make their recommendations this month.

The second obstacle which must be overcome to find sponsoring groups. The university provides the facilities and pays the janitorial fees; the rest must be done by responsible student organizations. The Class of '57 has already filed their petition to sponsor the first affair next year. Action on it has not been taken yet. Other groups who would like to do the work and receive the profits should petition the J.S.A.B.

If these two conditions are fulfilled, All-University socials which, according to President Borgmann "are intended to foster school spirit and draw students more closely together", will be held next year.

Senate To Discuss Faculty Loyalty Proposal Today

By Max G. Ansbacher

The University Senate is meeting today to hear the recommendation of a special committee on Academic Regulations for Freshmen and to consider motions on faculty loyalty. The Senate will also hear committee reports on Public Relations and Publications, and discuss a resolutions on the death of Miss Mary B. Sullivan.

In accordance with the official University policy the CYNIC was not allowed any information concerning the resolutions which are being discussed. One of the motions regarding faculty loyalty is being presented by Professor James Chaplin of the Psychology department.

The other motion which is being discussed on this subject was presented at the last meeting. It reads in part, "Disloyalty to the Constitution of the United States shall be regarded as the overt illegal act against the government; not criticism of it, no matter how unpopular the criticism. In order to determine whether a member of the staff is submissive in his academic work to the discipline of the Communist party or any other organization inimical to free inquiry, the Administrative Council may request the President of the University to initiate the formation of committee to investigate.

Under the terms of the resolution this committee will investigate people who (1) are suspected of falsehood in denying Communist affiliation, (2) take any illegal or disloyal action against the government, and (3) refused to testify before properly constituted governmental bodies on any grounds except self-incrimination.

SA To Finance Orientation Program Without School Aid

At last Thursday's Student Association meeting, attended by President Carl W. Borgmann, the question of SA's receiving aid from the University to help finance the September Freshman Orientation Program was considered.

President Borgmann pointed out that the allotment of University financial aid in this field would mean a closer integration of Administration and Student Association, and would possibly relegate SA to the position of a "yes man," depriving it of the independence it now possesses in administering the freshman orientation program. He suggested, therefore, that Student Association continue to handle the program in the same fashion as has been the custom, financing it independently.

The Council followed his advice, voting to finance the venture completely through SA funds.

Budget Issue

Budgets for the coming year have not yet been discussed in the council meetings, but are expected to be the big issue starting with tonight's meeting. According to George Lucchina, it is expected that budgets for the coming year will be lower than last year. Approximately $50,000, including budgets from last spring and supplementary budgets during this school year was handled by the financial committee.

The Student Association has voted to petition the Kake-Walk Disposition Committee for a sum of money to inaugurate a Student Union Fund. At tonight's meeting, it is expected that George Lucchina will put before the council a recommendation for a means of administering the fund once it has started.

N S A Conference

The annual National Student Association Conference will convene at the University of Iowa this year. The president of Student Association, the president of WSGA, the editor of the CYNIC, and a student-at-large to be appointed at the next meeting will attend the conference.

'Then And Now' Exhibit Featured

Tools, Processes Craft Subject

BURLINGTON, Vt. -The artistry that is involved in the finest industrial craftsmanship will be demonstrated in the "Tools and Processes -- Then and Now" exhibition which will be a feature of the University of Vermont's Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts, April 30-May 2 at UVM. Since the festival celebrates the 150th anniversary of UVM's first graduation, and honors the progressive spirit of northern New England both when the college was founded and today, exhibitions and demonstrations will feature the finest results of New England inventiveness throughout the history of this region.

The exhibition, which will be held in the gymnasium "Cage", will be open throughout the Festival, with special demonstrations planned for Saturday, May 1.

Under the chairmanship of Prof. E.C. Schneider, a special committee composed mainly of members of the College of Agriculture, with assistance from other departments, has received the cooperation of many individuals, business firms, and of the Shelburne, Charlotte, and Fleming Museums in preparing for the events.

To emphasize the "Then and Now" theme, students acting as ushers and guides will wear sports clothing of grandmother's day and--by way of decided contrast--of today.

Among the "live exhibits" which will be featured Saturday will be actual cabinet making by a Vermonter whose interests range from the most concrete to the most abstract subjects--the Rev. E.G. French of Johnson. There will be printing performed on an 1895 Hoe "Washington" hand press. A Blacksmith will be at work, and an old butter churn powered by a sheep operating a treadmill will be operating. A Greater Vermont Association tank of trout is promised by the committee to demonstrate something startling about the growth of the recreation industry in the state.

Exhibitions will emphasize old New England and new New England in many ways. There will be a colonial kitchen, complete with fireplace and crane; and by way of contrast 1954 kitchen equipment provided by Vermont Hardware and Sears and Roebuck. The Fleming and Shelburne museums are cooperating in providing old tools, such as a threading gadget for wooden pipe which Fleming cherishes.

The first electrical meter ever used in Vermont will be on display, as will medical and dental instruments used in pioneer days. Old maple sugaring equipment, old and new chemical laboratory equipment, old sewing machines, early washing and milking machines, even old cars will be represented. A "hetchel" for stripping flax will appear near modern farm machinery provided by Sargent-Roundy Corporation.

The Talc companies, the Edlund Can Opener Company, the Daniels Manufacturing Company in Hardwick, with its wood-burning furnaces, the Howe Scale Company will all be represented.

Schlesinger Jr. Speaks Tues.

The final program of the UVM Program Series will be presented April 27 when Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., speaks on "The Future of American Foreign Policy." Schlesinger will appear in the Ira Allen Chapel, 8:15 P.M.

Professor Schlesinger is a professor of History at Harvard University and is a prolific writer, contributing material to the "The Nation," "New Rupublic" and "The Progressive", among others. Schlesinger has written "the Age of Jackson" an historical study for which he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

Open Letter To Sophomores

Due to the various student activities taking place this month, we felt that a class letter would be more beneficial at this time, than a class meeting. This report is to inform you of the past activities, the financial status and the future plans of your class.

Over the past year the only activity undertaken was the class dance, "Stagnet". The result of which was a deficit of $ 40.00.

Our financial standing up to now is as follows:

	Bills Paid	Income	Balance
Income Freshman year		$100.00	$ 100.00
Income Sophomore year		200.00	300.00
Bills paid out- Oct. 27th	$ 7.56		292.44
Band for dance	120.00		172.44
Bills paid out for dance	74.73		97.71
Income from dance		160.93	278.64
		Present amount	$278.64

At our last meeting we voted to bring to this campus a jazz concert in May, but because of many conflicting dates this spring it has been decided to hold it after the Middlebury football game next fall. Steps are being taken to secure the backing of Student Association and the Administration for this function. The agenda for next year will also include the annual Junior Week.

At the beginning of the school year 1954 - 1955, we shall receive from Student Association $300.00. Even with this increased amount, excessive assessments will be necessary in our senior year if you fail to support your class activities.

With these thoughts in mind we know that you will support your class by attending future meetings and giving aid when requested.

Arts And Science Pre - Enrollment Date Announced

Preliminary Arts and Science enrollment for the next academic year will be held from May 3 to 8 inclusive. During this period all students who expect to attend during the next year must file preliminary enrollment cards showing the courses they plan to take.

This preliminary enrollment is designed to give each student an opportunity to consider his selection of courses carefully, in consultation with his advisor or the Chairman of the Department in which he plans to concentrate, and to make sure that all distribution and concentration requirements are met.

1. Students will obtain enrollment cards at the Dean's Office.

2. Students will then consult faculty members as follows, and have their selection of courses approved:

A. Pre-medical students will consult their pre-medical advisors;

B. Freshmen in the Liberal Arts curriculum will consult their assigned advisors;

C. Sophomores and juniors in the Liberal Arts curriculum will each consult the Chairman of the Department in which he plans to concentrate.

Note: Those who plan to concentrate in Economics must enroll between 9 and 12 a.m. or 1 and 5 p.m. in Room 212 North College according to the following schedule: Students whose last names begin with letters from A - G on May 4, H - O on May 5, and P - Z on May 6.

3. Cards when filled out and signed by the appropriate advisor are to be returned by the student to the Dean's Office.

Those who have special difficulties of any sort may consult the Dean. Appointments should be made in advance.

Students who do not fill out and file preliminary enrollment cards by May 8 may be refused permission to return for the next academic year.

Grange Meeting Tomorrow Night

UVM's Grangers, the Catamount Grange, is holding an open meeting tomorrow night at the Hills Hall Auditorium. Square dancing, a skit, and games are planned for the evening's recreational part of the meeting. Refreshments will be served. The meeting starts at 7:15 PM.

orchids

Orchids to Fred Hackett, Professor Harold Schultz, the International Relations Club, and everyone else connected with last week's Vermont Conference. An excellent group of speakers was assembled after months of planning and hard work. It all went to show that it isn't necessary to have "big names" to have a top-notch panel. Each speaker was, in his own right, an expert.

For us, the Conference was both enlightening and thrilling. We didn't agree with every speaker on every point, but an insight into the complex answer to "What is the Most Dangerous Threat to American Liberty?" was afforded. Certainly, no one single threat could be pinpointed as "the most dangerous," however we came away feeling that fear plays a prominent part in any threat. If we lick the fear, we are well on the way to licking the threat, whether it be McCarthy (ism), moral decadence, Communism and Russian aggression, or our own defensive militarism. Winston Churchill once said," The only thing we have to fear is fear, itself." We are rather inclined to agree.

Once again, congratulations on a fine job to the entire student and faculty sub-committee of Student Association which brought the Vermont Conference to campus this year.

cogent

President Borgmann made a cogent observation last week concerning the Senate recommendation that fraternities and sororities be given seven years to eliminate any discriminatory clauses which may be included in their charters.

The President explained that the prime purpose is to give to the fraternities on this campus "the freedom to pledge whomever they desire, without the limitations which are imposed on some UVM chapters by their national charters."

In other words, fraternity "X". which has a "white-aryan" clause, is not, at present, able to pledge a Negro, Jew, or Asian even if they sincerely want to do so. If the clause were eliminated, the way would be clear to pledge those persons.

Moreover, neither President Borgmann nor we believe that the abolition of restrictive clauses will immediately eliminate personal individual prejudices. However, given an atmosphere in which it is impossible to do anything but discriminate, i.e.--one in which restrictive clauses exist, no progress can be expected on the personal level. But bring a prejudicial person into an atmosphere in which a certain amount of freedom of choice is available and maybe some of those encrusted prejudices will wear off.

This is certainly no short or immediate process. But given a good number of years in an environment which does not openly condone discrimination, it may disappear. It does not make any difference to us how long it takes to bring about the change, as long as we do something to bring it about, instead of sitting back and doing absolutely nothing about the situation.

We realize the problems involved and the practical implications, but, if the Senate's recommendation is put into effect, it will hasten the transition; at least the University will no longer be in a position which condones discrimination.

We have fallen back once too often on the excuse that a fraternity is not a democratic organization and, as such, does not have to follow democratic principles. Let's wake up to the fact that we live in a democratic society in these United States and that fraternities with restrictive clauses are blatantly out of step with the ideals which we profess to possess both as Americans and as individuals.

save face

We only regret one thing --we are sorry that the recommendation originated on the faculty level, instead of coming from the students. If Student Association, WSGA, IFC, and Pan Hellenic had any feelings of moral responsibility at all, it would have come from that source.

We challenge those organizations to catch up with the standards of the times for a change, instead of bickering over petty disagreements, and fully endorse the Senate's recommendation---immediately, while there's still time to "save face."

letters to the editor

Wrong Room?

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Some time ago my wife and I chaperoned a fraternity party. What fraternity? It doesn't matter. The Social Chairman was a nice boy who did his best, and I'd rather not embarrass him.

Now, strange as it may seem, this was the first fraternity party (or any student party, for that matter) I ever attended in this country. I was naturally curious to see how American girls and boys entertain themselves.

Well, I did see. And I don't want to see it again. There will be one less couple available for chaperoning on the campus.

No, it wasn't the drinking. Of course we all know there isn't supposed to be any drinking at fraternity parties. That's the rule, or should I say theory. I am a scientist, and reasonable discrepancies between theory and practice are tolerable even in science. So I wouldn't be too much alarmed. I believe in temperance rather than in abstinence and the story of Cana of Galilee proves that I have support in quite high quarters. Besides I cannot agree with the theory which claims that a boy of 18 is mature enough to be drafted into the army and get killed but isn't mature enough to have a drink. Enforcing such a theory to the letter, by the way, just pushes many a boy into showing off that he is smart enough to break it.

But what I cannot take is exhibitionism. The few chairs in the main room where the dancing took place were constantly occupied by couples engaged in a kissing Marathon. And the way they did it definitely excluded 'love thy neighbor' as a motive.

Now, I don't intend to embark on moralization. But I must say that it is simply poor taste. It reminded me of another place I once saw such manners -- it was a third rate tavern in Antwerp. The company was that of sailors and their girl-friends, the latter of a variety usually not included in the Social Register. I thought it was rather natural for those people to behave that way. Am I expected to accept such manners as natural for American girls and boys? Still, at this fraternity party, nobody seemed to be disturbed or even surprised.

Frenchmen have a witty saying about an ideal wife. She is supposed to be a cook in the kitchen, a lady in the parlor, and a courtesan in the boudoir. Some of our UVM coeds got the rooms all mixed up. I am afraid they'll also be ladies in the kitchen and kitchen-maids in... well, you know what I mean. As for their future husbands, serves them right.

Dr. Adam S. Skapski

On Limb

To the Editors of the CYNIC:

What has happened to the editorial staff members of "The Vermont Cynic," which would cause them to go so far out on the limb with their campaign against the use of black-face in Kake Walk?

Kake Walk without black-face would be like Kake Walk without the "kakes." Why don't you try to kill "Cotton Babes" while you are about it.

For more years than any of us young ones can remember Kake Walk has been a grand festival in the middle of a cold winter, when the old time negro dancers put on their glad-rags and strut to their heart's delight. Possibly this is "kids stuff" to you.

If I am not mistaken the ushers went into black-face and costume back in 1939 when the festivities were moved from the gym on the Hill to the city auditorium. I was walking for Sigma Phi (second place) that year, and my wife, Annice Swertfeger, '39, was one of the many black-faced co-eds.

My best advice to you, Mr. Editor, is that if you want to ride herd on some project, pick something that means a great deal less to loyal UVMers than Kake Walk.

Evaluation

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The Joint Social Activities Board was established at UVM not only to facilitate the scheduling and holding of student social activities, but also to secure adherence to high standards of conduct at social events. Now that the Joint Social Activities Board is finishing out its third year of existence it may be time to stop and evaluate this agency.

The first point to be noted is that this is a joint committee composed of an equal number of students and faculty representatives. In this way it was hoped that students would have a measure of control over their own lives while on the University campus. This certainly is consistent with democratic theory which states that men should direct their own lives to the extent that their ability and level of maturity permit. The most likely alternative to the Joint Social Activities Board would be a situation where all matters pertaining to scheduled social activities would be decided by the University administration or a member thereof.

In deciding a matter involving a student group, the Joint Social Activities Board always asks the student group in question to present their version of the matter, and and any relevant data, to the Board. This usually comes to the Board in the form of a letter. In addition, a member of the Joint Social Activities Board usually consults with individual members of the student group (such as the social chairman) to clarify further the facts in the matter. In cases, where it seems necessary, the student group in question is asked to meet with the J&AB and discuss

Siena College

It all started as a homework assignment in a salesmanship course. When sophomore Paul Alexander handed in an assignment on "I would like to take my vacation in a 1954 Dodge because...", little did he realize that he was in for a big surprise. Recently he was notified by William C. Newberg, Dodge president, that he was the 26th of 40 grand prize winners. As a winner, Paul will receive a two-week vacation for two, anywhere in the continental U.S., a 1954 Dodge at his disposal, including gas and oil, for the vacation period, and all his transportation, meals and hotel expenses paid for by Dodge. In addition to all this, Alexander will receive double his pay for the two-week period and $500. As to who will accompany him on his vacation. Paul isn't sure, but it will more than likely be some member of his family. It was the first time that he had entered any contest and won with the following entry: "I would like to take my vacation in a 1954 Dodge because comfort, safety and efficiency are distributed in a sensible manner resolving in quality and quantity into their proper proportions, this giving everyone a big car."

Allegheny CAMPUS

Restrictive clause in fraternities hit the news again last week when Dartmouth College took a vote among the student body to determine undergraduate opinions on the motion, Resolved: "That by 1960 all fraternities must eliminate from their charters all discriminatory clauses based on 'race, religion, or national origin' or get off the campus."

Connecticut Campus

In a letter to the editor, an unnamed faculty member calls for increased parking facilities for faculty members. In some cases (pharmacy to agriculture, for instance) it is physically impossible to walk the required distance in the 10-minutes between class periods. While it is possible for students to be a few minutes late to class, it is bad pedagogical practice for teachers to be late. "And apart from impossibilities, it seems unkind to force aging professors with sinuitis and bad feet to walk two miles a day in Storrs' famous winter weather. It is, oddly enough, in a university, a matter of the "law" and the parking regulations are administered with a toughness which the police of New York rarely approach."

Ford Executive Next Marketing Series Speaker

Thomas J. O'Neil, director of the Office of Product Sales and Dealer Organization Planning of the Ford Motor Company, will speak to the American Marketing Speaks series this Tuesday in room 239 Waterman at 7:30. His topic will be "For Sale: 5½ million Automobiles," According to the Ford Company Mr. Thomas O'Neil is widely known throughout the industry, and is one of the company's outstanding spokesmen.

Professor Edwin C. Greif of the department of commerce and economics said in announcing the speaker, "Here is a remarkable opportunity to hear at first hand from a man in a high echelon about the challenge which the auto industry faces for 1954 and 1955."

In his present position with the Sales & Advertising Staff of the Ford Company Mr. O'Neil develops company sales policies, plans, forecasts, objectives, and evaluates sales results.

Mr. O'Neil joined the Ford Co., in 1915 with the Accounting department after graduating from Christian Brothers College. He entered the Army during the first World War for 28 months, and was then appointed branch manager at Memphis in 1930. Following this he became branch manager in many other plants.

For the first part of the Second World War Mr. O'Neil was material controller for the Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Co., at Mobile, He returned to Ford in 1943 as district sales manager in Memphis. In 1951 he was appointed new and used car sales manager. Mr. O'Neil was a consultant for the motor vehicle division of the National Production Authority for six months in 1952. He is also an active member of the Detroit Sales Executive Club.

'Windfall' Falls By Wayside; 'Centaur' Replaces

With the added impetus of Prof. Dorothy Van Ghent's Advanced Writing class, the Windfall staff has agreed to scuttle its magazine in favor of Centaur, a new campus literary magazine with a considerably broader outlook.

It was felt by Prof. Van Ghent that Windfall was losing its campus audience in part due to its lack of a definite apparant purpose and its overemphasis on creative work. The Centaur, with Neville Lippman as editor, aims to reach a larger audience with articles on subjects from the arts to zoology. This is expected to create more interest among students in writing articles, and, in effect, a writer's workshop will be established. This will have the two fold effect of creating and keeping students interest in a campus magazine with high literary standards, and inducing more students to write.

Various editorial departments have been set up on the Centaur staff. These include art, political science, literature, social studies, and science departments. This was done because it would give more students a chance to work on the staff and because the lack of top level organization in Windfall was one of the reasons for Windfall's lack of success.

The Centaur will be published in place of the spring issue of Windfall during the third week of May. Editor Lippman has as a nucleus to work with, Tom Fagen, Dave Kendall, Pat Lovell, Marsha Pearl and Judy Sherry. Prof. Van Ghent will act as faculty advisor.

Plans are being made to include in next semester's issues photographs, plates and wood cuts. However, this depends on an increase of funds from Students Association. It cannot be done on the current Windfall budget.

Lippman stated emphatically that the Windfall standards will not be lowered merely to include more articles, but that more articles appearing on different subjects is the Centaur goal.

"The name Centaur was chosen because it is a more dynamic sounding than the name, Windfall," Lippman said. "In Greek mythology, the Centaur was half man and half beast. This is symbolic of the highest physical and intellectual pursuits in man, and, therefore, adds additional meaning to the magazine."

Chicken Bar - B - Q Planned Saturday

Southerners in this area will be able to treat themselves to "Northern Style Chicken" this Saturday, when the Green Mountain Poultry Club at UVM will sponsor a Chicken Bar-B-Q in the auditorium of the Hills Building.

The 5-7 PM event is open to students, faculty and the general public, with tickets available through Poultry Club members or through the Poultry Department. Club members plan to serve salad, potato chips, rolls, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cookies with the featured chicken. Reservations must be in today.

QUARTZ CRYSTALS

How a 1¼ hour "gem-cutting" operation became an 8-minute mechanized job

PROBLEM: Preparing quartz crystals for use as electronic frequency controls calls for the highest degree of precision. So much so, in fact, that prior to World War II skilled gem-cutters were employed to do the job.

But during the war, there were not enough gem-cutters to keep up with the demand for crystals in radar, military communications and other applications.

Western Electric tackled the job of building into machines the skill and precision that had previously called for the most highly skilled operators.

SOLUTION: Here is how quartz crystals are made now—by semi-skilled labor in a fraction of the time formerly required:

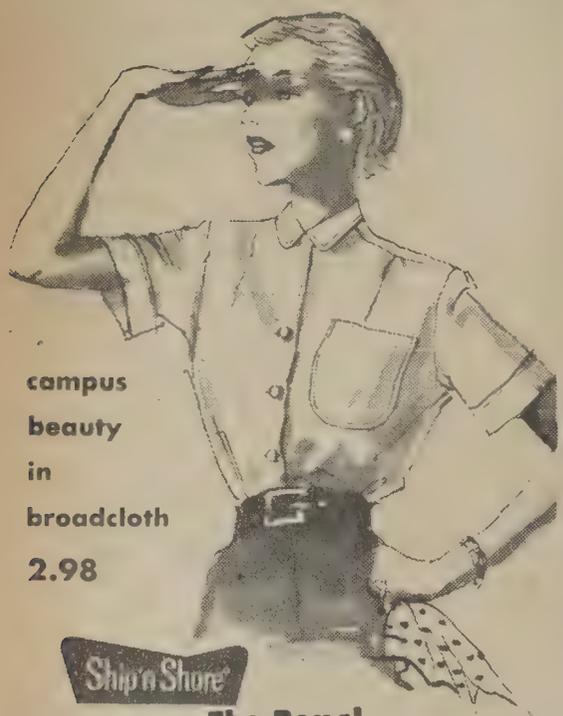
A quartz stone is sliced into wafers on a reciprocating. diamond-edged saw, after determination of optical and electrical axes by means of an oil bath and an X-ray machine. Hairline accuracy is assured by an orienting fixture.

The wafers are cut into rectangles on machines equipped with diamond saws. The human element is practically eliminated by means of adjustable stops and other semi-automatic features.

The quartz rectangles are lapped automatically to a thickness tolerance of plus or minus .0001". A timer prevents overlapping. Finally, edges are ground to specific length and width dimensions on machines with fully automatic microfeed systems.

Most of these machines were either completely or largely designed and developed by Western Electric engineers.

RESULTS: With skill built into the machines—with costly hand operations eliminated—this Western Electric mechanization program raised production of quartz crystals from a few thousand a year to nearly a million a month during the war years. This is just one of the many unusual jobs undertaken and solved by Western Electric engineers.



Quartz stones are cut into wafers on this diamond-edged saw, with orientation to optical axis controlled by fixture. This is just one of several types of machines designed and developed by Western Electric engineers to mechanize quartz cutting.

Outing Club Off For Tuckerman's Ravine Tomorrow

"For the last big event of the season, the UVM Outing Club is taking advantage of the corn snow and warm sun at Tuckerman's Ravine, Mt. Washington, New Hampshire, stated Bruce Norcross an Outing Club Spokesman. "We are looking forward to an enjoyable weekend of hiking, skiing, sun-bathing, and just plain loafing in the White Mountains."

On Friday, April 23, at 3:00 P.M., the hearse will leave from in front of the Waterman for the five hour journey to Dolly Cop, the sleeping quarters, at the foot of Mt. Washington. After an early breakfast Saturday morning, they will start out for a full day of activity on the ravine. They will leave the ravine by 3:00 P.M. Sunday, in order to be back for curfew.

The total change including five meals and transportation will be $3.00. Reservations may be made by following the instructions posted on the bulletin board next to the cloak-room door in lower Waterman. The chaperone on this trip will be Mr. Hoffman of the English department.

Top quality skiing and hiking are found in this center of New Hampshire winter sports. The twelve people who returned last year with an early start on their summer tans reported excellent spring skiing conditions.

Arts Festival Will Feature Exhibits Of Historic Value

Reopen Old Chapel; First Grads Honored

BURLINGTON, VT.-Historic materials will form the theme for two exhibits of the Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts being sponsored Apr. 30-May 2 by the University of Vermont in celebrating the 150th anniversary of the University's first graduation.

The Memorial Lounge in the Waterman Building, which houses memorabilia illustrative of the University's noteworthy contributions over an eventful 150 year history, will be open to all visitors throughout the three-day festival.

In addition, a special exhibit will honor the first class of four young men graduated in 1804 and their one teacher, Vermont's first president, the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders.

A chapel in the oldest building on campus, for which General Lafayette laid the cornerstone, will be reopened to depict the scene of the first graduation with a display of appropriately costumed figures.

The stained-glass memorial windows which honor Vermont's early teachers will be specially lighted for the exhibit which opens the Old Mill chapel for the first time in five years.

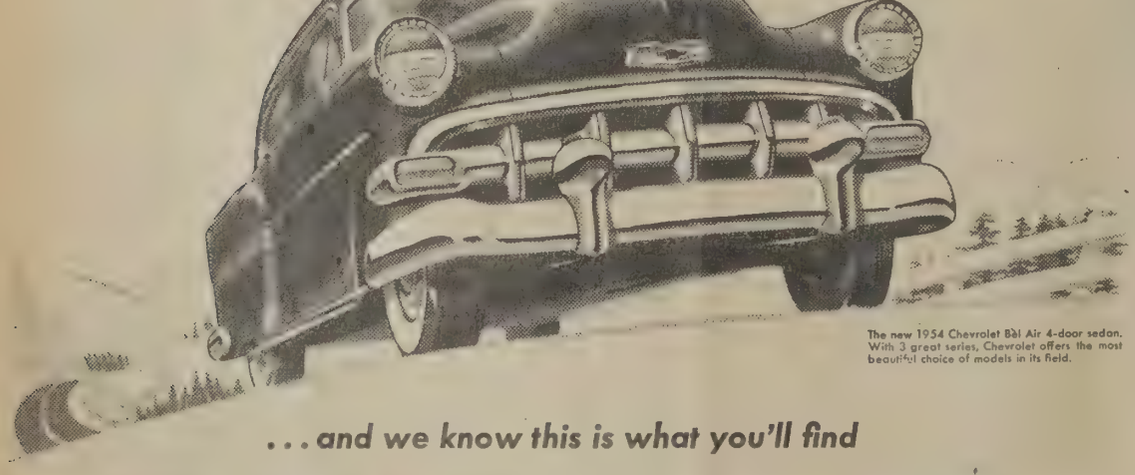
It should be further noted that matters are decided by vote, with every individual, whether student or faculty, having as much power as the next person. Moreover, in the discussion which precedes the voting, the students are seldom hesitant to express their opinions.

Responsibility for decisions reached by the Board rests with all members of the Board and, ultimately, with the students themselves who instruct, or should instruct, their representatives as to the general policies they wish upheld. Unfortunately, student groups have occasionally seen fit to place the responsibility for a particular decision of the Board on the shoulders of a single member of the Board. Frequently, the individual singled out has been the Coordinator of Student Affairs. This is as illogical as to pick out one member of Congress who votes for a particular bill and to say that he is to blame for the passage of the bill. The too, in most cases the responsibility for any inconvenience suffered by student group rests with the group itself for its failure to make proper arrangements for a social event, or to maintain proper standards of conduct at the social event. Failure to make proper arrangements for a social event and to maintain high standards of conduct at social event constitute the major portion of the matters which come to the Board's attention.

Many student groups on campus do make such necessary arrangements as securing the required number of chaperones well in advance of a social activity, and do maintain acceptable standards of conduct at the event itself. Other groups do an acceptable job one year and then fail to maintain the same level of performance in another year. This would suggest that the quality of student social events is dependent not so much on the existence of this set of rules rather than that or even this administration of rules rather than that one, but rather on the general attitude that prevails within a student group, and the level of maturity of particular students.



Attempts to improve the rules and procedures governing the social lives of students or to secure a sounder administration of the rules are laudable, but do not strike at the real root of the problem which lies with the larger society, of which college life is just a part.

When our society no longer gives a young person productive work experience prior to adulthood and when institutionalized education at all levels, along with other institutions like the family fails to provide young people with continuous experience in directing their own lives in ever increasing amounts, in line with their developing maturity, then we should not be surprised that young people flounder sometimes when thrown on their own.

To be solved the problem must be attacked at all levels, and the Joint Social Activities Board, along with other agencies, such as Student Association and Student Court, is an attempt to meet the problem at the college level.

George A. Hale, Chairman
Joint Social Activities Board

Censorship Case

Mr. O'Neil offered as examples of the Court overstepping its bounds, cases involving censorship of movies in New York and Ohio. He claimed the Court has misinterpreted the first amendment which, according to O'Neil, was designed as a "keep off the grass sign. It was not designed to change anything and it didn't give or take state power and it didn't give or take federal power."

Also arguing the point of over-stepping bounds was Henry Hazlitt, although more concerned with economics. Hazlitt, editor of "Newsweek" magazine, felt the greatest threat to American liberty was a totalitarian drive for total control of the economy. Once such control was established, Hazlitt maintained, totalitarian machinations would be extended.

Mr. Hazlitt felt this drive for centralization, which he equated with totalitarianism, had manifested itself in the U.S. at an accelerated rate in recent years. As evidence for this he cited the "increased power of the executive branch of government, at the expense of Congress, the push for more and more controls in American life and the centralization of power in the Federal government."

A Deterioration

Jerome Davis, educator and sociologist, found the "deterioration of moral and spiritual values" the greatest threat to American liberty. He felt the country's high war budget was "a sign of the nation's decadence."

"Military appropriations have sky rocketed and the American people have been sold a gold brick."

As a result "we are trusting in the righteousness of power and not the power of righteousness."

Davis struck out at congressional investigations, claiming "they didn't deal with subversives but with thoughts, ideas and associations."

Davis also claimed we were allowing ourselves to fall prey to the "foreign devil" concept which traced all our troubles to Russia."

This latter point was the one which James P. Warburg, a wartime director of the Office of War Information, held was liberty's greatest threat.

Warburg claimed we failed to realize our wartime allies weren't completly perfect and Russia was the same nation which, only a few years before the war, we had disliked.

Complete Cycle

Mr. Warburg said World War II had completed the cycle, begun 50 years before, which had seen the shift of power from Europe to America begin. This had nothing to do with Russia said the OWI director. Moreover the war's end and the defeat of Germany and Japan created vacuums into which the Russians poured--this was a diplomatic mistake, and one which we should blame ourselves for and not the Russians. Warburg also said the country should "realize the concept of a balance of power was now obsolete, with power being polarized by Russia on one hand and the U.S. on the other."

The other two members of the panel A. J. Muste, a pacifist and Max Salvadori, of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, held views which differed with those expounded by the others.

Salvadori, while feeling Russia and Communism were threats to American liberty pleaded for the U.S. to acquaint the people of Europe with America's heritage.

Note of Alarm

The NATO official sounded a note of alarm which he said was abroad in Europe because of a fear of growing fascism in America.

Mr. Muste, presented a doctrine which called for non-violence.

"The West" said Muste "is at a disadvantage in placing reliance on atomic weapons. The Communists can do this because they believe violence is the ultimate method. We cannot compete with them because we don't believe in that kind of world."

"If we continue to match Russia's military power and think that we must equal their absolute power then we will find it utterly impossible to defend liberty under the Christian concept."

"It is Gandhi, and not the H-bomb which is the answer to Lenin" Mr. Muste concluded.

The Conference was sponsored by the Student Association. Chairman was Fred Hackett, faculty advisor Professor Harold Schultz.

Following the chapel service, Francis Colburn, resident artist at Vermont, will give a gallery talk on the exhibition of paintings by artists of the northern New England area. After the talk, there will be an informal reception in the Marble Court of the Fleming Museum for all festival guests.

The festival will close with a Sunday evening concert in the Ira Allen Chapel where Alan Carter will direct the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra in a special performance. Max Pollikoff, Bennington College violinist, will be featured soloist, and the program will include a selection by Joel Hayden, Middlebury College faculty member.

Among the judges this year will be Paul Zeller, of Dartmouth, who was one of last year's Sing judges.

The rules of the Sing call for at least fifty percent of the house to sing. Accompaniment is by piano only and the entire singing group must sing. There are no solos, duets, quartets, etc. allowed. Special effects and lighting may be used.

Judging will be based on a scale of one-hundred points, with the following breakdown:

Selection . . .	10 points
Quality	10 points
Volume	20 points
Intonation . .	20 points
Diction	20 points
Extra Effects .	10 points

Alpha Epsilon Pi and Alpha Tau Omega will supply the ushers and ticket takers.

Tickets went on sale yesterday and are being sold at the UVM Bookstore, Bailey's Music Rooms, Hayes and Carney, and at the door of the Auditorium the night of the Sing. The price is seventy-five cents.

Last year's winners in the men's division were:

First place - Sigma Nu
Second place - Alpha Tau Omega
Third place - Theta Chi

Student Court

The new measures permit the defendent to have a defense attorney. In such a case, however, the counsel serves merely as a vehicle for presenting the defendent's case. He does not engage in cross-examination as in the past.

In addition to the increased flexibility which was desired, the change in the Court's operations eliminates the cross-examination of faculty members, a process which was not popular with some members of the faculty.

Sherlock said "simplicity and efficiency, it is hoped, have been insured by the changes."

One case has been tried under the new methods. A student was found guilty of cheating on an exam administered by the Classics Department.

Revision of Court mechanics was started in the late fall and was completed shortly before Spring recess. Serving on the board, making the revisions, were the justices of the Court, Professor Bennett Murdock, Faculty Advisor, department chairman, and the Student Advisory Committee.

Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco... light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better... always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.

So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, Be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

Stickmen Open Regular Season At Uconn Tomorrow

TC, PSD, TEP, Counting Upon Vet Softballers

by Hal Moore

This week the Cynic will continue its softball roundup featuring the clubs of Phi Sigma Delta, Tau Epsilon Phi and Theta Chi. Theta Chi . . This years club will be loaded with new men as the Spruce gang tries to improve on last years 3-5 record.

At this stage the infield seems to be the clubs strongest point as veterans line up at all by the third base slot. Don Panoushek will be back of the plate and as in the past can be counted on for a stellar performance. Merrit Spear and "Fuzzy" Forsyth at second and short, should give the infield defensive strength down the center. Conrad Klock will again be at first base. Also making their presence felt are infielders Sam Cutting, Karl Haviland and Hank Schriever. The outfield will be completely new with Paul Miller, Ed Cowie and Jerry Olsen all playing their first season of ball. Bob McKinley and Allen Sprague should help in the outer garden. On the mound only Mike Rosco is back but he should receive some help from Jerry Olsen and "Grandpa" Burke.

Phi Sigma Delta . . This is the club that last year won the title on the field and then lost it to the officials. A lot of last years club have graduated but with strong-armed Marv Cooper toeing the mound again this club should go all the way. Returning along with Cooper is his hard-hitting batterymate Marv Woolf. The infield has The old Fox, Hal Greenfader at the first, cager Earl Steinman at second, Don Greenhouse at short and Les Chusid at third. Barry Stone, Bob Katz and Dave Braver will patrol the outer garden.

Tau Epsilon Phi . . Depth is the story as the Teps begin the season. The club lines up with Paul Vogel at first, Sid Eisenberg at second, Bernie Roth at short and Bob Millman at the hot corner. The outfield features Keith Jampolis, Al Wiseman, and Fred Solomon. Jerry Cutler will hold down the catching chores. Pitching is the big problem with only Mike Wagreich showing well. Ted Zeitlin, Burt Fisher, Paul Kalis and Mark Bernstein give the TEP club a very strong bench.

Huskies Have Veteran Club; Cats Face Lowell

by Ed Willard

The University of Vermont Catamounts open their regular season tomorrow at Storrs, Conn. where they will face an experienced Univ. of Connecticut Huskie baseball team. This game marks the first diamond meeting of the two clubs in several years, continuing Athletic Director Ed. Donnelly's policy of facing as many Yankee Conference foes as possible.

Same Lineup

UVM Coach, Ralph Lapointe, optomistic after a ragged up and down southern trip will probably go with the same starting lineup he has used so far which will see Capt. Ed. Rynn at catcher, Joe Wark at first, Al McLam at second, Vern Currier at third and Jim Montgomery at short. The outfield will be patrolled by Ed Beck, George Gilbert and Keith Spaulding. Ace George Plender or Lew Deitsch will be the starting pitcher. Plender's legs have been giving him some trouble which may keep him out of action this weekend.

Uconn. 5-1 In South

Coach J.O. Christian's Uconns are a relatively unknown club this year other than knowledge that they do have a veteran nucleus. On their southern trip, they compiled a five and one record against two Marine teams, defeating Camp Lejeune twice while winning three and losing one to Cherry Point Marines. The probable Huskie starting lineup will be as follows; catcher, Sabino; first, Jim DiGorno; second, Bot Attanazio; short, Frank Felciano; and third, John Morgan. The outfield will be made up of Val Fiorito, Bill Stevens and George Dropo. Captain and star shortstop Bobby Petrillo may be back in action following a hand injury suffered on the southern trip. Mike Ben, Sid Cantor or Bob O'Connell will probably be on the hill for the Huskies. Fiorito and Dropo (kid brother of Detroit Tiger Walt Dropo) have been the big UConn stick men so far this season.

Cats Grounded

The Catamounts have spent a heavy week of practice though soggy grounds have prevented much needed infield practice.

Coach Lapointe has bee using outfielder Don Maynard against lefthanded pitching in place of Spaulding and will try this out in the weekend's games. The UVM offense looks fine with Montgomery, Beck, Rynn, McLan and Gilbert continuing to rap the ball. The long bal has been in evidence al season as the Catamounts outhit all but one of thei opponants on the southern trip. The pitching, at times spotty and at times brillian also seems to be coming a round. Starters Plender Deitsch, Larrow and Vincen as well as reliefer Hoag have all been tough on base hits their trouble stemming fron poor support in the field an bases on balls.

New Dean Of Women Announced

Spiro Named Best Debator In USA; Kearney Rated Fifth

Team Eliminated By Meet Winner

By Susan Wakefield

Herzl Spiro, a sophomore, was selected the best college debator in the United States at the National Debate Tournament held last week at West Point Military Academy. Recently celebrating his 19th birthday, Spiro became the youngest person ever to win the national debate title.

UVM's team of Spiro and Kevin Kearney defeated Northwestern University in the first final round to reach the quarter finals before losing to Kansas University by a three to two decision. Kansas eventually became the national champion.

Team Record.

Spiro was chosen for the national honor after 8 qualifying rounds in which the foremost 64 debators of the nation, representing 32 schools, vied to place their teams in the four final elimination rounds. UVM won 6 and lost 2 of these qualifying debates. They defeated the University of Southern California, University of Florida, Louisiana State University, Illinois College, University of Illinois, and San Diego College. They were defeated by the University of Houston and Augustana College.

Five teams were invited from the New England region. They were Harvard, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, St. Johns University, and UVM. Dartmouth College survived the qualifying rounds, but lost in the first final elimination round.

A. Renkin Harris Takes Position

Miss Anna Renkin Harris has been appointed Dean of Women at the University of Vermont, it was announced late today. Miss Harris will step into the post held by Miss Mary Jean Simpson for the past seventeen years.

The new Dean comes to UVM directly from the University of Pennsylvania where she is presently engaged as Acting Dean of Women. Miss Harris was Vice-Dean of Womenat Pennsylvania from 1950 until last year. When the Dean received a Ford Foundation Commission, Miss Harris was appointed to the position of Acting Dean.

Born in Kentucky in 1907, Miss Harris was closely connected with Kentucky edueation ence, Miss Simpson's replacement finds that her "deepest professional interests lie in student counselling, Mental Hygeine and Student Relations."

Dr. Florance B. King, chairman of the committee which interviewed candidates, seemed particularly enthused over the new appointee:

"I believe that Miss Anna Renkin Harris is possessed of about as many of the fine qualities we were seeking in a Dean of Women as is possible to find in any one person. The students, I think will respect and admire her and be won by her warm personality and her sympathetic understanding of young people."

Dean Simpson seemed equally enthused, speculating:

"The selection of Miss Anna Harris to succeed me as Dean of Women is, I believe, an excellent choice and I am very happy to turn over my responsibilities to a person so well qualified to fill the position. I bespeak for her the same fine spirit of cooperation, the understanding and the loyalty which has made my seventeen years as Dean of Women such a happy and rewarding experience."

Miss Harris' background includes teaching experience in her home town, Morganfield, Ky., in the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth grades.

Her college personnel jobs varied from a graduate assistantship in the Mental Hygeine Clinic at the University of Kentucky (1940-41) to the Acting Deanship, her present post at the University of Pennsylvania.

From 1940-45 she was a Head Resident at the same institution. Concurrently Miss Harris taught a laboratory section in psychology (1941-42).

Descendent Of First 'Grad' Is Founder's Speaker Tom'w

Speech Opens Art Festival

A direct descendant of one-quarter of the University of Vermont's first graduating class will speak at the annual Founders' Day convocation tomorrow morning, which this year will open a three-day Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts celebrating UVM's 150th graduation. The ceremony will be held in Ira Allen Chapel, 10 A.M.

Charles Sullivan Adams, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, great-grandson of Charles Adams, one of the four youths who were graduated in 1804, will follow in the original Charles' footsteps. The first Charles, a prominent Burlington lawyer and member of the Vermont legislature, was a principal speaker at the fiftieth anniversary of this class's graduation, when semi-centennial celebrations were held in 1854.

New England Education

The 1954 speaker, who operates an insurance agency in Dallas and who served as a lieutenant commander in the Navy during World War II, demonstrates in his life a tendency which has characterized the descendants of many UVM graduates--the tendency to push always westward, and yet to return to New England for education. He received his preparatory school training at Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, and then attended Amherst College, from which he was graduated in 1930.

The first Charles Adams lived out his life in Burlington. His son, John Sullivan Adams, was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1838 and became prominent as Vermont's superintendent of public instruction. In this capacity he did much to establish a modern system of

State New Loyalty Stand In Principle Chaplin Proposes

The year-old attempt by the University to arrive at a suitable concrete loyalty policy took another turn last week as Senate passed Professor James Chaplin's motion to recommit the entire question to committee.

During the past two months, the faculty was presented two possible substitutions for the existing University policy on loyalty and Communism. One of the substitutions was that of the policy committee, headed by Professor Paul Moody. The other was a composite of proposals drawn up by Professors Robert Babcock, Harold Schultz, and Andrew Nuquist. The two substitute proposals were in opposition with each other.

According to Professor Chaplin, "It is apparent that strong divisions of opinion exist on the matter under consideration. Since the opposing sides have never had sufficient opportunity to discuss their differences, my motion to recommit the question to committee would

Schlesinger Calls New Look' A Phony

Reprinted from Wednesday's Burlington Free Press.

A Pulitzer Prize historian urged a return to a more flexible foreign policy of "collective strength" in the final presentation of the UVM Program Series at Burlington High auditorium last night.

Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Harvard history professor and director of Adlai Stevenson's speech writers during the 1952 presidential campaign, said there are no "trick formulas" by which this nation "can remove the burden of responsibility."

"We must," he said, "return to the policy of building the collective strength of the free nations."

Schlesinger charged the Eisenhower administration's "new look" policy of massive retaliation and curtailing of forces necessary for "local wars"—as expressed originally by Secretary of State Dulles in January—"has turned out to be no policy at all."

He pointed out that subsequent statements by Dulles, the President and Vice President Nixon expressed contradictions of the massive retaliation policy as it applied to Indochina.

He said: "The American people are entitled to something more from their leaders than the babble of voices.

"It is perfectly clear that the much - vaunted new look, which would avoid another Korea, is a phoney."

Schlesinger said that if the nation is going to cut military strength, it should build up allies, and that if the U.S. is going to reduce its collective strength, it should build up the military. He said that under the policy since 1952, the nation has been cutting both.

The historian, a level-voiced and convincing speaker, sketched the history of U.S. foreign policy from its inception and said it was built on a premise of national interests.

He maintained that those interests could best be served under the type of bi-partisan policy in effect from 1946 to 1952, with its basic features of foreign aid, such as Point Four and the Marshall Plan, and thinking in terms of "local wars," (such as Korea) "rather than an all-out atomic conflict.

"The essence of policy created after "World War II," said Schlesinger, 'was to deter Soviet agrression by buildng strength throughout the free world."

U.S. Influence Suffers

He said a great deal of the U.S. influence abroad has suffered through such internal conditions as racial prejudice "a standing reproach" and in recent weeks "by the junior senator from Wisconsin running wild and terrorizing the government."

He said that as things now stand "foreign aid is tapering off and will soon be terminated" and that under the new budget the nation will have reduced the Army to 17 divisions.

"Unless we abandon the policy that has frightened our allies more than the Soviet Union . . . our situation is only going to get worse," Schlesinger said.

The speaker concluded: "Nothing is stronger than the strength of free men. If this is true, it's time we began to act like free men."

Radio, TV, Movies Turn Out Good Entertainment -- Falls

By Carol Cleaves

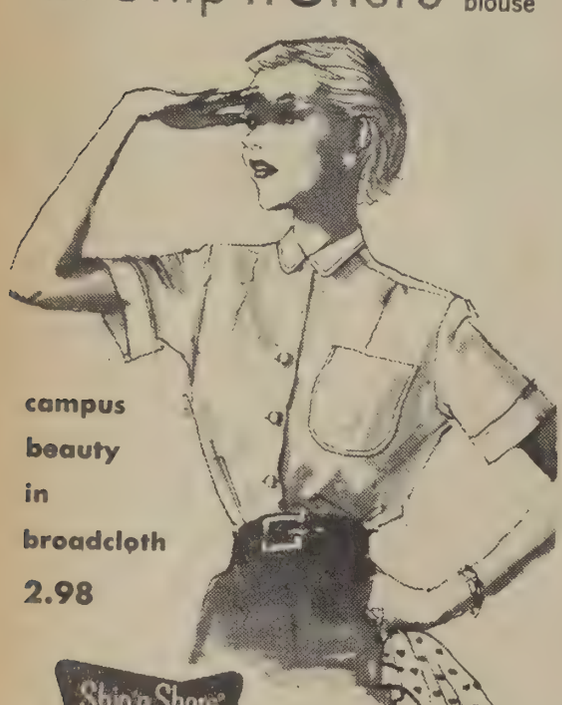
"Radio, television, and movies are turning out good entertainment, contrary to the opinion of many people that their plays and programs are undesirable," Gregg Falls said at the Round Table discussion of April 17. The topic under discussion was "Entertainment in the Theatre." Professor Falls, guest speaker for the evening, went on to say that this so-called "low" entertainment is very necessary, and that people will always seek it out if it is not given to them. "We must not except such mass media as radio, television, and movies to turn out really good material all the time," said Falls.

As an indication that "trashy" entertainment does not tend to detract from a people's intelligence, Prof. Falls pointed out that in the days of Shakespeare and Jonson, the Elizabethian theatre was grinding out thousands of plays like those of today in quality. Yet, in such an atmosphere, Shakespeare wrote his immortal plays.

Much discussion was evoked by the question, "Is tragedy possible in modern times?" The point was made that in such modern plays as "The Death of a Salesman" and "From Here to Eternity" are tragedies, they do not fit Artistotle's definition. The conclusion agreed to by most was that the definition of tragedy needs to be changed for our times.

Alan Gowans Fleming Head

President Carl W. Borgmann of the University of Vermont and State Agriculture today named a new director of the University's Fleming Museum effective July 1.



Dr. Alan Gowans, assistant professor of Art at Middlebury College, was named following his approval by the Board of Trustees. He will succeed Horace Eldred, recently named by President Borgmann to head a new administrative division as director of Audio and Visual Services.

Dr. Gowans holds the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Toronto, and the M.F.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Princeton University. He has also studied medieval art at Swarthmore College, and Christian Art at Princeton Theological Seminary.

He has served as research assistant for the National Gallery of Canada at Ottawa, and has studied in Europe on a grant from the American Council of Learned Societies.

He has had published numerous articles on church architecture in the Province of Quebec, including "Notre-Dame de Montreal," in the "Journal of the Society of Architectural Historians," and he is the author of a book, "A History of Church Architecture in the Province of Quebec," which is scheduled for publication.

LeightonCoxAttends Arnold Air Society Conclave In Omaha

Leighton E. Cox was among the 340 delegates who attended the Fifth Annual National Arnold Air Society Conclave in Omaha, Nebraska, April 16-17.

Cox was a member of the committee concerning new initiation ceremonies and pledge program.

The two-day Conclave opened with an address by Brig. Gen. M.K. Deichelmann, National Commandant of Air Force ROTC.

Other distinguished speakers included Gen. George C. Kenney, President of the Air Force Association, who commanded air operations in the Pacific during World War II; Maj. Gen. William Hall, Assistant Chief of Staff for Reserve Forces; and Maj. Gen. N.B. Harbold, Director of Personnel Procurement and Training.

have this as one of its purposes."

The motion read:

1. That the President appoint a special committee constituted of: (a) a member of the Policy Committee; (b) a representative from the AAUP; (c) a representative from the History Department; (d) a representative from the Political Science Department; (e) the President, ex officio, to meet with the Committee; 2. that this committee prepare a declaration of principles on academic freedom and loyalty; 3. that this statement, upon approval by the Senate, be transmitted to the Board of Trustees.

"I believe," Professor Chaplin continued, "that no two-hour Senate meeting is adequate for the quality and quantity of deliberation that should underlie a statement of this sort of policy."

Chaplin felt that the March 11 Faculty Statement (that of Babcock, Schultz, and Nuquist) was one of "quasi-legalistic nature," containing "homemade constitutional law" which leaves openings for possible future misrepresentations. These, in turn, he thought could result in discrimination on the basis of race, religion, or other personal organizational affiliation.

It is believed that Professor Chaplin refers, at that point, to the section of the March proposal which would base dismissal on a person's submissiveness in his academic work to the discipline of the Communist party or any other group inimical to free inquiry.

"A declaration of principles alone will commit us to no foreseen difficulties of this nature," he expressed in a written statement which accompanied his motion.

"An approach in which we, the faculty, attempt to state in the form of positive principles what we believe to be the prerogatives and responsibilities of academic freedom and its relationship to loyalty, presented together with the reasoning behind these principles, is more in the academic tradition than the largely negative approach that has guided the statements now before the Senate," he concluded.

Three Plays Done By Players Last Tuesday Night

University Players produced three plays last Tuesday night at Southwick Auditorium. Gregg Falls, advisor to the group, turned the reins over to three of his most experienced Players, and they "ran the show."

Faith Abbey, well known for her interpretation of many parts on the stage, directed the ancient Greek play, Antigone; Nancy Beals took charge of Hay Fever; and Gene McLean produced Fog on the Valley.

The student-directors are working for the sake of experience, and there were no money-making motives attached to the productions. However, in order to meet expenses, the Players passed the hat, "the way they did in the old days."

This was the first time in the history of the University Players that students have been at the helm of a production.

Officials of the organization have pointed out that any student interested in theatrics is welcome to try out for work with the University Players.

The Players are presently engrossed in efforts to raise money to finance an "arena-theatre", and plan several large scale productions to meet this end.

education in Vermont, and Adams School in Burlington is named after him.

One Of The '49ers

Like many another adventurous UVM graduate, John Sullivan Adams took a trip out to California in '49, but he returned to Burlington and lived here until 1867, when he went to Jacksonville, Florida. There he became Commissioner of Immigration and Collector of Customs, and there he established the

Charles S. Adams

"New South" newspaper.

John's son, Charles Sullivan Adams, also became a lawyer, and was prominent in the civil and cultural life of Jacksonville. He, like his son, returned to New England for his education, and like his son was graduated from Amherst.

Thus the line runs: Charles, UVM 1804; John Sullivan, UVM 1838; Charles Sullivan, Amherst 1883; and Charles Sullivan, Jr., Amherst 1930. There is now a fifth generation, Charles Sullivan Adams III, the present Mr. Adams' s second son; but this young man is currently four years old and he has not yet said whether he will attend UVM or Amherst.

By Way Of Contrast . . .

It is a long jump, from the world of homespun and candlelight to the world of nylon and neon. It is no jump at all, from the world of a student at the infant University of Vermont in 1804 (or, for that matter, at Plato's Academy) to the world of a student in the adult University of Vermont of 1954.

Pushing back the ruffled cuffs on his shirt on some hot and sticky afternoon in August, 1804, one of the four members of the University of Vermont's first graduating class may well have indited a careful epistle to his parents to tell them what the day-long commencement exercises August 15 would be like. Doubtless he expressed the fervent hope that the roads would be sufficiently passable to permit them to make the trip to Burlington from Charlotte - - or perhaps they could sail up Lake Champlain. On his desk as he prepared to send his letter before sealing it, were his prized Phi Sigma Nu badge (UVM's first student organization); a volume of the "Biblia Hebraica" and of Erasmus Darwin's "Zoonomia," snatched from UVM's library of some thirty volumes for last minute cramming; and the impressive printed commencement program.

New England Artists Exhibit Work At Fleming

A regional grouping of distinguished American artists will be presented in an exhibition of paintings by northern New England artists which will be a feature of the University of Vermont's Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts.

The paintings will be hung on campus in the main gallery of Fleming Museum, and a special feature of the Festival will be a gallery talk by Francis Colburn, head of the UVM art department, Sunday afternoon, May 2.

The exhibition will include paintings by such well known figures as Paul Feeley of Bennington College, Daniel Schapiro, also of Bennington; Andrew Vargish, Poultney; George Holt, of Bennington; Norman Rockwell, George Hughes, John Cagle, Arthur K.D. Healy of Middlebury, and many others active in Vermont and neighboring areas.

Received Recognition

The exhibition will be an invitation show, and will demonstrate the many facets of contemporary American art, both conservative and modern, as exemplified in the work of artists and illustrators in this area.

Several of the men whose works will be on display have received recognition in art centers throughout the country. Mr. Schapiro, who is painter, etcher, and illustra-

...so where are we? ...a rushing problem

See story with complete details on page one.

The University Senate has taken a step which has been awaited in this corner for some time. Their recommendation that rushing, as a first semester enterprise, be eliminated comes as a welcome move.

The recommendation will become effective no later than the 1955-56 school year, pending approval of the University Council. (The Senate is composed of the Assistant, Associate, and Full Professors; the Council membership is made up of the Deans and the President.)

The recommendation sets no substitute date for the rushing period, but leaves the resolution of this phase of the problem to the Joint Social Activities Board, the Student Advisory Committee, IFC, and Pan-Hellenic Council.

A number of alternatives are open for selection. In chronological order, there are a) intersemester recess, b) the period between the opening of second semester and Kake Walk, c) any time between Kake Walk and finals, and d) the corresponding date of the present period transposed to the sophomoré year.

None of the above are absolute cures for the problem--each has its own inadequacies. Intersemester recess? A deserved break between finals and the start of another semester would be cancelled if the rushing program were inserted here.

Before Kake Walk? At present there is a semi-curtailment of academic endeavor on the part of the student body--any more distractions, and President Borgmann may as well call off school altogether until Kake Walk festivities come to a close. Even if the week of pre Kake Walk activity were to be discontinued, this time could not be utilized. Let's be practical...as long as KW is maintained at its present pitch, time must be allowed the fraternities to prepare for it.

Post Kake Walk? We'll come back to this in a moment. Let's cover second semester first. A number of obstacles appear to stand in the way of this period. Number one...where do all the sophomores live when they come back to school in September? Will not the overflow which ordinarily finds residence in the fraternity houses be too large for the householders of Burlington to absorb? (This presents no female problem, as the University provides living quarters for all its women.)

Number two...an entire social program will have to be arranged for the freshmen men. (Frosh men are not allowed into the fraternity houses, until after rushing. Frosh women are. Undoubtedly it will be difficult for the new frosh men to compete with the upper class fraternity men for the hands of the demure little incoming frosh women, for a full year).

Back to the latter part of second semester freshman year--this, on first appearance, would seem to be the best period. It would let the frosh men know where they were going to live the next semester, that is, if the fraternities permit pledges to live in the house. At the same time, it insures a full house of men for the fraternity.

In addition, the number of rushees will be cut down, provided a minimum scholastic average is set by the "Greek" governing bodies. If this average is sufficiently high, it can practically assure the fraternities and sororities that all their pledges will make their marks.

However, we strongly feel that the school academic year is already too broken up. This in itself is the basis, and we feel it is a legitimate one, for our opposition to any move to swing rushing into the latter part of second semester.

So where are we? We find ourselves favoring the first semester of the sophomore year. With a little study, we are confident that the administration can come up with a sound social program for the freshmen. If it is sound enough, the frosh men may even be able to compete with the great big upper class fraternity men.

The housing problem is probably not insolvable.

At the same time, the rushing number will be cut down, just as it is above, providing the same advantages.

Every argument advanced against first semester freshman rushing can be solved by soph rushing. Students will have more time to adjust to college life; develop more of an affinity for the University (as opposed to sorority or fraternity); both the organization and the rushee will have a full year to "get a line" on the true status of each other; freshman averages, which fall during rushing, will probably no longer do so; sophomore average will maintain the same level, an adjustment to college and studying having been accomplished in the freshman year.

The advantages seem to us to be heavily on the side of sophomore rushing. We realize that initial obstacles have to be overcome but once they are conquered, we feel that this is the best possible period into which rushing could be switched.

in principle

Professor Chaplin's proposal that the University's loyalty policy be established as an "in principle" form sounds pretty good to us. (See page one.) As he says, it would be more in the spirit of academic process. However, we hopethat all the stipulations in the Babcock-Schultz- Nuquist proposal can be translated into an "in-principle" statement, without losing any of the essence of their original loyalty recommendation.

Soph s Visit Russian Embassy; Find Atmosphere Unfriendly

During Spring Recess, two UVM sophomore women visited the Russian Embassy in Washington, D.C. Mary Hoilman, '56, and Leonie Strachan, '56, report their reactions to Soviet diplomacy in the following special report to the CYNIC.

While cavorting about the capital city, we were determined to see one thing that tourists seldom see these days.

Located on 16th Street across from the National Geographic Building is a stately building commonly known as the Russian Embassy. We brushed past the cadillacs and rang the doorbell. A true to life communist appeared at the door with a greeting, "Come een." We entered a plush red room. Standing at one side of the room was a small group-a huge woman and two short men. At the end of the hallway stood an enormous guard. Upon an underhanded motion from our guide, the guard retired.

"JOOST A MOMENT"

We were then led into a small green room, and believing it to be part of the tour, we examined it while the guard left and shut the door. It seemed like hours later that he reentered with two small cards. On those cards we signed our names, addresses, and intentions (general information, international relations). Our comrade came in once again to take the cards, and as we proceeded to follow him out, he shut the door again and said, "Joost a moment." We continued to examine the room with its mirrored door, marble fireplace, and one picture (a cold snow scene).

Finally a short man opened the door and explained to us that the comrade who usually took students on tour, showed movies, and gave lectures would be busy for a few hours; however, we could call or come back some other time.

Clutching our Russian news sheet, we were shown to the door and breathed a sign of relief as we again entered the land of the living.

A Dartmouth student picked up $30 on a bet recently. All he had to do was slip a goldfish or two into his highball glass and gulp them down.

A poll taken at Westminster College, Pa., showed that nine out of ten students knew nothing about the Bricker amendment. One student said he knew it had something to do with the President and treaties, but said he had not "bothered to investigate the subject." Commended the Holcad, college newspaper: "This indicates that students are snug in their little world of 1000 people. We consider this a bad sign."

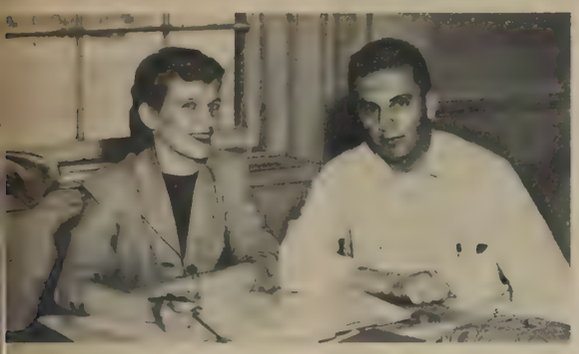
At the University of Colorado, the traditional spring variety show has been replaced by an All-Men's revue -- not entirely to everybody's liking. "...The male attitude toward a male show was long reflected in an old English poem that started out, "Wot, no women? Wot kind of Pawty is this?"

University of Toledo, Ohio; the Campus Collegian's inquiring reporter sought students' and faculty members' pet peeves. One professor terms "laziness" his pet peeve. "College students are the only people in the world," he says, "who pay for something and then do their best to cheat themselves out of it."

Chicago Maroon -- UC physicists rally to aid Oppenheimer on disloyalty charge. Two prominent University of Chicago scientists have come to the defense of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the Institute of Advanced Studies at Princeton University who has been suspended by the Atomic Energy Commission from his post as director of the Los Alamos atomic research projects for reasons of security. The two men are Samuel K. Allison, director of the Institute for Nuclear Studies, and Cyril S. Smith, director of the Institute for the Study of Metals.

While recognizing the necessity for loyalty investigations, Allison believed that an investigation "would completely establish the reliability of Dr. Oppenheimer." He said the "nation owes him a debt which it can never adequately repay. I do not know of any other person in the United States who could have provided the brilliant leadership at Los Alamos that he did, working in selfless devotion, and endangering his precarious health."

Smith defended Oppenheimer's right to decide that an all-out program of hydrogen bomb development was ill-advised. Part of the charges against Oppenheimer include his reticence to proceed with H-bomb development.



Smith, who was a member of the General Advisory Committee, which Oppenheimer directed, from 1946 to 1952 (when the decision was made) stated: "As seen with the hindsight of 1954 the recommendation may have been wrong, but that it was arrived at honestly by Oppenheimer and others I have no doubt....The resolution of honest differences of opinion among informed men is the very basis of democracy and such discussion is difficult enough under atomic secrecy without persecuting one who proposed a less precipitous approach that was ultimately adopted by higher authority."

Smith continued; "The action of the AEC will discourage free discussion of both politics and science; if followed through it will effectively suppress the very originality of thought that gave rise to the bomb. Any action that tends to discourage imaginative scientists from devoting their talents to public service cannot help but do terrible harm to the future security of the country."

WHAT TYPE OF TEACHER ANNOYS YOU MOST?

By Helen McKuskie

Jeanette Cote

JEANNETTE COTE '55.

"There are a few types of teachers who annoy me, in particular whose who go off on a tangent and bring in subject matter that does not relate to the class topic. I also dislike the uninteresting professor, and I don't think a prof who is boring and speaks in a monotone should teach an 8:00 class. There is also the nervous type who is constantly pacing the floor and whose movements are distracting. I think that teachers who have these annoying habits should try to improve themselves as well as the students are expected to improve."

Joe Jaekel

JOSEPH JAECKEL '56.

"The particular type of teacher which annoys me most is the teacher who knows the work so well that he doesn't bring it down to the level of the average student. This type of teacher gets the student so confused, for he tries to understand the teacher instead of getting the important subject matter which the teacher is trying to relate to the student. A teacher should also take into consideration that some students are not so well adapted to certain phases of learning as others, and therefore, he should adapt his lectures for all types of students."

Jerry Meyers

JERRY MEYERS '55.

"The type which annoys me most are professors who tell you to buy books, which cost money; but when exams come, they are based on just his notes with no reference to the test. On the other hand, there is the professor who gives an excessive amount of notes throughout his classes and doesn't stress the text; but when exams arrive, most of the material is based on the text. I think a good solution to this problem is that both the professor's own views in class and the material from the test be stressed equally."

Bob Schneider

BOB SCHNEIDER '56.

"I dislike the type of teacher that continuously gives lectures and expects you to write ther down as fast as he or she lectures. I feel that it is impossible to get all the facts down and therefore, when hour-exam time rolls around, I'VE HAD IT. I also dislike the nervous type ---the type that is always fidgeting with chalk, erasers and the like, because I find myself paying attention to these rather than to the professor."

Hillel Presents Jewish Music Show Tonight At Center

The Hillel Foundation will present a program of Jewish Music tonight at 8:00 P.M. at the Synagogue Center on North Prospect Street. Miss Ruth Rubin, a nationally known Jewish folksinger, will combine Yiddish and Israeli songs in an illustrated talk entitled "A Hundred Years of Jewish Folksong." Everyone is invited. There is no admission charge.

Miss Rubin instructs and entertains at the same time. "Folksongs are dreams, yearning, love, joy, sorrow, pain," she has said in past performances. The songs of a people include their games and dances, their bitterness and satire, their wit and humor, their wisdom and superstitions. In folksong, the old patterns have withstood the test of time and have come down to us, fresh and alive. Folksong is pensive and brooding, also turbulent and protesting. It is individual and personal yet collective and universal. It speaks, hums, croons, lulls to rest. It stirs up, provokes and calls to battle. It chants and lilts. It always sings!"

This program has been arranged through the co-operation of the Jewish Center Lecture Bureau.

'Chase' Is On For Missing 'Nurse'; Suspect Abduction

By Arleen Mayer

The "Chase" is on! (Any similarity to names is purely coincidental).

At 3:07 P.M. Thursday, Marv "The Webb" Nierenberg rushed into the CYNIC office and handed me an unfinished copy of the facts.

I was struck, dumbfounded, flabbergasted!! ---------Mrs. Chase has disappeared.

My friends, this is a crucial time! We must all unite for this common cause---to find Mrs. Chase and bring her back---dead or alive (?)

Ruth Rubin

Mrs. Chase is a life size dummy used by the Nursing Department for instruction in certain aspects of patient care. She is so called because she was manufactured by the Chase Supply Company. From time to time, other departments borrow Mrs. Chase for specific purposes and so the department was not alarmed when she was found missing. The need for her now is great and she cannot be located.

And hear this people, the dummy is no ordinary doll (5'5", 113 pounds, blonde hair, blue eyes, etc.----), no sir! She is scientifically designed for certain purposes and the price of a new one is 200 smackeroos ($$$$).

Miss Crabbe of the Nursing Department has asked for help in appealing to the campus. We have only one lead to go on; there is a rumor that some boys took her.

In one last appeal, the department is very anxious to have Mrs. Chase returned with no questions asked. So won't you please help?

Army ROTC Names Two UVM Seniors Honor Students

Two University of Vermont seniors were named Army ROTC "Distinguished Military Students" in ceremonies conducted last week in the UVM Cage.

Ronald N. Bowman and James J. Montgomery were presented with the ROTC awards last night by Lt. Col. William E. Cox, professor of Military Science and Tactics at UVM.

Both men are captains and company commanders in the cadet regiment, and, "both have demonstrated throughout their four years of ROTC work outstanding qualities of leadership, high moral character, and definite aptitude for the military service," according to Col. Cox. Both stand in the upper half of their class in academic ranking.

Let's All Be Friends

After hearing the Reverend A.J. Muste speak at our Third Annual Vermont Conference, I was very interested to find out more about his activities, especially with Fellowship of Reconciliation of which he is now Secretary Emeritus, in the U.S.

During the three-day discussion on the topic "What Is The Greatest Threat To American Liberty? ", Reverend Muste had emphasized our responsibility as leaders of the non-Communist world faction to take the initial steps toward peace. Muste said the West is at a disadvantage in placing reliance in Atomic war. "Communists can engage in violence without divided minds and with clear hearts. They think it's that sort of a world, " he said. "We cannot do it with clear minds and whole hearts... we do not believe it's that sort of a world." Reverend Muste and Reverend Davis both agreed the American people ought to be frank with themselves and admit there is an unprecendented "wave of fear " gripping the country. We have been forming habits of fear, Reverend Muste argued, not hope. He acknowledged that it is likely we may go on as we have done; arming and taxing ourselves, instead of seeing the world's oneness or our common destiny; but we each will suffer, in his seperate nation.

Taking a further look at the organization of which Mr. Muste is such an active member and spokesman, I found not only a definite statement of purpose, but a highly organized and widespread membership.

The Fellowship is composed of men and women of many nations and races who recognize the unity of the world-wide human family and wish to explore the possibilities of love for discovering truth, dispelling antagonisms and reconciling people, despite all differences, into a friendly society.

The Fellowship of Reconciliation began in England in 1914 and was extended to the U.S. in 1915, as a movement of Christian protest against war and of faith in a better way than violence, for the solution of all conflict. Although the members do not bind themselves to any exact form of words; "1) They refuse to participate in any war or sanction military preparations: they work to abolish war and foster good will among all nations, races, and classes. 2) They strive to build a social order which will suffer no individual or group to be exploited, for the profit or pleasure of another, and which will assure to all the means for realizing the best possibilities of life; 3) They advocate such ways of dealing with offenders against society as shall transform the wrong-doer rather than inflict retributive punishment; 4) They endeavor to show reverence for personality -- in the home, in education of children, in association with those of other classes, nationalities, and races; 5) They seek to avoid bitterness and contention, and to maintain the spirit of self-giving love while engaged in the struggle to achieve these purposes. "

If you can imagine the American government abolishing its army, its navy, and its air force, and canceling all its war contracts, then the billions of dollars it would save might go a long way toward putting the productive powers of the rest of the world in action. Unfortunately such a drastic disarmament would throw this country into an economic depression and cause widespread unemployment -- with serious consequences for the world economy! But there is nothing to worry about, because clearly our government is going to do no such thing... but will the institutions of democracy survive into the 21st century? (except perhaps that conception of it developed from the kindergarten stage). Perhaps another World War may be needed to teach us. But when it is over -- will we arise and act? Our complicated tools of today will be nearly destroyed and the work to pull ourselves up again will be much harder to do -- but there is the slightest chance we may have a bit more wisdom to work with and maybe armed with that wisdom and the simplest of tools we'll do a better job, next time.

When You Join The "Men Who Measure" . . .

When you leave school as an engineer and join the ranks of the "men who measure," you'll want the most accurate and durable measuring tapes. Lufkin Chrome Clad Tapes ARE the most accurate and durable because their markings are bonded to the line and protected by multiple platings of metal that also protect the fine steel in the line. This all-metal line is longest wearing — it won't crack, chip, peel — is easiest to keep clean — is most rust and corrosion resistant. Chrome Clad Tapes are the choice of engineers the world over.

Whether you're running a survey, building a bridge or a building, railroading, road building, mining or drilling — there's a Lufkin measuring tape exactly right for the job.

Specify Lufkin when you get out on the job — send today for our free catalog.

AD Pi announces its Third Annual Country Fair. It will take place on the back porches and the lawns of the house -- 363 S. Willard Street. Date -- this Saturday. Time -- 1:30 - 4:30.

There'll be GAMES, PRIZES, CANDIED APPLES, POP CORN, and REFRESHMENTS of all sorts. Also on hand will be hand-made articles and loads of home-cooking, just like MOM'S!

All these and lot's more in store for everyone and anyone !

The THETAS held an exchange dinner with the TEPS on Wednesday, April 15.

Senator Harry Cain of Tacoma Washington, Vermont Conference speaker, was guest of honor at the Kappa Alpha Theta house on Thursday, April 16.

THETA CHI RECENTLY ELECTED A NEW SLATE OF OFFICERS. THEY ARE:
Pres. - Merritt Spear; Vice-Pres. - Ron Doornbosch; Sec-John Eberwein; Treasurer-Karl Haviland; Pledge Marshall - Mike Rosco; 1st Guard-Pete Kenyon; 2nd Guard - Paul Miller; Chaplin--Sam Cutting; Librarian - George Ewins; Historian - Conny Klock; Assistant Treas - Bob Hart.

Theta Chi will hold their spring formal Friday May 7th at the Burlington Country Club. The annual French Party will be held Saturday May 1st. by invitation only.

A faculty dinner was held at the Theta Chi house last Wednesday. The affair was a great success.

A group of Kappa Sigs journeyed to East Corinth for Easter Sunday dinner. Al McLam played host to Bill Olden and Russ Somers; Larry Williams entertained Tony Rockhill and Curt Burrell; and Harry Holland dined Jim Lee and Don Henning. In addition the guests were given a guided tour of the town's bobbin mills and feed store.

The Kappa Sigma House is having a work day on April 25 to put in new flooring and landscaped the grounds. One of the chief projects is the redecoration of the library into an Alumni Memorial room. Under the direction of former Grand Master Bill Olden the downstairs recreation room has been changed into a seascape with equipment from the flagship of the New Bedford Scallop Fleet, the "Amelia."

The "Mainstreeters " are holding their Spring Formal this weekend at the house under the direction of George Bardis, social chairman. They request that any potential visitors realize theirs must be a closed affair.

Visiting the KE's recently were: Lt. George Holton '52, of Fort Dix and Lt. Bob Raymond '52, of Fort Bragg. Howie Merrick who has just been discharged from the army is visiting the brothers and will remain for another week.

The boys at FERN HILL will play host to seven chapters of Phi Sigma Delta at an Eastern Conclave the weekend of April 30. In addition to several meetings and conferences a banquet has been planned at Oakledge Manor and an informal party is scheduled for Saturday evening, May 1.

The Phi Sigs will stage their annual Spring Formal the weekend of May 7, 8 and 9. In addition to a buffet and Formal dance on Friday evening at Fern Hill a barbecue and informal party are scheduled for Saturday May 8, and a Jazz Concert is planned for Sunday, May 9. With good weather the weekend promises to be a great one.

On Sunday, May 16th the Phi Sigs will hold a reception for Dean Simpson from 4:00 to 6:00 P.M. at Fern Hill.

New brothers in Phi Delta Theta are: Bill Nichols, Manhasset, N.Y.; Paul Harasimowicy, Gardner, Mass.; Ron Hill, Burlington; Paul Little, Fairhaven; Al Cummings, Crestwood, N.Y.; and Bill Bull, Newport, R.I. Everyone joins the Phi Delts in wishing Bill Laytham well, now that he is back on his feet after having his appendix removed.

Brother Sy Simonds and his wife (the former Elsie Graves Pi Phi, '53,) had their first child, a boy. Congratulations!

The Phi Delt's Co-advisor, Prof. Truman Webster is the proud father of a baby girl. And another Congratulations!!

On Sunday, April 11th, TEP welcomed 17 men into the brotherhood. These were:
Dick Ahrens - Burlington, Vt.
Ed Friedman - Yonkers, N.Y.
Paul Vogel - Flushing, N.Y.
Howie Cordover - No. Bellmore, N.Y.
Max Rothman - Burlington, Vt.
Sid Eisenberg - Brooklyn, N.Y.
Ralph Winer - Peabody, Mass.
Jay Dropkin - Waltham, Mass.
Charlie Pitman - Bayside, N.Y.
Stan Sakowitz - Bridgeport, Conn.
Steve Schrader - New York, N.Y.
Arnie Lachs - Brooklyn, N.Y.
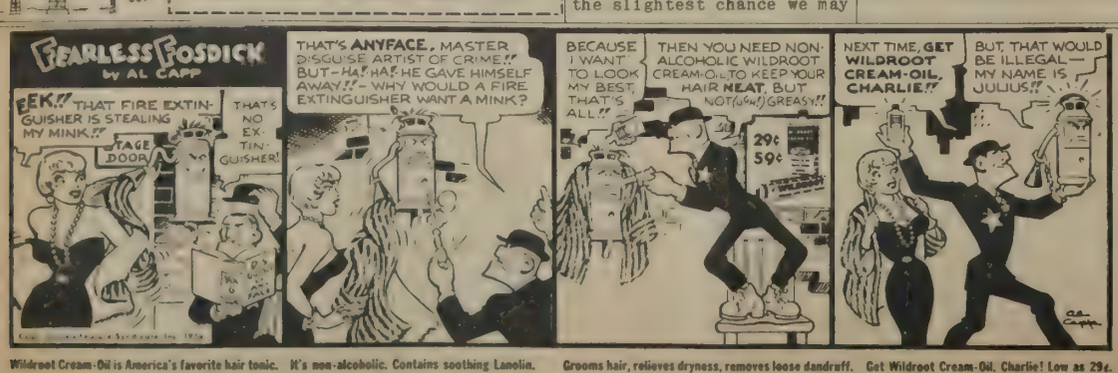
Irwin Bernstein - Brooklyn, N.Y.
Burt Fisher - Forest Hills, N.Y.
Ted Zeitlin - Newark, N.J.

A very successful banquet was held afterwards, in their honor, at the Olde Board Restaurant.

Among the new officers chosen were Gil Miller - Chaplain; Mike Golding - Warden; Bob Levine - Historian; Mike Princer - Rushin Chairman; Marty Siegel Public Relations Chairman.



Dick Alpert, '54, was engaged to Shirley Dessel '55, of AEPhi.

Exchange Dinners were held in recent weeks with Tri Delt, Alpha Chi, and Kapp Alpha Theta.

have represented UVM in the National Tournament. Last year Spiro, then only a freshman, was chosen the third best college debator in the nation. At that time Spiro and Kearney reached the semi-finals before bowing to Holy Cross College.

Spiro is a pre-medical student from Burlington, Kearney, a senior, is a speech major from Newport, Vt. He plans to attend the University of Florida Graduate School of Speech next year.

Debate Plan

The national college debate topic this year is Resolved: That the United States Should Adopt a Policy of Free Trade. This trade question is especially interesting because it is an important controversial subject among our nation's leaders. UVM's affirmative teams advocate to free trade to a free world to make our tariff policy consistent with the rest of our foreign policy. The following points are usually made by the affirmative. The United States and her allies would be mutually strengyhened by lowered tariffs. Free trade would remove a stumbling block to European economic security by allowing Europe to sell more to the United States. With the dollars gained from selling to us, she can buy badly needed goods from the United States. Thus we could expand our export market. In addition, free trade would make quality foreign goods available to the consumer at a lower cost.

UVM's negative teams generally contend that a change to free trade would destroy industries vital to us during war, would upset the complex farm price support system, and would cause wide spread unemployment. The negative believes that the need is not great enough to eliminate the system that has contributed to our attaining the highest standard of living and highest production in the world.

Frost

knowledge of people that few poets have had, and they are written in verse that uses, sometimes with absolutely mastery, the rhythms of actual speech."

Robert Frost attained fame in 1914 with the publication of "North of Boston," collection of poems which Frost called, "a book about people." Speaking of his "collected Poems" "The Oxford Companion to American Literature" says, "His work has a lifelong continuity in its rhythmes, its clear focusing on the individual, and its observation of the native New England background."

Clear Realist

In commenting on his style Frost has said, "there are two types of realists--the one who offers a good deal of dirt with his potato to show that it is a real one; and the one who is satisfied with the potato brushed clean... To me, the thing that art does for life is to clear it, to strip it to form."

On the occasion of Frost's eightieth birthday last month, J. Donald Adams wrote a tribute to him in the New York Times Book Review section. In part he said, "Time and again, as we reach the end of a poem of his we experience that momentary stay against confusion at which the poem was aimed. Precisely how it was done neither he nor anyone else, not even the most scientific of the explicators, can tell us. But the result has been, much more often than not, poetry, and poetry that will endure, I believe, for a long time to come."

Sig Nu, Tri Delt Top IFC Sing Contest

Sigma Nu

Delta Delta Delta

Tri-Delt and Sigma Nu took first places in the annual interfraternity sing held last week-end in Memorial Auditorium. Second and third places in the sorority division went to Alpha Delta Phi and Pi Beta Phi respectively, while Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon won cups in the men's division.

The Tri-Delts sang early in the program, and wearing "good black dresses" they sang "Riddle Song" and "Louisiana Hayride" so well, that according to one 1of the judges Mr. John Donoghue they "galloped away from the rest of the competition." Ellen Pirie was the director.

Sigma Nu captured first place with an arrangement of "Blending Tea for Two" by Rudy Dietchen. According to Mr. Donoghue, "The boys from Sigma Nu staked their claim to the fraternity prize cups with the same high quality of work that enabled them to win last year."

The master of ceremonies was Dick Ireland, who was assisted by Dave O'Brien, Matt Evans, and John Manning. In addition to Mr. John Donoghue, Professor Jean Berger of Middlebury served as a judge. Thirty-six different selections were given during the evening.

Alpha Delta Phi won second place by singing "Green Sleeves," while "Bidin' My Time" got the Pi Beta Phi's a third. Sigma Gamma sang "Madame Jeanette" and Kappa Alpha Theta did "Return to Paradise." Other sororities which sang were Alpha Epsilon Phi, Alpha Chi Omega, and Gamma Phi Beta.

"The Lord's Prayer" won the second place cup for Phi Delta Theta while the Sigma Alpha Epsilon's captured third with "Joshua Fit the Bettle of Jerico." Theta Chi sang "September Morn," and Tau Epsilon Phi did a rendition of "One World." Sigma Phi sang "Pennsylvania 6-5000"; Acacia did "When Day is Done"; and Sigma Phi Epsilon sang "Kentucky Babe." Other fraternities which participated were Delta Psi, Kappa Sigma, and Lambda Iota.

This year was the first one in which three cups were awarded in both divisions. The sing had the greatest number of participating fraternities and sororities, this year that it has ever had.

A jazz concert will be held next Saturday at Redstone campus, as part of Junior Week. Featured will be the Mahogany Hall All-Stars from Boston. Don't forget. . .2-5 PM next Saturday, at Redstone.

IT'S ALL A MATTER OF TASTE

A man who smokes a Lucky Strike
Is really on the ball.
So round, so firm, so fully packed—
The cigarette for all!

Bob Vickery, Jr.
University of Missouri

When you come right down to it, you smoke for one simple reason... enjoyment. And smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste. Yes, taste is what counts in a cigarette. And Luckies taste better.

Two facts explain why Luckies taste better. First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco... light, mild, good-tasting tobacco. Second, Luckies are actually made better to taste better... always round, firm, fully packed to draw freely and smoke evenly.

So, for the enjoyment you get from better taste, and only from better taste, Be Happy—Go Lucky. Get a pack or a carton of better-tasting Luckies today.

What brand is grand throughout the land
From Maine to old Kentucky—
With smoothness, mildness, better taste?
Why, yes, you're right, it's Lucky!

I puffed and puffed the whole day through,
Just trying every brand,
Until I smoked some Lucky Strikes
And found they tasted grand!

'Rumors Are Flying,' Writer Finds; Uncovers Mystery

By Helen McKuskie

Rumors about the place had been heard on campus. It is on the fourth floor, a very high climb up some rickety stairs. The floor creaks as one walks on it, and the eaves cast a large shadow to make it very dark. "Bring your flashlight," some would say; while others said, "Don't go up there alone." Curious? Well, it's not forbidden territory on campus. As a matter of fact, it's the Pringle Herbarium--one of the very interesting projects at the University, which the late Prof. Dole had worked on.

As you climb the last step of the fourth floor in the Science Hall, you can see a number of large tables with glass cases. This is the main room of the Herbarium, where there are many herbs, pine cones, and ferns. There are cultivated ferns from New Zealand, Australia, and Hong Kong. In one of the cases can be found the North American Marine Algae, which look like sponges, and also the South American Marine Algae, thin and maroon.

Also found at the Herbarium are many different species of Spruce, from various parts of the country, including Oregon, California, and Burlington. The types of Spruce differ from one another in size and shape, and each one is prevented from falling apart by a cage made of wire to fit the exact shape. A very interesting type of Spruce is the Species which comes from Mexico. This cone is about a foot long and five inches in diameter. The difference in size is so extraordinary in comparison with our usual Spruce, three inches in length.

Among some of the other very interesting examples of plant life is the Double Cocoa-Nut Palm seed. The tree which grows from it is very large, often reaching 100 feet in height. The seed itself weighs as much as forty pounds, and requires ten years to reach maturity. It is a very fibrous and brittle-looking plant, and it floats on the sea. Another example of interest in the Herberium is a hand sponge from India. This is dated as far back as 1542, when it is believed that Marco Polo smuggled it away in a soap box.

Besides this display, there are also two other rooms which are used to store ferns and other plants from as far back as the late 1800's.

Prof's Cook Book Stars Bogorad, Simpson Recipes

By Nancy Scott

"Do you know what's cooking with the faculty this spring? If not you can find out very soon in the new faculty cookbook entitled "OUR CAMPUS COOKS." After several years of collecting the faculty recipes, the Home Economics club is finally offering for sale, this cookbook composed of "faculty favorites."

Every faculty member has been contacted and asked to submit their favorite recipe. These have been published in original handwriting, some containing original drawings.

The big effort was started last spring when Barbara Raab and Barbara Schaffer began more contacts with the faculty, a long and tedious process. The books will be on sale in Waterman in the very near future. Every sorority and dormitory has a representative, from whom you may get your book. They will also be on sale in Miss Williams' office on the third floor of the Home Economics building.

Here is your chance to find out "What's cooking with the faculty," and for only $1.25. Get your copy in a hurry- Delightful recipes all the way through from Dean Simpson's Chinese Hamburger's to Sam Bogorad's famous repice of spaghetti with minced clam sauce.

Annual Lilac Day Postponed; Date To Be Announced

No definite date, has as yet been announced for the annual planting of the lilac bushes. Lilac Day was originally scheduled in connection with Founder's Day. However, due to the already full agenda of the weekend, it has been decided to hold Lilac Day at a more appropriate time.

Lilac Day is sponsored by the Sophomore Aides, assisted by Staff and Sandal and Mortor Board.

The committee in charge will decide on a date for Lilac Day, which must take place before Dead Week, May 19th.

Ceremonies will be held in the late afternoon around 4 o'clock. As in past years, they will take place on Redstone Campus lawn.

Writers Workshop Announces Essays On Frat. System

By Sandy Collison

Hear ye! Hear ye! Should Social Fraternities and Sororities be Abolished?

The Writers' Workshop, a new group which devotes itself exclusively to literary research, is sponsoring an essay contest on the topic, "Should Social Fraternities and Sororities be Abolished?"

Fraternities and sororities have been a main point of discussion on the UVM campus for a long time; so now the time has come to set down on paper your basic ideas on the subject of fraternities. These essays must not exceed 500 words. The contest is open only to those attending colleges and universities in the U.S. and its territories. The papers must be postmarked no later than May 15, 1954; it would be wise, however, to get your entries in early so there will be no chance of your paper being discounted for being postmarked late. When you do mail your entries in, send fifty cents to cover the cost of reading and judging your entry. Send the entries to the following address:

Writers' Workshop
P.O. Box 187 - North Postal Annex
Boston, Mass.

Three awards will be given totaling $600 - first prize... $300, second prize... $200, and third prize... $100. Duplicate prizes will be awarded if necessary.

If there are any questions, check CYNIC bulletin board.

Spring Opera Kicks Off Early; First Performance Saturday

May 1 and May 4 are the dates of presentation of the annual opera productions. The first performance of Arnold Sundgaard's Sunday Excursion and Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahati," will take place on Sunday during the Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts. The second performance will take place four days later.

The curtain raiser, Sunday Excursion is a light piece about two girls and two boys on a New Haven Line train. One of the girls knows one of the boys. The other girl, attracted by the other boy wants her girl friend to speak to the first boy and make the proper introductions. Complications arise however, when we find out that the girl and boy who know each other are not on speaking terms. Everything turns out happily for everybody concerned in the end.

Marcia Mockridge and Marlene Goodenough are the two girls. Dave Chittick and Ken Vanderbilt are the two boys. John Van Blarcom plays the part of the candy and ice cream vendor.

The major production, "Trouble in Tahati," is more serious in nature. It is about a husband and wife who are not compatible. One of the interesting effects used here is simultaneous action. On one side of the stage a day in the life of the husband is portrayed. Interrupting this at intervals on the other side of the stage, is a day in the life of his wife.

Bev Rohr plays the part of the wife and Elliot Bryant is her better half. A twenty voice choir will be on stage during the entire performance. The choir even sings chlorophyll commercials.

Gregg Falls of the Speech Department is Directing the productions. Prof. Howard Bennett of the Music Department is in charge of the musical end of the production.

Rushing

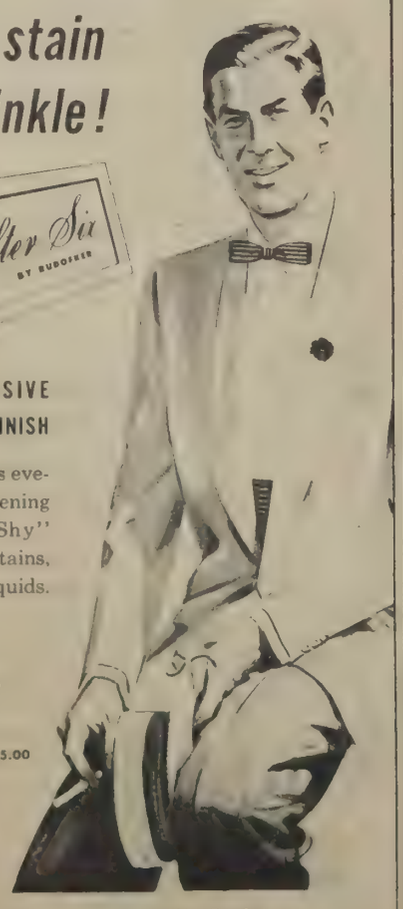
those who participated in rushing, preferred that rushing be held at a time later than the first semester. The chief reasons given by the students desiring delayed rushing were that they felt freshmen would have a better opportunity to know the different fraternities and sororities and vice versa; they would learn more about the desirability of joining a fraternity or sorority; and they would have a better opportunity to become adjusted to college life and work before giving so much time and attention to rushing.

Dissent Voiced

"The matter was referred to the Interfraternity Council and the Pan-Hellenic Council. The former favored postponing rushing until after the first semester and the latter did not favor such postponement."

"Several suggestions as to the actual time of rushing in case it was deferred were given. The Interfraternity Council suggested the period between Kake Walk and spring vacation. The Pan-Hellenic Council suggested the first semester of the sophomore year.



"Suggestions were made as to the rearrangement of certain other events on the University calendar in case rushing was carried out in the second semester. The committee felt that the specific time of rushing might well be determined after further study by those to whom is delegated the responsibility to work out the details connected with delayed rushing."

The committee was headed by J.E. Carrigan, Dean of the Agriculture. A wide variety of freshman matters was considered by the Committee. "Academic regulations for freshmen" were considered in their broadest sense in order to give consideration to the whole problem of the introduction of the freshmen to the new experience of college level academic life. Social, and extra curricula, as well as questions of a more academic nature were studied.

Specifically investigated, in addition to rushing, were dormitory conditions for men and women, vocational counseling, freshman orientation, off-campus weekends, class cutting, participation in student activities and intercollegiate athletics.

Contest Feature Co-ed Milking In Dairy Show

The third Annual Catamount Livestock Show, sponsored by the Animal Industry Club, will be held on May 8th at the University Farm. There is no admittance charge, and all students are cordially invited.

Some 50 students will take part in the fitting and showmanship contest which climaxes instruction in the livestock and dairy courses. Dairy cattle, Columbia Sheep and five yearling fillies from the Morgan Horse Farm, who have been the sole object of these students attention for the past month, will be "strutting their stuff" come a week from Saturday.

Events are planned continuously from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. that afternoon. There will be several special features including the second co-ed milking contest and a parade of sires. This will include some of the mature Champion ribbon winners from the Morgan Horse Farm. Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, Gamma Phi Beta, Allen House, Slade Hall, Lyman Hall, and Coolidge have each submitted a four gal team for the Milking Contest.

The difficult job of judging the livestock classes will be performed by Mr. Earl Krantz of Middlebury, Vt., Mr. Donald Kinsman of the University of Massachusetts and Mr. Charles Howe of Tunbridge, Vt. The Milking Contest will be judged and the awards made be Dean Simpson.

Burgess Aclaimed Third Best Debator At TRA Tourney

By Susan Wakefield

Four freshman debators competed with varsity teams from ten schools in the eastern Tau Kappa Alpha Forensic Conference at the Washington Square College of New York University in New York City, two weeks ago. UVM won three debates and lost five.

John Burgess was judged the third best debator of the tournament and placed second in the student congressional session for his skill in discussion and his seconding speeches for bills calling for freer trade and setting procedure for investigating sub-committees.

Burgess is a pre-law student from Bennington. In high school Burgess won the New England American Legion Oratorical contest.

The affirmative team of Marvin Levy and Max Ansbacher defeated Bridgewater College of Virginia and lost to Emory, Drew and Rutgers. The negative team of Beth Bowen and John Burgess scored victories over Emerson College and Kings Point College. They lost to Fordham University and Fordham Teachers College.

The conference included debate, discussion, extemporaneous speaking and congressional sessions. Fordham University won the debate tournament. Emerson College placed second. Professor Charles Helgesen, director of debate and discussion accompanied the team.

Survey Of City's Aged Conducted By UVM Students

By Bruce Evans

The Problems of Citizenship Class, composed of seniors, is heading a survey, which began yesterday and runs through Saturday, of the chronically ill and aged in Burlington. The group is doing the survey for the state commission on Chronically Ill and Aged (over 65).

It is an attempt to find out about the monetary, health, and general living conditions of Vermont's aged. The survey sas already conducted in Winooski by St. Michael's College. As a result, many elderly people were awakened to benefits they never realized existed and were shown how they could take advantage of existing state assistance.

Professor Haugen is the faculty chairman, and Dennis Lambert, student chairman. Jan Danforth is ass't chairman and Sara Upton is computing secretary.

Students captaining five man teams are: Kate Woodard, Noel Booth, Judy Astone, Andrea Bean, Carol Cross, Helen Noyes, Marna Wein, Elaine Clark, Pat Kynoch, Doris Jones, Anne Gregory, Lee Frank, Joyce Villemaire, Maureen Lyons, Fran Hauptman, Jan Schenck, Pat Alla, Vee Proctor, Antonia Panos.

Approximately 100 students are working in groups of five each to gather in formation for the state.

Five 'Latins' To Visit UVM

Five Latin American specialists in visual aids will be taking a close-up of Vermont Extension Service operations during the next two weeks. They are in this country as part of the Foreign Operations Administration program.

Robert P. Davison, associate Extension director, who will be in charge of the group, said that they are here to observe and study the USDA-Land Grant College system of extending information and know-how to farm people-men, women and youth.

They will observe and study the emphasis given agriculture in various information media which reach the farmers.

Six days will be spent with the Extension Editorial Office at the University of Vermont where Jack Spaven, Extension editor, and his staff will stress the reading and visual materials prepared for direct use with farm people and the distribution of these materials. They will also spend time with other state and county Extension workers.

Operatic Titles Form Theme For Peerade Floats

By Carol Cleaves

"Sunday Excursion" and "Trouble in Tahiti" will be the operatic titles forming the theme for the annual Junior Peerade, which will be held at 4 P.M. next Tuesday. The floats advertising these two Music Club productions, will be created by various fraternities and sororities. The Peerade of floats will form as usual in front of the Old Mill, and proceed down Pearl, onto Church, and up Main Streets.

The Peerade will also introduce the candidates for Junior beauties, five of whom will be chosen by a campus vote.

George Lucchina is in charge of the Junior Week Peerade. Bob Hilton is in charge of the peerade and junior beauties.

Trophies will be awarded to the best float and the runner-up. First prize will also include a trophy awarded by the Dramatic Club.

The judging will be based on workmanship (40 pts.), originality (35 pts.), and advertising (potential) (25 pts.).

Last year's winning floats were those of Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Delta Theta.

New Dean

switched institutions, but not states, accepting an appointment as Head Resident of Women's Dormitories at Vanderbilt University.

Another change occurred during hhe following year. Once again the borders of her homestate held fast, as Morehead State College added Miss Harris to its administration. She served as Dean of Women at Morehead from 1944-46.

Her first "out-of-state" jaunt came in 1946 when she accepted a University of Michigan appointment. From 1946-50 UVM's new Dean held the post of Social Director at the University Community Center at Willow Run Village for the Coordinator of Veterans' Affairs.

The last links in the chain were forged with Miss Harris' appointments at Pennsylvania and now at the University of Vermont.

Chairmanned by Dr. Florence King, the Selection Committee included Dean Robert H. Kroepsch, Professor Florence Woodard, Professor Frederick Marston, Mrs. Florence Weld (Head Resident, Lyman Hall), Betty Peach (President-WSGA), Faith Abbey (President, Mortar Board).

This Committee reviewed some seventy applications, narrowing the "final" field down to four individuals who were subsequently invited to the University for personal interviews.

To the Selection Committee were added a number of other interviewers, including the Deans of the Colleges, Miss Simpson, President Borgmann, and the presidents of Student Association, Pan Hellenic Council, Senior Class, and, Interfraternity Council. Miss Anna Renkin Harris eventually survived the "elimination process."

Retail Film

Mr. O. D. Paddock, Manager of the Burlington, J. C. Penny Company Store, will conduct a program Wednesday, May 5 at 7:00 o'clock in the store on Church Street. He will show a film entitled "Main Street Merchants" and discuss career opportunities in retailing. All Juniors and Seniors are invited to attend. Those who would like to take advantage of this opportunity should leave their names with the Office of Student Personnel or Professor Greif by April 30.

A CAMPUS-TO-CAREER CASE HISTORY

"There wasn't a dull minute!"

DICK WALLNER, '52, left a trail of work as he whirled through a year of telephone training. Here he recalls the variety of his training jobs.

(Reading time: 36 seconds)

"Training can really be interesting. I found that out when I joined A.T.&T.'s Long Lines Department after getting my B.A. at Cincinnati and my M.A. at Michigan in '52. Long Lines is the organization specializing in Long Distance communications. I was put in the training program, and there wasn't a dull minute.

"For instance, one of my jobs in the Traffic Department was estimating the exact number of calls that would be placed in a city on Christmas Day. My estimate was off by only 68 calls!

"Then in the Plant Department, I made a study of damage done to a certain cable. Found out that the most damage occurred in an area used by hunters. Some special public relations work among hunters helped improve that situation.

"And in the Commercial Department, I helped analyze the communication problems of one of the largest textile companies—it had widespread offices and plants. The recommendations made are now in use.

"The variety in my training has carried over to my regular job here in Cincinnati. My job is to see that good service is maintained for private line customers—pipeline and power companies, theater TV and the like. Every day is different.

"As far as I am concerned, I've found my career."

Like so many college people who have joined the Bell System, Dick has a job he enjoys. There are also job opportunities with other Bell Telephone Companies, the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation. This is a good time to see your Placement Officer for full details.

Larrow And Deitsh Join To Shutout Lowell, 12-0; Vermont Loses To Uconn, 3-2, In YC Baseball Game

Catamounts Gain On Tech Errors; Score 5 In Sixth

by Mark Bernstein

Last Saturday afternoon the UVM Catamount Baseball team took on Lowell Textile at Lowell Mass. and won with an easy 12-0 shutout. The Cats came bouncing back as they avenged the loss to the University of Connecticut the previous day. The Cats made good use of nine Tech errors and nine hits off a quartet of opposing pitchers to easily ice the contest with one run in the second inning, two in the third, one in the fifth, and five big tallies in the sixth.

Deitch Relieves

Ronnie Larrow of Vermont started the game but was relieved in the fifth by soph Lew Deitch. Deitch held Lowell hitless for the remainder of the game.

"Diamond Jim" Montgomery was the first man to score for UVM, when he tallied in the second inning on an error.

In the third, George Gilbert walked, McLam double and went to third on a wild throw. McLam soon rode home on Ed Rynns deep fly ball, climaxing the two run inning.

Lowell's four errors enabled the Cats to get five more in the sixth.

Al McLam and Ed Beck had doubles while Deitch lined one of Fagan's pitchers for three bases.

Stickmen Face SMU Saturday In State Rivalry

By Ed Walker

The University of Vermont Catamounts will be up against a strong team Saturday, when they face St. Mike's at Winooski Park. This will be the first inter-state game for the Lapointe men who won State Championship a year ago, and the 47th game in the Vermont - St. Mike's rivalry which began back in 1913. Last year Vermont won both games 8-2, and 8-0 so as to make the series 32-14 in favor of U.V.M.

Up For The Game

Both teams should be in fairly good shape by Saturday. The Green and Gold will have had 9 games under their belts when game time rolls around. The U.V.M. lineup will most probably be Joe Wark at first, Al McLam at second, "Diamond" Jim Montgomery at short, and Vern Currier at the "hot corner." Ed Beck, George Gilbert, and Keith Spaulding will be patrolling the outfield, and Ed Rynn will once again don the tools behind the plate. Coach Lapointe has yet to announce his starting pitcher.

Coach "Doc" Jacobs' Purple Knights have played only one game before this one, but weeks of hard practice have gotten them into pretty good shape. The probable lineup for the Knights will be Bob Bolster at first, Tom Cowell at second, Norm Faucher at short, Russ Gangi at third, and John Barbati catching. The outfield is indefinite but the chances are that the starting pitcher will be Ronnie Lee who had a 1-1 record last year.

Rynn's Misplay Breaks Up Tie In Late Inning

by Ed Willard

The UVM Catamounts went down to defeat by a 3-2 score last Friday, losing to the University of Connecticut Huskies in a close, well played ballgame. In a last minute rescheduling, the teams were supposed to play two seven inning affairs but old man weather thought differently and limited activity to one rainy seven inning tilt.

The game was a well pitched and well played affair with Ed Rynn's error being the only serious one. As it was, both Vermont pitcher George Plender and UConn's Sid Cantor pitched fine six hitters with Plender walking only three batters.

Rynn Errors

The UConns drew first blood in the fourth inning scoring a single run on singles by Val Fiorita and Bob Morgan sandwiched around a walk to George Dropo. The Cats came back in the fifth, Vern Currier and Joe Wark led off with singles, but attempted sacrifice. Here, an error by UConn pitcher Cantor allowed Wark to score. Al McLam followed it up with a booming triple to put UVM out in front 2-1. UConn Captain Bobby Petrillo tied it all up again as he singled with a man on third. Here, Stevens hit a sharp single to left. Beck recovered fast and made a good throw home but catcher Rynn dropped it and there went the old ballgame as rain brought it to a halt in the seventh.

Wark 3 For 3

It was a tough game to lose but as UVM Coach Ralph Lapointe put it, "The other team had to beat us, we didn't beat ourselves." Lapointe was also impressed with the improved second-short combination of McLam and Montgomery. George Plender struck out six and allowed only six hits. Joe Wark led the hit parade with a perfect three for three. Jerry Samuels made his initial appearance on the diamond as he faced right-hander Cantor and got a single in four attempts. Coach Lapointe planned to use Don Maynard against lefties.

The Catamounts have had an off week but swing back into action Saturday against St. Mikes across the river at Winooski Park.

UVM Harriers Nipped By Bates In Quad Meet

Cats Lose 58-51 5 Marks Broken; Grady In 4:35.2

by Harry Rosenberg

The University of Vermont's Harriers opened their home track season last Saturday with a quadrangular meet, highlighted by five record shattering performances. Finishing but seven points behind Bates College's 58½ point total, the Cats took second place in the race for team honors, finishing ahead of Middlebury's 33 and Colby with 22.

UVM's sophomore mile ace Don Grady set the pattern for this balmy spring afternoon at Centennial Field, reeling off a 4:35.2 effort in his specialty to break by a tenth of a second the meet record set five years ago by Horne of Bates. From then on records fell furiously.

High jumpers Pfeiffer of Middlebury and Vollmer of Colby equalled the mark of 5'10¾" set last year by Middlebury's Tom Hart. Later on in the day Ronnie Doornbosch of the Vermonters topped his own 42'6½ shot put mark with a toss of 43'4 5/8". Next on the record parade was the 182'6" javelin mark of Bates' Kent, seven feet better than the old standard set last year by Howell of the same school. Eddie Holmes of Bates continued the spectacular field event performances by breaking his own mark in the discus with a 140'2" effort. Last, but far from least of the new records was the 12'1¼" height attained by Bates' Lind in the pole vault. The latter bettered the previous standard set three years ago by Middlebury's Hemphill, by a full seven inches.

Besides these performances, top showings were turned in by Roger Schmutz of Bates, who walked off with first place in both the 440 and 880 with 51.8 and 2:1.4 showings; Barrows of the same school, winner in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes with 10.0 and 22.5 marks; as well as teammates Swift, Beck and Delco who triumphed in the hammer, broad jump and 220 low hurdles respectively. Also impressing was UVM's Larry Damon who won by half a lap over his nearest competitor in the two mile grind, while the 120 yard low hurdles went to Colby's lone track winner Jacobs, who sped the distance in 16.2.

One dark spot marred the day's events, when a Middlebury freshman, Jim Boyd, injured his leg while warming up for the broad jump and was forced to leave the field in an ambulance.

100-yard dash: Won by Barrows (B); 2nd, Manson (V); 3rd, Myers (M); 4th, Upton (B). Time: 10.0 sec.

220-yard dash: Won by Barrows (B); 2nd, Manson (V); 3rd, Myers (M); 4th, Jannoni (V). Time: 25.5 sec.

440-yard dash: Won by Schmutz (B); 2nd, Evans (M); 3rd, Stevens (V); 4th, Wadley (V). Time: 51.8 sec.

880-yard run: Won by Schmutz (B); 2nd, Grady (V); 3rd, Christie (C); 4th, Joyner (V). Time: 2 min., 1 4 sec.

One mile run: Won by Grady (V); 2nd, Joyner (V); 3rd, Eastman (B); 4th, Redmond (M). Time: 4 min., 35.2 sec. (New meet record.)

Two mile run: Won by Damon (V); 2nd, Hayward (M); 3rd, Osmun (V); 4th, Martin (M). Time: 10 min., 27.2 sec.

120 yard high hurdles: Won by Jacobs (C); 2nd, Holmes (M); 3rd, Thompson (V); 4th, Sykes, (M). Time: 16.2 sec.

220-yard low hurdles: Won by Dalco (B); 2nd, Jacobs (C); 3rd, Thompson (V); 4th, Holmes (M). Time: 26.7 sec.

Pole vault: Won by Lind (B); tie for 2nd, Saurwein (V), Paul (M), Tremaine (M). Height: 12 ft., 1¼ in. (New meet record.)

High jump: Tie for 1st, Pfeiffer (M) and Vollmer (C); tie for 3rd, McCabe (V) and Barwise (B). Height: 5 ft., 10¾ in. (Ties meet record.)

Broad jump: Won by Beck (B); 2nd, Saurwein (V); 3rd, Mirabelli (M); 4th, Bryant (V). Distance: 19 ft., 10¾ in.

Shot put: Won by Doornbosch (V); 2nd, Zullinger (C); 3rd, Pfeiffer (M); 4th, Cowan (B). Distance: 43 ft., 4⅝ in. (New meet record.)

Discus throw: Won by Holmes (B); 2nd, Doornbosch (V); 3rd, Kloster (M); 4th, Snell (M). Distance: 140 ft., 2 in. (New meet record.)

Hammer throw: Won by Swift (B); 2nd, Holmes (B); 3rd, Doornbosch (v); 4th, Talbot (V). Distance: 138 ft., 2 in.

Meet The Varsity

George Plender

It's a good humored, quiet Junior that may spell the difference between just a so-so season and a great year for Ralph Lapointe's 1954 Catamounts. George, who hails from Tenafly, N.J., tips the scales at an even 175 and stands 5' 11".

At Tenafly High he was a three sports man, running track and playing baseball and football.

The smooth throwing righty of Theta Chi has played varsity ball for three years and boasts a 3-1 record for his first season and a 3-2 figure for last year.

The treasurer of the Varsity Club, George will be remembered as this year's Assistant Kake Walk director and will be one of the directors next year.

Last summer he played ball for the Presque Isle team of the Maine-New Brunswick League and this summer will be putting in his six weeks at R.O.T.C. summer camp.

George is majoring in Marketing and Merchandising, plans to join the Air Force after college and then give baseball a try.

Ronald Doornbosch

Ron, or "Dubbie" to those who know him best, is a big 6'2", 200 pounder with a laugh that's just as large. He's a Theta Chi, a Varsity Club member and is vice-president of his fraternity.

In his spare moments Ron gets in another favorite sport, hunting. Collecting guns is still another interest.

A native of Rochelle Park, N.J., he got his high schooling at Hackensack High where he put in four years at varsity track.

The leading pointman for the Postmen last season with 53, Ron throws the shot, discus and hammer. He holds the all-time UVM record for the shot which, incidently, he broke only a week ago with a 44' 8½" toss.

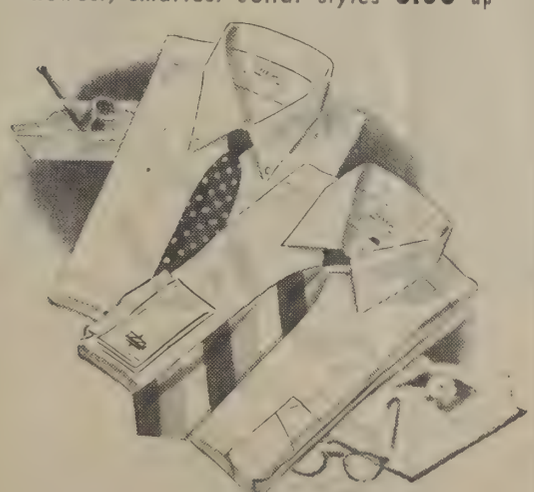
Like George, it will be R.O.T.C. camp for Ron this summer. An Economics major in the College of Arts and Sciences, he plans on a three year hitch with the Air Force after college.

Bouymen Share First At Midd; Edge Williams

by Dick Stein

This past weekend, with blue skies above and clear blue water below, the UVM Sailing Team engaged in two intercollegiate meets.

Saturday we were played host to by Middlebury College. Also competing were our neighbors from across the bridge, St. Michael's College. After the sails were set, races completed, and points totaled, it was announced that UVM and Middlebury had tied for first place, with a total of seven points each. (The points are gained as follows: each team gets one point for each boat he finishes ahead of.) The reason the scoring was so low, was because not all of the races were run. Some of them had to be cancelled due to the lack of wind.



Sailors Win

Sunday, however, there was plenty of wind on Lake Champlain, and it was UVM's turn to play the role of host. Competing against us, this time, were Middlebury, Williams, and Dartmouth. Vermont entered two of its top-notch skippers, Don Cutler, this years captain, and Bill Day. The Catamounts of the sea just couldn't be denied today, with Day taking three firsts and Cutler two. The totals showed a Vermont victory. The scoring went: Vermont 33; Williams 31; Dartmouth 28; Middlebury 26.

Frosh Tracksters Compete Tomorrow At Lyndon School

by TED MULLER

Tomorrow afternoon the UVM Frosh Sprinsters will travel to Lyndon to engage in their first meet of the season when they face Lyndon Institute.

Of the 40 men here on campus that did some form of track or other while in high school, only 20 or so showed up for the team. 'No one gets cut on this squad," voiced Coach Strassburg. "We need and use every man that puts in his time during the week and shows interest."

Donnelly Pleased With Showings Of New Prospects

by Dick Lewis

Spring football practice ended this past week at Centennial Field under the direction of Head Coach Ed Donnelly. Upwards to forty freshmen and upperclassmen who have never played varsity ball attended these sessions which lasted for ten days. Members of last years varsity squad were not required to attend these practices, although many of them appeared voluntarily.

Since these sessions were strictly informal, Mr. Donnelly says that he and his assistants stressed the fundamentals of the sport. Those men who develop sufficiently will be invited to the regular training session in the fall at which time they will practice with the Catamounts Varsity Team.

No St. Mikes Filler

This writer questioned Coach Donnelly concerning the open date that appeared in the Cats schedule as a result of St. Michael's dropping football. His reply was that it was practically impossible to fill the opening at this late date since most colleges make their commitments two or more years in advance.

The first home game will be against the University of Maine and that weekend is also Homecoming.

Greenhorns Impress

The coaches were especially impressed by the work of Lew Reische, Roy Williams, Ray Flannery, Harry Baumann, Bill Farwell, Johnny Galascione and Paul Harrassionowicz. Without a doubt these men made outstanding contributions to the two weeks of drills conducted by Ed Donnelly and his staff. Several members of last years varsity squad have been working out too. They include ace quarterback Mike Semans, and linemen Walt Johnson and Clem Forte.

Y Conf. Upholds NCAA Frosh Ineligibility

Taking action at their annual meeting the Yankee Conference directors declared, as a matter of principle, their objection to scheduling teams which waive the freshman rule in intercollegiate sports.

Dr. Carl Woodward, President of the University of Rhode Island, who was elected president of the six-state New England Conference for 1954-55 pointed out that the action did not prohibit member teams from scheduling opponents which use freshmen but described it as a "declaration of principle".

Dr. Woodward succeeds President Robert F. Chandler, Jr. of the University of New Hampshire as conference head.

Fred Tootell of Rhode Island was named to succeed Carl Lundholm of New Hampshire as secretary-treasurer. Bill Steam of Durham, N.H. was reelected director of public relations.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT AND STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

VOL. 72 BURLINGTON, VERMONT MAY 6, 1954 NO. 6

New Artist Series To Provide Top Cultural Entertainment

$300,000 Gift Will Finance Endeavor

"Once the new Artist Series is started, we'll have a program which is second to none," Richard Viets told the CYNIC last week. Viets is chairman of this year's Program Series. This optimistic statement above is a result of a $300,000 grant made available to the University last week. The announcement was made by Carl W. Borgmann, President of the University, as an unexpected highlight of the Festival of Fine Arts and Crafts, held on this campus over last weekend.

The gift was presented to the University by the widow of George B. Lane, UVM '83. Mr. Lane died in 1943.

He was co-founder and first business manager of the CYNIC.

The money was made available with the stipulation that it was to be utilized for an artist series which would be open to both the University family and the Burlington community. Admission will be charged in compliance with the legal stipulations under which the money was granted.

According to President Borgmann, the $300,000 will be placed in a bank, where it will accrue an expected ten to twelve thousand dollars interest annually. The interest plus the proceeds derived from sale of tickets will be used to bring top-flight singers, musicians, musical and drama groups, ballet troupes and similar attractions to the University and the Burlington area.

Viets forecast the appearance of such groups as The Metropolitan Opera Company and the New York Philharmonic. "As a matter of fact," he explained, "next year's Program Series Committee, headed by Marge Rowell and Dick Simpson, is already in the process of bringing "The Caine Mutiny" to campus next semester."

Program Series has slowed its planning for next year, awaiting the decision as to the possibility of the Artist Series starting next semester. If this is the case Program Series as such will come to an end. It is expected that the present Series Committee will be asked to take on the job of administering the new Artist Series in collaboration with some factions of the Burlington Community Concert Administration.

The Community Concert group has been included in the organization of the new

Billings Library To Install Rubber Mats In Aisles

Billings Library has received a $500 appropriation from the Vending Machine Fund Committee which has been used for the purchase of rubber mats to replace the worn linoleum along the aisles in the library. The sum which had been requested was $1,100 which would cover the amount of rubber matting needed to replace all of the linoleum. A second petition has been filed with the Kakewalk Disposition Committee requesting the $600 remainder. The mats are 3 feet in width and made of soft rubber, with a hard rubber finish to insure durability. They will be placed where the linoleum is now; in front of the main door, along the aisles, in front of the card catalogue, and several other places.

According to Mr. Smith, "the main purpose of the purchase is an attempt to decrease the noise throughout the library. At present the noise is a disturbing factor, particularly to students studying on the main floor." Half of the matting has arrived, but will not be put down until the Kakewalk Disposition Committee decides upon the amount of the second appropriation.

Robert Frost Here Tonight

Robert Frost will speak and read his poetry tonight at 8:30 in the Ira Allen Chapel. The talk is open to the public and tickets will be on sale at the door. Mr. Frost's visit is made possible by a loan from the Student Association and the University. Marcia Fink, chairman of the student-faculty committee in charge of arrangements, said, "I am sure that the evening will be a most worthwhile one for everyone, and we are hoping to have a large audience."

Mr. Frost recently received attention from the nation's press when he celebrated his eightieth birthday. He has been a well known poet since the publication in 1914 of his "North of Boston," which he described simply as "a book of people." In his literary career Mr. Frost has received four pulitzer prizes and numerous other valued awards and prizes.

Research Dynamics Is Topic Of American Marketing Talk

Mr. A. E. Cascino, director of market research for the home appliances divisions of AVCO Manufacturing Corporation, will speak on "Research Dynamics for Tomorrow's Market" this Tuesday in room 239 Waterman Building at 7:30. Mr. A.E. Cascino is one of the speakers in the American Marketing Speaks series, and the talk is free and open to the public.

In announcing the speaker, Professor Edwin Charles Greif of the department of commerce and economics said, "Mr. Cascino is a down to earth businessman. He must make quick decisions, and these decisions must be translated into action which succeeds. Mr. Cascino is one of the top men in his field, as shown by the fact that he was one of the twenty-five chosen to attend the "American Marketing Theory Seminar last summer."

Taught Economics

A native of Chicago, Mr. Cascino received his B.A. from Northwestern University and a master's degree in economics at the University of Illinois. He taught economics at Ripon College, Wisconsin, in 1944, and in 1945 he was the chief economist of the durable goods branch of the Office of Price Administration. He then joined Bendix, and has been director of market research of Bendix Home Appliances since 1946.

Exams Cover Only Nine Days; Change Seen As Beneficial

No Classes One Day Previous To Finals

Final examinations this semester start on Thursday, May 27 and end on Monday, June 7. This is a nine day period, the same length of time that had been approved for next mid-years.

Since there are certain advantages in a nine day period, the University council has given its approval to begin that schedule at this time.

One day has been eliminated at each end of the examination period. The day at the beginning of the period will give everyone one full day after classes end before any examinations are held which can be used in study. The one day cut off at the end of the period will give the faculty an additional day during which no examinations will be held, to get in the grades to the Registrar's Office. This is very important in the Spring as all senior grades must be recorded by the end of the day, Thursday, June 10.

Three Periods Daily

To schedule the examinations in the nine day period means that there have been some changes in the hours when the examinations will be held. There will be two periods each day in which both two and three hour examinations can be held and one period for two hour examinations. The new hours will be 8:30 - 11:30 A.M., 12:30 - 2:30 P.M., and 3 - 6 P.M.

Every effort has been made in scheduling the examinations to avoid three large freshman examinations in one day. Since senior examinations will be held in each of the three hour blocks, some seniors have examinations right through the period. This should prove to be no problem in obtaining senior grades as they are due twenty four hours after an examination is held.

Some Conflicts

There are undoubtedly a few conflicts in the examination schedule. That is, the same student will be scheduled to have two examinations during the same period. It is practically impossible to avoid conflicts of this nature. Where they occur the student and the instructors concerned will work out a solution to the conflict.

It is regrettable, but several probably have three examinations in one day. There is no way this can be avoided under the present system of making up the examination schedule. Contrary to the belief of many students there is no University rule whereby a student is limited to only two examinations in one day.

Several instructors will schedule their own examinations when they learn what free periods their students have. The hours and rooms for these examinations and any changes found necessary to make in the original schedule will be on the counter in the Registrar's Office, Room 110.

Extra Deferment Exam To Be Held In Two Weeks

Selective Service National Headquarters announced today that it has authorized a special administration of the College Qualification Test on Thursday, May 20, 1954 for the benefit of students prevented by illness or other emergency from attending one of the regular administrations on November 19, 1953 and April 22, 1954. May 20 is the last date upon which the College Qualification Test will be held during the present academic year.

Although applications postmarked May 10, 1954, or earlier will be accepted, students wishing to apply are urged to secure, complete, and mail their applications at once. Early filing will insure a test and other necessary supplies for the student at the center he selects or at a nearby center, according to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the College Qualification Test.

When filling in the application, available at Selective Service local boards, the student should cross out "April 22" apposite the space reading "Center No." and write in "May 20."

Three Students Found Guilty Of Collaboration

Two cases involving 4 UVM students were heard and decided by the UVM Student Court last Thursday. 3 of the 4 students were found guilty of collaborating on their work in freshman English.

Two students failed the paper and received Court warnings. A third student failed the paper, received a Court warning and a penalty of 2 weeks of social probation. The fourth student was not guilty, but received a warning.

Exam Schedule

With the posting of the final exam schedule earlier this week came word that the examination period had been cut to nine, instead of the customary twelve, days.

Opinions were a dime a dozen in the groups which milled around the bulletin boards which proclaimed the news. Most of the discussion we overheard was on the gripe side of the ledger. Especially mournful were the tales told by a large segment of the sophomore class which has ended up with three exams on the last day of the examination period.

With this particular group, we sympathize. An unfortunate scheduling was achieved in this segment of exams. However, for the remainder of the gripers, we offer no sympathy. There are no more instances of three exams in one day this year than in the past, according to the records of Harold C. Collins, the man behind the schedule. Moreover, there are only two or three conflicts of examinations. Believe it or not, the schedule is drawn up with the name of every individual in the University at the fingertips of Mr. Collins, Director of Admissions and Records. Eleven thousand individual programs were arranged this month to insure the best possible combinations.

We arrive at the conclusion that the exam schedule is at least as good as the original twelve day program. The only actual change that has occurred is a compression of your exams into fewer days. Something tells us that the reason behind the gripes is not the schedule, but the attitude expressed by the guy in the coffee-shop line who said," But now I'm going to have to work harder to do well, and I haven't worked for three years. It's ridiculous to to start now."

Lot Of Money

With $300,000 made available for a new Artist Series next year, we find ourselves in a situation which does not allow for speakers as a part of the series. The grant, however, may be a blessing in disguise.

A better opportunity could not have knocked on the door of the Cultural Committee. This group has made an attempt in recent weeks to inject itself with new life-blood. It became impotent this year when the Program Series Committee, one of the Cultural committee's sub-groups, became so important that it completely overshadowed the parent committee, and in fact became the parent committee.

The Artist Series could still be a sub-group of the Cultural Committee. In addition a lecture program could be arranged by another sub-committee. Ideally lecturers would be on campus once a week.

This does not imply that there are too few lecturers on campus at present. We merely come out bluntly and say that we are at present entangled in a flood of mediocrity. Seldom is a really top-notch lecturer on this campus. We do, of course admit to exceptions to this charge.

Any money left over from the Artist Series funds, could conceivable be delegated by the Board of Trustees to the Cultural Committee for the administration of a lecture series which could rival the Artist Series in excellence.

If there has been any lack of student attendance at lectures and cultural events, we chalk it up in large part to the mediocrity of the program, rather than the apparent disinterest of the student body, though once again we do not absolve them completely, not by a long shot.

The Texan

And while we're on the subject, we were amused by the Texan who spoke at Founder's Day--the direct descendent of one-fourth of the original graduating class--Charles S. Adams Jr. But we were only amused. We were neither inspired, nor impressed, nor convinced of his value as a speaker. Rather, he was a "gimmick." He was a little thread of tradition, and even this does not justify his choice as the leading speaker of the occasion. Once again, in the field of lecturers, mediocrity was the watchword.

WORM GETTING A PERMANENT

As you probably guessed this Droodle is pure fantasy. A real worm would have no reason to get a permanent as worms have no hair. Of course, a worm might get a permanent in ITSELF. But that would probably interfere with its means of locomotion as worms usually . . . If you don't mind, this is a pretty dull subject and I think I'll go on to something else. Women, for instance. Women spend an undue amount of time and money trying to kink up their hair. I remember my sister Thelma finally got tired of going to so much trouble and she got her hair cut off short in what they call an Italian Cut. It was a real Italian hair cut. She had to put tomato paste on it to keep it down.

OUTSIDE WORLD AS SEEN BY MAN LIVING IN BEER CAN

At first glance the situation depicted by this Droodle may seem highly unlikely or even impossible. But this is just because you are the type of person who jumps to conclusions. True, it would be impossible for a man to live in an ordinary beer can, but did it ever occur to you that someone might have a special beer can six feet tall and three and a half feet in diameter—custom-built for themselves? These days such a snug haven would offer many advantages. If you lived in a Beer Can, you'd never have to worry about politics, economics, unwelcome visitors or in-laws. And if you could arrange to have the can always half-filled with beer . . . Well . . .

(ACP) Students at the U. of Rhode Island were touched when they spotted a little piggy bank resting in front of the cash register at the student canteen. In front of the bank was a sign saying, "Save your piggery? Donate to the Piggery Reclamation Fund!" Though there is no such fund--at least not at the U. of Rhode Island--students contributed $2.

Birmingham, Ala. - (I.P.)- Objective tests are better than essay type examinations, a conference of southern educators decided recently at Florida State University. "They decided the best test is the one that evaluates the student's factual information rather than his attitudes and beliefs." Dean Shanks reported. He personally did not agree in full with the edict of the 14-state conference, which was co-sponsored by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J. The best method, he said, "is to get good teachers and give them a free rein. It is not so much what the testing program is, "Dr. Shanks added, "as what the teacher does in the classroom."

The Trinity Tripod (Hartford, Conn.) A move to permit the consumption of beer and wine in the dormitories was approved by the Senate Monday evening. The proposal will not become a regulation, however, until it is passed by the administration. It had been expressed that while upperclassmen are allowed to consume the alcoholic beverages in their fraternity houses, they are not permitted to do so in their rooms. The proposition was passed by A NINE TO FIVE MARGIN.

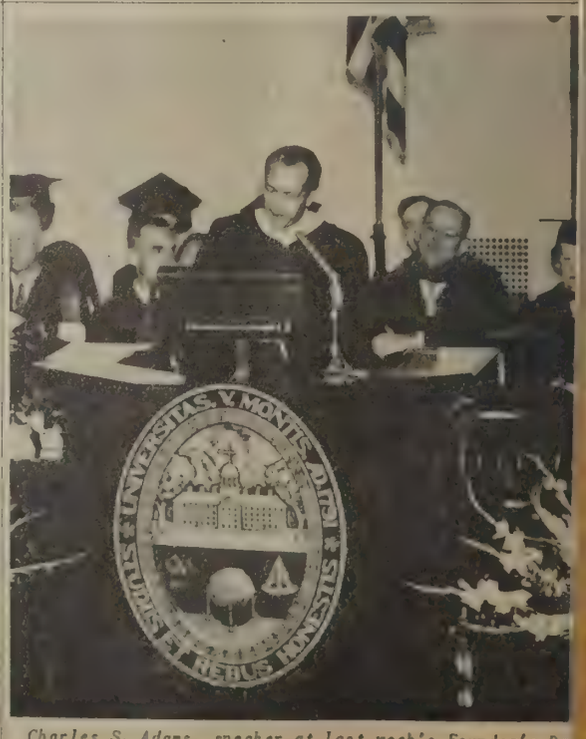
Tuition Jumps To New Height

This year the tuition for in state students at the University of Vermont jumped to a new height and caused many students to ask themselves: "Just what is UVM? Is it a private university, or is it state-financed? If so, why should the tuition rates be so high?"

There are many reasons for the increased cost of tuition, the main one being that, although UVM is a state university, the Vermont Legislature does not appropriate a large enough sum of money for the University to meet all expenses, thereby making it necessary to charge the students these unusually high rates.

Budget Example

An example of the operating costs at UVM are those taken from the budget of 1952-1953, when the total expenditures exceeded $4,000,000. This amount was used in varous amounts for salaries, building operations, administration, libraries, and research, both agricultural and medical.



A sum of slightly over $1,000,000 was received from the government, i.e., city, state, federal, and county, for the specific purpose of research.

Another source of income is from gifts and grants. About 7% of the funds received are gifts from private or public sources, also given for specific purposes, namely research. However, a small amount of this may be used for more general purposes. Along with gifts and grants, the endowment income may be included, but this is a very small amount, only 3% of the total.

Sales and services allow for the receiving of 11% of the sum of the budget, since many departments carry on services for which a slight fee is asked. An example is the University Farm which carries on various services and sales, including the sale of milk, poultry, and eggs.

Large Tuition

However, the largest percentage of income, 44%, is received from tuition and fees. The total amount exceeding $1,500,000. This large sum is necessary because the other sources of income do not cover the total operating costs. Unless there is an increase in state aid, tuition will have to remain at its present high level.

Prof's Swap Homes; Combine Summer Jobs And Vacations

A number of professors at UVM are exchanging homes on a summertime basis with professors at other institutions around the country, thus managing to combine vacation and sight-seeing with summertime teaching posts.

Lyman Rowell, director of the Summer Session at UVM which begins June 21 with a special eight weeks session, reports that Prof. John Huden of the College of Education and Nursing will exchange homes with Prof. Ronner Crawford of the University of New Mexico where Prof. Huden will teach. Prof. Crawford, in turn, will come to UVM to teach a course in educational measurements and evaluation and seminar course in educational administration.

A second UVMer to exchange living quarters with a Summer Session staffer is Prof. Randolph S. Towne who will travel to the University of Maryland to teach Spanish. Prof. Arnold Becker of Maryland will come to UVM to teach Spanish in the Summer Session.

Sub-Let Homes

Rowell notes that there are many instances where members of the UVM faculty are subletting their homes and apartments to teachers coming to UVM as Summer staffers, and, presumably, faculty members of other institutions are doing likewise.

The home and apartment exchange has been found so practical for teachers and persons on the staffs of educational institutions that someone, a Californian naturally, has established a Vacation Home Exchange Service whereby, for a slight registration fee, a teacher or staff member can sign up for an exchange home, listing his own for the benefit of other registrants.

The service claims that its registrants can eliminate home care and lodging costs on all future vacations by offering his own home or apartment on an exchange basis to someone in another "vacation area."

The Service charges a $1 registration fee and a $10 a month exchange fee.

It lists openings in 56 cities from Boothbay Harbor, Me., to Sierra Madre, Calif., and a variety of points like Crystal City, Tex., and Chinook, Mont., in between.

Martha Howe, Dance Expert Graces Women's Gym Dept.

This year the University of Vermont added an accomplished dancer to the Women's Physical Education Department, in the person of Miss Martha Howe, a graduate of Barnard College for Women and Sara Lawrence.

She received her M.A. from Sara Lawrence and then studied music at Julliard. Miss Howe has a broad dancing background. She has danced at the Henry Street Playhouse and various other places around the New York area. In addition, she taught dancing to graduates at Barnard, and received training in the art of dance from Hayna Home, Pearl Premus, and Alwin Nicholas. Some of these people have done Choreography work for big shows. Alwin Nicholas is the director of the Henry Street Playhouse. Juniors and seniors will remember Pearl Primus from her 1952 Program Series performance. Miss Howe also gives a ballet concert for children every year as a gift performance.

UVM Work

Miss Howe's work at the University of Vermont involves teaching dance technique. Her official title is, "Women's Physical Education Instructor, Specializing in Dance." "I believe that everyone should enroll in the Dancing course," says Miss Howe, as she is a strong

One Water Cooler To Be Installed In Waterman Building

A total of $225 has been given by the Vending Machine Fund for the purpose of installing one water cooler in Waterman Building. This water cooler will be electrically operated and will be located at the south end of the first floor.

The Vending Machine Committee, which is composed of both faculty and students, received a petition from Dr. Lyman Rowell, Associate Professor of Zoology and Director of Summer Session, requesting the installation of water coolers on various floors of Waterman. This was done since water coolers are needed all year round, but especially during the summer months.

The Committee then recommended the request to the Vending Machine Fund, which is jointly administered by President Carl Borgmann and the Student Association. The money was set aside for one water cooler, hoping that the University would realize the great need for them and install more in the near future.

Although a definite date for the installation of the water cooler is not known as yet, it will probably be installed before summer session begins.

Livestock Show Held Saturday At University Farm

By Bruce Evans

The Catamount Livestock Show will be held this Saturday at the University Farm. It is sponsored by the Animal Industry Club of which Rosemarie Eurich is the president. Larry Taylor is chairman of the committee which is in charge of the show.

The program is scheduled to run as follows. The first five classes will be shown from 9:30 to 12:00. They are Holstein Junior Calves, Columbia Crossbred Southdale Yearling Ewes, Guernsey Calves, Ayshire Calves, and Columbia Yearling Ewes. One hour is given to lunch.

After a few words of welcome by Dean Carrigan the guests will be introduced by Dr. Riddell.

At 1:00 Jersey calves, Class Six, will be presented. The Parade of Sires, at 1:30, will consist of walking the dairy herd bulls and the Morgan stallions. Class Seven, at 2pm., will be Columbia Southdale Yearling Ewes. This will be followed by the co-ed milking contest. The last two classes are Morgan Fillies and Holstein Senior Calves.

After a special feature, Premier Dairy Showmanship will be held, consisting of the winners in the five classes of calves, and then Premier Livestock Showmanship for the best handler in the whole show.

There will be three ribbons awarded in each class, with additional prizes, such as show halters, subscriptions to the Morgan horse magazine, and carving sets. The judgements are made on the basis of grooming, general condition of the animal, and showmanship. The three judges are Earl Krantz of Middlebury, Donald Kinsman of the Uni-

On Wednesday evening, April 21,. 1954 ACACIA Fraternity held its annual Housemothers party. This party is held every year for all the head house residents on campus. The evening started with the brothers and pledges introducing and getting acquainted with the guests. Then Brother Dave Curwen with the assistance of M.C. Brother Carr interviewed the house residents on our tape recorder. It was played back so they could hear how they sounded on the air.

The highlight of the evening was a skit by the Brothers entitled, "Excavate it Rich." This was a humourous skit on a take off of the famous radio show, Strike It Rich. Refreshments were served by the House Parents Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ritter. The menu consisted of jellied chicken salad, pickles and cake and coffee. The evening was very successful and it gave the fraternity an opportunity to say Good Bye to U. V. M.'s beloved Dean of Women, Dean Simpson.

In the Sports Department, Acacia's new look softball team walked over ATO, 17-11 with the losers coming up with 8 unearned runs on a sloopy field. Bob Stetson held them buffaloed for 7 innings while the defense fought the mud and wind to allow the 8 runs. Hitting was featured by Dick Turner, Dick Galusha, Larry Williams and John Andrews. The gang at 305 Maple are looking for a good year in the softball league.

Phi Delta Theta's new House Manager for the 1954-55 season is Frank Maccini of Wellesley, Mass. Phi Delt is making extensive plans for its Formal on May 1. Included in the festivities are a dance, a cocktail party and a buffet dinner, all being held at the house.

Sigma Gamma installed its new officers on April 19, as follows: President-Phil Bracey, '57, Hardwick; Secretary- Patricia McKeown '55, Richmond; Treasurer- Judith Black '55, Hyde Park; Rush Captain and Pledge Mother- Miriam Aho '55, Chester; Chaplain- Judith Black '55, Hyde Park; Pan-Hellenic Representative- June Squires '57, Arlington; Social Chairman- Janet Parker '55, West Rutland.

The sorority's new pledges are Mary Cutts '57, Townshend; Marlene Patrick, '57, Jamacia; Joy Hayes '57, Brattleboro; Gayle Lyons '57, Albany, New York; Nancy Russell '57, Rutland; Marjorie Reed '55, Craftsbury; Janet Marsh '57, Bethel; Martha Monteith '57, Enosburg Falls; Ada Pratt '57, Newfane; Myra Van Deusen '57, South Royalton.

The Sigma Gamma Annual Spring Formal will be held on Saturday May 1st. The theme of the affair is "On the Riviera." Tuesday April 17th, the sorority gave a Dessert Hour in honor of Miss Mary Jean Simpson at the Claggett House.

Alpha Delta Pi announce that Marguerite "Mickey" Rotenolli and Ellie May both accepted an open bid last week and were pledged on Sunday afternoon, April 25th.

Favorite spot these days is steps of Waterman Building.

Kappa Alpha Theta will hold its annual picnic for the Institute of Logopedics, on Thursday, May 13, at the Theta house. Tickets will be on sale that week. Admission 85¢.

All the TEP's would like to congratulate and thank all the fraternities and sororities who participated in making this year's edition of the I.F.C. Sing a really great and memorable occasion for everyone. Bouquets to the Tri-Delts and the Sig Nus for their firsts.

Sigma Phi Epsilon has a 1-1 record in softball this year, after losing to the Kappa Sigs, 14-4 and taking the Owls, 24-14. Sig Ep's Spring Formal will be held on Friday evening, April 30.

ATO in the last few weeks has undergone some drastic changes, due, no doubt, to the Spring weather. Some of these enterprises are listed under Cloud Seven news...The Taus are holding their Spring Formal this coming weekend, as usual, at the Champlain Club. It's expected to be one of the biggest events of the year, climaxed by choosing an ATO Sweetheart. An informal picnic is planned for the following day. Saturday. Worthy Master, Bob Mallozi has made his new appointments in John Manning and Tom Cogan as Social Chairmen; William Kacher, Athletic Chairman; John Forest, Jalon Reporter; and Dave Chittick and Jim Crawford, in charge of Interfraternity competition.

Wherever You Go In Engineering you'll find LUFKIN Measuring Tapes

In every industry engineers need specialized measuring equipment — that is why Lufkin, world-wide specialist in measuring devices, makes nearly 8,000 different tapes, rules, and precision tools.

In highway, railroad, oil, mining, surveying, forestry, and construction work, engineers specify Lufkin "Chrome Clad" steel measuring tapes to get the most on-the-job durability. In swamp, brush, desert, gravel pits, and wherever a tough dependable tape is an absolute must, Lufkin "Michigan" babbitt metal chain tapes are preferred. City engineers and construction engineers use the Lufkin "Wolverine." The line in the Lufkin "Western" is the same weight as chain tapes, but subdivided throughout, making it ideal for heavy field work. Lufkin "Lucas" mine tapes resist rust and corrosion. In the oil fields "Chrome Clad" tapes are standard as they withstand hard use, fumes, and corrosion — they are used for gaging, tank strapping, and measuring standing casing.

When you go out on the job specify Lufkin measuring tapes—you will find one for your every measuring need. Send today for your free catalog.

Artist Series

Series, as it is expected that the magnitude of the Artist Series will completely overshadow the local cultural endeavor.

With ten to twelve thousand dollars available from the interest and at least $7,500 added through the sale of tickets (based on this year's Program Series figures) approximately $18,000 will be on hand annually to bring outstanding talent to UVM. According to Dr. Borgmann's interpretation, this particular Series will not be able to include speakers, due to the stipulations which call for musical, drama productions, and other similar programs.

Both President Borgmann and Viets, however, agreed that a program of speakers is an integral part of any series of this sort, in addition to being important regardless of its connection with any series, and suggested that a separate lecture series will be set up to parallel the new Artist Series.

Allen House Is Most Popular Dorm

By Helen McKuskie

Like all other dorms, the two telephones on the first and second floors are busy all the time, and the smoker is always filled with girls. This dorm, the Allen House, is very similar to all the other girls' dorm, but there are many factors which make Allen House one of the most popular dorms on campus.

One of these is that it is one of the four co-operative living units at UVM. Here, the girls share the responsibility of cooking their own food, waitressing, and washing the dishes. This lightens the expenses of the girls living in it. The food is supplied each week by the Foods Department, which also organizes the menu for the respective week. In order to see that the duties of the girls are carried out correctly, a House Fellow is appointed, and like any other office on the House Committee, the last analysis of the appointment is made by the Women's Student Government Association. This year Elinor Parker, the House Fellow of Allen House, has the responsibility of fulfilling the duties, which include making out the cooking and waitress lists, taking over full responsibility of the kitchen when the House Mother is away, and acting as a bridge between the Head Resident and the girls living in the dorm.

Builds Equality

The fact that Allen House is a co-op also brings forth the idea of equality, since the girls all come from the same type of family background, where the family income has been moderate. This immediately cancels any formation of cliques, which are sometimes found in other dorms, when girls who are accustomed to higher income living often form groups of their own. In other words, prejudice is not an outstanding characteristic in this dorm.

A factor which seems more outstanding, in this dorm than in any other, is the group spirit of the girls. They have very often worked together on activities in order to achieve an honor for the Allen House. For example, at present there are five Cups proudly sitting on the mantel of the fireplace: Scholarship, 1952-53; Basketball 1952-53; Softball 1951-53; Kake Walk Sculpture 1953-54; and All-Spirts Cup which has been awarded to them five time out of the past six years.

Quotes

Of course, since this dorm has many different characteristics, students often wonder how the girls living there like it. There are 32 girls living in the dorm, including freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. The girls enjoy living there for their own reasons, and most of them wouldn't trade it for any other dorm. Lyn Greenia, a solhomore, says, "It's good experience for sharing responsibility without hindering study habits as so many people often believe." Phyllis Bracey, a freshman, thinks, "a co-op is a help to freshmen because they learn to work with their dormmates and learn the thriftiness and convenience of a co-op." And Elinor Parker, a junior, says, "I think it's a grand experience and it has been as important in my education as classes or any other extra-curricular activities."

Two Operas Part Of Junior Week Festive Program

The operas "Sunday Excursion" and "Trouble in Tahati" were presented this week by the University Players and the Music Club. Due to the late date of the performances the CYNIC does not have the reviews of the operas in this issue. A full review will appear in next week's issue.

The operas were directed by Mr. Greg Falls of the speech department and Professor Howard Bennett of the music department. Some of the students taking part in "Sunday Excursion" were Dave Chittick, Marlene Goodenough, Marcia Mockridge, John Van Blarcom, and Ken Vanderbilt.

Bev Rohr and Elliot Bryant took the leading roles in "Trouble in Tahiti". A twenty-voice choir was on stage to add to the performance.

Theta House Holds Annual Fete For Logopedics

The Annual Spring Picnic for the benefit of children suffering from Logopedics will be held next Thursday at the Kappa Alpha Theta house. According to Jeannie Engle, who is in charge of the picnic, "The money which we receive goes for a very worthy cause, and we usually have a very good supper. For these reasons we expect to have a large crowd. Everyone is most cordially invited to attend from 4:00 to 7:00."

If the weather is fair the picnic will be held on the lawn outside the house, but if there is rain the picnic will have to be held indoors. 350 people attended last year. It is expected that there will be hot dogs, potato salad, pickles, ice cream, egg salad, and all the things which usually go to make up a spring picnic. The cost is 85 cents.

WRUV Reaches Men's Dorms; Girls Come Next

By Carol Cleaves

Wills, Buckham, and Chittenden are the only campus units receiving WRUV on their radios at the present time. However the station is gradually becoming accessible to other parts of the campus.

Radio University of Vermont was started with the help of $3,000, which will be used for such things as a $50 transmitter for each house, records, typewriters, tapes, wires, tubes, and turntables.

To be Self-Supporting

"By means of advertisements which are to be national, international, and local in origin, we hope to become a self-supporting radio station by next September," says Tony Vydra, sales manager.

Along the line of advertising returns, there is a possibility that the Lucky Strike Company will donate a teletype machine to the new station.

Future plans include the addition of Coolidge Hall to the network, either this year or next.

It might also be called GHOST WHO HAS SPILLED A DROP OF COCOA ON HIS SHEET or perhaps A CHOCOLATE CAKE CRUMB FLOATING IN OUTER SPACE — an imaginative title suitable for Science Fiction fans. A touch of pathos may be introduced if we use this fourth title: BUG CROSSING TILE WALL IN ORDER TO VISIT SICK GRANDMOTHER.

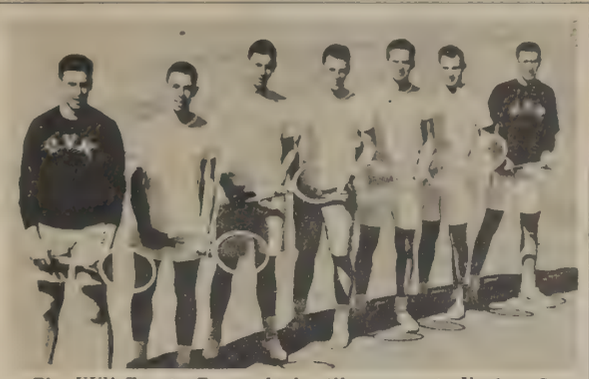
Tennis Team Drops Matches To R.P.I., Union, In Debut; Samuel's Hit In 13th Trips SM 2-0; Plender Goes Route; Batsmen Open Home Season With UMass On Saturday

Netted At Troy 6-3; Nipped In Union Match 5-4

On April 30, the University of Vermont Varsity Tennis Team, coached by Prof. F. D. Carpenter, traveled to Troy, New York for a match with R.P.I. This was the Catamounts first encounter of the season, and coach Carpenter sent to the nets Captain Bill Thomson, Jay Selcow, Ken Savela, Gene Mowry, and Shelly Rosenthal. In this match Vermont faced a superior conditioned team, due to the fact that the Engineers have been out on the courts since March 28. R.P.I. dominated the singles matches, allowing Vermont to take but one match, that being turned in by Rosenthal. Although the match as a whole was lost going into the doubles, the netmen had enough competitive spirit to pull through two decisive victories. The final score was R.P.I. 6 - Vermont 3. The individual statistics are as follows: Mahen, of R.P.I. defeated Thomson 6-3, 9-7 Jocoy, of R.P.I. defeated Selcow 6-0, 6-1; Mercado, of R.P.I. defeated Savela 6-4, 7-5; Eckert of R.P.I. defeated Idleman 6-2, 2-6, 7-5 Rosenthal, of Vermont defeated Kinsley 6-4, 1-6, 6-1 Thomson and Selcow, of Vermont, defeated Maher and Jocey 7-5, 6-0; Savela and Mowry, of Vermont, defeated Mercado and Haymond 6-2, 6-2; Parker and Eberle, of R.P.I., defeated Idleman and Barth 6-3, 6-3.

On the following day the U.V.M. Tennis aggregation was played host to by Union College. This was one of the most grueling matches ever played, the entire affair taking five hours. In the singles it was a tightly contested, see-saw battle, with Union winning the first, third, and fifth matches and Vermont the second, fourth, and sixth. With the score knoted at 3 and 3, the doubles began. In the first doubles, Thomson and Selcow, of Vermont, defeated Guerra and Silver 6-4, 6-4. The third doubles match was the next to be completed, with Propp and Kahn, of Union, defeating Idleman and Barth 6-0, 6-3. Then with the score 4-4, all eyes were focused on the Savela - Mowry (UVM) vs. Whitman - Werin (Union) match. Union took the first set 6-3, but a strong comeback by the Catamounts enabled them to take the second set 6-4. The deciding set ended in a heartbreaking loss for Vermont, and a well deserved victory for the Union squad. The score of the final set was a close 8-6. The totals for the match were: Whitman, of Union, defeated Thomson 6-4, 5-7, 9-7; Selcow, of Vermont, defeated Guerra 6-4, 6-4; Silver of Union, defeated Savela 5-2, 6-3; Mowry, of Vermont, defeated Propp 6-0, 6-4; Werin, of Union, defeated Idleman 8-6, 6-4; Rosenthal, of Vermont, defeated Kahn 6-3, 6-1. Thomson and Selcow, of Vermont, defeated Guerra and Silver 6-4, 6-4; Whitman and Werin, of Union, defeated Savela and Mowry 6-3, 4-6, 8-6; Propp and Kahn, of Union, defeated Idleman and Barth 6-0, 6-3.

Tuesday UVM played host to St. Lawrence College and Wednesday to St. Michael's College.



This weekend, the Tennis Team will be at Durham, N.H. for the Yankee Conference Tournament.

The UVM Tennis Team travels to Durham N. H. tomorrow to engage in the two day Yankee Conference Championship. Defending champions, Rhode Island will again feature a strong net nucleus. Uconn, Umass, and Maine will sport fine teams. Vermont will be without its second singles ace Jay Selcow, but Coach Carpenter is confident of a strong showing at the matches.

Tournament matches will start Friday, and will be concluded on Saturday.

Past conference champions are as follows:

53 Conn. 51 Maine 49 R.I.
52 None 50 Mass. 48 R.I.

Sports Question Box

Do you expect to attend any of UVM's home baseball games?

NANCY JORDAN Class of '55

Only those of nearby rival teams, as I am not interested in baseball games in general. I did attend the basketball and football games, but do not care for baseball, especially when it monopolizes the radio stations.

LES CHUSID Class of '54

Yes, since Vermont usually puts up a good team and is continually acquiring more fame due to its major southern trip. I feel that college ball is important to school activity and I know the fellows appreciate a little support now and then. It's a shame that more people do not participate as an audience in one of the college's greatest sports.

JOE RENZULLI Class of '54

Yes I'll attend most of the home games this season. I like to watch Vermont play; we usually have a good squad.

IRENE GROVER Class of '57

Yes, I would like to see UVM's home games, as I am quite a baseball fan for in it there is much team spirit. I have seen a few major games back home but there's nothing like a good college game. It's the best pastime for relaxation between final exams.

CAROLE SCHOTZ Class of '54

Yes, I plan to see UVM home games because I believe it is important to support the school team. By being present at home games, I feel that I am helping (with other students) to encourage school spirit which is so important in order for a team to win.

GAIL ROGAN Class of '56

Yes, I will try to attend as many baseball games as I possibly can because I think this school needs some spirit. I think that the players would appreciate it if they knew that we were backing them up and rooting for them.

Lapointers Play Double Header; Green On Friday

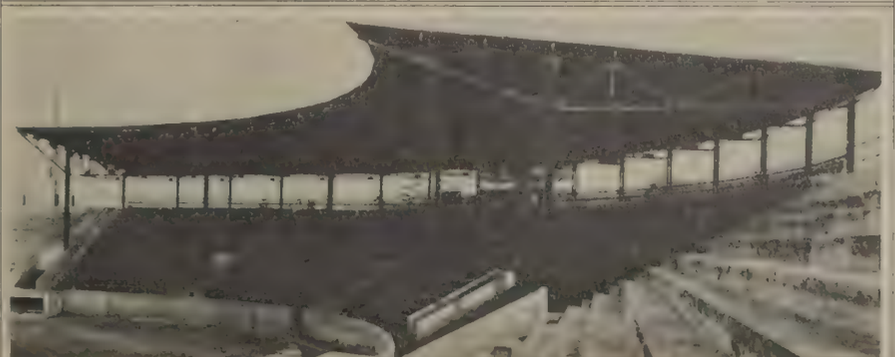
Sporting a four won - five lost record as this article is written, the UVM varsity baseball team next engages two of the rougher teams on their schedule, meeting Dartmouth in a single contest on May 7, and Massachusetts in a twinbill on the following day. The Dartmouth meeting will take place at Hanover, while the doubleheader will mark the Catamounts initial home appearance of the 1954 season. To add to the auspiciousness of the occasion, Coach Earl Lorden's Redmen are currently leading the Yankee Conference, while the Green and Gold bowed 3-2 to Connecticut in their lone league encounter. Nevertheless, the Cats will be looking to increase the 22-15 margin they hold in their long series with the Maroon and white. Last year the teams split the two contests, each winning by identical 2-1 scores. This year however, the boys from Amherst, Mass. appear to be loaded.

Leading the team is the veteran pitching staff of Hugh Mackenzie, Joe Faucette, Phil Tarpey and Don Swanson who last year gave up only 38 runs in 168 innings for a combined earned run an average of 1.48 per game. The staff has Tarpey and Swanson as its mainstays, though Faucette and Mackensie each sport good records. Receiving their slants from behind the plate will be a well seasoned group of backstoppers headed by Felix Wisnewski, a junior, senior Paul Divencenzo and sophomore Ray "Dusty" Rhodes. Wisnewski, a good handler of pitchers appears to be the top receiver. However, he's a reputedly weak hitter, and could give way to one of the other two. Making up the rest of the infield is senior John Pasteris, a fine gloveman, at first; sophomore Lou Gobielle and Captain Bobby Pedigree at the keystone, and either veteran Phil Costello or sophomore Gus Winters at third. Outfield posts are shared by Jim Rivers, Leroy Waks, Brian Wilcox, Bob Blanchard, Divencenzo and Rhodes. On hand for utility work will be basketball star Johnny Skypeck and Addie Lesser, a senior holdover.

Cats Gain Second Shutout In A Row; Hold 4-5 Record

A dramatic thirteenth inning double by Catamount Jerry Samuels broke up a scoreless personal struggle between Vermont's George Plender and St. Mike's Tom Sorrell and led to a 2-0 win for the Cats over the Purple at Winooski Park last Saturday. The game was a well played, masterfully pitched one for both teams but Plender stood out as the chunky Vermont righthander gave up six hits, struck out eleven and walked only one.

St. Mikes seemed to have the hitting edge at the beginning as they got four hits in the first three innings. Here Mr. Plender took charge and allowed them only two hits for the last ten innings of the Marathon struggle. The Cats threatened often as Sorrell's eleven walks kept him continually in hot water. Base hits were at a premium however as the slender lefty gave up only five all the way, two to Vermont centerfielder George Gilbert, the only Cat to hit safely more than once. After twelve innings, no one had crossed the plate and both pitchers looked strong.



The top of the thirteenth started uneventfully as Sorrell walked Al McLam. Then Jerry Samuels who had been inserted for Gilbert in the ninth hit a loud double to right scoring the speedy McLam, Samoess going to third on the throw in. Here, Don Maynard flied out to deep right with Samuels scoring after the catch to end the scoring for the day. Plender set the Knights down in the last of the thirteenth to gain a long waited, well deserved first victory.

The starting UVM lineup saw six sophomores, one junior and two seniors as Coach Lapointe started sophomore Art Solomon at third and continued to use Don Maynard in right against lefthanders. Percentage coaching paid off in this one as Lapointe had lifted Gilbert in the tenth for Samuels. Samuels got the hit that won it.

Tomorrow, it's a single game for the Catamounts at Hanover N.H. as they face Dartmouth and Saturday its their first home game as they meet UMass. in a doubleheader starting at 1:30.

Linksmen Set With Six For Season

Four Spots Sealed; State Champ Stars Loss To Team

Last Thursday, on a very wet Burlington Country Club, eight men slushed through a hazardous eighteen holes in the qualifying round for the 1954 golf team. Among the qualifiers were four men from last year's squad who received no immunity from the wet fairways and greens and whose shoes were as wet as anybody's. Three of these four men managed to buck the water and turn in scores of 81, 83, 86. They were Bob Hartman, Harry Rutten, and Vern Trikino, respectively. The fourth man, Ronny Bowman, had trouble with the wet course and ended up with a score low in the nineties.

Four men did qualify though. The fourth was Pete Colodny, a junior who carded an 82 to put him second in line among the qualifiers.

The other two spots left vacant, by the graduation of Mort Kaufman and Paul Boudreau, will be played for throughout the season by the four men left, challenging one another for the empty positions.

At press-time, the golf team was in the midst of their match at Union College whom they beat last year 21-6. On next Monday and Tuesday the team will dedend its state title in the Vermont Intercollegiates at the Burlington Country Club.

Coach Donnelly, who is by no means a duffer, expects big things from the team even though Mort Kaufman, his key man, is gone. Mort was State Intercollegiate champ and one of the finest golfers in the state. The team will miss his steadying influence and consistantly good scores.

The coach feels that the team is well balanced and has some good competitive experience behind them. The team plays six matches in fifteen days.

Wetbacks Win St. Mike's Race With Two Firsts

The University of Vermont Sailing Team, this Sunday, "crossed over the bridge" into Winooski, for a supposed triangular meet with St. Michael's and Merrimack colleges. For some unknown reason Merrimack failed to show up, and UVM was forced to run off a duel meet with st. Michael's. The final score was 11-9 in favor of Vermont's denisons of the sea. Two firsts were registered by UV M's Cutler, and one by Day. St. Michael's only first was recorded by Frosnia.

On Saturday, the once postponed Freshman Elimination Meet had to be cancelled again, due to the lack of wind on the lake.

The Catamounts of the sea have a quadrangular meet scheduled for May 8 here on Lake Champlain, against Babson, McGill, and Middlebury.

Meet The Varsity

by Bob Brown
BILL THOMSON

The captain of the 1954 tennis team is a lanky, dark-haired senior from Stamford, Conn. The number one man for Coach Fred Carpenter this year, Bill had a big 12-1 record in both singles and doubles last season.

He got his schooling at Westminster Prep and at Kimball Union Prep where he played football, hockey and tennis.

In his third year with the Carpenter Crew, Bill is an all-around sports enthusiast and boasts skiing and sailas other interests.

A member of Sigma Nu and the Varsity Club, he is in the commerce and Ec. course and is concentrating in Industrial Management.

Last summer Bill taught sailing at the Darien, Conn. yacht club and on June 18, right after graduation, of this summer he will be one of a crew competing in a yacht race which will run from Newport, R.I. to Bermuda.

Walt Blank Paces Frosh Tracksters To Win At Lyndon

Paced by triple winner Blank who won the 100, 220, and 440, UVM's kitten cindermen opened its season by winning a dual decision against Lyndon Institute at Lyndon last Friday. The score; 61½ to 55½.

Other frosh victors were Nelson Slack in the mile, Paul Harasimowicz in the shot, Pete Perkins in the pole vault and Herb Russell in the discuss.

Kitten Nine Takes Two In Debut

It was a victorious freshman weekend as the UVM diamond Kittens took a doubleheader from Lyndon Institute at Centennial Field Saturday afternoon, 7-3 and 13-2.

Bemis was the winner in the first game with Wagner hurling the second win.

Summers and Galascione highlighted the hometeam's hitting spree by louting four baggers in the second tilt.

Battles And Wescott Triumph In Middlebury Prize Debate

Westcott Named Best Speaker

By Herzl Spiro

The UVM varsity debate squad finished this year's schedule with a clean sweep over Middlebury College in the annual Middlebury Prize Debate on Wednesday, May 5. Pauline Wescott, a senior, was given the best speaker rating with its accompanying prize of fifty dollars. Close behind her was her colleague, Claire Battles, a junior, who was judged second best speaker and was awarded a thirty dollar prize. Middlebury's highly regarded ace debator, Ernest Lorch was rated third and received twenty dollars.

Topteam

Miss Battles and Miss Wescott have won fifteen out of seventeen debates this year giving them the finest percentage-record on the Vermont squad. Their victories have been over top-notch teams, five being achieved at the highly competitive National Tau Kappa Alpha Tournament. The Middlebury Debate was a good example of one of these debates. The topic was, "Resolved: That Red China should be admitted to The United Nations." The Vermonters took the negative.

Admit China

As the debate opened Middlebury's Everett Anderson upheld the view that regardless of its effect on the United States, the admission of Red China to the U.N. would be highly advantageous to the United Nations.

Pauline Wescott, the first negative speaker agreed to fight on the affirmative ground, considering primarily the U.N. point of view, not the U.S. point of view. Speaking earnestly and persuasively a powerful counter attack in which she pointed out the ideals of the U.N. Charter, which countries must be "willing and able" to uphold in order to be admitted. She then indicted China on four counts of violation of the charter.

The judge-critic, Prof. Herbert James who is the Dartmouth Debate Coach and the President of the New England Foreign Conference, cited Mr. Lorch's second affirmative constructive presentation as the debate's best adapted speech. Lorch pointed out the vast difference between theory and practice within the

Commerce And Ec Department Will Have NYC Course

The University of Vermont will join with the New York City financial community for the fourth summer in a row in sponsoring a summer course in "The Economics of Capital Formation," it has been announced by Philipp H. Lohman, chairman of the department of commerce and economics at UVM, and director of the summer course which extends the UVM campus to New York City's financial district from June 21 through July 30.

The course, begun in 1950, is designed to give students a better understanding of the social and economic functions of the institutions which make up the financial industry.

New York Classes

Students enrolled in the course will meet for regular classes in the Chase National Bank of the City of New York. They will live, during the six weeks session, at the Hotel Latham, 28th at Fifth Avenue, New York.

Besides lectures and dis-

Leading Cadets Will Be Honored

Stan Sakowitz

The University of Vermont's Military Departments will observe Armed Forces Day by participating in the annual Military Review tomorrow.

The review affords an opportunity to present awards to outstanding military and air cadets and it forms a final summary of everything that has been learned in drill during the college year. This is the only time in which all the R.O.T.C. units can drill together under the UVM band. There is federal inspection of the military department of the university by officers from the First Army.

The cadets will line up at 3:45 and march to Centennial Field to the music of the UVM band. The Army R.O.T.C. Drill Team will be commanded by Cadet Captain Ronald N. Bowman and the Air Force R.O.T.C. Drill Team by Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Leighton Cox.

The colors will be presented by the Honorary Colonel, Pat Spear, Queen of the Military Ball. Then the UVM band will march past on the command "Sound Off." Following this will be the retreat, the usual ceremony

Ex-English Professor Writes First Printed History Of UVM

The first history of the University of Vermont to be printed in book form will be rolling off the presses by the end of May in connection with the University's celebration of the 150th anniversary of its first graduating class.

The history, titled "Tradition Looks Forward," is the work of Julian Ira Lindsay, who retired recently as Professor of English after over 30 years of teaching at UVM. He joined the University staff in 1911, retiring in June, 1952.

Illustrated

His book, which covers the history of the University from its earliest days through to 1904, is being sponsored, fittingly enough, by the class of 1904 which is the 50th reunion class for this year's commencement.

The book, which will be about 350 pages in length with 16 pages of illustrations, will be hardbound, and have a green cover with gold letters. Many of the illustrations are rare portraits and pictures from the early, frontier days of UVM, and included are the early presidents - Sanders, Marsh, Torrey, Wheeler, and Matthew Buckham, whom many of the older Burlington residents will remember as "the little president."

Prof. Lindsay brings to the task of writing a history of the University a background of interest in the University which was kindled by his interest in Coleridge.

A native New Englander and graduate of Clark University and of Harvard, he has written a number of articles on Coleridge and his study of

UVM To Initiate Austin Institute As Summer Course

The University of Vermont will inaugurate the Warren R. Austin Institute in World Understanding this summer, President Carl W. Borgmann announced today.

The Institute, named to honor the first U.S. Ambassador to the UN, is dedicated "to the development of a more intelligent and practical understanding of the people of the world," according to Dr. Borgmann, who explained that the idea for the Institute came into being in August of 1951 when a University committee was established to "work out the objectives."

The University felt it fitting, Dr. Borgmann said, that the Institute honor a native Vermonter and UVM graduate whose career as a statesman, climaxed by service as ambassador to the United Nations, symbolizes the continuing effort of free peoples to reach fruitful world understanding through the channels of free inquiry and agreement arrived at through peaceful means.

The University approached Mr. Austin with the idea for the Institute, and he has been "most cordial and of great help to the committee," the UVM president stated.

Plans to inaugurate the Institute during the coming Summer Session at the University were given reality by a gift of $5,000 from Nelson Rockefeller. The gift was made

Poetry Is 'Playing With Something You Know'---Frost

Robert Frost captivated a capacity crowd last week with his readings, and random observations on subjects ranging from poetry and education to freedom and microphones. A predominantly student audience of eleven hundred heard the eighty-year old poet speak at Ira Allen Chapel.

"When I write poetry, I play with something you already know," the hoary-haired Frost said. "Most people have forgotten that this is what poetry originally started as."

The poet illustrated his point by asking his audience to play for a few moments with the words "of" and "from".

"I only want the freedom from a few things -- disease, for instance; but I try to win the freedom of ... a dictionary, of syntax, and rhyme and meter."

Rather Tell

Frost held that poems should be understandable." Many people ask me how hard a poem must be to be good...anything that you have to be told before, after, or during a poem spoils it...besides, I'd rather tell than be told."

"That's the point of maturity I'd like to see students reach...the point when they prefer telling, to being told."

"If anyone has to be told anything about anything that I write, then he's lost it as a playground...it's reduced to mere knowledge." He felt that no poet will make his mark if his poems have to be labored over.

No Vitamins

Everyone seems to make quite a to-do about symbolism, the poet observed. "But we speak in figures all the time...it's funny how portentous some of the colleges make it."

Frost commented briefly on education between readings of his poems. "I don't want education to be too concentrate. It should be as diffuse as possible. It shouldn't become a vitamin capsule process."

In an interview following his readings, the Amherst poet expressed a fear that the public school system might "let-down." "The required attendance doesn't permit a sifting of the intellect," he said.

Universal Appeal

In the course of his readings, the aged Frost had some difficulty with the microphones before him. In typical Vermontese, he expressed an annoyance with ... "these modern things; but I won't object to them. I suppose that without them, I won't be heard."

The poet's appeal was such that he was called back twice by the crowd. "Frost appeals to every level," explained Baird Whitlock of the English Department. "There's no level he fails to catch."

The program was a joint student-faculty undertaking and was underwritten by Student Association. Marcia Fink was the student chairman.

Frost Rambles On:

freedom..

"Freedom is old clothes, old shoes—being easy in your harness. That is one kind of freedom. As a nation we mean freedom from tyranny."

sonnets..

"After the first eight lines of a sonnet, it has to take a turn either for the better or the worse."

radicals..

"I never dare be radical when young for fear I may be conservative when old."

theories..

"A theory, if you hold it long enough, becomes a creed---like the theory of evolution."

english majors..

"Fifteen thousand 'straight-A' students graduate from college every year, but all we have are Hemingway and Faulkner."

Morgan horses..

"I once mentioned a Morgan Horse in one of my poems; so many people asked me what a Morgan was that I moved over to Vermont to find out, and I've been here ever since."

commencement speakers..

"I've heard some commencements recently. The speakers usually use the phrase 'in times like these.' It's funny, but they used that same phrase twenty, fifty, and a hundred years ago."

of respect to the flag and inspection of the R.O.T.C. units by the inspectors and commanding officers.

After inspection, awards will be presented to leading cadets of the Army and Air Force for scholarship, character and leadership, proficiency in drill, and proficiency in marksmanship. Then awards will be presented by representatives of various patriotic societies or by individuals who are sponsoring them.

Following the awarding of prizes, the cadets will "pass in review" past the inspectors and dignitaries. In case the ceremony is not fully understood by the spectators, it will be announced by Cadet Captain Charles E. Wheeler, during the review.

The inspectors will also sit in on classes, check administration and conduct of the program of the R.O.T.C. units of the University.

The Military Invasion, which was an annual event, will not take place this year since the Navy, due to means of economy, withdrew the naval reserve ship which was previously used in the past.

IFC questions answered

The Interfraternity Council last week circulated a questionnaire intended to secure information relative to the University Senate's recommendation that discriminatory clauses be eliminated from the charters of fraternities and sororities within seven years.

We would like to answer the questions asked, point by point, and insert a few comments along the way.

Q. Does fraternity have a regulation in regard to acceptability because of religion? A. No.

Q. Because of race or color? A. No.

If you answered yes to either of the above two questions (assume we did) would you vote for or against the clause if the matter were brought to a vote. A. We would vote against any clause based on religion, race or color.

Q. Would you be willing to have for a fraternity brother: an American Indian? A. Yes.; an American Negro? A. Yes.; any Negro? A. No, not just any Negro; our choice would be based on the same standards as for any other person. We would eliminate a white person on the same basis as we would a negro person. (Therefore this question seems unnecessary and irrelevant).

To continue, would you accept: anyone from the Near or Far East. A. We answer "no" to this question on the same basis as the one before. To be valid the question should read "someone" instead of "anyone."; an Italia or Spaniard? A. Yes.; a South or Central American, a Protestant, a Catholic, a Jew. or someone from any other religion? A. Yes, collectively.

The questionnaire then goes into the theory behind the Senate recommendation.

Do you approve of the idea of an attempt to rid fraternities of clauses? A. Yes.; Q. Do you approve of the UVM plan to remove the clauses? A. Yes, although we feel that a provision similar to the one printed to the right of this editorial be included in the present proposal. Just as we felt that a Communist is not automatically bound to submit to the party doctrines, so we believe that a fraternity with a discriminatory clause in its charter is not automatically bound by the clause. This should be annually affirmed publicly in writing by the fraternity whose national refuses to withdraw the clause. This would take the university out of the position of condoning discrimination, even though the clause remained in the charter.

Q. Would you approve of any other such plan? A. Depends on the plan.; Do you think the University has the authority to make the decision they did concerning clauses? A. Definitely.; The Student Advisory Committee has direct jurisdiction over IFC. Do you think the University should have the authority? A. Definitely.; Do you think the IFC only, should have this authority? A. Definitely not. They do at present have the power to eliminate clauses and have had this power for quite some time. Nothing ever was done. Therefore the IFC should have the power, but should not have it alone. The same answer applies to plies to the following three questions. Q. Do you feel that only the fraternity men, only a national, or only each local should have the authority to decide the question.

We trust that the questions have been answered to the satisfaction of I.F.C. Our feeling is that many questions are ambiguous, and could stand revision.

made our point

The student turnout for the Robert Frost program last week proved the point we made last Thursday in regard to a mediocre attraction's inability to pull a crowd. However, Frost is "tops," he is well known, he is far from mediocre. The chapel, as a result, was filled to capacity.

Students are a discriminating group. They tend to reject that which falls below their standards. Time and again they shy away from an attraction which is only mediocre. But give them something, or someone, who is really worth seeing or hearing and you have a ready made audience. As was pointed out in a previous issue, there is no lack of interest on this campus; rather there is often a lack of incentive; a mediocre speaker offers no incentive, a "top-notch attraction will fill the house.

This is the last issue of the CYNIC for the semester. The past three issues were produced without any cash income, as we ran out of funds a month ago. The CYNIC was financed on advertising income alone, hence we cut down the size of the individual issues. For the same reason, picture coverage was held to a minimum. Hope you stuck with us.

Good luck to all on your exams, especially you seniors who are taking your lab sciences this late in the game.

As for the graduating class, we'll save the hearts and flowers for the special issue honoring both you and the class of 1804. Look for it sometime during Senior Week.

a plan for handling discriminatory clauses

The following is reprinted from the "Chicago Maroon," student newspaper at the University of Chicago. It is a revision of the "Michigan Plan," a means of eliminating descriminatory membership requirements. The revision was necessitated by certain impracticalities of the original plan.

Robert M. Strozier, Dean of Students, at Chicago, emphasized, "It is my opinion that the legislation adopted will effectively eliminate discriminatory membership requirements in University organizations by the end of 1954."

The revisions were made by Student Government.

The Revised Michigan Plan

1. Campus groups affiliated with national organizations that have discriminatory clauses in their national constitution after October 1, 1953, may appeal to the Student Assembly for an extension of recognition until October 15, 1954.

2. After October 15, 1954, such organizations shall automatically lose recognition and shall be ineligible to receive further automatic or official recognition, unless one of the following conditions has been fulfilled:

A. In case of a local organization whose national organization has adopted an amendment striking the discriminatory clause subject to ratification at one further convention of the organization, the local organization must file a statement to this effect with the Student Government and the Dean of Students' office by October 15, 1954. If this aforesaid amendment to the national constitution is not finally ratified by the next meeting of the national organization, the local organization shall be entitled to receive recognition only under condition "B" below.

B. In any case not covered by condition "A" above, it shall be necessary for the organization in question to file yearly public statements that the organization is not bound by any discriminatory clauses, local or national. This condition shall be considered fulfilled only if in the period of October 10 through October 15 of each year the organization files with the Student Government and the Dean of Students' office the following statement:

"We, (name of organization), state publicly and officially that we are not bound by any constitutional provision and structure, by-law, or agreement in any form, to limit or prohibit membership in our organization on the basis of race, religion, color, or national origin."

3. Failure to comply with at least one of the conditions "A" and "B" above by October 15, of each year after the passage of this bill, shall automatically result in loss of recognition for the organization in question, provided that when a statement is filed after the first national convention, as indicated in "A" above, that statement shall suffice until October 15, of the year in which the second convention occurs. This loss of recognition shall not necessitate action on the part of the Student Assembly, but shall be automatically enforced by the Dean of Students' office.

to Mr. Austin for the Institute, and it is the committee's hope that the Institute will receive continued support through other grants and gifts.

The program of the Institute for this summer is "Obstacles to World Understanding," and four speakers will be invited to the University campus during the four weeks of the Institute to consider this question from the viewpoint of the United States, of the Far East, of Europe, and of the Western Hemisphere.

Correlated Summer Session courses include the following; Russia, 1815 to the Present; Western Europe Since 1798; Foreign Policies of the United States; Foreign Policies in the Pacific; Cultural Anthropology; Sociology; Human Nature in the Modern Age; and Current Conflicts of Social Philosophies.

Serving on the committee since it was established in 1951 are Lyman Rowell, director of the Summer Session; Robert H. Kroepsch, dean of administration; Hugh Riddell, professor of animal and dairy husbandry; Dr. Wilhelm Raab of the College of Medicine; Paul Evans and Roger Cooley of the history department; Andrew Nuquist, Robert S. Babcock and George Little of the political science department, George Dykhuizen of the philosophy department; and Philipp Lohman of the department of commerce and economics.

Play Period During Exams

The women's physical education department at the University of Vermont has come up with a plan designed to take some of the gloom out of examination time which is just around the corner for UVM's 2800 students.

Exams begin on May 26, running through June 7.

The department will begin a "sports open house" the week of May 24, to provide a recreation period for both men and women students of the University who would like a chance to trade, at least temporarily, books for tennis racket and volley ball.

Most of the activities, which will be from 3 to 5 p.m. each afternoon, will be informal, according to Helen Coleman, chairman of the department, but she reports that an archery tournament is being planned for the period. Staff members helping plan the program include Jane Hood, Martha Howe, and Jean Morrison.

All facilities of the department will be made available to students, including softball, badminton, tennis, volley ball, archery and table tennis. On days favored by sunshine, ping pong tables will be set up outdoors, Miss Coleman relates.

intercollegiate roundup

By Val Gluskin and Marty Klotz

Simmons College – Eva Le Gallienne, renowned actress and author, appeared at Simmons College May 5 to give a series of monologues. Miss Le Gallienne's program consisted of Oscar Wilde's "The Happy Prince" and monologues from Shakespearean plays.

Miss Le Gallienne holds degrees from Brown University, Smith College, Mt. Holyoke College, Tufts, Russell Sage and Ohio Wesleyan University. She was the first woman to receive the gold medal of the Society of Arts and Sciences" for vitally affecting our national culture."

The Mississippian – Taken from an article in The Mississippian entitled Punchline is this rare joke.

"Darling, am I the first man you ever loved?"

"Yes, Reginald. All the others were fraternity boys."

The Chicago Maroon – Paul Robeson, the widely acclaimed Negro actor and basso will appear on the University of Chicago campus to present a concert of art songs, arias, folk songs, hymns and spirituals.

Recently, he has been restricted from performing in many places and has been denied a passport because of his political views. The University says, "The only basis on which we should decide Robeson's appearance here, in a respected concert hall, should be that of his undisputed artistic excellence. Robeson is coming here to sing, not to give a political lecture. We do not believe that McCarthyism should be allowed to tell us what artists we can hear and appreciate."

(ACP) – How absent-minded can a professor be? A class at Oregon State College organized one day to find out. By prearrangement, they protested to a professor that he had failed to announce a test, he was scheduled, to them. Startled -- and clearly confused by the mass argument, the professor postponed his test.

This is the last meeting of the year for the Round Table, and it will be run by next year's officers. All of the people on the panel are leaving the University at the end of this year, and therefore this will be the last time that anyone at the University will have a chance to hear the panelists ideas on ideas on how UVM can be improved.

Prizes Awarded At 'Aggie' Show; Co-eds Milk Cows

By Bruce S. Evans

The Catamount Livestock Show was held last Saturday, at the University Farm despite the drenching downpour. Because of the weather, the showing was done in the pavilion barn which really lacked adequate space for the seating of the spectators and for the activities of the day. Larry Taylor was the manager of the show.

Prizes in the contest were awarded only for the fitting of the animal and the showmanship of the handler. The judges were instructed to note the improvement of the animal by proper grooming, the alertness and knowledge of the showman, and the training given the animal.

Judges

Earl Krantz, former superintendent of the U.S. Morgan horse farm at Middlebury, was the judge for sheep and horses Charles Howe, of Howeacres Farm at Tunbridge, was the expert of diary cattle. The inspector of fitting and showmanship was Donald Kinsman assistant farm superintendent of the University of Massachusetts. Dean Simpson was in charge of the co-ed milking contest. The announcers were Don Aikman '56, and Bill Hill '57.

In Class One, Holstein Heifer Calves, George Howe '55, won first prize; in Class Two, Columbia Southdale Yearling Ewes, George Talbot '56, carried away the laurels; in Class Three, Guernsey Heifer Calves, Jim Craig '57, got first ribbon; in Class Four, Ayrshire Heifer Calves, Larry Taylor '57, was awarded first in Class Five, Columbia Yearling Ewes, Charles Mason '57, took first.

Afternoon Session

An hour was allotted for lunch, with resumption of the show planned for 1:00 p.m. However, because of the weather, the second half of the scheduled events began at 1:30 p.m.

Bill Canby '54, won first in Class Six, Jersey Heifer Calves, which was the first group of the afternoon session.

Rosemarie Eurich publicity director, presented a gift to Don Balch on behalf of the Animal Industry Club, of which he is the faculty advisor. Carrigan, Dean of the College of Agriculture, welcomed the 150 people massed in the small barn to witness the competition. He commented on the necessity of building a large pavilion barn as shown by "today's inclement weather."

Later Ribbons

Class Seven, of Columbia Southdale Yearling Ewes, was won by Bruce Elliott, Following this was the big event of the day, the Co-Ed Milking contest. A cow was brought out for each team, consisting of four members. The team that filled a test tube with milk for each one of its members faster than any other team won. Allen House took the dormitory title and Tri-Delt won in the sororities circle.

Harry Baumann '57, won in the Morgan Fillies, Class Eight. Elwood Bickford '57, took first in Class Nine, Holstein Senior Heifer Calves.

Charles Mason was named Premier Livestock Showman and George Talbot Reserve Livestock Showman. Larry Taylor was confirmed Premier Dairy Showman, and George Howe gained Reserve Dairy Showman.

Rosemarie Eurich said of the show, "It was as successful as possible under the humid conditions. What happened today shows the need for a pavilion show-barn." Because of the rain the spectators had to be crowded into the small pavilion barn, like a bunch of Columbia Southdale Yearling

TOMATO SANDWICH MADE BY IMPATIENT TOMATO SANDWICH MAKER

This Droodle might also be called a GRAPEFRUIT SANDWICH but seems unlikely as so few people eat Grapefruit Sandwiches anymore. Turned sideways it becomes an entirely and equally excellent Droodle. Unfortunately I can't think of a title for it.

Ever Study

TERRESTRIAL ENGINEERING?

Probably not. As far as we know, there isn't such a term. Even so, the terrain of a manufacturing plant may have a vital effect on the design and location of its engineering equipment.

It certainly did in the case of our Belle, West Virginia, plant, which is just across the road from a flat-topped hill, 750 feet high.

Perhaps you'd like to match wits with Du Pont engineers, for we feel that this problem was interesting—and its solution ingenious.

Briefly, the situation was this: Carbon dioxide was to be removed from a mixture of gases by bringing them into contact with water in "scrubbers" operating at 450 psi (gauge). The inlet gases contained about 25% CO_2 by volume. Because of its greater solubility, most of the CO_2 would leave the scrubbers dissolved in the water.

It was necessary to reduce the pressure of this water to atmospheric and recover the dissolved carbon dioxide, since CO_2 was needed for use in a chemical synthesis. The degasified water then had to be pumped back into the pressure scrubbers, to repeat the scrubbing cycle.

Still like to match wits? How would you design an economical closed system for this scrubbing water? After you've thought out your solution, you might like to compare it with the one given below.

Du Pont engineers made use of the precipitous terrain in this way: pressure on the water leaving the scrubbers was sufficient to force it up to the top of the hill for CO_2 recovery. The returning water thereby provided a pressure of approximately 325 psi (750 feet of head) at the base of the hill. This gift of pressure on the suction side of the water pumps resulted in considerable energy saving.

Do unusual problems such as this one challenge you and stir your enthusiasm? If they do, we think you'll be interested in technical work with the Du Pont Company.

DELTA PSI

On Monday evening May 3, the following were initiated into brotherhood of Delta Psi fraternity: Donald S. Bicknell, '57, of Richford; John M. MacAuley, '57, of Barre; John O'Connor, '56, of Brant Lake, N.Y.; Richard W. Towne, '56, of Morrisville; Harrison H. Sawyer, '56, of Newton, Mass.; Phillip G. Whitney, '55, of W. Lebanon, New Hampshire; Neal T. Lovelette, '55, of Richford; and Donald G. Veburst, '54, of Winooski.

On Friday evening May 7, Delta Psi held its Spring Formal with a buffet dinner preceding it. On Saturday the fraternity and their dates enjoyed the annual picnic at the Champlain Club.

PHI DELTA THETA

Phi Delt's new officers for the fall semester are: President - Frank Maccini; Reporter - Bob Crawford; Warden - Tony Calorusso; Secretary - Ken Wadley; Rushing Chairman ; Bob Parker; Pledgemasters - Ken Wadley and Paul Harasimowicy; Social Chairman - Bob Gorman; Chaplain - Bob Dana; Chorister - Dave O'Dwyer; Scholarship Chairman - Terry O'Donnell ; Alumni Secretary ; Dan Milloy; Historian - Librarian - Vic Scotese; House Manager - Frank Maccini; Head-waiter - Russ Hubbey; Summer House Manager - Paul Little.

Ted McCabe is the most recent Phi Delt pledge.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Thetas held an exchange dinner with the Sigma Phi's on Wednesday May 5.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

Alpha Epsilon Pi wishes to extend good luck to everyone on their exams and would like to wish all of you a very happy vacation.

ACACIA

Last weekend Acacia Fraternity held a very successful formal. The "Night on the Nile" Egyptian theme was carried out to the extent of having a real live mummy sitting in the corner all evening. Thanks to the Gordon Linen Supply Co., a good little pledge (name unknown) was the mummy. The girls were given lovely Egyptian bracelets with the Acacia seal engraved on it.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

The weekend of May first the Phi Sigs were hosts at a regional conclave of their fraternity. Twenty men from other campuses visited Fern Hill. All the guests were fixed up with blind dates, and from what we hear alot of new romances have begun.

The Phi Sig formal weekend was held May 7, 8, and 9th. The schedule of events was a barbecue Friday night followed by the formal. The Phi Sig's dates were presented with manicure sets with the Phi Sig emblem on them. On Saturday night a Mardi Gras costume party was held. The weekend's activities ended with a real hot jazz concert on Sunday afternoon. All the festivities were held at Fern Hill.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

On May 7, The Taus held their annual Spring Formal at the fraternity house. The affair was well attended and the music was supplied by brother Cy Ferland of Burlington. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the ATO Sweetheart who was, this year, Anne Carter, the wife of brother Nick Carter, '54. The Sweetheart was presented with a loving cup and a bouquet of a dozen red roses.

The ATO's recently held the installation of new officers. The slate of offices for the year 1954-55 is:

Worthy Master * Bob Mallozzi
Worthy Chaplain * Dave Chittick
Worthy Scribe * Bob Fillmore
Worthy Keeper of the Exchequer * Dick Smith
House Manager * Stan Lawrence
Steward * Bill Kacher
Worthy Sentinel * Walter Blank
Worthy Usher * James Crawford

Delta Psi

The annual Spring Formal and buffet supper was held at the Delta Psi house last Friday night, May 7. Mr. and Mrs. K. Schwartz (of the Romance Language Department) and Mr. and Mrs. R. Searles were chaperones. The Owl and the Pussycat (of the Peerade float) also attended as well as the Delts and their dates. The couples danced to the strains of the Get-To-Gether band.

The Delt house is instituting a new Civil Defense Program under the chairmanship of Chief Air Watcher, Bill Balfrey.

On Tuesday May 18, The Delta Psi Mother's Club is holding its first formal meeting to discuss plans for a 5 year decoration program which is already under way to completely refurnish the house. The Alumni Room decorations have already been completed as a first step toward this goal.

Phi Delta Theta

The Phi Delta Theta Spring Formal was a huge success this year culminating an equally successful year with the winnings of; the peerade float 1st. place award for the second consecutive year, the the snow sculpture Kake Walk prize, and placing second in both the I.F.C. Sing contest and in the Kake Walking.

A new slate of officers was elected for the 1954-55 year. The following are in office: President - Frank Maccini; Reporter - Bob Crawford; Warden - Tony Calorusso - Secretary - Ken Wadley; Rushing Chairman - Bob Parker; Pledgemasters - Ken Wadley, and Paul Harasimowiez IFC Representatives - Bob Crawford (Sr.) and Jim Daniaelis (Jr.); Social Chairman Bob Gorman; Chaplain - Bob Dana; Chorister - Dave O'Dwyer; Scholarship Chairman - Terry O'Donnell; Alumni Secretary - Dan Milby; Historian - Librarian Vic Scotese; House manager - Frank Maccini; Head Waiter - Russ Hubley; Summer House manager - Paul Little.

Elected into the Ethan Allen Rifles. Military Honorary from the Phi Delt House were: Bob Crawford, Frank Maccini, Vic Scotese, and Ernie Tesconi.

Don Cutler '54, of Milton, Mass., was named the Outstanding Senior of the year and was given a plaque in his honor.

Ted McCabe '56, of Larchmont, New York was pledged recently.

Phi Sigma Delta

The Phi Sigs are honoring Miss Mary Jean Simpson with an Administration and Faculty Tea this coming Sunday, May 16 from 4-6 in afternoon.

Another social highlight of the coming weekend will be a boatburning party with full Naval honors for the U.S.S. Airwick, grand and glorious old-girl of the Kake Walk skit: Fleet. She had a long career, sailing many a storm-tossed sea, including the Pearl Street voyage in the Peerade Passage.

Kappa Sig - Curt Burrell is pinned to Anne Carsely, of Burlington. This weekend, Rodney Belden, '53, of Burlington, is to be married to Ann Gregory, '54, of Little Silver, N.J. Beldy is to report for military service next week.

ATO - Pete Griffin married Jean Friendburg on May 3. An all ATO wedding, with Nick Carter, best man, and Dick Stickney and Dirk Kuyk as ushers. The wedding was held at Madison, N.J.

Delt Psi - Bob Shuttle of Barre is pinned to Cookie King of Island Pond.

Pi Beta Phi - Cindy Stafford is engaged to Wallace Mac Donald, of National Life of Montpelier; Low Ewart is pinned to Jack Crisp, a Psi U from Dartmouth, who is now at UVM Med School. Gerry Quinn, '55, is pinned to John Dowling of Sig Nu, and Pat Speer, '54, is engaged to Nate Gilman, '54, Sig Nu.

The following marriages are to take place this summer. May 30 - Jan Danforth to John Knickerbockers of the Army; June 19 - Anne Bossidy, '53, to Mark Margiotta, UVM, '53, Sig Nu, now of the UVM Med School; Nancy Buckheim, '54, to Bob Beauchamp, '54, Boston University Pharmacy School;

The field of fifteen was narrowed to five when the votes were tallied for the Junior Beauties election. In descending order are: Elaine Wittenstein, Sandy Perry, Bobbi O'Hara, Nan McMann, Liz Whitcomb.

How can the three on the left (two fellows and a girl) be enjoying themselves so much when fellow on right seems so calm and peaceful? Action occurred at Saturday jazz concert.

Prize Debate

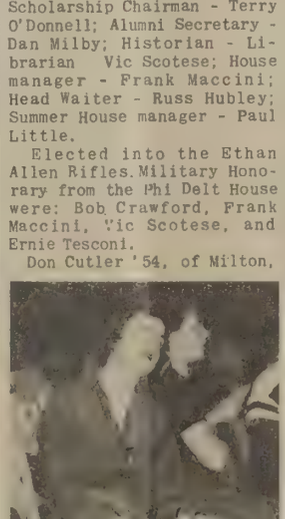
U.N. and appealed to the audience to be practical.



Battles Objects

Miss Battles rose to the challenge with a refutation of the affirmative's "practical need" for Red China's admission and a well substantiated set of practical objections to such a policy.

The intensity of the debate rose in the rebuttles, as all debators displayed remarkable flexibility to the responses of the audience. Dr. Robert Huber, head of the U. of Vermont Speech Department, remarked that "the audience opinion seemed to shift with each speech."

Prof. Charles Helgeson, Director of Debate at UVM, called special attention to Claire Battles' humorous yet strong rebuttle in which she summed up her colleague's and her own arguments and dumped them effectively into her opponents' lap. Lorch's final speech was smooth and unruffled, but the Vermont girls had piled up too big a lead.

Both Vermont and Middlebury observers cited this debate as one of the finest of the six year series. The team of Miss Wescott and Miss Battles is the fifth Vermont team to win the annual debate.

Don't exactly know what to call the expression on this gal's face. Ed Huott caught picture during jazz concert last weekend.

Cloud Seven

On May third, Pete Griffin, '53, an ATO alum, married Joan Frieadburg, '53, an Alpha Chi from Madison, New Jersey. It was an "all- ATO wedding-" with Nick Carter as best man, and for ushers, Dirk Kyuk and Dick Stikney.

The Owls joined forces with the Lovebirds when brother Jim Johnson, '55, of Portland, Maine, recently pinned Elaine Kurz, '55, of West Orange, New Jersey; and Bob Hartman, '54, of Burlington, became engaged to Nancy Gatcomb.

Theta Lips really are smiling with the announcement of the pinning of Lynn Ericson, '54, to Dave Willey, '52, of Sigma Nu. Lynn's home town is Lake Mohawk, New Jersey, and Dave just back from Korea, is waiting to be processed out of the army at Fort Kilmar.

Closing out an abbreviated social semester due "to conditions beyond their control," the SAE's from 56 Summit St., held their Spring Formal last weekend at the Shelburne Harbor Inn.

Following the tradition of years gone by, the Sig Alphs crowned Jane Morrison, a Tri-Delt and pinned to outgoing President Bill Battles as their SAE Sweetheart, and then serenaded all the lasses pinned during the year.

In the Cloud Seven Department, Tom Leonard pinned Maxine Person, and Tom Thomas, Jr., pinned Sandy Johnson, '56, of Rye, N.Y.

Recently elected officers of the Chapter find Tom Thomas Sr., as Eminent Archon, Bob Hylton Deputy Archon, Dave O'Brien, Recorder, Tom Harney Warden, Tom Thomas Jr., Herald, Jim Poole, Chaplain, and Ivy Iversen as Correspondent.

This Saturday afternoon the SAE's will honor their mothers at the annual Minerva Day Banquet, to be followed by the chapter's picnic.

The Minerva Day banquet, held in honor of the mothers of the active, has been one of the outstanding social successes year in and year out.

June 20 - Marty Marvin, '54, to Dave Kelly, Sig Phi, '53, and Char Parker, '54, to Bud Towne, Sig Nu '52; June 26 - Sally Hickock, '54, to Paul Bousquet, ATO '53, and finally August 28 - Pat Speer and Nate Gilman, Cindy Stafford and Wallace MacDonald.

Phi Delta- Don Cutler, '54, Milton, Mass., is pinned to Beulah Fisher, '54, Morristown, N.J.

Allan Cummings, '54, Bronxville, N.Y., to Mildred Cairns, also of Bronxville.

Flash! John Meyers, '54, Scarsdale, N.Y., will marry Sue Dart, of White Plains, N.Y., '54, on June 3, 1955, between trains and sailings.

Theta Chi - George Ewins, '55, of West Berkshire, is pinned to Nancy Catlin, AXO, of UNH, '57.

Operas Well Handled; Evening Musically Entertaining; Question Tahiti Theme

By Matthew Baigell

In conjuction with the Festival of Fine Arts and Junior Week, the UVM Music Groups and the University Players presented the annual opera production of Sunday Excursion, by Arnold Sundgaard and Alex Wilder and, Trouble in Tahiti, by Leonard Bernstein on May 1, and May 4. Prof. G. Alexander Falls was the Dramatic Director. Prof. Howard Bennett was the Musical Director and Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis conducted the orchestra and Prof. Francis Weinrich was the Voice Coach.

The entire production was obviously well handled and well rehearsed. It would appear difficult to organize a large choir, and orchestra, a production staff and the principles into a cohesive unit. Each works by itself until the last full company rehearsals. At this point all the rough spots have to be smoothed. They were. This evening turned out tobe very musically entertaining and interesting.

Excursion Cute

Sunday Excursion, the curtain raiser, with libretto by Mr. Sundgaard and music by Mr. Wilder, is a very cute and frilly period opera which takes place in a New Haven Railroad car at the turn of the century. Two girls and two boys, traveling separately, are returning from an outing in New York. One of the boys, Dave Chittick, knows one of the girls, Marlene Goodenough, from a botany class at home. The other girl, Marcia Mockridge wants to meet Ken Vanderbilt, the other boy. The first two are not on speaking terms and the funniest moments occur when the strangers try to force their friends to make the proper introductions. Everything turns out fine in the end with the girls getting their guys.

Good Acting

It is to the credit of the singers that they were able to hold the audience's attention from their (the singers) difficult position of sitting through most of the opera. Prof. Falls' dramatic direction was most evident here. The singers did not merely sing. They acted their parts. We felt the hot stickiness of an unairconditioned July railroad car. We felt the frustration of Miss Mockridge and Mr. Vanderbilt who wanted to know each other but had to go through the "how do you do" formalities first. A little thing like going home was made into something living.

Sung Well

Both girls were fully in their parts and sang well. same might be said for the boys. However, Miss Mockridge and Mr. Vanderbilt and a lyrical quality, all their own which complimented each other. This probably is how it should have been played since the romantic interest was centered in these two.

John Van Blarcom as the candy vendor added humor to the car and although he broke the action of the couples, he was not needed to save the scene from boredom. He had some fine moments with his apples and candies and magazines.

Tough Living

Trouble in Tahiti, words and music by Mr. Bernstein, was the major opera of the evening. Bev. Rohr, and her husband, Elliot Bryant find that living in Suburbia, U.S.A. is not like it says it is in the advertising copy.

The music is typical Bernstein in the free flow between serious and jazz themes. The idea of the opera is also typical in its dealing with contemporary themes.

They show the spiritual and emotional degeneration of this type of life while the choir, acting as a Greek chorus, points up all the great material features of Suburbia.

Life has lost all value except asking a fast dollar and having a pretty white house somewhere. There is little but stagnation and escape into the fantasy of grade B movies. They are caught up in the type of life the choir sings about-chrome plated modern conveniences, period. Once caught in the whirl, they go round and round. Fighting the situation only causes bitterness and regret and there is no real escape.

Operatic journalism

One wonders, though, if this is the proper type of material to create an opera out of, or for that matter, to use this particular theme for any art form. Aside from the fact that this opera was enjoyable, is it possible to derive any aesthetic pleasures from it? Is merely commenting on a theme of decadence in American living enough to sustain us? It would seem that something more positive is needed. In a sense it is only operatic journalism, not an artistic experience. It only comments, and brutally at that. It adds nothing new to our experience of suburban life.

Yet, "Trouble in Tahiti" certainly was able to communicate its point to the audience. Is this all Bernstein wanted? Or is the opera only an adequate piece of craftsmanship and nothing more?

No Theme Change

The opera itself is only adequate, because there is actually no thematic development. In the beginning, the choir comments on Suburbia and the principles cannot get along or understand each other It ends on the same note and we learn nothing new about the couple. It doesn't build to anything except more disillusion which was inevitable anyways. It continues on the same dramatic level. It would appear then, that the theme is only a gimmick to assure audience response.

Principles Excellent

The principles, for an amateur group, were top notch. Each was able to hold the stage with his solos. Of particular interest here was Miss Rohr's, "Analysist," and "Island Magic," solos. Mr. Bryant's fine voice handled the, "You Must Win The Trophy," solo excellently. There were no complaints here or with their very pointed duets.

Carolyn Brumbaugh's incedental choir solo for some strange reason had a very haunting quality about it.

Lianne Tyron's scene designs wonderfully reflected the up to date home. These are among the most interesting sets I've ever seen in a University production.

Aside from the questions already raised, the production was well-handled and as a whole, quite effective. It is a feather in the collective cap of the departments that had a hand in the evenings works.

More Publicity For Events Is Cultural Committee Goal

By Max G. Ansbacher

The Student Association Cultural Committee has set up two major goals which it hopes to achieve for the benefit of the UVM student body. The first is to arrange some type of over-all planning which will take into consideration all non-sport extracurricular activities. The second goal is to give more publicity to those extracurricular activities which are being held at the present.

No Funds

The Cultural Committee is a standing committee of the Student Association which consists of an equal number of faculty and students. As the committee was set up by the Student Association both the Vermont Conference and the Program Series Committees were sub-committees of the Cultural Committee. In practice however, this has little significance, as the Cultural Committee has no budget, and Program Series is now self-supporting.

At their first meeting, the committee decided upon two objectives. "1. Coordinate, arrange, sponsor and encourage programs of a cultural nature on the campus. 2. Inform the campus community of the cultural programs in the vicinity." Because of a lack of funds the committee later put all their efforts into informing the campus.

Experimental Basis

The Cultural Committee is a new committee. According to a

At present, one of the most important functions of the Student Association Council is voting on budgets for the coming year. Besides keeping abreast of all the other matters pertinent to Student Association, many of the meetings lately have been overly long because of the amount to time neceesary to handle new budgets. Each budget is handled separately and is given full consideration. Hardly a proposed budget is considered that does not raise some question.

Following is a complete list of all the budgets that have been submitted to the council so far. There are still several more to be considered, some of which are large budgets.

The CYNIC budget will be discussed tonight.

The Council, thus far, has allocated either directly or in reserve a total of $5,777.05, and has underwritten in the amount of $3,223, totaling $8,800.05.

Two budgets have been turned down, thus far, amounting to $301.50.

The council has also approved an expenditure of $ 50.00 to be added to $ 180.00 of the COSA budget from this year to purchase a new A.B. Dick Mimeograph.

The UVM Flying Club was loaned $350.00 to recover the wings and empanage of the club plane so that it may pass the federal inspection on July 1. This money is to be repaid in two installments of $175.00 each on May 1, 1955 and May 1, 1956.

Some of the budgets still to be acted upon are: The CYNIC, Band, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Sophomore Aids, and the University Players requests for funds. These will be considered at the next two meetings.

Lines, Lines, Lines Mark The Halls Of Lower Waterman

By David Spector

Now we have finished another year of school and it is time to reflect on various quirks of the student body. Perhaps the most obvious is the lines that are always forming in lower floor Waterman for one reason or another. The latest lines were to see the exam schedules. But there is an interesting characteristic about this line. It forms and is fairly thick for a day or two, and then nobody ever goes near it again, except, perhaps, to check on an individual schedule.

Another longer lasting line is the one that always forms when the courses for the next semester are posted. This is an exceeding popular line. People mill around just to be able to get in it. And what do they find? Just a list of the classes that will probably be changed anyway by next year, but still it is a possible excuse to kill time. As a matter of fact it is possible to spend hours arranging and rearranging your classes trying to find the elusive combination of no 8 o'clocks, none afternoon, and none on Saturdays. Needless to say this would keep anyone busy for a while. It would also keep down the card playing in the lounge.

Other smaller lines former during the year for events that were important for a day or so, and then just faded into obscurity. Nevertheless we all must have our moments of glory. A quick poll of the students shows that probably the least read bulletin boards of all are used by the ROTC departments. Whenever they get news of any kind they leave it up there until it rots.

In any case the bulletin boards are no doubt useful to the school, and provide entertainment, of sorts, for the student body.

Cultural

report sent out by its chairman, "It is realized that the Cultural Committee will be functioning mainly on an experimental basis next year and it is suggested that the committee be evaluated at the end of its first year to see how effectively it has operated and decide what, if any, changes need be made in organization."

In order to accomplish these objectives with the greatest efficiency, the committee is compiling all the information that it can accumulate concerning outside speakers and other forms of entertainment. Rees Midgley, a member of the committee said, "We hope that eventually we will have a complete file of all speakers, so that if an organization wants to know what it can have with its budget, we will be able to tell them without any trouble."

Weekly Calendar

One of the problems of the campus, which the committee would like to minimize, is the cluttering up of the bulletin boards in the Waterman Building to such an extent that a student walking through the corridor does not notice which events are important for him to attend. The committee thought that a possible solution might be to have a calendar of the week in the CYNIC which would list all the non-social and non-athletic events which are open to the whole student body.

The Catamount Baseball, rained out in its last three encounters, shows four batters above the .300 mark. Second Baseman, Al McLam and Outfielder Gerry Samuels lead the clouters with .333 averages.

Speech Correction Offers Good Opportunity For Career

By Harris Winitz

Mr. Winitz is a speech major. He is a senior, and has been working in speech correction at UVM for the past year.

Tiberius Claudius was the fourth emperor of the ancient dynasty of Rome. He was a powerful leader and accomplished much during his reign. Yet this ancient ruler possessed a marked speech defect. Tiberius Claudius was a stutterer; and because he stuttered he was called "Claudius the Idiot", "Claudius the Stammerer", and worse of all he was referred to by his associates as "Clau-Clau-Claudius."

Let us quickly return to modern society and peruse through MIT's famous humour magazine, Voo Doo. There appeared in their recent issue this morbid joke:

The village blacksmith had just finished heating up the horseshoe and placed it on the anvil with a pair of tongs.

"Hi-hi-hi-hit it," he stuttered to his helper.

"Wh-wh-where?" asked the other.

"Aw, h-h-h-h-hell. Now we'll have to heat it again."

The sordid sense of humour possessed by the composer of this joke indicates two things. Firstly, the problem of stuttering has continued for almost 2000 years, and as as vivid and realistic today as it was in the days when Rome flourished. Secondly, the stutterer's plight is magnified by the fact that he is unlike other cripples. Along with defective communication, he must suffer relentless ridicule and embarrassment.

The stutterer does not suffer alone. He is just one of the many twelve million speech defective individuals in the country. The general public is not cognizant of the problems of the speech impaired individual. A survey taken within the past ten years in New York City revealed that the total expenditure for speech therapy per pupil, did not exceed $5.65. The total expenditure per pupil for the blind and deaf child was $515 and $570 respectively. This uneven distribution of funds indicates the lack of financial awareness possessed by the educators of New York City toward 'our neglected cripples.' This similiar condition is ubiquitious within our nation.

To resolve this problem of speech rehabilitation, state and local funds are now beginning to be allocated. Within the past few years certain states have established speech clinics and are now employing speech correctionists. The University of Vermont realizing the necessity of administering speech correction aid to students, established a speech clinic. Within the past seven years, the clinic under the guidance of Dr. Eleanor M. Luse, has operated with great success. The clinic has served the twofold purpose of providing speech correction for the needy, and it has also served as an observation and laboratory clinic for speech majors. In other states there is also a desire to establish more speech clinics. However, speech correctionists are not available. This situation prevents the founding of speech clinics and thus, inhibits the indespensible speech therapy.

The lack of personnel in this field presents an excellent opportunity for young men and women who are undecided about the selection of a career. The field offers human satisfaction and adequate renumeration. With the increase of speech correctionists, the speech handicapped individual will not continue to be ridiculed, pitied or rejected. He will be helped.

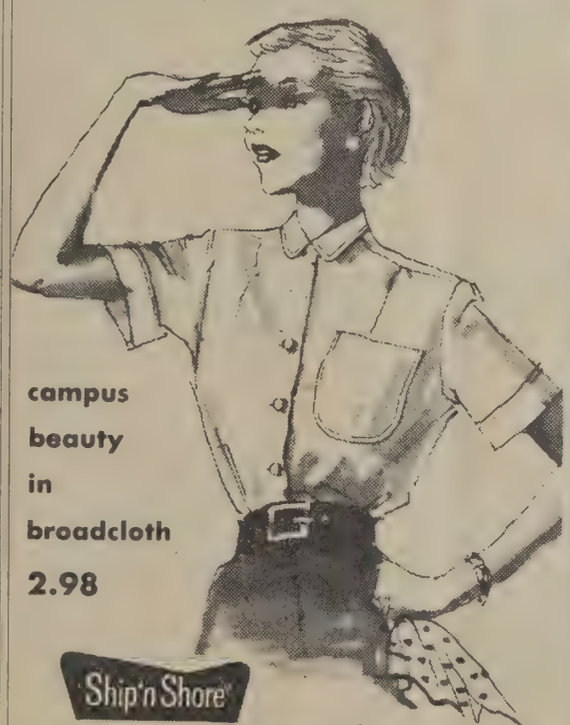
Novice Debators Represent UVM At Eastern Meet



The UVM Lawrence Debate Club entered four first year debaters in the annual varsity Eastern Tournament at Fordham University, New York City, two weeks ago to compete with 18 schools.

The affirmative team, advocating free trade for the United States, was Nancy Jean Beals and Susan Wakefield. The negative team was Eileen Kenney and John Burgess.

UVM won 4 of the 12 debates. John Burgess was the second best bebater in the tournament. Public speaking, extemporaneous speaking, and debating were included in the Eastern Tournament. Bates College of Maine won the debate contest.

The team was accompanied by Professor Charles Helgesen, Director of Debate and Discussion. UVM defeated King's College of Pennsylvania, Penn State University, St. Anselm's College, and St. Peter's College of Brooklyn, New York.

YC Link Title Starts Friday

University of Connecticut's golf team will seek its third straight Yankee Conference links title at the Oakley Country Club in Watertown, Mass., Friday, as five of the six New England state universities enter the seventh annual conference tournament.

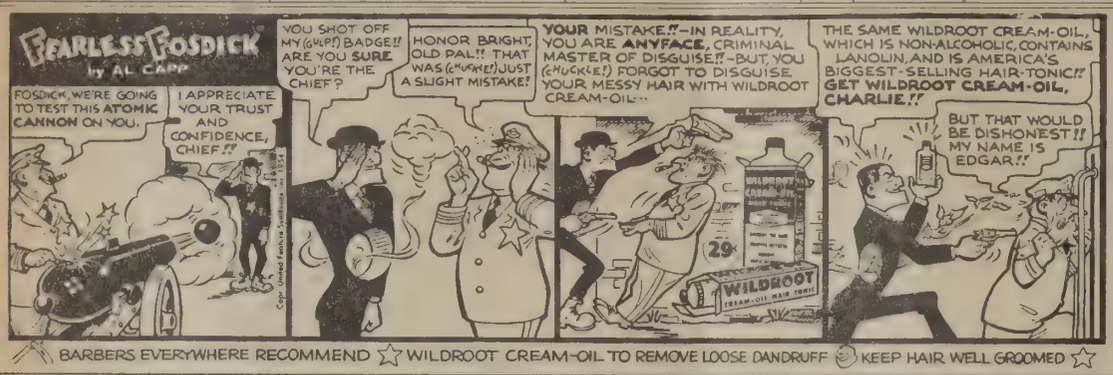
Only the University of New Hampshire, which does not sponsor an intercollegiate golf team, will be absent from the lists when they tee off in conjunction with the New England Collegiate field at Oakley, Friday.

Last year's scores in the Yankee Conference meet at Oakley were:

Connecticut 383
Massachusetts 390
Maine 394
Rhode Island 401
Vermont 424

Top ten individual finishers were:

Philip Jones,	Conn.	70
Robert Gunter,	Mass.	73
Mortimer Kaufman,	Vermont	76
Benjamin Mendes,	Rhode I.	76
Thomas Prior,	Connecticut	77
Ernest Dube,	Mass.	78
Donald Mavon,	Maine	78
Robert McMahon,	Maine	78
Thomas Monaghan,	Maine	78
Robert Noone,	Conn.	78



Golf Team Streak Broken At Seven In Loss To RPI

After opening the season with its seventh straight victory (including last year's undefeated record) against Union College 18-9, the Catamount Linksmen lost an 18½ to 8½ decision to RPI, thus ending its winning skein.

The Cat Clubbers clobbered the Unionmen on a very slippery course at Schenectady, with Bren Beer UVM's low man with a neat 75.

In the RPI meet at Burlington Country Club the fairways favored the engineers. Zambella, medalist in the play with a 77, and Peterson defeated Vermont's Hartman and Colodney, 7½ to 1½; Papa and Dalvo of the winners stopped Beer and Trinkinow by the same score. Rutten and Bowman of UVM short putted RPI's Bolam and Geser 5½ to 3½. Low Vermont scorers were Hartman and Bowman, both with 82's.

The Vermont intercollegiate golf championship, scheduled for the beginning of this past week was postponed due to wetness. Besides the Yankee Conference meet the golf team still has Clarkson and Dartmouth on its schedule.

Foreground: Boeing RB-47E, world's fastest day-or-night long-range reconnaissance plane. Background: Standard B-47E six-jet bomber.

What do you want most in an engineering career?

Is it room to grow? Then join a company that's growing. Boeing, for example, has grown continuously throughout its 37-year history of design, production and research leadership. There's always room up ahead—and Boeing promotes from within. Regular merit reviews are held to give you steady recognition.

Do you want long-range career stability? Boeing today employs more engineers than even at the peak of World War II. Here you'd work on such projects as pilotless aircraft, research on supersonic flight and nuclear power for airplanes, on America's first jet transport, and the world's outstanding jet bombers.

Do you want variety of opportunity? Aviation is unique in this respect. It offers you unmatched variety and breadth of application, from applied research to production design, all going on at once. Boeing is constantly alert to new materials and new techniques, and approaches them without limitations. In addition, Boeing's huge subcontracting program—requiring engineering co-ordination—offers you contacts with a cross section of American industry.

Boeing engineering activity is concentrated at Seattle, Washington, and Wichita, Kansas—communities with a wide range of recreational opportunities as well as schools of higher learning. The company will arrange a reduced work week to permit time for graduate study and will also reimburse tuition upon successful completion of each quarter's work.

There are openings in all branches of engineering (mechanical, civil, electrical, aeronautical and related fields) for DESIGN, PRODUCTION and RESEARCH. Also for physicists and mathematicians with advanced degrees.

Meet The Varsity

by Bob Brown

VERN CURRIER

Vern Currier is a member of a group that is rapidly becoming extinct. No, he's not a New York Giant fan but simply a varsity athlete who gets his name posted on the Deans list consistantly.

A native of Island Pond, Vt., Vern played four years of basketball and baseball for Brighton High of Island Pond.

He will be holding down the hot corner for his second year. A versatile athlete, Vern is, as you'll remember, one of the Evansmen during the hoop season and he lists golfing as a side interest.

A quiet, slim six footer, Vern belongs to Delta Psi fraternity, the Varsity Club, Key and Serpent and Nu Beta Pi.

During the summer season he keeps in shape working with the railroad and getting in as much ball as possible.

It'll be A.F.R.O.T.C. camp this summer followed by a stint in the Air Force and then a shot at Civil Engineering.

KEITH SPAULDING

It's a slightly built Senior who, depending on the opposition's pitching, righty or southpaw, patrols the right field garden at Centennial Field for the Catamounts.

A wiry 155 pounder, Keith Spaulding will be playing his fourth year of ball at UVM.

He calls St. Johnsbury, Vt. home and played four years of baseball, basketball and football at St. Johnsbury Academy, and captained the basketball team his senior year.

A Varsity Clubber and the treasurer and Athletic chairman of ATO, Keith likes to remember the Navy game of two years ago when he connected for three hits and drove in the two winning runs.

A quiet, easygoing sort of guy and an avid sportsman, Keith likes to fish and plays Interfraternity basketball and football. In his spare moments he gets a kick out of tinkering with old cars.

Keith is concentrating in Personnel Management in the Commerce and Ec course.

The University of Vermont sailing team defeated Middlebury College on the Porter's Point course, 17-11. Due to the rainy weather there were only two races held, both won by UVM.

Don Cutler and Bill Day were the winning skippers.

UVM Plays Host To YC Track Meet On Saturday; Netmen Gain Second Place Tie In Yankee Conference

"Run For Fun" Boys Invade Centennial In 7th Annual Meet

Coach Archie Post's University of Vermont cindermen will play host in the 7th consecutive Yankee Conference Meet Saturday at Centennial Field. The six team entry will be one of the largest and most competitive meets in this area in many years.

The Postmen are fresh from dual victories against Union and Norwich, The coach is confident of a stronger showing than last year's cellar standing. UVM was only able to garn 4 points in 1953.

The Cats will be counting heavily on Ron Dornbosch in the weights, Jerry Joyner in the 880, Captain Dan Manson in the sprints, Dave Stevens in the quarter, and Clint Thompson in the hurdles.

R. I. FAVORED

Defending Champions, Rhode Island, will be heavy favorites for its smallest squad in recent years, and an admitted lack of customary depth, Fred Tootell, who coaches the University of Rhode Island track and field forces, has shown much early season strength.

The one-time Bowdoin immortal has established the only complete monopoly in Yankee Conference archives by winning every track meet since the six state universities became a playing conference back in 1948, and with potential first place winners in 13 events, will again be the target of the five challengers.

New Hampshire, the perennial runners-up, who lost to Rhode Island in the final two events at Amherst a year ago, and were second to the Rams in 1948, 1949, and 1952, although running a string of eight straight dual meet victories, including one over contending Maine, also lacks balance this spring and will enter fewer potential first place winners.

Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut will enter individual threats but appear unable to master the balance necessary to win the meet.

RHODY LOADED

Coach Tootell may count on Charlie Guber, last year's champion, and Bob Sands who has done 10 flat in the hundred, to score points in the ashes. Joe Pizzo has turned in a 51.5 quarter, probably good enough to win, while Bill Macquattie is a possible double winner in the mile 880, with support in the latter event from Stuart Smith. Franny Brown, George Dodson and Bill Morris will score in the hurdles.

The Rams are even stronger in the field with record holder Kazar Apkarian flirting with 50 feet in the 16-pound shot, and Bob Taylor hurling the hammer over 170 feet. Charlie Gibbons is a bet to win the discus at around 130 feet, while Vic Nerses is doing over 12 feet in the vault, and Morris is consistently beyond 22 feet in the broad jump. The best bet for a Rhody sweep is in the javelin where Joe Short, Dick Oster, Tony Rufo and Pizzo are performing with distinction.

Rhody appears the weakest in the high jump and two mile.

Paul Sweet at New Hampshire is surprisingly week in the field events, usually a Wildcat strong point. Johnny Parker who at 6'5had the best high jump in the East last year, has been off that form, but must be considered a threat. Parker also won the broad jump a year ago.

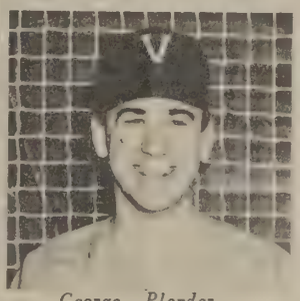
But New Hampshire is stronger on the cinders where Bernie Campbell scored three straight dual meet triples in the 100, 220 and 440. But with trials in both the shorter dashes, Campbell may be scratched from one of these events. Don Crandall is the defending half mile champion, and the Cats have good hurdlers. But Alan Carlsen who set a mile record last year is not competing this spring.

Calkin, Maine Stalwart

Chester Jenkins at Maine has seen his squad lose in dual meets to BC and New Hampshire, but has a top performer in Bill Calkin in the hurdles, provided his knee injury is healed. Ed Bogdanovich, grid star from Providence, is Apkarian's opposition in the shot put. Ed Touchette in the hurdles, Chellis Smith and Charley Rearick in the vault, and Paul Firlotte in the two mile are potential winners. Firlotte was conference cross country champion last fall.

Bob Kennedy also has better prospects at Connecticut headed by Fred Litka in the discus, Charles Gallagher in the Hurdles, Frank Case in the middle distance events, Jack Kane in the pole vault, Curt Griffin in the broad jump and basketball star Art Quimby in the field events.

Coach Lew Derby at Massachusetts lost several of his top point winners from last year's squad, but is still strong in the distance events with a nucleus of runners from his championship cross country squad. The Redmen, despite the lack of sound balance, may pick up enough points to decide the outcome of the meet.



Fieldman Ron Dornbosch is one of Archie Post's optomistic reasons for a bright YC outlook Saturday. by Huot SPS

Vermont Beats Dartmouth 3-0; Plender's Second Straight

George Plender
by Ed Willard

George Plender pitched his second shutout in a row and the UVM Catamounts stretched their shutout victories over Dartmouth to two, as the Cats clawed the Big Green 3-0 at Hanover last Friday. Chunky George took over right where last year's Vermont mound ace Bernie Ravenna left off as he pitched a beautiful four hit shutout to run his consecutive scoreless inning total to 23. Again, it was Plender's masterful control and an errorless Vermont defense that did the trick as the Catamounts collected seven hits off Dartmouth pitcher Bill Ruel.

Samuels Leads attack

Another St. Mikes game seemed in the offing as neither side could score in the first eight innings. In the top of the ninth, it was Jerry Samuels who once again came through where it counted as he led off with a single. Then, Al McLam, who had previously beat out a beautifully laid down bunt, singled. Captain Ed Rynn sacrificed, putting men on second and third and with one out, Jim Montgomery walked to fill the bases. Here, Ed Beck hit a grounder to the infield and was out at first but Samuels scored. A wild throw by the Dartmouth first baseman then allowed McLam and Montgomery to score, ending the scoring as Plender mowed down the Green in the last of the ninth.

SPLINTERS:

The ball game was another fine one for Plender who has now walked only one man in his last 22 innings. . . Dartmouth and Vermont are both coached by ex major leaguers as former Yankee Bob Shawkey met former Phillie and Cardinal Ralph Lapointe. . . George Gilbert was the fielding star of the day as he contributed a couple of fine catches. . . The Vermont inner defense looking very sharp as DP combination of Montgomery to McLam to Wark pulled a nice one.

UMass Rained Out

The scheduled doubleheader with UMass. Saturday was rained out and with it, UVM's last Yankee Conference game. Saturday, the Cats meet Norwich at Northfield and Monday it's St. Mikes at Centennial Field. Maybe another Plender-Sorrel mound duel.

Six fraternities and three independent teams have qualified for the second round of the intramural softball league. The six fraternities that qualified are Phi Sigma Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Theta, and Tau Epsilon Phi. Chittenden, Buckham, and a non-dorm team make up the independent league. The fraternities will hold a round robin as will the independents, with the winners in each division playing off for the campus championship.

PSD Wins League "A"

Phi Sig rolled over League "A" with ease as they defeated Theta Chi 11-3, Phi Delt 12-6, ATO 20-2, and Acacia 19-12. Phi Delt displayed plenty of power and some pretty good pitching by slaughtering ATO 25-4, shutting out Acacia 3-0, and winning a fairly close one from Theta Chi, 10-5.

SAE, Sig Nu Tie

SAE and Sig Nu tied for first place in League "B" with 2-1 records. This league was the closest of the four with Delt Psi and Sig Phi giving the qualifiers a good battle. Sig Nu's only defeat was at the hands of Sig Phi, 10-7. SAE's lone loss was to Sig Nu, in a squeaker, 6-5.

League "C" saw a two team race with TEP giving Kappa Sig their only defeat, 7-5. Mike Wagreich pitched a great game for the TEP's. Chittenden outshone all the other teams in League "D". They beat their closest threat Buckham, 14-8.

In the playoffs, the pitchers that will carry the big burden are Marv Cooper-Phi Sig, Sid Rossuck-Sig Nu, Nat Campana-Kappa Sig, Tony Calorusso-Phi Delt, Mike Wagreich-TEP, and Carlton Clifford-SAE.

Racketmen Show Strength In Six Team Tournament

The University of Vermont tied with Umass for second place in the Yankee Conference tournament last week. Uconn won.

Lacking the services of second man Jay Selcow, the University of Vermont Tennis Team traveled to Durham, New Hampshire, for the Yankee Conference Tournament. Competing in this two day affair were the universities of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and U.V.M.

Uconn, the defending champs and pretournament favorites, came through strongly on Saturday to again take the Yankee Conference title. Top seeded, in the number one singles, was Vermont's own Bill Thompson, but he failed to gain any points, loosing his first match.

The University of Massachusetts took a two point lead over Uconn in the opening day rounds. The team scores after Friday's matches were completed were:

Umass. 10 U.V.M. 6
Uconn. 8 Maine 5
Rhode Island 7, New Hamp. 1

On Saturday though, the Catamounts showed surprising strength, scoring 5 points to tie Massachusetts for second place. Umass could only manage to tally one additional point. Uconn, showing superior strength, pulled away from the pack scoring another 8 points. R.I. came through with 3 more, but Maine and N.H. failed to score in the second days competition.

Shelly Rosenthal tallied 5 points for UVM by winning the number five man singles. In the finals, he beat Massachusetts' Bob Sadow 6-1 6-3. Rosenthal teamed up with Carl Joseph, in the number three doubles, and lost a tightly contested, three set final match to Uconn's Aronin and Goeben 6-3 4-6 6-1.

Vermont's second doubles team of Gene Mowry and Pete Idleman swept their division, winning the finals by beating Rhode Island's Helmus and Diurne 6-3 6-2.

Kenny Savela, playing the number two position in place of Jay Selcow, reached the finals only to loose to Connecticut's Ken Watson 8-6 6-3.

Coach F. D. Carpenter was very pleased with Vermont's outcome, but felt that with the services of Selcow, UVM might have been able to win tournament.

The final totals again are:

U Conn. 16, U. Rhode I. 10
U. Vermont 11, U. Maine 5
U. Mass 11, U. New Hamp. 1

Frosh Harriers Crush SJ, 75-42; Blank Paces Again

The Freshman tracksters won their second meet of the season, crushing St. Johnsbury 75-42. The kittens ran all over their opponents as they placed first in nine events. Walt Blank again pace the winners in with his second consecutive triple victory bringing his undefeated win total to six straight. He again captured the 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes. Other winners were: Perkins and Chase (tie), pole vault; Harasimovics, shot put ; Slack, 880; Miller, high jump; Keimowitz; javelin; Hill, discus.

Campus Softball Standings

First Round Standings:

LEAGUE "A"		LEAGUE "B"
PSD	4-0	SAE	2-1
PDT	3-1	SN	2-1
A	1-2	DP	1-2
TC	0-2	SP	1-2

Postmen Defeat Union, 67-59, Break Losers 13 Meet Skein

By Mark Bernstein

Coach Archie Post and his charges took a trip to Union College, compiling a victorious track meet score of 66½ -59½. Vermont took advantage of Union's weakness in running events to cop the meet. On the other hand it might be noted that Union held the edge in the majority of field events. The following totals are the result of last week's meet:

Shot Put - O'Meally, U., Doornbosch, Vt., Morris, U. - 45' ½".

Mile - Grady, Vt., Fitzpatrick, Vt., Schechter, U. - 4:45.3

440 - Wadley, Vt., Stephens, Vt., Reed, U. - 53.5

100 - Manson, Vt., Solomon, Vt., Jannoni, Vt. - 10.3

High Jump - Goff, U., Lovejoy, Vt., Guy, Vt., Michalsky, U. - 5' 11"

High Hurdles - Michalsky, U., Thompson, Vt., Woodberry, U. - 17.5

880 - MacKinnon, U., Grady, Vt., Wadley, Vt. - 2:3.1

220 - Manson, Vt., Solomon, Vt., Jannoni, Vt. - 23.4

Discus - O'Meally, U., Giambruno, U., Doornbosch, Vt. - 125' 0"

2 Mile - Damon, Vt., Schechter, U., Osmun, Vt. - 10:13

Low Hurdle - Thompson, Vt., Saurwein, Vt., Panariello, U. - 26.8

Javelin - Klingberg, U., Giambruno, U., Southwick, U. - 169' 7¾"

Pole Vault - Klingberg, U., Saurwein, Vt., Woodberry, U. - 11' 0" Broad Jump - Dubois, U., Klingberg, U., Saurwein, Vt. - 19' 3¾"

Worth mentioning is the fact that Vermont's victory broke a winning streak of 13 straight track meets by Union College.

Post Looks Ahead

As far as Coach Archie Post is concerned the big test has yet to come. He is looking forward to the State meet between Norwich, Middlebury, and Vermont. His main worry is one Sonny Dennis, of football fame and now track star at Middlebury College. Dennis, recently took four first places against Trinity College. In order for his team to be in top shape, Archie is thinking seriously of leaving some runners back home, not competing in the New England Meet. Norwich is not supposed to be so strong but Coach Post feels that the poorer of the three teams in the State Meet could make trouble for one of the other two.

Welcome Mat Rolled Out; Frosh Arrive This Morning

Takes One Week For Orientation

The "Preliminary Days Program" which will initiate this year's freshman class into college life has been packed with over forty different activities in order to give the freshmen a sufficient idea of what they can expect of UVM, and of what UVM expects of them.

Planned by a special student-faculty committee of the Student Association, the tightly scheduled program revolves around a series of tests, orientation meetings and social events.

By carefully tabulating the results of the tests the University Student Personnel Office can estimate in which courses a student will do his best, how well he is likely to do, and in what he is likely to have the most interest.

The social events are designed to give the freshmen a chance to meet important students and faculty of the campus, as well as to make some connections with possible dates before the hordes of upperclassmen return to the campus.

Frosh women try one on for size. Beanies are to be worn by each freshman until the Thanksgiving recess. The rule is enforced by Boulder Society, Men's Senior Honor Society.

Freshman Beannies

The first thing each freshman does on his arrival is to go to the reception desk at the main entrance of the Waterman Building for identification tickets and freshmen caps.

On Friday afternoon a get-together for parents in the Fleming Museum is planned. This will give all the parents who are in Burlington a chance to meet the higher echelons of the faculty as well as President Borgmann and the Deans.

At 6:00 in the evening freshmen women will be given a buffet supper by the Staff and Sandal. The University Players will present a play in Southwick Auditorium at 7:30, after which the Women's Honorary Societies will have an entertainment for women. At this time the men who have residence in Buckham, Chittenden or Wills will attend a meeting in the Chapel.

After breakfast on Saturday morning the tests will get started with an English Placement "Measurement" scheduled for 9:00 in the gymnasium. However, those students whose last names begin with R through Z are to report to the Hills Hall Auditorium.

At 10:45 the language placement tests in Spanish and French are to be given, and more tests follow in the afternoon. The Women's Student Government Association and the Men's Athletic Department both are having meetings Saturday afternoon.

Welcome Banquet

The big event of the day takes place at 6:30 when the Student Association gives every freshman a free meal to welcome him to the campus. This is where new students catch a glimpse of many of the top members of the University, as well as have a grand time singing and feasting.

Sunday morning will be occupied by religious services. In the afternoon the Student Association will tell the freshmen about itself at a special meeting in the chapel.

The day ends with a bang when the cheerleaders and the football team go over to Southwick to entertain the freshmen at the annual Picnic and Pep Rally. The Freshmen will get their first idea of what the old UVM songs sound like at this event.

Beannie Hop

Monday starts off with a lively intelligence test to wake everyone up and goes on with a few more tests, but ends with the climax of the week's social events; the long awaited "Beannie Hop". At this dance a freshman get a chance to become better acquainted with that cute number he is

WHETHER You Like It Or Not We've Got WEATHER--

If you're the kind of person who likes sparkling cold days with piles of snow on the ground, then Vermont is the place for you. According to the United States weather station in Burlington the average temperature for the three winter months is just about twenty degrees.

The average annual temperature in Burlington is about 44.5 degrees, while that for Boston and New York is 56, so get out your woolen blankets and coon skin coats!

If you like skiing you'll love Vermont with its almost continuous covering of snow in the mountain regions from the first of January into the middle of April.

Total snowfall in the Burlington area last year was 57.2 inches, however there is always a thaw at some time, so you will never actually see these almost five feet of snow.

As the 53 year records show, last year was actually an off year as far as snowfall is concerned. The Burlington total snowfall is usually closer to 63 inches.

Gals Top Guys In Grades; Frosh Scores Lowest

Fraternity, sorority and class averages have been compiled and recorded for the second semester of studies at UVM and, as usual, the coeds have surpassed the men in scholastic honors.

University women averaged 78.25 while the total effort of UVM men amounted to an average of 74.05, giving the University an overall average of 75.60.

By classes, the figures break down as follows.

Senior Class: 80.79 with 82.25 for senior women and 79.75 for the men. Junior Class: 77.92 with 80.49 for the women and 76.53 for the men students. The Sophomore Class average of 74.90 showed women students attaining 78.14 with the men compiling a 73.34 average. Freshman women had a mark of 74.71 with the freshman men contributing 70.04 for a class average of 71.85.

Sorority breakdown is as follows: Gamma Phi Beta, 81.82; Kappa Alpha Theta, 79.23, Alpha Chi Omega, 78.89; Pi Beta Phi, 78.52; Sigma Gamma, 78.20; Delta Delta Delta, 77.75; Alpha Delta Pi, 77.37; Alpha Epsilon Phi, 77.32. Total sorority average equalled 78.69.

Fraternity averages follow: Tau Epsilon Phi, 78.04; Phi Sigma Delta, 76.46; Alpha Epsilon Pi 76.12; Phi Delta Theta, 75.25; Sigma Phi Epsilon, 74.50; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 74.48; Delta Psi, 74.12; Lambda Iota, 74.01; Theta Chi, 73.17; Sigma Nu, 73.11; Acacia, 72.85; Sigma Phi, 72.63; Alpha Tau Omega, 72.36; Kappa Sigma, 72.06.

Total fraternity average equalled 74.58.

The Caine Mutiny s Key Program Of 54-55 Series

Headed by The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial, The UVM Program Series will present five top-flight attractions in Burlington during this school year.

The Series' first production is scheduled for October 8 when the American Savoyards will stage the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, The Pirates of Penzance.

Following are John Gunther on November 4; The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial, November 22; Iva Kitchell, March 11; and Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, April 27.

The success of last year's series, according to Marjorie Lowell, '55, Director of The Program Committee, has made possible the inclusion of both the Broadway play and the operetta.

The previous season's fare included Bernard DeVoto, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., the Slavenska-Franklin Ballet, and Charles Laughton's adaptation of John Brown's Body. The latter starred Tyrone Power, Raymond Massey and Ann Baxter.

The "Court-Martial" stars Paul Douglas as Queeg, Wendall Corey as Greenwald; Steve Brodie is cast as Mary K. The production is under the direction of Charles Laughton, who appeared as a Program Series speaker in 1953.

"Mr. Inside", John Gunther, will lecture on the most recent of his "Inside" series, Inside Africa.

Iva Kitchell, an artist in the field of dance satire will give parodies of serious dances as well as caricatures of familiar figures.

The final program brings the leading young physicist, Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, to the UVM campus. He is, at present, director of the Nuclear Science Service, and is interested in providing the public with an understanding of nuclear science and its peaceful uses.

Social Calendar Appears Well Filled

They say that all work and no play is a rather dull routine, so take a peek at the coming year's social calendar.

Five "big college weekends" spaced out over the two semesters provide the back bone of the social whirl. First in line is Homecoming Weekend over the October 2 weekend.

Included in this festival are a Friday night dance for all, and then a Saturday afternoon football clash with Maine, followed by a barbecue and Vermont Varieties.

The next "weekend" on the list is Winter Formal. This is primarily a fraternity occasion.

But the biggest of the "big weekends" rolls around sometime in late February. The name --- SnakeWalk. This time we start the ball rolling on Thursday night with a formal ball. If you awake in time you'll find yourself at either the actual "walking", or at a fraternity dance. Saturday afternoon is basketball time, and the evening is a repeat of the night before. Sunday winds up the nightmare with a jazz concert.

This is a scene from the Mortar Board formal dance. For this one, the women ask the men and foot the bill. It is only one of a score of social events in store for the Class of '58.

Had enough? There's more. Spring formals (the same as the Winter brand, except for a lack of the white stuff known as snow) are next in line and the finale rolls around with Junior Prom.

Frosh Hazing At Minimum; Wearing Beanie Mandatory

Every great University has its traditional method of welcoming the Freshmen to its campus. At some schools the freshmen are inconvenienced, at others they are ridiculed, some schools make slaves out of the freshmen for a while, but among all this foolishness UVM stands out for its enlightened policy.

However, that is not to say that Vermont does not have its traditions for Freshmen, Vermont has quite a few of them indeed. The one which every Freshmen will notice first is that he is expected to wear his green numeral beannie from the time he gets on campus until the Thanksgiving recess is in effects.

This custom has been retained not so that the Freshman will be at a disadvantage but rather to help him to recognize his fellow classmates, as well as to aid him in being recognized by members of the University.

Beannies A Rule

Wearing freshman caps on campus is not only a custom, but it is a rule as well. This rule is enforced by the honorary societies and any other upper classmen who are interested. Every rule must have a punishment if it is broken, in order to be effective, and this is no exception.

It is the traditional punishment of all freshmen caught without their beannies to be thrown into the fountain in the middle of the green. The annual fountain fight between the freshmen and the sophomore men has almost become a tradition in itself.

If there are any freshmen who do not like wearing their freshmen beannies at the time of the Homecoming Day game they have a chance to break away from this requirement by defeating the sophomores in the annual cane rush.

In this unique contest a line of canes are laid out on the fifty yard line of Centennial Field. The sophomores line up on one side of the field, and the Freshmen line up on the other side. The object of the game is to see which side can get the most canes.

At the sound of a gun both sides run forward, and from then on anything can happen, and often has in the past. Last year the freshmen won, but this year those boys will be the sophomores, and the competition should be tough.

This may be the roughest struggle between the sophomores and the frosh, but the wettest comes a while earlier in the annual hose fight. Here each class is given a hose by the Burlington Fire Department, and the class which washes the other away is counted the winner.

After You Eat...

Hungry? Try Waterman Cafeteria in the Waterman Building.

When you've devoured that meal though, don't stand up and walk way empty-handed.

In order to reduce high operating costs, the cafeteria has inaugurated a dish return system. All cafeteria and coffee shop guests are are asked to cooperate in returning their trays and dishes to one of four " Dish Return Cabinets. " social events are in store. There are the Mortar Board Formal, the Military Ball, and the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Social Whirl

That, of course, does not include the freshmen's very own Beanie Hop, and the All Campus Evenings, the first of which is the Kampus Kickoff. All this and we still haven't mentioned two more All Campus evenings, Sorority formals in the Spring, and the University Players' productions. For that matter the Operas presented during Junior Week are also "must " on the social calendar.

That, my young friends, is your social life. In spite of what it seems, we also go to classes around here. Try to sit in on a few during the week---you pay tuition for them, remember?

Preliminary Days

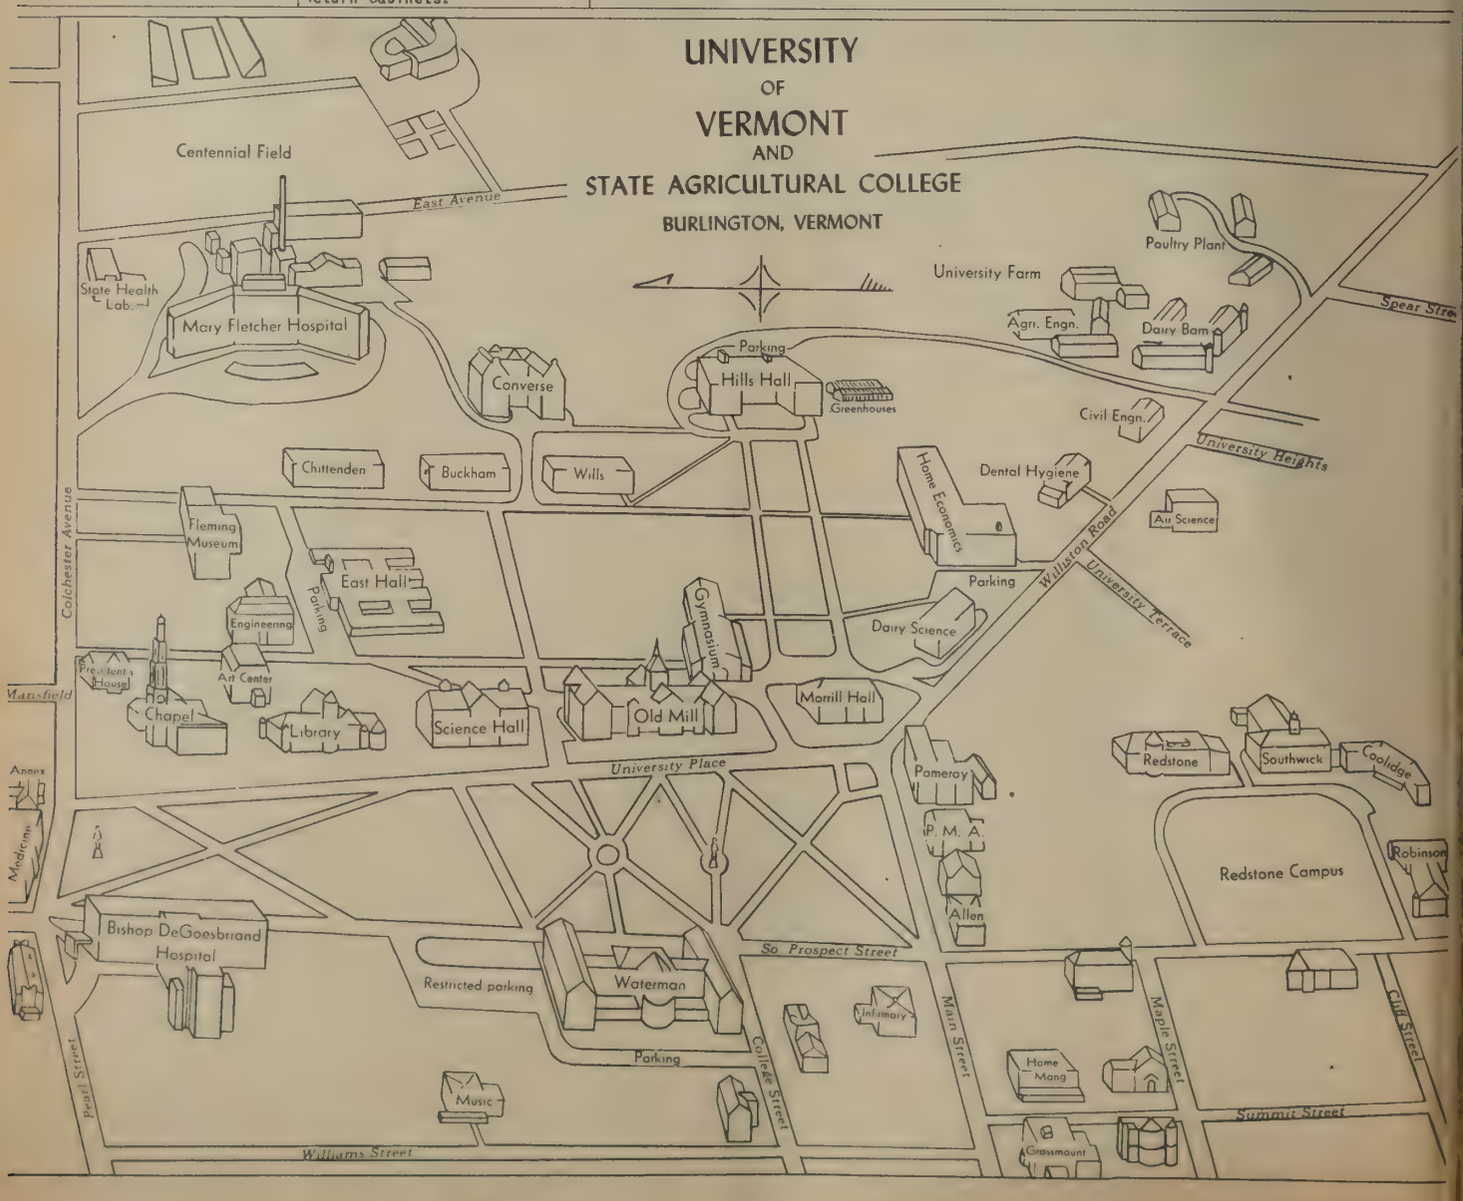
so interested in, and the girls get a chance to show off how well they can look, when they have the time to get ready.

It's a strictly stag affair, since the object of the dance is to meet one's partner there.

The Program for Tuesday has a generous number of meetings, and closes with the annual President's Reception for New Students in the Southwick Ballroom. This is when each new student gets a chance to make his personal acquaintance with the President and his wife. Refreshments will be served, and dancing may follow.

Wednesday Registration



One could almost say that college begins on Wednesday, because that is the date upon which all new students must register. A word of advice from the upperclassmen is "Be Patient ". Allow plenty of time for this event, as four hours is not an uncommon length. You'll probably have your picture taken at this time, so it's a good idea to wear something photogenic.

Most freshmen will be able to take it easy on Thursday, and enjoy a good laugh at the expense of the upperclassmen who will be sweating through their registration at this time. In the evening a Campus Variety show will be held on the College Green with entertainment, songs, and cheers.

Classes finally start on Friday, the 17th, at eight o'clock sharp. Classes will be held on a special schedule so that students may attend the All-University Convocation which be held on the Waterman Lawn at 10:00.

Saturday classes are on the regular schedule. The Kampus Kickoff that evening is expected to get the social season off with a bang.

Your

University Store

has to offer the following aids and luxuries for a happy college career:

THE RIGHT TEXTBOOKS and REFERENCE BOOKS

BOOKS for Recreation and BOOKS for Building a Personal Library—The best of the English Classics are available in many editions such as MODERN LIBRARY, HERITAGE PRESS, NELSON CLASSICS, VIKING PRESS, and PETER PAUPER PRESS. Then there are new books of fiction and subjects of general interest. Finally there is a LENDING LIBRARY of the best of all new "trade books."

ESSENTIAL STATIONERY SUPPLIES such as notebooks, fillers, theme, typing and other special papers; pens, pencils, erasers and inks. COMPLETE KITS OF SUPPLIES are available for such courses as Engineering Drawing, Zoology, Botany, and Art.

SOCIAL STATIONERY including correspondence papers stamped with the University seal, name or monogram.

GIFT SUGGESTIONS for all occasions. Special emphasis will be made on gift items that are marked with the University seal, name, monogram or mascot. There are also many "Vermont made" gift novelties.

Personnel Officer Advises Frosh--Ask Advisor's Help

There are two important facts every new college student should know: the faculty and administrative officers are persons chosen in part for their willingness and desire to help students, and it is not a confession of weakness to ask for help.

In fact, few, if any, individuals live very long or very successfully in their mature years without obtaining and giving assistance. It is smart to seek help when you need it so that it will benefit you to an optimum degree. It is frustrating to all concerned when help is asked after it is too late.

Faculty advisers are selected for freshmen by the dean of the college. You will have an interview with your adviser on Tuesday afternoon. His name and the place of meeting you will find on a mimeographed list displayed Monday and Tuesday on the bulletin boards. Your adviser is your campus adult friend. He will have a report of your ability and interests as indicated by the measurements administered at the beginning of Freshman Orientation Week. He will expect you to drop in to see him frequently at first and occasionally later in the year if you are getting along well.

Your instructors desire to have you turn to them when you are having difficulty in a course. They are prepared to give you maximum assistance and your inquiry helps them to know whether the lectures and course materials are being understood or not. If you make an effort to become acquainted with your professors as opportunity affords you will find it increases your interest in the course. If you will participate in class the first time you have a chance to do so, you will find it much easier thereafter to take part effectively. Success in college takes considerable individual initiative. Part of this involves making use of adviser, instructor, and the various student personnel services represented by the Student Personnel Office, the Dean of Women's Office, the Health Service, and the office of the Dean of your college.

Today, a new chapter in the book of your life is about to open. You find yourself, perhaps, in a strange situation...lost. A short three months ago you completed the previous chapter when your high-school days came to a close.

At that time, you were on top of the world -- you were a SENIOR. It took you four years to climb the height. Today you start climbing all over again from the bottom of a brand new ladder.

You will find the University of Vermont a warm and friendly institution -- if you wish it so. At your service are a score of individuals extending the hand of friendship and welcome. If you accept what they have to offer, your choice is wise. Reject it, and the choice is not only stupid, but FOOLISH.

The opportunities now before you are many-fold ...academic, athletic; social, cultural; individual or group in nature. Try to grasp each of them, in varying degrees, of course. It is folly to attempt the perfection of all; just as truly is it folly to turn one or more of them aside merely because it may be new to you.

On the other hand, do not accept new experiences merely for the sake of "newness." Inspect them closely. Experiment with your findings. Then make your decision. Be honest with others; above all, be honest with yourself. For each choice you make will serve as a determinant and influence on your future actions."

As freshmen, you are equivilant to individuals moving into a new community. As a natural consequence, you carry with you as many different viewpoints as there are members in the Class of 1958. Each of you has certain ideas about the solution of any given problems.

The community, i.e.-the University, has its own ideas on how to solve its problems. Quite often all the parties concerned concur in the solution. At other times, the University family is divided among itself -- a situation reminiscent of one of the political parties at present. However, unlike the political party, the separate factions realize that they must act in accordance with the best interests of the University family as a whole if it is to survive and thrive.

Often the students must sacrifice a little; other times, the faculty does the giving in; still other occasions find the Administration coming out on the short end. At all times, the community as a whole benefits. Do not hesitate to give a little of yourself or of your time to the University's extra-curricular program -- particularly the portion under the auspices of the Student Association. In this way you quickly begin to realize the huge area in which the students, faculty, and Administration overlap and actually merge. Then can you truly appreciate the University of Vermont and the people who are a part of it.

Let this serve as your first welcome...many will follow; none will be any more sincere. The VERMONT CYNIC is your voice. We will endeavor through the year to present the campus news completely and accurately. We will bring to your attention the "controversial" issues which will arise in time ...it is our obligation to present all sides of a given topic objectively and clearly. This is the treatment you can expect in our news coverage. As for editorial comment, we can only take one side at a time. We hope that it is always the right side. At any rate, it will be the side we sincerely believe in.

We try not to be a gripe sheet. That is not our function. Your letters are welcome -- whether they are pro or con, for or against a stand we may take. Try to be constructive in criticism, of us or of someone else. Accuracy of your statements is desirable; otherwise you end up in a rather untenable position.

We appeal again to all of you...make the most of the opportunity now at your fingertips. Education is a challenge; we wish you the best of luck in meeting it.

Welcomes Extended To New Frosh

Borgmann

WELCOME - UVM Class of '58!

It is always a great personal pleasure to welcome the freshman class. We want you and your families to know that we will do every-thing we can to make your experiences at the University of Vermont happy and profitable ones.

I want to congratulate each and every one of you. You have been admitted to UVM because we believe that you are a potential leader and have the inherent abilities to complete successfully a college education. You have been privileged to enroll in a fine institution with great traditions, an excellent faculty and wide opportunity for accepting responsibility. Now it's up to you! Only you can prove yourself.

All of us - faculty, administration, staff, upperclass students, and Alumni - wish the Class of 1958 every success and all good luck.

Carl W. Borgmann,
President

Harris

To the Class of 1958:

With students all over the country returning to college this month, I am glad to welcome UVM students to this beautiful campus.

Our university has admitted you because we believe you are capable of doing college level work and will fit into our college community. You have chosen us, and we have chosen you. I hope that our work together here will be profitable and exciting for all of us.

Success in college does not come automatically after enrollment, nor on a prescription given by another student, not by any known formula. One digs out achievement in college with hard labor as a lone prospector hacks away at the hard earth to find a vein of ore. The college student does not work completely alone, however, but with others on the same mission. They all have the guidance, help and encouragement of faculty people and the personnel and administrative staff.

Your college career depends on the work you perform toward the goals and ideals of this university. All of us share in the progress of UVM toward these goals and ideals. Let's make it real!

Anna Rankin Harris

Dean of Women

To The Class of 1958:

Bright and early at eight o'clock this morning more than one hundred upper class student leaders sat down to a dutch-treat breakfast in the Waterman Rotunda to make final plans and to handle last minute details for Freshman Orientation week. These students have returned to college a week early at their own expense to be of service to the Class of 1958. Since early last spring they have thought and planned and worked to make this program a meaningful one for the newcomers.

This is but one manifestation of the type of spirit which the members of the incoming class will find prevalent on the UVM campus. don't confuse it with the rah-rah type often exemplified in Hollywood films. What we have here is a much healthier type and one which operates on a much higher level. As long as UVM students continue to contribute freely of their time and energy for the service of others, so long will UVM continue to have a sound spirit of which we all can be justly proud; and it is this attitude which results in loyal alumni who continue to be of service to their alma mater after graduation.

To each one who has worked to make Preliminary Days a success - heartfelt thanks from your University! It has been a pleasure and a privilege to be associated with you.

To the incoming class - A hearty welcome! We know that you will quickly absorb the spirit and enthusiasm exemplified by the student leaders who are your hosts this week.

Robert H. Kroepsch

Dean of Administration

To The Class of 1958:

Warmest greetings to each of you as you begin your college careers here at the University of Vermont. May the next four years be the happiest, most productive ones that you have known. Make the most of them, for they'll mean much to you in years to come.

For a moment, I'd like to tell you a bit about my office and the part it can play in your college experience. The office of the Coordinator of Student Affairs functions to assist student groups, and their leaders, as they develop a program of extra-curricular activities. In this way, the COSA office is vitally concerned with aiding you in planning events which are a very real part of your university experience.

My job is also administrative in nature, for the Coordinator carries out policies related to student activities that are developed by you the student in your own as well as in student faculty groups. Then too - the office functions as the "lost and found department", an information center, and clearing house for student activities.

As you can see, my office exists to assist you in making student activities a real contributing part of your college education. If I can help in any way - drop in. The COSA office is located in room 40 in the basement of Waterman.

Again, may I wish each of you the very best of luck as you begin your life here on campus.

Liquor Not Sold To UVM Minors

Your attention is called to the University regulations concerning the use of liquor:

"a. The use of liquor by those under twenty-one is prohibited in accordance with the spirit of the law of the state, which prohibits the sale or service of alcoholic beverages to those under twenty-one.

"b. The use or possession of alcoholic beverages is prohibited on university property.

"c. No drunkenness or excessive use of liquor will be tolerated."

Vermont Weather

This compares very favorably (or unfavorably if you're a non-skier) with the New York and Boston total snowfall averages of 30 inches.

Last year's coldest day saw the mercury sink down to the minus eight mark. However, that was nothing in comparison to the record set on December 14, 1934 of 29 degree below. Walk outside in weather like that and you'll KNOW it's cold!

Snowiest year on record is the 1946-47 season when a total of 97 inches fell on the Burlington area. That's over eight feet. Let's just hope that '54-'55 will be a milder winter.

COLLEGE, STATE GROW AS ONE

Leaders Of The University, Then And Now

This unusual threesome is composed of three Presidents--all from the University of Vermont. They are, (l-r) Presidents Millis, Borgmann, and Carlson. Millis served first, followed by Carlson, and now Borgmann.

Vermont's Graduates Include Some Of World's Originals

True to the state of which it is a part, UVM has managed in its long history to turn out a number of rugged individualists among its graduates. The more conservative might call some of them--such as the man who rolled cannon balls down College Street--slightly zany, but any true lover of Vermont can detect in them all the typical Vermont conviction that the only way to live one's life is the way some still, small voice within says to live it.

There is, for instance, J.H. Hammond, who got so tired of taking college lecture notes by hand that he invented the Hammond typewriter--one of the earliest effective typewriters. Then at his thriving factory in New York City he instituted his own unique plan for maintaining good management-labor relations, to the horror of many another business man: on hot days he would hire all the tally-hoes he could find around New York, drive the string of them up to his factory on East Fifty-ninth Street, and take every hand in the place for a spin in the country.

TRANSFER STUDENT

There is, again, Jehudi Ashmun, Class of 1816, who transferred from Middlebury to Vermont because he felt that he could do something to improve the state of religion at UVM. Apparently failing in his worthy endeavor, he took his zeal and two hundred freed slaves on a perilous ocean voyage to the west coast of Africa, where he founded and became first governor of Liberia--that little republic whose government is modeled after that of the United States, and whose economics are still remarkably sound. Today a statue of UVM's Jehudi Ashmun stands in the center of Liberia.

There is Jonathan Peckham Miller, ex-GI from the War of 1812 who tried for years to complete his education at UVM, and finally threw in the sponge, late in his senior year, when the College burned down in 1824. Miller followed in the footsteps of Lord Byron to go to Greece and help in the Greek War for independence against the Turks. Appointed a colonel on the staff of General George Jarvis, American volunteer, his actions at the desperate defense of Missolonghi and elsewhere won for him the title of "the American Dare Devil." Miller anticipated the humanitarian movement of our times by adopting a war orphan and bringing him to his country. Lucas Miltiades Miller grew up in Montpelier, where Colonel Miller became a prominent lawyer and anti-slavery leader, and went to become a leading citizen of Wisconsin.

Or there is Marcus Tullius Cicero Tupper, A.B. from UVM in 1832 and major general, Mississippi State troops, during the Civil War. Vermont's gift to the Confederacy moved to Canton, Miss., as a young man and there became a prominent lawyer and civic leader. He was a member of the council of three appointed, while the Mississippi Secession Convention was in session, to advise the governor until the state should enter a confederacy and to regulate citizenship and provide for the purchase of military supplies. As a general officer, he was in active command at Jackson

When Staff and Sandal began to search for a picture of General Tupper for the Memorial Lounge, they wrote, finally, to D.C. McCool of Canton, Miss., described by the Mississippi state archivist as a man acquainted with the history of that region. Mr. McCool describes General Tupper as " a very distinguished gentleman and scholar, and who departed this life shortly after the unfortunate conflict between the States. " The extent to which UVM graduates have spread their influence over the United States may be suggested by the history of Tupper's descendants: one son, Henry Tupper, became a lawyer in Fresno, Calif.; another, Walter, was U.S. district attorney in Fresno; a third, Bishop Tullius C. Tupper (Episcopal), was chaplain of the Federal Prison at Atlanta when he died. The bishop, Mr. McCool points out, baptised General Douglas MacArthur.

Famous among former UVM students is Thaddeus Stevens, fiery and uncompromising enemy of slavery and defender of the common man who, as even his enemies admitted, dominated Congress just before and during the Civil War, because of the war then swirling about Burlington, was graduated from Dartmouth went on to Pennsylvania to begin his career as lawyer and statesman. Even in his college days his zeal for liberty revealed itself in a tragedy which he wrote for UVM's commencement exercises of 1813: The Fall of Helvetic Liberty.

School Life Is Alike In Most Times, Places

The four lads who clustered around UVM's first president, Rev. Daniel Clark Sanders, to form the University's first graduating class (1804), lived in an unpainted building, doubtless wore knee breeches and scribbled with quill pens --but there are signs to indicate that they and other early classes belonged to the Genus Student, just as their descendants in today's university's do.

Tuition Worries

The Student of 1810 worried about his tuition--it was all of twelve dollars a year--and often taught school during the three worst winter months (when the University was not in session) to earn sixteen dollars a month.

Student social life, up to the Civil War and the growth of social fraternities, revolved around the University's four literary and speaking clubs, the first of which--Phi Sigma Nu--was founded in 1803. The learned young gentlemen debated such questions as "Resolved, that modern criticism does not advance the cause of English and American literature." They took into honorary membership such men as Oliver Wendell Holmes, Longfellow, and Horace Greeley.

Social Life

Social life in the usual modern sense of the word began to flourish toward mid-century. At the commencement ball in 1888, the then-not-quite-Reverend John Henry Hopkins III had an unhappy experience. The ball was held in the new and magnificent Billings Library. Hopkins had had a tiff with the young schoolteacher-belle who later became his wife. As a result, he stalked moodily around the Billings Library gallery, watching the lady of his choice dance with other UVM men on the polished dance floor below.

UVM Progresses Throughout 162 Years Of Many Changes

In 1791, when what had for some time been the independent republic of Vermont became the fourteenth state in the Union, and when the daring--some said visionary--Vermont legislature chartered a university for the state, there were living in the frontier town of Burlington exactly 332 people. The larger town of Williston boasted 471; but the entire county of Chittenden could only muster 7301, and of the state's 85,000 inhabitants over 60,000 were in the southern counties.

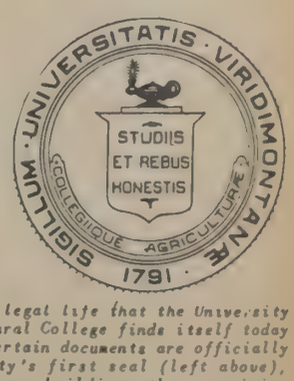
The University of Vermont and the state of Vermont grew together. All the experiences of a frontier community--unpainted board dwellings, the necessity of clearing away primeval forests, the use of goods far more than money as a medium of exchange, the threat of plague and war--all these the infant University knew. But by the middle decades of the nineteenth century, so rapid had been America's and Vermont's progress that Burlington was a thriving and settled little city, and the University was an established center of higher learning for northern New England.

AFTER THE REVOLUTION

After each of the earliest colonies had founded a college for its youth, there had been a lull in college-founding until the Revolution and the acquisition of considerable new territory spurred on the newer states to provide institutions of higher learning for their own young men. It was in this post-Revolutionary flurry that the Legislature of Vermont decided that Massachusetts had its Harvard, Connecticut its Yale, Rhode Island its Brown, New Hampshire its Dartmouth--and Vermont must have its own college. A group of enterprising Burlington business men, headed by Ira Allen, proposed that the college should be located in Burlington, both because of its distance from Dartmouth and because they believed that a school here would draw students from northern New York and from Canada. When they offered the Legislature 5650 pounds in land and produce with which to start the University, the Legislature hastened to charter the institution, locating it in Burlington and providing for it a self-perpetuating board of trustees which was to include the governor of the state, the speaker of the house, and the president of the University as ex-officio members.

FIFTH IN NEW ENGLAND

Thus this fifth college to be chartered in New England, and twentieth in the United States, became the second college in the country to be established by a state legislature (North Carolina had taken similar action a short time earlier); and in the manner of its founding reflected that dependence both upon public and private support which has remained characteristic of it to the present time. It was the people of Burlington who raised the money for the first college building, completed in 1802; and throughout the first fifty years of the school's history, whenever such calamities as the War of 1812, the burning of the College in 1824, or the panic of 1837 created a financial crisis, it was by public subaciption that money was raised to carry on the work of the institution.



ONE MAN FACULTY

Although the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders was the entire faculty, as well as president, for the first two or three years of UVM's active life, and although the first graduating class, that of 1804, included just four young men, the school grew fairly rapidly. Its attendance averaged around one hundred through most of the nineteenth century, with serious diminutions during the Civil War, when almost half the student body was the front. During the 1830s and 1840s, under its great president, Rev. James Marsh, the school was noted throughout the country for its enlightened and progressive program of study. After the Civil War, under President James B. Angell, it took advantage of the new Morrill Land-Grant College Act to become the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, and thus to embark upon its modern career as a genuine university offering graduate and undergraduate training in the various fields of learning. It admitted women to its membership shortly thereafter, the first two being graduated in 1875.

" CYNIC " open house " for all those wishing to work on the paper will be held Thursday, September 17th.

University Needs Two Seals

So complicated has been its legal life that the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College finds itself today using three official seals. Certain documents are officially marked with the old University's first seal (left above), which depicts the first college building, the sun rising hopefully behind the building (and perhaps behind Mount Mansfield), and some of the tools of a scholar's trade in 1800. When in the 1860's the University became affiliated with the new State Agricultural College, two new seals were developed -- one for the Agricultural College alone and one for the combined organization. It is the latter seal (right above) which is used for most purposes today.

UVM GRADUATES SERVE NATION

The University Looked Like This In 1802

Towering over the unpainted frame houses of the border town of Burlington for the first quarter century of the University's history was this imposing four-story structure, whose glittering dome was used as a landmark by sailing ships that were miles away on Lake Champlain. "The College," which was built by the people of Burlington, housed the entire student body (about fifty boys by 1807), contained the chapel and all classrooms, and afforded space for the hundred-book library and all "philosophical apparatus" (scientific equipment). When the College burned in 1824, friends of UVM throughout the state raised money to erect in its place the building now called "Old Mill," center of UVM life from that time to this.

Renowned Alumni Add Luster To University's Reputation

In the first hundred years of its graduations--to 1904--the University of Vermont awarded degrees to just 1500 students who trained in the college proper and two thousand who were trained in the college of medicine. Its total output in a hundred years--3500--was a little more than the present enrollment in any one year. Yet the number of graduates that UVM turned out in the hundred years who went on to give distinguished service to their communities, their country, and even to the world was little short of astonishing. Like the state, the University's mission in the nineteenth century seemed to be to give sound training to men of vision and of daring who carried to Ohio, to Michigan, to Georgia and Louisiana, to Oregon and California--even to Europe, Africa, and Asia--that peculiar combination of intellectual progressiveness with social conservatism that has characterized New Englanders since Plymouth days.

Here are a few of the MOST DISTINGUISHED:

John Dewey, class of 1879, philosopher and educator, of whom it has been said, "With the exception of William James, there is no name within the last century that has become throughout the world so inseparably associated with American thought. Both Dewey's disciples and his critics regarded him as this nation's most characteristic intellectual expression, notably in its emphasis on practical reasons for ordered change. ", Dewey's book on education, with their insistence upon making the student the center of the educational experience, have revolutionized American school procedure.

Warren Austin, the United States' first ambassador to the United Nations, and for many years Vermont's senator in Congress.

John Kasson, Minister to Austria after the Civil War who, because of this experience as postmaster general, was able to see the need and lay the ground work for the International Postal Union under which it is possible to send a letter from any country to any country with a minimum of confusion and delay.

Founder of Times

Henry J. Raymond, founder and editor of the New York Times, and one-time managing editor of Harper's Magazine.

Dorman B. Eaton, reformer of the U. S. Civil Service system and first U. S. Civil Service commissioner.

Henry Houghton, founder of the Riverside Press; Wilbur Fisk, first president of Wesleyan University; S. H. Peabody, president of the University of Illinois; John R. Spalding, founder of the New York World; W.G.T. Shedd, renowned teacher, critic, and literary historian whose edition of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's works is still the definitive edition of that author: Vermont's U.S. Senator Jacob Collamer; Erastus D. Culver, U.S. Minister to Venezuela.

Henry Hickock, one of the shapers of the Alabama constitution; Asa A. Aldis, presedent of the Southern Claims Commission; W.S.A. Bissell, Episcopal Bishop of Vermont; John G. Smith, Vermont's Civil War governor; William A. Wheeler, vice-president of the United States; Frederick Billings, president of the Northern Pacific Railroad; Jedediah H. Baxter, surgeon general of the United States Army; Charles Winfield Waterman, a framer of the Colorado Constitution; Paul Harris, founder of International Rotary; Rev. John Henry Hopkins, Jr., composer of "We Three Kings of Orient Are" and other famous hymans; Rev. Nathaniel G. Clark, secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions; Rev. Samuel Austin Worcester, missionary to the Cherokees and social pioneer.

Medics Make Fine Record In State, Country

The University of Vermont has been justly proud of its College of Medicine throughout the long history of the College.

One of the first medical schools in this area, the College survived a number of years when it was forced to close its doors, and even the burning of its building, to continue to maintain its standards as a first-rate institution for the training of first-rate doctors.

First Lectures

In 1804 Dr. John Pomeroy, Burlington physician, began a course of lectures and a system of preceptorships out of which the College of Medicine grew. He was made a member of the University of Vermont faculty shortly thereafter. Until 1838 the College managed to maintain itself, as a sort of partner to the University; but the great financial difficulties of the late 1830's made it necessary to close the school from 1838 to 1853. The College re-opened in time to prepare many men for service as doctors during the Civil War, and from that time to the present it has continued to flourish. When the College building burned early in this century, the members of the medical faculty made a contribution unprecedented in the history of American universities--they dug into their own private resources, which in many cases were very limited, to rebuild their College. In 1898 the University trustees assumed full control of the College and established a four-year medical course.

Distinguished Graduates

Among distinguished graduates are: John Martin Wheeler, 1902, outstanding opthalmologist of our times, head of the Institute of Opthalmologists at the Medical Center of Presbyterian Central Hospital in New York, pioneer in plastic surgery of the face, holder of the Leslie Dana Gold Medal awarded by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness; John Brooks Wheeler, 1875, grandson of UVM's President John Wheeler and author of Memoirs of a Small-Town Surgeon, in which the development of antiseptic surgery over half a century is traced and analyzed; Frank Jefferson Blodgett, specialist in ophthalmology and otology in New york City and elsewhere; Walter James Dodd, constructor of the first x-ray machine to be used in an American hospital; Rear Admiral John Clarke Agnew, assistant chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery of the Navy during World War II; David Marsh Bosworth, one of three New York surgeons to announce the saving of lives by streptomycin at a meeting of the American Association of Orthopedic Surgery; Lowrie Byron Morrison, outstanding contributor to the literature of roentgenology.

Memorial Lounge Is Center For History

The University's long history is graphically epitomized in the exhibits and portraits which are on display in the Memorial Lounge, the large oval room opposite the entrance in the Waterman Building. Begun two years ago by members of Staff and Sandal, junior women's honorary society, the lounge is designed to serve as a place where all members and friends of the University may study its history, and also simply as a lounge to which one may bring guests.

It is hoped that students will wish to show it to their parents and other guests whom they may be entertaining on campus.

Furnishings, curtains, and exhibit cases have been provided by student and alumni groups and by individual friends of the University.

Watch Pennies Was Slogan In Earlier Years

If you went to UVM in the early nineteenth century, you literally had to watch your pennies. Many a student today does the same thing, but the term "penny" is used more loosely, perhaps.

When in the early 1820's a group of students organized the school's first eating club, members were assessed ninety cents a week for board (three square meals, seven days a week, apparently). They brought produce from their farms, and were credited with various amounts, according to prevailing retail prices, against their quarter's board bill. One boy was credited with $2 for "the use of a cow" for the quarter. Apparently Bossy roamed the College green when she wasn't providing milk for the co-operative eating club. Another boy was credited with twenty-five cents for bringing vegetable seeds to plant in proper season.

A neat little book of accounts kept by the Rev. Daniel Clarke Sanders, first president of UVM, was examined last year by Sheila Fay of Staff and Sandal. She found that each student paid twelve dollars a year tuition, but he had to look sharp or he might run into other expenses: A sophomore was fined one dollar for damages done to "the college edifice" by rolling stones in the hall of the third story. There were three fines of twenty-five cents each for playing ball in the College hall, and five fines of fifty cents each for burning the College fence.

It All Started In Vermont

A two-year search for a picture of Major General Marcus Tullius Cicero Upper, A.B. 1832, UVM's gift to the confederacy, who as a major general of Mississippi State troops was in active command at Jackson and elsewhere during part of the Vicksburg campaign, resulted in--the above picture of a courthouse which Tupper dedicated. Last spring a co-operative gentleman in Canton, Miss., where Tupper moved after being graduated from UVM, and where he became a prominent lawyer, forwarded the picture of the Madison County Miss., courthouse when he was unable to find a picture of Tupper himself. Tupper dedicated the courthouse in 1855, and donated the iron fence which surrounds it. It is still hoped that one day a picture of the general himself will come to light, so that it can be placed in the Memorial Lounge.

Many Weekend Events Will Make Homecoming Best Yet

Friday Night Ball To Feature Elgart

Les Elgart

Featuring the "sophisti-ated swing" of Les Elgart, UVM's earliest Homecoming will egin next Friday.

This year's Homecoming Com-ittee, headed by Bruce Chaffee nd Virginia Rosse, has pre-ared a program which is ex-ected to be "bigger and etter than ever."

Campus officials base this rediction on: 1) the addition f the "Vermont Varieties," ighly successful in its own ight for the past few years, o the traditional weekend vents; and 2) the selection f America's newest band ensation, Les Elgart, for the riday night ball.

ep Rally Friday

The weekend will open Friday vening with the season's first ep rally as UVM'ers "clear heir throats" for Saturday's ig Vermont-Maine game. About p.m. the spirited bars of "Let's fight for Vermont" ill give way to the soft elodic notes of the Elgart and, rated "first in the ountry" by "Downbeat." lgart's distinctive dance eat and unique tone brought im a record breaking three eek engagement at the Hotel stor in New York early this al!.

Students, parents and alumnae an dance until one o'clock n the spacious Memorial uditorium to the type "so-histicated swing" music hich has resulted in over ifteen record hits. During he evening the Homecoming ing and Queen, chosen from he Freshman class, will be rowned.

Saturday afternoon, two battles will take place. The Vermont football team will try to overthrow a Maine team. At the half the class of '58 will try to duplicate last year's Freshman victory in the Cane Rush, and gain the right to doff the beanies. The very class which accomplished last-year's tradition-breaking win, the Class of '57, will try to the beany-weaning sentence.

Roast Beef Dinner

After the game both heroes and spectators can restore expended energy with a big roast beef dinner to be served by the Animal Industry Club at the annual barbeque. Only four hundred $1.35 tickets are available.

Saturday night will mark the union of two important fall events as the "Vermont Varieties" joins the Homecoming program. The University Players expect to provide top student performers in the type off entertainment which hit in with the spirit of the weekend. At

Charter Revision Recommended By Borgmann, Board Of Trustees

By Max G. Ansbacher

UVM will clearly become "an instrumentality of the State of Vermont" if the State Assembly approves proposed amendments to the University's charter. The amendments have been tentatively recommended for passage by President Carl W. Borgmann and the Board of Trustees.

The author of the amendments, Frederick P. Smith, said in a special CYNIC interview that, "The proposed amendments will give the state legislature the practical type of control which we feel is adequate from the public point of view; yet they are indirect enough to leave the University out of politics."

According to Mr. Frederick Smith, there has been a progressive acceptance of responsibility for support of UVM by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont through increased appropriations. "However," Mr. Smith said, "Many of the legislators have been reluctant to give any public funds to the support of a private college."

State Aid Likely

According to President Borgmann, the proposed amendments "are designed to qualify the institution as a whole for support from the General Assembly." If the proposed amendments are passed Section 1 of the charter will read in part, "and the General Assembly of the State of Vermont shall, from time to time appropriate such sums as it deems necessary for the support and maintenance of said corporation."

"The proposed amendments if passed will have no immediate effect upon the present student body other than to lay the groundwork for a possible lowering of the tuition rates, for residents of Vermont" Mr. Smith Explained.

Another major change which is proposed would give the State Assembly the power to amend the University charter without the approval of the Trustees, provided that the assembly amends the charter in a constructive manner.

Mr. Frederick Smith said, "apeaking of this concession this power is obviously of great importance, but those familiar with the General Assembly of the State of Vermont do not feel that it will be abused, and further point out that dependence upon appropriations subjects the University in any case to the practical control of the General Assembly if such control is desires."

"No Further"

When asked if he thought that the proposed amendments might be merely one in a series of steps towards complete control and financing of the University by the State, Mr. Frederick Smith said, "Although I can not predict the future, I see no reason for going any further. These amendments could give the State all necessary control while still leaving the University free to continue on a sound educational basis. I believe that these amendments would provide the most mutual benefit possible."

UVM Provided With Grant For Public Health Nursing

The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College has received a grant of $25,000 to establish classroom teaching and field experience in Public Health Nursing in the Department of Nursing.

The grant is from The Commonwealth Fund, and provides for a program of rural health nursing in the University's Department of Nursing. Previously, UVM student nurses received field experience in Public Health Nursing outside the state through Visiting Nurse Associations in Providence, R.I., Hartford, Conn., and Brooklyn, N.Y.

At First Hand

The result of this was that students became familiar with other communities and their needs, and learned of Vermont's nursing needs indirectly, whereas the program to be inaugurated at UVM this fall will give student nurses an opportunity to have their field experience within the state and thus become familiar with Vermont's own needs at first hand.

Helping to provide this direct experience in the state will be the State Department of Health which is cooperating with the University in setting up and carrying out the program.

Dr. Robert E. Aiken, state commissioner of health, said that he believes "the great value of this program is that it can help provide nurses experienced with Vermont's problems and needs because their training will have taken them into Vermont communities."

Field experience centers will be established in the

Sen. Flanders Urges "Deep Thought"

y Herzl Spiro

Senator Ralph Flanders R.-Vt), who made world-wide eadlines with his denouncci-tion of Senator Joseph cCarthy (R.-Wisc.), told a apacity convocation audience ast Friday that "deep thought nd right action" is the nswer to "the time of roubles." President Borgmann nd George Lucchina, presi-ent of Student Association, receded the senator. Lucchina ppealed to the students to lace the University above any naller group such as class, lubs and fraternities.

It had been hoped that this ear's convocation, the first n which an outside speaker as brought in, could be held n the campus outside of aterman Building and thus ould be a truly "all-uni-ersity" convocation. hreatening skies vetoed this an by forcing the convocation nto the chapel and thus pre-nting many from hearing nator Flanders, President rgmann, and Student Associ-ion President Lucchina.

o Goals

Senator Flanders set up two neral goals for a college ucation; 1) "learning to earn a living"; and 2) "learning to live." The former he termed "a practical necessity." "You must learn to work together and meet people in social relationships." The congressman then went on to discuss more deeply the second goal.

He suggested that in college the student should develop a useful concept of life." "The final achievement here is individual." The senator pointed out that "we must play our parts as citizens wisely and effectively; we can evade action, but not

UVM To Abandon Trailer Camp By End Of Next Year

The UVM Trailer Camp, established in June of 1946 to meet the emergency need for housing facilities for married veterans wishing to attend the University, will close at the end of June of 1956, when most of the married students now living at the camp will have completed their educations.

The announcement of the projected shut-down was made by Ernest Stockwell, assistant director of student personnel, who said that the University plans to continue to operate 30 trailers for the next two years, after which the Trailer Camp will be closed.

Last year, the University operated 33 trailers. Operation of 30 this year will accomodate all who wish

Grant Awarded To Outstanding Vt. Biochemist

A newly-appointed member of the Department of Biochemistry in the University of Vermont College of Medicine has been named one of 14 outstanding medical school teachers and researchers who will share $270,500 in grants from the Lederle Laboratories Division of American Cyanamid Company this year.

Dr. Erland Cheney Gjessing, as associate professor in the Department of Biochemistry, will receive $25,000 over a three year period from the Lederle Medical Faculty Awards Committee to support his teaching and research activities.

The awards, believed to be the first of their kind in this field, are intended to augment salaries or to help schools fill or expand teaching and research jobs. Their basic purpose is to help assure that more promising medical men and women can afford to remain in teaching and research work in schools.

The awards will be administered by a committee of professors drawn from medical schools throughout the United States.

All grants are for a maximum

CYNIC Presents UVM's 'New Faces Of 1954'

Additions Made In All Colleges

The freshman will not be the only ones on the campus to whom the goings on will be new. There have been several new additions to the faculty.

In the College of Agriculture Susanne B. Colton has been appointed assistant professor of Home Economics. Prof. Colton holds her A.B. degree from Clark University and her M.S. from The New York State College of Home Economics. The college also announces the appointments of Roy E. Fordham, and Fred Taylor. Mr. Fordham has been appointed assistant professor of Forestry and Assistant Forester in the Experiment Station. Mr. Fordham holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees from the New York College of Forestry. Mr. Taylor has been appointed instructor of Forestry and Assistant Forester in the Experiment Station. He holds his B.S. degree from Polytechnic Institute of Bracksburg, Va., and the degree of Master of Wood Technology from the North Carolina State College.

Psych Department

The Psychology Department in the College of Arts and Sciences has announced the appointments of Harriet W. Foster, and Douglas G. Anger as assistant professors of psychology. Dr. Foster holds her B.A. degree from the University of Minnesota, the M.A. from Columbia, and the Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. Professor Anger received his A.B. degree from Colgate University and at the present time is completing work toward his Ph.D. at Harvard. Michael A. Cann has received an instructorship in the Psychology Department. Mr. Cann holds his B.A. and M.A. from the University of Chicago.

Education and Nursing

The College of Education and Nursing has announced the appointment of Charlotte M. Billings and Ann MacNeil, both as instructors in the Department of Nursing. Miss Billings graduated from U.V.M. last June, at which time she received her B.S. in Nursing. Miss MacNeil holds the B.S. degree in Nursing from Boston University and the M.S. from the Catholic University of America. The department also announces the appointment of Milly Caffina and Laura Dustan. Miss Caffina has been appointed clinical instructor in obstetrical nursing. She graduated from the Bulkly Training School of New York and has received a certificate in operating technique from Johns Hopkins Hospital. Miss Dustan received an instructorship in Public Health nursing. She holds her B.S. degree from Johns Hopkins University and Master of Nursing degree from Western Reserve University. Jane Y. Harshberger has been appointed associate professor of Public Health Nursing. She holds her B.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania, the M.N. from Yale University School of Nursing, and the M.A. in Public Health Nursing from Columbia.

Math Men

The Mathematics Department in the College of Technology announces the appointment of Dr. Julius S. Dwork and Mr. Roland F. Smith. Doctor Dwork has been appointed associate professor of Mathematics. He holds the B.A. degree from CCNY and the Ph.D. from New York University. Mr. Smith holds his A.B. degree from Oberlin College, the M.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania, and is working toward the Ph.D. at Syracuse University.

The Department of Commerce and Economics also in the College of Technology announces the appointment of Wallace F. Lovejoy as instructor, and David E. Beech as lecturer. Mr. Lovejoy holds the B.A. degree from Rice Institute, and the M.A. degree from Southern Methodist University, and is working toward his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin.

The Speech Department announces the appointment of William J. Lewis, as assistant professor of speech and Glenn R. Oppfelt as instructor in speech. Mr. Lewis holds the B.A. degree from Brigham Young University and the M.A. from Northwestern. Mr. Oppfett holds the B.A. and M.A. from the University of Denver.

Medical School

The Medical School announces the appointment of Doctor Erland C. Gjessing as associate professor of biochemistry. Dr. Gjessing holds the B.S. degree from the University of Copenhagen, the M.S. degree from Michigan State, and the Ph.D. from Cornell. The appointment of Dr. Burton S. Tubakin has also been announced. Dr. Tabakin has been appointed instructor of Medicine. He holds the A.B. from the University of Pennsylvania and the M.D. from the school of Medicine of the University.

Richard C. Ward has been appointed instructor in Botany. He holds the B.A. degree from the University of Connecticut.

Benjamin T. Miller has been appointed instructor in philosophy and religion. He holds the B.A. degree from the Occidental College, and the M.A. from the Pacific School of Religion.

Freda Phillips has been appointed assistant professor of physical education. Prof. Phillips holds the B.S. degree from the University of Nebraska and M.S. degree from the Pennsylvania State University where she is working toward the Ph.D.

Twenty-Four Faculty Boosts Announced By Borgmann

President Carl W. Borgmann recently announced the promotion of nine faculty members to the rank of full professor.

In addition, 15 other promotions were announced.

Promotions in the College of Agriculture include Esther L. Knowles, from assistant professor to associate professor of home economics, and Wesson D. Bolton, from associate professor to professor of animal pathology.

In the College of Arts & Sciences: Harold Schultz, from associate professor to professor of history; Francis A. Weinrich, from instructor to assistant professor of music; Alban B. Rooney, from assistant professor to associate professor of physics; George Little and Rolf Haugen, both from Assistant professor to associate professor of political science.

Also, James Chaplin and Heinz Ansbacher, both from associate professor to professor of psychology; Stuart Johnston, from associate professor to professor of romance languages; Kessel Schwartz, from instructor to assistant professor of romance languages; Milton Potash, from instructor to assistant professor of zoology; Eleanor Luse from associate professor to professor of speech; Francis Colburn from associate professor to professor of art; and Herbert C. Don Hardy Assumes Post Of COSA; Likes UVM

Something new has been added...in the Cosa office, that is. It's not a new secretary or desk, and while there are a few new chairs around, that isn't what we mean either.

There is rather, a brand new COSA...that's Coordinator Of Student Affairs in shorthand. He's blondish, six-foot Don Hardy.

A twenty-six year old holding his Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Springfield College, Don is married ...so abandon any aspirations which may have arisen, gals.

"I like my new surroundings very much," Mr. Hardy told us across his desk. "When President Borgmann told me this was a friendly city and university, he really meant it."

Speaking of that desk, upperclassmen will notice that there have been some changes made in the appearance and upholstering of the office. The desk has been moved, and some brand new comfortable chairs have been added. Drop in, even if it is just to sit down and rest. Of course, there's another big attraction in the Cosa office. At the front desk, the one that's always piled high with papers, is charming Mrs. Marge Larrivee. This is the woman without whom half of the fraternity dances would be cancelled due to mistakes in their requisitions. Many is the mistake found and corrected by this young lady. But like all good things which come to an end, so to is Mrs. Larrivee. She and her husband are off for California come mid-October.

Getting away from the secretary, and back to the boss, Don is convinced that the Cosa office serves a definite function. "We try to coordinate faculty and student relations so that they operate in harmony with each other. It is possible," he continued," to have a lack of communication between these two groups---we try to bridge whatever gaps may arise."

Hesitating for a moment, Hardy leaned back to answer a phone call from an Administrative Officer. As he returned to our conversation, four or five students wandered in, all with problems which needed immediate solution. So we halted the interview for half an hour and then returned for more information. As I walked back into the office, three new faces were spotted, also waiting.

At this point, we locked the door and took the reciever off the hook, determined this time to finish the conversation.

It was a little difficult to get back into the same "interview mood" but we managed.

"Extracurricular activities are a very important part of education," Don advanced. "Student-faculty relationships often provide some of the greatest parts of an individual's education. In a way, it prepares you for the community frame- work of later life.

With that we called it a day, but Don got in one more parting shot. "I see students as human-beings," he said. "They must make up their own minds when it comes to their problems. There is certainly no one cure-all for all their troubles, but if we can help, a little bit in this office, we're more than happy to try."

Concert Series To Be Presented In Coming Week

The twentieth annual concert series of the Burlington Community Concert Association will be held from Monday, Sept. 27th until Saturday, Oct. 2nd inclusive. Four concerts will be presented in the Memorial Auditorium to subscribers only. No tickets for single performances can be obtained. Student membership is $3.00; Adult membership $6.00 for four concerts.

Headquarters of the Association for University students will be in the Bookstore during campaign week. Two attractions have already been booked, namely, the Vienna Academy Chorus, a group of 24 talented graduates of the Vienna Academy of Music chosen by Prof. Ferdinand Grossman, head of the Academy's Choral department. This concert will be given on Monday, Oct. 4th. The second concert will be the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra on Tuesday, December 8th.

Versatality Displayed

The Vienna Academy Chorus is a unique organization. Each member of the chorus is a graduated instrumentalist as well as a singer. Consequently the accompaniment for their concerts is not just a piano or organ but the required instruments. For American audiences The Vienna Academy Chorus has arranged programs designed to give an evening of incomparable music and at the same time display the versatility and artistry that has made them the talk of Europe. Great and familiar sacred choral music will open the program and the works performed here will be drawn from the list of the great liturgical composers, Johann Sebastian Bach, Gallus, Gabrieli, Mozart and Gounod.

The second portion of the vocal program will feature the Vienna that America knew and loved best. Wearing costumes of the Biedermeier period, the chorus will sing songs and waltzes of "Old Vienna" including Brahms "Liebeslieder Waltzes", Schubert's "Serenade" or his "Shepard's chorus" and the songs of Johann Strauss, the most popular of all the Viennese composers. Dean Of Women States Assets Of WSGA Rules

The first few weeks of school is a time of meeting new people and making new adjustments. But this doesn't apply to freshmen only, for it also applies to the new members of the faculty and administration. This is the case with Miss Anna Rankin Harris, the new Dean of Women, who will try to meet and know the students of UVM in order to help and advise them throughout their college days.

One of Miss Harris's most difficult jobs will be to put across to the students the value and importance of the WSGA rules. Since she is new at Vermont, the students may feel that she would tend to be more lenient. Yet, Miss Harris has been able to explain many of the reasons behind the seemingly illogical rules for the women on campus; and one thing that seems very definite is that once the women listen to the explanations, they will realize the importance of the WSGA rules.

One of the most popular questions asked by the coeds has to do with the "no slacks, dungarees, etc." rule. Many of the students do not understand the importance of this regulation, but Miss Harris explains "girls should not be ashamed to be feminine." Whenever co-eds are seen in blue jeans or similar apparel, the general opinion is that they are unattractively and inappropriately dressed, especially since they are in the middle of a community which expects more of its future leaders.

Another question of importance is that of smoking. Dean Harris feels that smoking has nothing to do with any moral behavior. However their are certain times when a person must forego this luxury in various situations. "There is a time and place for everything, and smoking is no different," she said.

Along with smoking comes the question of drinking. The drinking rule does not only affect the women students, for because of state laws, the men are also affected by it. One of the major reasons a person will start drinking is because he feels that this is the only way he can win the approval of his fellow students. Miss Harris continued, "many people do it because they're afraid not to." She feels that the stu-

—Editorial—

Though we have been on campus for at least a week, and in some cases much longer, we feel that something would be missing if the CYNIC didn't hop on the bandwagon and say, "Welcome to another year at UVM."

Upon our return to Burlington, we received several fast impressions. We found the Student Lounge redecorated, a charter revision advanced by Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont, and The Homecoming Weekend staring us in the face.

Amendment

Undoubtedly, the most significant of the group is the recommended revision of the charter of 1865. It is this charter from which the University draws its present powers and structure. It is also this charter from which the University for a number of years has drawn all its financial difficulties.

All though it is apparent that the original makers of the charter of 1865 intended the institution to be an instrumentality of the state the wording of certain passages of the charter is such that the University as a whole is neither private nor state in character.

It is felt that it is this vagueness of definition, rather than its actual status, which has put the University on the short end of monetary manipulations time and time again.

President Borgmann will soon place the proposed change in charter before the UVM Alumni Family. If no violent disagreement issues forth from this body, the amended charter will be presented to the Vermont Legislature to make the final decision on the amendment.

If altering the charter to create a state instrumentality will provide the panacea for the University's ills, the CYNIC stands fully behind it.

Pretty Corpse

There is an old saying which goes something like this, "Live fast, die young, and die young, and have a pretty corpse."

We hope that this is not the story of the newly decorated Student Lounge. We also hope that the students who frequent this corner of Waterman do not draw too close an analogy between themselves and the proverbial bull in the proverbial China shop.

This is not to say that the lounge and its new furnishings are too delicate or too fragile for normal use. It just seems that there is doubt in the minds of many as to the definition of the term, "normal."

Although tables are tables and chairs are chairs, many a frosh coed has not yet learned the difference.

The CYNIC realizes that there is a seating deficiency; Student Association also realizes it. The situation, we believe, will soon be rectified.

Let's try to act like the adults you're supposed to be ...or has the home training rubbed off in a mere two weeks time.

Homecoming

We can set forth our stand on the date set for the Homecoming Weekend rather briefly, and rather rapidly.

First, the students in general seem to be dissatisfied.

Second, the Homecoming Committee is running into difficulty with preparations due to the lack of time. It is enough that the entire weekend is a student undertaking without our burdening them further with a time problem.

Third, we were under the impression that the Administration wanted the freshmen to adjust well to the academic side of college. With Kampus Kick-off, Homecoming, and the start of rushing all coming within a month's time, this must be rather difficult.

Finally, valid as the reasons may be for the present date, we can see little or no justification in interfering with the adjustment of the freshman class, let alone the upperclassmen, to the routine of the college year...unless of course we have been under the wrong impression for four years.

This is an institution of higher learning, isn't it?

inquiring reporter

Question: Do you think October 2 is a good date for the Homecoming Weekend?

Gluskin, Smith

1. Joe Seigel- '56

The weekend planned this year for Homecoming is definitely too early. Speaking as a member of the Homecoming Committee, the time span before the weekend does not give us enough time to make a complete and well planned weekend. Homecoming at Vermont is primarily for parents. Most of the parents have recently just seen their children, and find it hard to come up to the school so soon after the beginning of the academic year.

2. George Lucchina- '55
President of S.A.

In the normal course of events the October 2 date would fall at an inconvenient time for the Homecoming Staff to plan and work out their program. However, due to a slip up in the scheduling of the 1954 athletic program, coordination with other campus activities was overlooked and the early date for this year could not be helped.

3. Jackie Brown '57

We don't have enough time to get acquainted!! Also the parents just got home and they have to come right back up here if they plan to come to Homecoming.

4. Anne King '57

I don't feel that the freshman have enough time to get to know each other and others on campus. On the other hand, the Maine game should make a great Homecoming game.

Lucchina

5. Val Gluskin- '57

I think it is too early because the students haven't had a chance to get settled and the proper publicity and spirit cannot be aroused. It would be better at a later date like the end of October when everyone is adjusted, not only with their studies, but socially as well.

Siegel, Seamans, Toomin

6. Tony Rockhill '55

Although I realize that it was a matter of expediency to schedule Homecoming the first weekend in October, I feel that insofar as the success of the weekend goes, it will be handicapped by the early date. Homecoming is an institution that should be revered and glorified.'

Rockhill

7. Bernard Toomin- '56

No. The date of October 2 is too early for Homecoming Weekend. It does not give especially the freshman a chance to acclimate themselves to the college routine of study. During the first few weeks, college life is new to them and they are given the "Bums Rush." I think a later date would give them a better chance to accustom themselves to study and make for a more enjoyable weekend.

8. Elizabeth Seman- '56
Publicity Director of Homecoming.

Because of the proximity of Freshman Week and Homecoming, I feel that October 2nd is too early a date. As far as planning the weekend goes, we have found that we have been quite rushed, not with general arrangements, but with details which go to make a smoother running program. I would suggest the third weekend in October for Homecoming. This would enable the Committee to make sure that all arrangements are set, and also allow the parents of the Freshman to be able to see how they have progressed in a month's time.

9. Stan Scheiner '57

Yes. I believe that the date set aside for Homecoming this year is very appropriate, even if it seems a bit early. I think it will benefit the weekend rather than hinder it. At this early date the weather will be excellent for the occasion.

10. Dale Gardner- '55

I feel that Homecoming is scheduled too early insofar as the various organizations that are responsible to the running of Homecoming will be under a very serious handicap due to the lack of time in preparing for the event.

Fullbright Applications Available

Attention seniors add graduate students! The time for picking up application blanks for Fullbright Fellowships is NOW...John H. Kent, Dean of the Graduate College, strongly urges those interested in studying in Europe next year at the expense of the State Department to obtain the long and complicated forms from his office immediately.

According to indications, applicants from UVM stand a good chance of being awarded a fellowship this year. Approximately 50% of those from UVM who applied for them last year received awards. Here are some reasons for this abnormal record.

Primarily, residents of the northern New England area stand a good chance of obtaining a Fellowship because of the Board of Selection's tendency to distribute the awards geographically. The relatively small population of this area may provide applicants with a greater probability of success. In addition, few sutdents from UVM even applied for the coveted awards last year.

At any rate, if the idea of studying abroad next year appeals to you, then drop into Dean Kent's office in the very near future, for applications must be made out in quadruplicate, medical exams taken and photographs made by October 31.

Royalty Candidates

IFC, Pan Hellenic Leaders Explain Aims Of Rushing

"The purpose of rushing is primarily to meet the fraternity men, see the fraternity houses, and decide which the individual rushee will pledge for." It also "gives non-sorority girls a chance to visit the sorority houses and to get an idea of sorority life." So spoke Stan Stein, president of the IFC, and Babs Rosenbush, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

The IFC divides formal rushing into three sections. The men are arranged i. "blocks" for the open houses. In this period they are allotted one hour at each fraternity. To be eligible to pledge they must have visited every fraternity.

For the second section, fraternity preference cards are filled out with four choices. The rushees make scheduled visits to their choices.

The last section includes banquets. At this point fraternities extend banquet bids to the individuals whom they are interested in "pledging."

Finally, pledge bids are sent out by the "greeks." If a rushee receives, notification of a bid he proceeds to a pre-designated office and fills out a formal acceptance card.

The first item on the rushing agenda of the sorority is a guided tour of all the sorority houses. The girls then choose three houses that they want to revisit. Coffee hours follow. Rushers are invited to these informal parties by the sororities.

Open houses are the next step, this time only two to a rushee. More coffee hours follow, and then formal parties. A two day silent period ensues, during which "hello" may be the only word exchanged between sorority members and rushees. Finally, the girls fill out preference lists of three sororities and these are compared with similar lists drawn up by the sororities for decisions to be reached.

"Rushing is a wonderful way for the girls to meet and become acquainted with other girls whom they normally would not come across," is the way Harriet Pritchep '57 views rushing.

Bill Infeld '57 says, of his rushing experience last year, "An interesting study of first impressions, with both the fraternity and the rushee having to make a hard but enjoyable decision."

UVM Students Outdrink Nation By Two To One

If Vermonters and the rest of the U.S. consumed milk at the rate University of Vermont students did during the last school year, the country would soon be faced with a milk shortage, according to Dr. Hugh Riddell, chairman of the Department of Dairy Husbandry at UVM.

In a recent survey of milk drinking habits of students in the University cafeteria made by the Department of Dairy Husbandry, men students averaged 1.7 pints of milk per day, and Vermont coeds were not far behind in consuming an average of 1.03 pints daily. These figures compare with the national average of about two-thirds of a pint daily per capita, and show that University of Vermont men are putting away Bossie's product at nearly two-and-a-half time the national daily average.

And that isn't the whole story, according to Riddell.

Lot of Milk

A majority of students eating at the University cafeteria live in college dormitories and residence halls where, last year, four automatic milk dispensers are in service. A fifth dispenser is located in the Waterman Building on campus, and these five "mechanical milk-maids" averaged close to 3,000 half-pints of milk weekly over the college year, this figure in addition to milk consumed at meal times by the students.

Riddell states frankly that he thinks the figures "put our students in a class by themselves" as milk-drinkers, and make them "the best exponents of the fact that you never outgrow your need for milk."

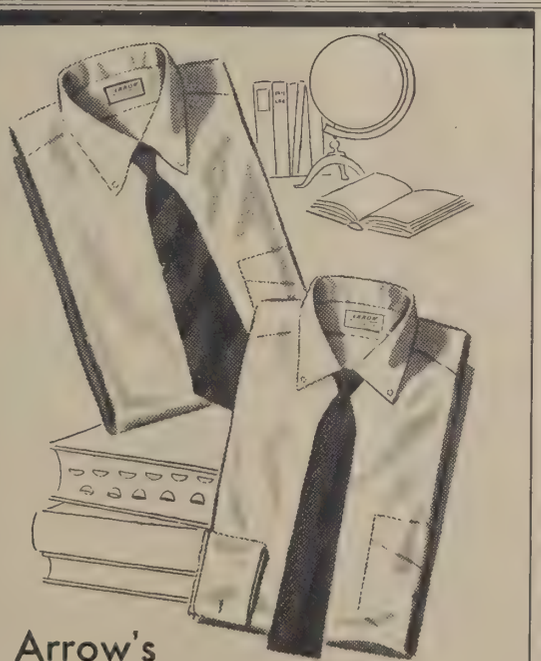
He points out that the consumption of milk from dispensers takes the form of a mid-afternoon lift or evening snack and he concludes that milk is a favorite student beverage not only because the students know it is good for them, but also because "the flavor is delicious and a bottle of milk is a real refresher.

But let us not forget, he cautions, while waxing enthusiastic about the ingenuity which provides us with such happy conveniences as automatic milk dispensers, that it still takes "a good old-fashioned cow to produce the milk, and it still takes a hard-working, early-rising dairy farmer to start the daily flow of millions of gallons of milk to market.

Colburn Painting Is First Prize To New Jersey

A painting by Francis Colburn, chairman of the University of Vermont Department of Art, was awarded as a first prize to the state of New Jersey at the annual banquet celebrating American Art Week, Colburn has learned in a recent letter from Lois W. Billinger, National Director of American Art Week.

The celebration of Art Week is sponsored by the National Federation of Women's Clubs and the American Artists Professional League.



Eight states were invited to contribute paintings and Colburn's painting was contributed for Vermont by the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The states showing the most interest in art during the year preceding Art Week are awarded paintings as prizes. Colburn's painting was selected to be awarded as the first prize painting, according to the letter advising him of the award which was made at the banquet in New York City some time ago.

Orchestra Will Hold Auditions

Tryouts for the University Orchestra will be held in the Music Building, 70 Williams Street, from 4 to 5 p.m. to-day and Friday, September 24, and on Monday, September 27.

Membership in the University Orchestra carries college credit. Rehearsals are held once a week, on Tuesdays from 8 to 10:30 p.m., at the Ira Allen Chapel. Dormitory regulations pertaining to women students are modified to permit formances without affecting social privilege.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "Barefoot Boy With Cheek," etc.)

I WAS AWARDED A RIBBON AND PROMPTLY PUT IT IN MY TYPEWRITER

First of all—how come?

How do I come to be writing a column for Philip Morris in your campus newspaper?

I'll tell you how come:

It all began on a summer night. The air was warm, the sky was full of stars, and I sat in a cane-bottomed chair on my verandah, peaceful and serene, smoking a cigarette, humming the largo from Death and Transfiguration, and worming my dog.

Into this idyllic scene came a stranger—a tall, clean limbed stranger, crinkly-eyed and crooked-grinned, loose and lank. "How do you do," he said. "My name is Loose Lank and I am with the Philip Morris people."

"Enchanted," I said. "Take off your homburg and sit down." I clapped my hands. "Charles!" I called. "Another chair for Mr. Lank."

Obediently my dog trotted away and returned directly with a fan-back chair of Malayan rattan. He is the smartest dog in our block.

"I'm sorry I don't have a Morris chair," I said to Mr. Lank. "That would be rather more appropriate—you being with Philip Morris and all."

Well, sir, we had many a laugh and cheer over my little witticism. When we had finished laughing and cheering, we wiped our eyes and Mr. Lank pulled out a fresh package of Philip Morris. He yanked the tape and the pack sprang open with a fetching little snap.

"Did you hear that fetching little snap?" asked Mr. Lank.

"Yes," I said, for I did.

"Cigarette?" he said.

"Thank you," I said.

We puffed contentedly for three or four hours. Then Mr. Lank said, "I suppose you're wondering why I'm here."

"Well," I replied, my old eyes twinkling, "I'll wager you didn't come to read my meter."

You can imagine how we howled at that one!

"That's a doozy!" cried Mr. Lank, giggling wildly. "I must remember to tell it to Alice when I get home."

"Your wife?" I said.

"My father," he said.

"Oh," I said.

"Well," he said, "let's get down to business . . . How would you like to write a campus column for Philip Morris?"

"For money?" I said.

"Yes," he said.

"My hand, sir," I said and clasped his. Warmly he returned the pressure, and soft smiles played on our lips, and our eyes were bright with the hint of tears, and we were silent, not trusting ourselves to speak.

"Cigarette?" he said at length.

I nodded.

We lit up and puffed contentedly for eight or ten hours. "I understand you've made quite a study of college students," said Mr. Lank.

"Yes," I said, blushing modestly. "I have been collecting them for years. I have over four thousand students in my basement right now."

"In mint condition?" he said incredulously.

"Students don't come in mint condition," I explained. "They go to great expense to acquire the 'beat-up look.'"

"How interesting," he said. "Tell me something more about them—their feeding habits, for example."

"They are omnivores of prodigious appetite," I said. "It is wise not to leave food about when they are present. Their favorite food is a dish called the Varsity Gasser—one scoop raspberry ice, one scoop raw hamburger, leechee nuts and maple syrup."

"Fascinating," said Mr. Lank. "And what are students interested in chiefly?"

"Each other," I replied. "Boy students are interested in girl students, and girl students are interested in boy students."

"This seems to me an admirable arrangement," said Mr. Lank. "But is it true even in these parlous days of worldwide tension and dreadful armaments?"

"It is always true," I said. "It isn't that college students don't know what's going on in the world. They know all too well. They're perfectly aware of the number of lumps waiting for them . . . But meanwhile the limbs are springy and the juices run strong and time is fleeting."

"What will you write about in your column?" asked Mr. Lank.

"About boys and girls," I said. "About fraternities and sororities and dormitories and boarding houses and dances and sleighrides and hayrides and cutting classes and going to classes and cramming for exams and campus politics and the profits of bookstores and convertibles and BMOCs and BWOCs and professors who write new texts every year and the world's slowest humans—the page boys at the library."

"And will you say a pleasant word about Philip Morris from time to time?" asked Mr. Lank.

"Sir," I replied, "I can think of no other kind of word to say about Philip Morris."

We shook hands again then, and smiled bravely. Then he was gone—a tall silhouette moving erectly into the setting sun. "Farewell, good tobacconist!" I cried after him. "Aloha, aloha!"

And turned with a will to my typewriter.

Orientation Kept Freshmen Busy For Week

By Stan Sackowitz

A merry-go-round of banquets, dances, and meetings kept most of the Freshmen in a whirl during the past week of activities.

The University Players entertained the freshmen the first evening, John Van Blarcom, president of the University Players, spoke of the aims and ideals of the organization and introduced the program. This consisted of a "Modern Dance Circus" with Hetty Mitchell, Syd Posner, Marty Howe, and Gene McLean participating. Following this was a one act play entitled "Fog on the Valley" directed by Nancy Beals. The cast included Roz Faber, Dick Ireland, Hetty Mitchell, Lorraine Blanchard, Bob Smith, and Tom Marx.

Borgmann Welcomes

Placement tests took up most of Saturday morning and afternoon, while a banquet was the highlight of the evening; Dick Severens was master of ceremonies. Welcoming speeches were given by President Borgmann, Dean Anna Harris, new Dean of Women, George Lucchina, Dr. McMann, and Alayne Tomlinson, who also led the group in songs.

The next big event during orientation was the picnic and pep rally, preceded by a Student Association meeting. Ed Brace was master of ceremonies of the affair, Coach Donnelly introduced Ed Nemer who in turn presented the team. After this the cheerleaders and Dean Harris led the audience in cheers. As an added treat, Dick Ireland and George Hansen did the Kake Walk.

In order to get acquainted, the Beanie Hop was held. Mark Bernstein, who was M.C., introsome real talent in the person of Barbara Twitchell, who did the hula, Frank Carr, master of the violin, and the Harmonats, a quartet of female voices. Dancing was held throughout the evening with music supplied by the Catamounts.

Carr Leads Sing

The President's Reception, held at Southwick, gave the Freshmen a chance to meet the deans of their respective colleges and President Borgmann.

To wind up the week of activities, the Campus Varieties was held in the Cage. Frank Carr led the group in singing old-time favorities and cheers accompanied on the piano by Bob Smith. Dick Ireland and Roz Faber did a pantomine to the tune of "I Want to be Loved by You." Nancy Brumberg sang "The Frozen Logger and Rusty Clarke did a pantomine on how a girl gets ready for classes.

Committee Members

Co-Chairman of Freshmen orientation was Dick Severens and V. Menke. They were assisted by Florence Alexander and Ken Wadley, co-chairman of Banquet assisted by Roberta Baker, Pat May, Dot Ward, Janet Pearlstein, Shirley Campbell, Anne McCall, Penny Collins; Picnic co-chairman Joan Breslin, Howard Ross, Mixer Judy Victorsohn, Rick Wychoff assisted by Mark Bernstein, Ann MacGregor, Jane Newton, Elly Levin, Lou Barth, Rhoda Rosenberg, Sandy Perry, Beth Bowen, Marty Klotz, Elinor Hashim, Marie Hauptman, Arnold Lachs, Paul Kalis, William Infield, James Kantor, Myrna Feldman, Natalie Braunstein, Rudy Keimowitz, Bob Pollitt; Marv Nirenberg, Fran Pedussey; Sing, Frank Carr, Publicity Co-chairman Joan Rubinson and Dick Simpson. Serving on the planning committee for the program were Dr. George Wolf, Jr., dean of the UVM College of Medicine; Dr. Aiken; Esther Martinson, director of nursing for the State Department of Health; Emily Dinegan, director of the Burlington Visiting Nurse Association; and Jean Ichter, chairman of the curriculum committee of the UVM Department of Nursing.

Miss Crabbe, chairman of the planning committee, looks forward to the establishment of the rural health nursing program as "a wonderful step forward."

Miss Crabbe adds "it is my hope that facilities for pediatric and psychiatric nursing can next be developed so that students of nursing in Vermont will not have to go outside the state for field experience; so that Vermont's institutions will be able to profit from the stimulation which is inherent in a teaching program; and so that future nurses of Vermont will be better prepared to meet the needs of all Vermont people."

Burlington area first, according to Prof. Faye Crabbe; Director of the Dept. of Nursing, who indicated that it is the hope of those planning the program to work in cooperation with voluntary health agencies in this area.

Wolf on Committee

Once the program is established locally, it is planned to set up other field experience centers throughout the state and it is hoped that, through the UVM program, a regional center for other collegiate schools of nursing can eventually be established here.

Choir Tryouts Held Tonight

Tryouts for the University Choir will be held in the Music Building, 70 Williams Street, 3:45 to 4:15 p.m. today and Friday September 24, 4:00 to 4:30 p.m. The choir will sing at the Vermont Varieties Saturday evening October 2 and at the Christmas Concert, Sunday afternoon December 12. The concert will include excerpts from Handel's "Messiah" and Bach's "Christmas Oratorio," and modern works. The choir consists of both men and women, sings sacred and secular music, and may be taken with or without college credit. Rehearsals are held Tuesdays 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. and Thursdays 7:00 to 8:30 p.m.

Dancer Here This Saturday

The University family will have the opportunity of glimpsing the mystery and religious pageantry of the East as interpreted by the choreographer's art, when UVM Dance Workshop presents Ram Gopal, East Indian master of the dance, in Fleming Museum tomorrow.

Young Ram has not only exhibited the extraordinarily fine quality of his talent in extensive towns through Europe and the Orient but has made substantial contributions to "art" in the United States through his acting, dancing, and choreography in the moving picture and associated industries. (He choreographed "Elephant Walk" and is now working on "Purple Rain" with Gregory Peck, as well as on the weekly Douglass Fairbanks Jr. T.V. show.)

Ram comes to us following his summer performances at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, where critics spoke of his "stopping the show" with his superb artistry. "Ram Gopal became recognized immediately last night as one of the great living dancers, irrespective of school or style, as his mastery of movement was obvious. The beauty of expression gave pleasure even though the strange vocabulary of the Hindu dance was not understood."

Ram Gopal

This Oriental dancer has been made available by Martha Howe, UVM's proficient modern dacce artist and advisor for Dance Workshop. Miss Howe days of Ram Gopal, "Last year we heard views on India from Professor Babcock and Chester Bowles. Now this opportunity to understand the beauty of the East through the ancient dances of India and at the same time to see a great dancer perform is something you must not miss."

The Dance Workshop will welcome you to Fleming Museum Auditorium this Saturday, September 25th, at 2:30 and at 8:30 p.m. Acmission $1.00.

Newman Club, SCA, Hillel Have Active Slates Planned

By Robert W. Smith

The religious life of the UVM campus is regulated by the Religious Activities Committees of the Student Association Council. The three campus faith organizations which work in conjunction with and in cooperation with the Religious Activities Committee are the Hillel Foundation, Newman Club, and Student Christian Association.

Lew Dan, Hillel Foundation president, reports that the regular program includes alternate Sunday brunches and also alternating Friday night services the other weeks. Preparations are being made for the High Holy Days and announcements will be published concerning them at the proper time. Cultural and entertainment programs for the Foundation are listed in the date book.

The Newman Club lists the annual retreat to be conducted by Rev. Joseph Ford, S.V.D. on December 3, 4, & 5, as the high point of its spiritual calendar. Besides the regular Masses, classes in religion and organized discussion groups will be offered. Mr. J. Edward Donnelley acts as advisor to the club and Rev. W.R. Mulligan is Chaplain. Father Mulligan invites all Roman Catholic students to visit him in his office at the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital. Garry O'Halloran is president of Newman Club.

The Student Christian Association picnic, with food and transportation provided, will open the program this semester. A bus will leave Waterman at 5 p.m. and will return at 8 p.m. Other such events as this, as well as dinners, Christmas Candlelight Service, and meetings with the local church groups are planned during the semester.

Melton Miller, SCA president informs us that Dr. Howard Thurman, Dean of the Chapel of the Boston University is to be the guest speaker at the all campus religious emphasis week-end on November 13.

Professor Raymond A. Hall, advisor to the Religious Activities Committee says, "The prospects for real cooperation on the campus this year look better than they have for some time."

Warren Ullrich Is Best Drilled Cadet At Army ROTC Camp

Warren Ullrich 21, a senior at the University of Vermont while at training at Fort Bragg, North Carolina ROTC Camp won the distinction of being the best drilled individual in the entire camp of some 1400 cadets from 30 different colleges. Ullrich for this feat on Field Day competition was presented the General Excellence Medal by Major General Smith.

A resident of Tenafly, N.J., Ullrich has a fine military background dating back to 1947 when he started his freshman year at Valley Forge Military Academy in Wayne, Pennsylvania from which he graduated in 1951; he proceeded to The Citadel Military College in Charleston, South Carolina where he went through a year plebe system similiar to that of West Point. After his first year at The Citadel he transferred to the University of Vermont.

Here Ten Years

Although it was established as a temporary solution to the problem of providing for the large numbers of married veterans seeking to continue education, the Trailer Camp will have been in existence for 10 years when it closes at the end of the school year of 1956.

The off-East Avenue housing area owes this 10-year existence to the fact that the number of married students seeking a college education has not slackened as much as expected by UVM officials; the situation is much the same on college campuses across the country.

In connection with this, UVM last year set up a committee to conduct a survey of married students to determine their housing needs. The survey indicated that the married student, a rarity before the war, is now here to stay.

Kickoff Draws Over 1000

The annual Kampus Kickoff was held a week ago Saturday evening in Lower Waterman with the music furnished by the Catamounts. Over 1000 individuals attended.

The guest star was vocalist Joe Sepe, who purposely arrived from New York for the evening. The social success was sponsored by the Sophomore class under the chairmanship of Ralph DesLaurier and Bill Solemene. The theme for the evening was "Moonlight in Vermont," which was very effective indeed.

The decoration committee, under the direction of Scott Carson and Shirley Campbell, did a most realistic job with their theme. Stardust-sprinkled stars were hung diagonally from the ceiling, with the moon shining over the bandstand. The walls were decorated with similar white and silver stars. Tables encircled the entire dance floor, each sporting and lighted candle and blue and white table decorations.

Refreshments were sold by Rhoda Rosenberg's committee. The Nabisco Company of Burlington generously donated pretzels and cookies, which were served with soda. Publicity was handled by Valerie Gluskin. Over 40 signs and, posters were distributed through the University buildings and dormitories. A novel publicity idea was used at the Frosh Beanie Hop. As each coat was checked at the coatroom, paper pennant reading "Kampus Kickoff, Sept. 18th" was pinned on the lapel. The hard work resulted in a record attendance of over 1000 students and faculty members at the gala affair.

Advanced ticket sales numbered over 300 on Friday before the dance. These were sold in Lower Waterman and during registration on Wednesday and Thursday.

Class Advisor, Dr. Gregg and Mrs. Gregg were present as well as the new COSA, Mr. Donald Hardy and Mrs. Hardy. Also Converse Hall's house parents, Mr. and Mrs. Severance were able to attend.

Kampus Kickoff last weekend drew over 1000 to Waterman. Soph officers hailed dance as success. All photos by Curwen, S.P.S.

Charter

Control of the University will pass into the hands of the State indirectly by indirectly by increasing the number of Trustees from twenty to twenty-three. At present the Board of Trustees consists of nine self-purpetrating members, nine members chosen by the State, the Governor of the State of Vermont, and the President of the University. The three proposed new members would be appointed by the Governor, thus giving the State-appointed members of the Board a clear majority.

Ready For Legislature

President Borgmann believes that, "The significance of this decision of the Board of Trustees of UVM is that it represents a clear willingness on the part of the Trustees to lay before the Legislators the complete resources of the University for providing Vermont youth with low-cost, high quality educational opportunities. The door is now frankly open for the next legislature."

Another change which is proposed in the charter is the consolidation of University property. At present property is owned by all three units; nzmely The University of Vermont, The State Agricultural College, and The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. According to Mr. Frederick Smith the proposed revisions "represent a basic step towards simplification of the University setup."

Original Intention

It is felt by President Borgmann and others that the proposed revisions would put into actuality the ideas and intent of the makers of the University charter when in 1791 they provided for the establishment of a University for Vermont, and when in 1802, 1810, and 1865 amended the 1791 charter.

A letter will soon be sent to all alumni informing them of the planned revisions so that they may make any comments and suggestions to the University and the Board of Trustees.

Long History

The original charter of the University of Vermont was passed by the State assembly on November 3, 1791. This made UVM the twentieth oldest institution of higher learning in the United States and the second institution founded by state legislative action to offer instruction at the university level. The charter was amended in 1802, 1810, and a major revision was made in 1865. This is the act which created the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. It is this Act No 83 of 1865 which is now under concideration for amendment.

dents should be themsleves and try to develop their own capacities, for there should be no "dictatorship of personality" in the world.

All of these common rules leads up to the Honor System practiced by the women students of the University. Under this system, a woman is under her honor to report any violations of the WSGA rules, whether the violation has been make by herself or another woman. Concerning this, Miss Harris says "I have no opinion until I see how it works." However, she feels that this system should work, and work well, for the "only way people are trustworthy is for them to be treated as if they are trustworthy."

responsibility as citizens." He then weighed the relative value of thought and action and concluded that "thought gets real value when it contributes towards right action; thought that doesn't contribute is empty of value."

No Politics

Those who expected a political speech left disappointed as the slow-speaking Vermonter chose to discuss long term goals. With reference to the present world scene the senator said, "it may well be that we have reached the critical point in the history of Western Civilization." He cited Toynbee's theory of "The time of Troubles," the period which has preceded the fall of the world's great civilizations. Flanders then expressed the hope that America may be the first country to emerge from its "time of troubles" to achieve an even greater civilization.

Have Responsibilities.

The Senator, a strong Eisenhower supporter, expressed his opposition to placing America in the role of "an Atlas on whose shoulders falls the weight of the globe," but insisted that "we have our responsibilities." "Neither the world interest nor the national interest lies in the endeaver to grasp power," he contended. Bringing his two main lines of thought together, the senator concluded that "The time of Troubles" should not trouble us if we learn the meaning of deep thought and right action."

Mom & Dad's Day

Saturday has been officially designated Mom's and Dad's Day. Parents and alumnae will register during Saturday morning. A blanket will be given to the parent who comes the farthest and another to the parents who have the most children in the school. There will be Fraternity open houses on Saturday night and sorority teas on Sunday.

The cost of the tickets for the weekend has gone down. Admission to the Saturday night program is only seventy five cents. Despite the increased cost of the band, dance tickets will be no more expensive than last year, $3.50. Tickets go on sale next Monday in the hall of Waterman building

Catamounts Favored In Grid Opener Against Dutchmen
UVM Athletics Successful In 1953-54 Campaigns

Determined Team Travels To Union For First Game

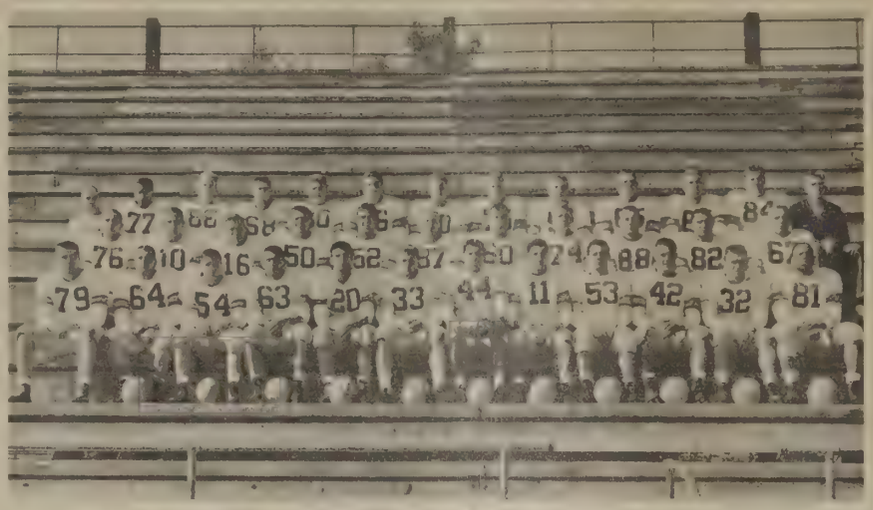
by MARK BERNSTEIN

Once again the football season arrives at UVM, and with it comes a determined Catamount eleven under the helm of Coach Ed Donnelly. The Catamount team this year looks more promising than ever. The Cats will be out to tackle their first opposition of the year when they encounter the Union College "Dutchmen" at Schenectady, New York, this weekend. The Cats are favored. This year the Catamounts feature a hard hitting line and driving backfield which has the attributes of a very successful year.

For the past few weeks the Catamounts have been tediously working out in preparation for their clash with Union this Saturday. Practice started the first week in September at Petersboro, New Hampshire. Here the Cats scrimmaged with Boston University before moving back to Centennial field for final scrimmages and workouts.

Coach Donnelly has built this years eleven around a nucleus of veterans. Only new additions are ends Art Solomon, Lou Reich and tackle Paul Harasimowicz. This years line is much heavier than those in previous years. The line averages 208 pounds as to last years 190. Perhaps the most outstanding feature of Donnellys charge is the fact that his line has had the experience. Also the advantage of going to the bench for the needed depth which there definitely is in Roy Williams, Joe Aidala, John Shepherd and John Duffy.

Starting at quarterback is senior Mike Semans, last year the seventh top quarterback in small college football. Without a doubt part of Semans success must be credited to graduated star Nat Campana. This year many eyes will be focused on ends Art Solomon and Lou Reich who are coming along and seem to be ample targets for deadly Semans.



This years fullback is Captain Ed Nemer who uses determination and agility to make him one of the top threats to Catamount opponents this year.

Halfbacks Ed Beck and Al McLam round out the backfield. Not enough can be said about these two speed demons because they are the spark that drives the Catamount eleven.

This years line is as follows: Ken Kurjiaka, Clem Forte (guards); Walt Johnson, Paul Harasimowicz (tackles); Al Stevens (center); Art Solomon, Lou Reich (ends). These are the seven workmen of the Cats. The hit and get-hit guys who can make or break the back of a Catamount victory.

As far as substitutions go, the very able Mike Morse and Bill Tressler will go in as ends. John Galascione is slated as number one substitution as far as the backfield goes. Johnny has been running very hard and will most probably see plenty of action.

The highest shut-out victory for UVM was in 1922 against the NU Cadets, 61-0.

This is the University of Vermont football team which will open against Union College at Schenectady this Saturday. The Donnelly coached Catamounts will be out to begin improvement on last year's 3-3-1 record. Ed Nemer (44), Mike Seamans (20), Ed Beck (32) and Al McLam (33) will compose the veteran backfield.

Mr. "Amazing" George Plender Shatters Marks

" Mr. Amazing " George Plender shattered sports record books last spring when he pitched an " impossible " 57 2/3 straight scoreless innings in intercollegiate baseball for the University of Vermont.

Included in the ace righthander's scoreless stretch, were complete shutouts against Middlebury (2), St. Michael's, Dartmouth, Clarkson, and partial game blankings over Norwich and St. Mike's. Here's how " Mr. Amazing " did it. First a 2-0 victory over St. Mike's, then a 3-0 decision at Dartmouth, followed by a 5-0 whitewashing of Middlebury. Then two relief jobs were mixed in, one a 7 1/3 inning affair with Norwich, then a 6 inning finisher with St. Mike's. But that's not all, for " Mr. Amazing " then ended the season by blanking Clarkson 2-0, and Middlebury 7-0. If not for the end of the season's schedule, no one knows how far George would have gone.

" AMAZING " JUNIOR

Plender was only a junior and he will be back this spring to attempt to continue his skein.

You can rest assured that many eyes, both professional and non-professional, will be watching.

NCAA RECORDS

A check with NCAA records revealed that no official college records are kept for the whole country, but Plender's was certainly the best record of all time, or at least close to it. Officials of the NCAA remarked that in the near future, baseball records will be reality. When it does, Plender's record will be kept with the NCAA bureau.

All that Plender can say is; " Well, I had to make up for my .038 batting average somehow! "

The University of Vermont inaugurated football in 1897 with a five game schedule. Winning three and tying two, this was Vermont's only undefeated season. Two of the Cats' foes in their initial season are still on the U.V.M. schedule; Middlebury College and Norwich University still give Vermont a battle in State Conference competition.

Ossie Solem Criticizes N.E. Sports

AMHERST, Mass., Sept. 20 (AP)— Veteran football coach Ossie Solem of Springfield College today attacked what he called New England Colleges' "greatest failing — their failure to organize into regional athletic conferences."

One of nation's oldest coaches in point of service, Solem told the season's first meeting of western Massachusetts coaches, newspaper, radio and television men that "the snobbishness of the New England Colleges has prevented such organization so far."

But, he said, the Yankee Conference—which comprises the region's six state land grant colleges —is a forerunner of a future New England Conference, which might eventually include an additional six or eight teams from the small college ranks.

Warren McGuirk, University of Massachusetts Athletic Director, said that he has suggested that other schools be admitted to the Yankee Conference and that he expects some may be added soon, although there is nothing definite as yet.

Solem blamed poor attendance at many New England college football games on "lack of local rivalries." If a New England Conference was built up, he said, interest would pick-up.

Solem said that an expanded Yankee Conference might develop into a regional conference including such teams as Williams, Amherst, American International, Trinity, Wesleyan and Springfield— along with Union and Rensselaer Polytech from New York state. Such a group is bound to come eventually, he said.

Down through the years, the Catamounts have met fifty-nine different opponents. Their highest scoring effort was recorded during their first season against Norwich, 62-4.

Ten Day Practice Cuts Down Injury At Petersboro N.H.

This was the first year that the UVM squad had preseason workouts at Petersboro. In recent years, the Champlain Country Club was used. Catamount Coach Ed Donnelly was highly pleased with the new arrangement because "chances for injuries are reduced 50 per cent, for in our drills, we won't have to work against our own boys."

UVM worked independent of the BU team, although workouts were scheduled from time to time, between the teams.

Two State Titles; Hoopsters In Tie; Freshmen Excell

The University of Vermont had a fine year in interscholastic competition last season. Most of our teams were in the thick of state championship title races with two teams winning titles, one tie, along with a terrific year in Freshman sports which may be some indication as to the future.

Gridmen Improve

In his second year of coaching football at UVM, Ed Donnelly improved on his record, compiling a 3-3-1 mark. This is a long way from the 0-7 showing of three years ago. The Cats thrilled a jam-packed home crowd by scoring a 13-13 tie against its arch rival, St. Mike's. As it turned out, St. Mike's dropped football this season and the game was certainly an indication of the closeness of this long running series between the two schools. Victories over Dartmouth "B", (which was a fill-in game due to the closing down of Champlain College), Norwich, and Rochester, accounted for the three Green and Gold victories.

Hoopsters Tie In State

Coach Fuzzy Evan's hoopsters pulled the "upset of the season", thus enabling them to tie with Norwich for state basketball laurals. The Cats broke a Norwich ten game winning streak, defeating the cadets 69-67 in one o the Memorial Auditorium history. UVM's 13-7 record, although only fairly impressive, was gained by one of its top teams in many years. Nat Campana, Captain of the Cats, broke Vermont's all time four year scoring record.

Batmen Win Title

In the Spring Vermont took its second straight state title under the coaching of ex-major leaguer, Ralph Lapointe. The Cat batmen won 5 and lost 1 in state play. They had a fine 8-3 New England N.C.A.A. record with a 2-4 showing on the annual southern trip, dropping tough games to West Point and Villanova.

Trackstars Strong

Archie Post came through with another one of his powerhouse cinder teams last year. Besides winning the State Title, the Cats took three of their four dual meets. They placed second in a quad meet which included Bates, Colby, and Middlebury. The Yankee Conference Track Meet, which was held here in Burlington, included many of the top track men in New England. Despite the strength of the competition, UVM faired well with a fourth. Many individual, school, and state records were broken during the season.

Minor Sports Hold Own

In the minor sports the the Green and Gold athletes held their own. Vermont's marathon men had a winning 3-2 count in dual meets, defeating R.P.I., Union, and Middlebury. They placed tenth in the New Englands, but settled as cellar dwellers in the Yankee Conference. But the boys bounced back at the Connecticut Valley run, placing fourth.

The defending state championship golf team was hampered by weather this past season and they were held to limited activity.

The tennis squad made a strong showing, winning four out of its first six matches. The netsters pulled an ace out of the hole in the Yankee Conference matches at Durham, N.H. Coach Carpenter's boys tied for second place, led by Captain Bill Thompson and Jay Selcow.

The Varsity Rifle Team won both local and National honors, shooting against teams all the way from Hawaii to Florida.

Sailing is also shaping up at Vermont and members of the team are hopeful that this season they may take part in regular varsity competition.

Skiing at Vermont took a turn for the better, despite the lack of snow last season. UVM's crack cross country ski entries placed first in Middlebury, Norwich, and St. Lawrence Carnivals; and second in the United States Eastern Amatuer Ski Association Cross Country Relay Championship at Lebanon, N.Y. Vermont co-sponsored the Senior Intercollegiate championship meet at which it placed fifth.

FROSH EXCELL

Many fine records, plus many fine athletes, spells a fine future for freshman of last year's yearling teams.

The Freshman football team was undefeated for the second straight season, garnering a spotless 4-0 record. Many of the starters are now battling for Varsity berths. Captain Roy Williams and burly Paul Harasimowics, two linemen, have gained highest praise from Coach Donnelly.

This year the cross country boys compiled a winning duel meet record of 3-2.

Ralph LaPointe, in his new job as freshman basketball coach, started off with five straight victories. Such stars as: Bill Mann, Arthur Burkhardf, and Ron Crossman were constantly hitting double figures. In the second half of the schedule the Kittens found rough going, dropping five in a row, thus bringing fourth a 5-5 record.

The Frosh baseball team was fairly strong under the tutelege of Fuzzy Evans. The Kittens ended the season on the winning side.

In track the Freshmen won by substantial margins in both of their encounters, thus adding to the list of UVM's undefeated teams. Walt Blank was a triple winner in both meets.

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

Many of you frosh are probably used to associating scholarships, large stadiums and All-American athletes with intercollegiate sports. What's more, you have come of age in a period of basketball scandals, "fixes" and inquiries.

Forget this movie version. You won't find it prevalent at the University of Vermont.

In place of scholarships, many UVM athletes earn their ways through school at part-time employment. Athletic scholarships as such are few and far between.

You athletes--don't look for favors. Besides playing ball on the field, you have to carry it over to the class room.

Don't look for a super-colossal stadium. You'll waste your time. But you will find a stadium suitable to fill the needs of the Catamounts. It will hold any crowd at any game.

Don't look for All-American ball players--they aren't around. The only "all" we have is all of you.

As for perfect records, there aren't any around. Don't expect any scandals or "fixes". They're not in our dictionary.

SO WHAT SHOULD YOU LOOK FOR?

Look for just this brand of competition--this is the spirit that big-time athletic factories have failed to achieve and inculcate.

You can go to a game and see the student who sits next to you in your English class score a T.D. You can find yourself in a UVM uniform benefitting from the fine opportunities awarded to a college athlete. You can go to an athletic contest knowing that it's 100% pure, no catches. You can go to a game and admire every guy on the court, for you know that the sport to him is secondary, and he's a student just as you and I. You can call a season a success without champions and without All-Americans. For if Vermont shows only sportsmanship and good hard play, the season is a success.

This is small college athletics. Catch onto the spirit, its excitement, its cleanliness, and you'll like it.

UVM Coaches All Veterans

Yank Conference Includes Six N.E. State Schools

The Yankee Conference is made up of the six New England State Universities (Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Maine) for the purpose of developing inter-school athletic rivalry and friendly relations among the colleges. Members of the Colleges compete in the four major sports: football, basketball, baseball and track, and in most of the minor sports.

Because of traditional rivalries, many of which go back for years, and due to other roadblocks, it is impossible for Vermont to meet each of the five schools in the league. To be eligible for a Conference Championship, a team must meet four of the schools. Vermont has not, as yet, allowed itself championship eligibility, but it has been taking steps towards this goal. This year the Green and Gold adds U-Mass., to its schedule, thus playing two Yankee Conference games, with Maine being the other foe.

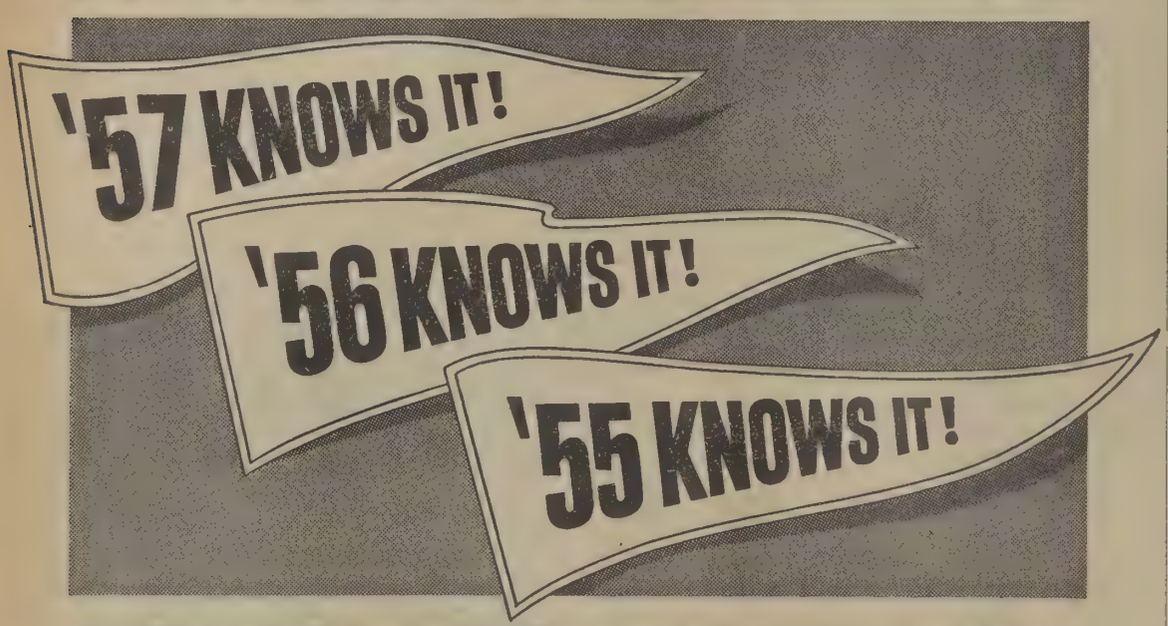
Edward J. Donnelly

Archie T. Post

Donnelly Heads Athletic Dept. For Third Year

Meet J. Edward Donnelly, Director of Athletics at UVM. Ed is also head football coach. This is his third year at Vermont. Since he took over, replacing former-major-leaguer Larry Gardner, Donnelly has revised many situations in the Vermont athletic system.

The forty-five year old athletic director went to Boston University in a coaching capacity in 1947, when he became line coach and first assistant to "Buff" Donell. The Donnelly-coached BU frosh team of '47 was undefeated and New England champions. From 1948 until the time he left, Donnelly directed the scouting program at BU. Ed is a graduate of Chattanooga University where he played football and basketball. Coach Donnelly is married and has three children.



Meet Ralph Lapointe, head baseball coach, backfield coach and scout, and frosh basketball mentor. A UVM graduate, Ralph is a former major league infielder. Ralph is a native Burlingtonian who got his education right here at Vermont. He starred for the football and baseball teams of the Catamounts back in the 1940's. After completing his major league career, he came back here where he's been one of the workhorses of our athletic department. Ralph is married and has two children.

Charles Traverse, head ski coach and line coach, is in his second year as ski mentor. Charlie is another UVM graduate who has returned to coach teams at Vermont. Traverse played football for four years while at UVM. (Class of '50)

John C. "Fuzzy" Evans is the head basketball coach and frosh football and baseball coach. Fuzzy came to the University of Vermont in 1937 as a Freshman coach. As a Varsity coach, his record is unsurpassed in this area. Fuzzy's football teams made creditable accounts for themselves, and his basketball teams have turned in phenomenal records. A graduate of Illinois in 1932, Evans is married and has one son. Until the arrival of Ed Donnelly, Fuzzy was over-loaded with coaching responsibilities, but when Donnelly took over as grid coach, Evans was able to shift his coaching around in order to give the most of his time to basketball.

Meet Archie T. Post, Director of Physical Education, and head track coach for twenty six years. Archie is a native Vermonter from Hinesburg. A graduate of UVM (Class of 1927). Post starred with the cross-country, basketball and track teams while in school. Besides having turned out some of UVM's finest track and cross country teams, Archie is the man behind the evergrowing physical education system here at UVM. This year's Freshman class will no doubt make his acquaintance within the next few weeks.

Academic Freedom Statement Receives Faculty Approval

Defends Right Of Dissent Urges Free Flow Of Ideas

"We, the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, in the spirit and tradition of free universities throughout the world, are agreed upon the following statement of principles on academic freedom and responsibility."

Thus began the statement of principle which was passed at near unanimity by the University Senate last week.

Having received Senate approval, the bill will be recommended for passage to the Board of Trustees.

"It has been our intent," the statement explained, "to state these principles in terms broad enough so that they may be valid not only in these critical times when academic freedom and personal freedom are in jeopardy both at home and abroad, but also in the future, insofar as the future can be foreseen."

President Carl W. Borgmann, in a message to the faculty, stated that he was in general accord with the principles enunciated.

Explosive Power

Emphasizing the necessity of academic freedom in higher education, the bill stated, "The main purpose of a university has always been, must always be, to stimulate the thinking and the creative powers of its students and its faculty. As an institution it deals in ideas, not only old and accepted ones, but new ones that may be full of explosive power."

Some of these ideas may be painful to groups on or off the campus, and "inevitably will be called dangerous by the timid and short-sighted," the statement read.

"But to those who really believe in the fruitfulness of human thought, the real danger would appear only if the flow of such ideas should cease," If this should happen, the bill continued, "Our faculty would no longer deserve the name of intellectuals, and our students...could no longer claim to be educated."

Think Freely

While subscribing to the statement on "academic freedom and the Responsibilities of Faculty Members" adopted by the American Association of University Professors, the UVM faculty statement also set up "Responsibilities of the Institution to the Faculty.

In part it stated, "The University must defend tenaciously the right of its members to think and express their thoughts freely and to make those choices within the law guaranteed to every citizen. This includes the right of dissent..."

The Faculty statement makes no direct reference to a situation in which a faculty member invokes the Fifth Amendment. It does however infer that the dismissal of a professor should be done only through the existing procedure for terminating tenure.

According to President Borgmann, "Some hold that the claiming of the Fifth Amendment places on the professor a heavy burden of proof of his fitness to hold a teaching position. I personally feel that, depending on the facts of the case, the University might well wish to re-examine his qualifications using the procedure already established."

The President pointed out that in August, 1953, the Board of Trustees voted down a motion which stated that "the act of invoking the Fifth Amendment is, in and of itself, cause for dismissal."

Members of the committee were: President Carl W. Borgmann, Prof. James P. Chaplin, Prof. Paul D. Evans, Prof. F.W. Donahue, and George T. Little.

Trustees Seek Student Ideas On Discriminatory Clauses

By Susan Wakefield

UVM student opinion on the controversial abolishment of the "discriminatory clause" will be measured this year before the Board of Trustees makes a final decision on the University Senate recommendation.

"The Board wants to know the views of the students as well as the faculty before taking any action, "explained President Borgmann.

The recommendation to bar from campus those fraternities or sororities that are bound by discriminatory clauses was passed by the Senate last March. The fraternities and sororities would be allowed seven years in which to make "appropriate adjustment of their constitutions."

The Administrative Council, composed of the Deans and President Borgmann, discussed the recommendation before passing it to the Board of Trustees. The Board's decision will be final.

Sororities "Clean"

The "discriminatory clause" is a clause in a Greek organization's constitution which restricts its membership by some requirement as to race, religion, or national origin.

Four or five fraternities on campus are bound by similar clauses, according to Stanley Stein, Interfraternity Council President. However, no sororities at UVM have restrictive clauses, Babs Rosenbush, president of Pan Hellenic Council, stated that the UVM council was using its influence to encourage members of Pan Hellenic Council on other campuses to abandon the clause.

Because of the 800 freshman who are not familiar with the situation, student opinion will be tested later in the year.

"We have not decided what form the survey will take," said Robert Kroepsch, Dean of Administration.

Possibilities included having a vote taken, handing out a questionnaire, or sampling student reaction with the cooperation of the psychology department.

New Librarian Added To Medical School's Staff

The appointment of Mrs. Jean Halliday as the new Medical Librarian has just been announced by Sidney B. Smith, Director of the University Libraries. Mrs. Halliday will assume her duties on October 1.

Trained as a librarian at George Peabody College for Teachers at Nashville and at Emory University in Atlanta, Mrs. Halliday has also attended Laval University in Quebec and Florida State University at Tallahassee where she received her bachelor's degree She has travelled and lived abroad both in Europe and Central and South America and has been active in community life wherever she has been. She comes to the University of Vermont from the University of Arkansas School of Medicine Library in Little Rock where she has been assistant librarian.

After October 1, the staff of the Medical Library will consist of Mrs. Halliday and Mrs. Dorothy Lilley, assistant medical librarian. Miss Elizabeth G. Chamberlin, former medical librarian, has resigned to take up residence in California, and Mr. William G. Chambers has entered graduate school in Florida.

College Students Seek Continued European Flights

Philadelphia, Pa.--- The U.S. National Student Association (NSA) today requested international air carriers to permit continued trans-Atlantic charter service for American college students on a nation-wide basis.

End of student air charter service was required under an interpretation of international air travel regulations by a Breaches Commission of the International Air Transport Association effective Sept. 15. The action followed complaints by Pan-American World Airways and Trans-World Airlines and has already resulted in cancellation of three student charter flights.

In a letter to presidents of the airlines involved, NSA president Harry H. Lunn, Jr., said continued charter service was essential to promote student exchange among Western nations and represented an important new market for the air carriers.

Lunn charged that the student travel market "is not being effectively developed by any present means of transportation" and indicated that most college students could not afford first class or tourist fare for European flights.

He based his remarks on studies conducted by the Association which showed:

1. More than 85 percent of American college students using NSA's charter service last year would not have made flights to Europe without charter benefits.

2. Tourist class and student ship accomodations are inadequate to cover student trans-Atlantic travel needs and are usually sold out early in February.

3. Based on passport figures, the total number of U.S. student traveling abroad has declined approximately 36 percent during the past two years, despite overall gains in international travel.

"International student travel is a major means of strengthening the bonds among free nations and building understanding among peoples," Lunn asserted, "and it is therefore shocking to see student interchange among Western nations declining rapidly in the face of continued mass exchange programs among Communist countries. Continued student charter service can be an important factor in reversing this trend."

NSA is a student-run, non-profit organization representing more than 800,000 American college students through their campus governments. It has operated a European tour program since 1947

Varieties Curtain At 7:30; WillMakeHomecomingDebut

By Robert W. Smith

The curtain will be going up at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday for the eighth consecutive annual Vermont Varieties. This edition of the Varieties will have many new ' firsts,' including the first time that the show is to be presented on Homecoming week-end.

The early curtain will enable the show to finish at approximately 9:30 p.m. which still leaves time for fraternity-alumni Homecoming parties.

This year, also for the first time, the Varieties will be shown at Memorial Auditorium. Previously the show was presented at Southwick on two evenings. All efforts will be combined to present one giant Varieties on Saturday night in place of the usual Friday and Saturday night schedule.

Dr. Greg Falls, director of the show, has a new capacity in this production. While the show has previously been the "Master of Ceremonies type," Saturday's is to be entirely different. Several of the groups into the big show. Each of these groups has its own director, so Dr. Fall's job is also one of coordination.

Thurber Number

The University Choir, under the direction of Professor Howard G. Bennett, presented as part of the Varieties last Spring, was so well received that a return engagement has been requested and granted. The choir will sing three selections. A tradition at UVM, the choir is always prepared to highly entertain all listeners.

One of the newest organizations on campus, the Dance Workshop, is going all out too. This is to be their first Varieties performance; a production number based on James Thurber's "Unicorn In The Garden." In addition to this full-length routine. Miss Martha Howe, Dance Workshop director will be assisting other members of the Varieties with their dance routines for other parts of the show. Miss Carolyn Merritt will star in a strange and wierd dance entitled "Globule."

The rest of the show includes a guest magician from New York, and several revue-type numbers. Among the titles for the revues are "Roar 20's Roar," "Rock-a-bye," "P.J. Hideaway" and a parody on a radio give-away quiz program called "Whose Whozit?"

Miss Janice Bartholomew is business manager for the production, Marilyn Covell, Wakefield is stage manager, and Elli Levin and Bill Pope are her assistants. In charge of lighting will be Leslie Staring. Holly Noyes will handle the house and program committee. Publicity is in the hands of Justine Glover and Fred Norton is in charge of tickets. The Vermont Varieties are sponsored by the University Players for the Arena Fund.

Mortar Board Aids Library's New Purchase

The 1954 Mortar Board appropriated $200.00 to assist the University Libraries in purchasing a new film reading machine for the Billings Library. Sidney B. Smith, Director of Libraries, reports that the new machine, manufactured by Eastman Kodak and called a Recordak, has been purchased and installed in the Reference Room at Billings. Additional money needed to make the purchase was contributed by the Library Fellows, an organization make up of friends of the library who donate money every year to improve various parts of the library or its collections.

Indications of the need for the new Recordak have already been given when on a recent Saturday afternoon both the old and the new machine were in use for more than half the afternoon. "It is fortunate," Director Smith said, "that we have student organizations who are willing to help in the long-term task of making the libraries better and better."

Institute "Card-Cheering" At Football Clash Saturday

One hunred fifty card-waving freshmen will be sitting on the fifty yard line this Saturday as the Pep Committee starts its campaign to lift student spirit at Catamount athletic clashes.

The group has been practicing for the past week in an effort to perfect the difficult technique of synchronized card cheering. If the practice is a success and continued, UVM will be the only school in the New England area employing the system.

"We have the pep and spirit instilled in the freshman class now," said Bill Solomene of the Pep Committee. "They were really great at the pep rally and picnic."

"The sophomores should have some carry-over from last year, "added Dick Hill, also of the Pep Committee. "It would be a pity to lose the enthusiasm of these two classes, so we're really going allout this year."

There will be a rehearsal of the Card Cheering section today at 4 p.m. at Centennial.

The purpose is to practice the designs that will be shown on Saturday.

Anyone interested in Card Cheering may attend the rehearsal. In case of rain on Thursday afternoon, practice will be postponed until 4 p.m. on Friday.

Pennants, Balloons.

The Committee's plan was outlined by Solomene and Hill at last week's Student Association Council meeting. They asked for and received an allocation of $450 to cover the cost of necessary materials.

It is the Committee's intention to buy large lots of green and gold Vermont pennants and balloons, reselling them at very low cost at the home games. It is expected that the price will be so inviting that a large majority of fans will be wielding the colors.

A furthur investment being made by the committee comes in the nature of a custom

—Editorial—

Two years of searching were brought to an end last week as the University Senate voted to accept an " in principle " statement on Academic Freedom and Responsibility.

As an " in principle " vehicle for presenting the University's policy on academic freedom, per se, it does an admirable job. The wording is adequate, at times inspirational.

The right of dissent is defended tenaciously; indeed, it is stated, " Never is this duty more imperative than in those times when the public opinion of the community would restrain or curtail the free play of ideas."

That is the basis of the statement...the right of dissent. Incorporated into this " basic truth," are a number of other principles.

The University is called upon to defend the right of its members to think and express their thoughts freely. It is set forth that danger would exist if the flow of ideas, even those which are new and explosive, should cease.

" If they are explosive," the statement continues, " they are bound to be disconcerting, even painful to some on campus and to many beyond its borders. inevitably, they will be called dangerous by the timid and short-sighted."

In a way, the recent Congressional law declaring membership in the Communist Party illegal was a stroke of good luck for the committee. It left no need for any specific provisions in the new statement of policy as to dual membership in the Communist Party and the Teaching profession.

The question of whether or not " a Communist is automatically inimical to free inquiry " was therefore eliminated, as were the questions, " Is a Communist automatically dedicated to the overthrow of the government" and " Shall a Communist be allowed to teach in the colleges?".

In general, the air is a little clearer now. Professors may not hesitate to discuss a controversial subject, as has happened in the past. For if they should," Our faculty would no longer deserve the name of intellectuals and our students, regardless of degrees attained, could no longer claim to be educated. They would leave our campus accustomed only to the commonplace, satisfied with the mediocre, ignorant or afraid of ideas which catch fire."

And as the Senate on the top of the hill was reaffirming its belief in Academic Freedom, a group of " book-burners" down in the valley were violating the very principle upon which the University statement was based.

Last week, the Burlington Aldermen passed anordinance which in effect would ban 500 books, magazines, and comic-books from the shelves of Burlington book sellers. Comics and magazines include L'il Abner, Ripley's Believe It or Not, and Rin Tin Tin. In addition are Actual Confessions, Art Photography, and Zowie.

In their haste to set themselves up as the Vermont Office of the Hollywood Breen Agency, the alderman, we believe, have narrow-mindedly overstepped their bounds. We do not intend to be idealistic about the intentions of this group of men. We can understnaddtheir desire to keep crime comics, indecent magazines, and pornographic literature out of the reach of their children. But when this same group of gentlemen attempts to tell adults what to read and what not to read, that's something else again.

The problem extends further than mere authoritarianism, however.

A major concept which was overlooked by this "democratic" body is theprinciple embodied in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States --freedom of the press.

When this freedom is abrogated, a very dangerous precedent is set. The Aldermen have taken one of the many steps toward a 1984-type totalitarian state. It is just this freedom for which the democracies of the world have always, and are now fighting.

Further more, who is to say that crime or horror comics are bad forchildren's minds. Certainly, no conclusive evidence has yet been submitted by either side. Come now. Burlingtonians...is L'il Abner casting the dark spectre of horror or sex on your children. Your aldermen seem to think so. That reminds us. Someone had better cancel this Sunday's edition of the New York Daily Mirror...it does carry a whole page of L'il Abner comics.

Stepping back into the realm of the pocket novels, what do we find on the "verboten" list?

Topping the group is Willizm Faulkner's Sanctuary. Included are From Here to Eternity, A Stone for Danny Fisher, God Has a Long Face, and Lament of Four Virgins, Also Strange Fruit, Tobacco Road, Unconquered, and To Have and To Have Not.

Seems to us there are a few other gory or sensual ones left out. Better add most of Edgar Allen Poe, Crime and Punishment by Dostoievsky, and some of Jean Paul Satre's existentialist works. That is not to mention just about all the rest of the books that involve a man and women. Love. sex, and blood have been around for a long time. it seems that the Alderman have just started to read.

Fountain Fight

Because the University must be concerned with the safety and well-being of its students, it is strongly opposed to what is popularly known as "The Fountain Fight." Last year a student's jaw was splintered and two years ago a student's leg was fractured. Those who participate in such incidents may expect to be held responsible for any and all injury to persons or property which result and they may also expect to be subject to appropriate University discipline. This is particularly true of those who incite or lead such activity.

as i see it....

By Herzl Spiro

Last May the Supreme Court unanimously decided that the fifty-eight year old doctrine of separate but equal " schools for negroes is unconstitutional. Chief Justice Warren pointed out that " separate facilities are inherently unequal " thus causing many "to be deprived of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the fourteenth Amendment." The illegality of segregation in the public schools is thus established, but the wisdom of immediate desegregation is the subject of widespread debate.

When the court decision was first handed down, some of us "Yankees " may have unrealistically supposed that a Messianic Era was around the corner. We loudly hailed the destruction of bigotry and stupidity, and the advent of an age of understanding and tolerance....We were very, very wrong!

Eleven of the twenty one states practicing segregation are sitting tight until the Supreme Court gets down to the particulars of enforcing their edict next month. Progress in the other ten states is slow. Early this week police protection was called for by school officials in one Delaware town. Passive resistance was offered in other towns. Georgia's Governor Talmadge promises that desegregation will cause "more confusion, disorder, riots, and bloodshed than anything since the Civil War."

The South is caught "betwixt and between " the forces of two of its most powerful beliefs. On the one hand is the irrational, but traditionsanctioned custom of placing the negro in a nearly subhuman social category. On the other hand are the concepts of equality considered by a top notch sociologist like Dr. Kardner to be a basic trait of The American Culture Pattern. The South torn by these conflicting mores has been a land of contradictions, for the past fifteen years. Now, one of the customs has been given the sanction of law. The Southerner insisting upon segregation finds himself breaking the law of the land.

The same demagogue who was cited previously backed down under similar conditions. In 1952, The Supreme Court banned Jim Crow on interstate trains. Herman Talmadge promised to meet the first desegregated train that rolled into Georgia's state capital with the state militia. For two years now, trains have chugged in and out of Atlanta. The good governor hasn't strolled down, to the station yet! The social pressure of basic culture traits and laws is not easily resisted.

Not only are these social factors acting strongly to kill Jim Crow, but also an economic factor is now playing a part. The Piedmont Region of the South in recent years has experienced rapid industrialization. The modern

One phase of social life at Whitman College which come in for some mild criticism in the recently publiched management audit of the American Institute of Management was the sorority and fraternity situation. The audit represents the first time such a report has been done on a college. The AIM has been doing similar work for cities, churches and corporations for years.

The report states: "AIM feels that an excess amount of emphasis is placed upon sorority and fraternity life at Whitman--although this is done on an unusually democratic basis. One of the major faults is that the pledges are rushed too soon--in their first semester in fact--which only compounds the main problems of a new student. It is our observation that new pledges must not be rushed earlier than their second semester."

Fraternities at Oregon State College are expected to make provisions for a full-time resident housemother by September 1955, according to an announcement by Dean of Men Daniel W. Poling. It is believed that this will mark the first time the housemother plan for fraternities has become a part of administrative policy for any state-supported institution of higher learning in Oregon.

The new senior seminar at Haverford College, financed by a $29,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, will concentrate on one vital problem for three hours each week so that seniors who have been doing specialized work, in diverse fields may: 1) share some of their specialized methods of analysis with each other; and, 2) pool their insights and conclusions with respect to the problem under consideration.

The announcement further states that participants in the new senior seminar through sharing in this common educational experience will deepen their overall understanding by relating their individual contributions to the larger picture.

Question: What is your opinion of the "new" Student Lounge?

1. Mary Ann Tabor '57

As a student I can see and appreciate the expense put into the refurnishing of the lounge for us. It is very beautiful and comfortable. However, I, like many others, feel that there is just not enough room. Aside from the coffee shop, it's about the only place where we can go to relax and have a cigarette before classes or after lunch. When we go, it's full, and we end up standing around--therefore, practically unable to use those ashtrays. I say ---let's have more chairs.

2. Martin Klotz '56

Needless to say our new lounge is a welcome improvement over our past one. The only real gripe most of the students have is for a greater seating capacity. This, I believe, would bring back the card playing, smoke, and noise of the preceding years, and would definately be a mistake. I think that the lounge is nice now and should remain as it is for the future.

Rosenbush, Valenta, Tabor

Hauptman, Klotz

3. Joe Weedll '55

I especially think that for the amount of money spent on the lounge something more should have been added and by this, I mean more chairs, Granted, the lounge looks very nice, however, I'm sure one would appreciate its good looks a little more if one was able to sit down. If the lounge were set up in a similar fashion as it was last year, I'm sure that many more people would use it and enjoy it.

4. Babs Rosenbush '55

In my opinion, I think the new lounge is something U.V.M. has needed for a long time. I think the past improvement that has been made is certainly a step in providing the students with a clean, comfortable place in which to gather between classes. My only critizism would concern the need for more chairs, as the room seems quite empty at the moment. I hope that the students who use the room will treat it like a room in their own home, so that our new lounge will not become a replica of the previous one.

5. Joe Valenta '56

It is in my opinion, a great improvement over the way it was furnished and decorated in my first two years at U.V.M. Now it is really a lounge and not just a place to play cards and sit out periods between classes. The only thing is that now that it's fixed up so nice, I hope we keep it that way and not let it turn back into what it was previously.

6. Thomas Hall '55

The great improvement in the lounge makes it more congenial and adds to a much more social feeling. I believe, as a student, that such a improvement makes one feel more strongly towards the school in that they want you to enjoy school as well as benefit scholasticaly from it.

7. Marie Hauptman '55

I feel that the complete overhaul which was given to the lounge over the summer is a tremendous improvement. Instead of the smoke filled den of iniquity which I used to encounter, the lounge has become a clear and quiet room to relax in. My only suggestion would be to get some more chairs so that more student could enjoy it.

8. Edward E. Frost Jr. '57

Not having seen the lounge prior to this year I have nothing by way of comparison. But, as anyone can see who has been in the lounge, it's an appealing room for students and faculty to meet their friends in an atmosphere quite unlike many of the rooms around the University.

FOOTBALL THROUGH THE AGES

The football frenzy is upon us. But let us, in the midst of this pandemonium, call time. Let us pause for a moment of tranquil reflection. What is this game called football? What is its history? Its origins? Its traditions? These are not idle questions, for when we have the answers we will appreciate even more fully, enjoy even more deeply, this great American game of football.

First of all, to call football an American game is somewhat misleading. True, the game is now played almost exclusively in America, but it comes to us from a land far away and a civilization long dead.

Football was first played in ancient Rome. Introduced by Julius Caesar, it became one of the most popular Roman sports by the time of Nero's reign. The eminent historian Sigafoos reports a crowd of MMCLDDXVIII people at the Colosseum one Saturday afternoon to see the Christians play the Lions.

With the decline of the Roman empire football fell into disuse. The barbaric Huns and Goths preferred canasta. However, by the Twelfth Century A.D. football had emerged from its twilight and risen to its rightful place in the firmament of European pastimes. The eminent historian Sigafoos reports that the whole continent was in the grip of wild excitement in the year 1192 when the Crusaders, under Freddie Barbarossa, journeyed all the way to Damascus to play the Saracens in the Fig Bowl game. The Crusaders squeaked through, 23 to 21, on a field goal by Dick Coeur de Lion in the closing seconds of the game.

October 21, 1512, will ever remain a red letter day in the history of football. On that day Leonardo da Vinci, who has often been called "The Renaissance Man" because of his proficiency in a hundred arts and sciences, was painting a picture of a Florentine lady named Mona Lisa Schultz. "Listen, Mona baby," he said as she struck a pose for her portrait, "I keep telling you—don't smile. Just relax and look natural."

"But I'm not smiling," she replied.

"Well, what do you call it?" he said.

"Gee, I don't know," said Mrs. Schultz. "It's just an expression, kind of."

"Well, cut it out." said The Renaissance Man.

"I'll try," she promised.

And try she did, but without success, for a moment later the artist was saying to her, "Look, Mona kid, I'm not gonna ask you again. Wipe that silly grin off your face."

"Honest to goodness, The Renaissance Man," said she to him, "it's no grin. It's just the way I look."

"Well, just stop it," said Leonard testily and turned away to mix his pigments.

When he turned back to Mona Lisa and saw the smile still on her face, he became so enraged that he seized the nearest object a casava melon, as it happened—and hurled it at her with all his strength. Showing great presence of mind, she caught the melon and ran with it from the studio until The Renaissance Man's temper should cool.

This was, of course, the first completed forward pass.

Another date dear to the hearts of all football fans is September 29, 1442. It was on this date, according to the eminent historian Sigafoos, that a sixteen year old lad named Christopher Columbus tried out for the football team at Genoa Tech. He failed to make the team because he was too light. (He weighed at that time only 12 pounds.)

And why, you ask, is this date—September 29, 1442—so dear to the hearts of all football fans? Because young Columbus was so heartbroken at not making the team that he ran away to sea. And if that hadn't happened, he never would have discovered America. And if Columbus hadn't discovered America, the world never would have discovered tobacco. And if the world hadn't discovered tobacco, football fans never would have discovered Philip Morris—which, as every fan knows, is the perfect companion to football. As Sigafoos, the eminent historian, says, "Land's sakes, I can't even imagine football without Philip Morris. I'd sooner go to a game without my raccoon coat than without my neat, rich tobacco-brown snap-open pack of mild vintage Philip Morris Cigarettes which come in regular or king-size at prices young and old can afford. Land's sakes!"

The end of football in Europe came with the notorious "Black Sox Scandal" of 1587, in which Ed Machiavelli, one of the Pisa mob, paid off the University of Heidelberg Sabres to throw the championship game to the Chartres A. and M. Gophers. It was a mortal blow to football on the continent.

But the game took hold in the American colonies and thrived as it had never thrived before. Which brings us to another date that remains evergreen in the hearts of football lovers: December 16, 1771.

On that date a British packet loaded with tea sailed into Boston harbor. The colonies had long been smarting under the English king's tax on tea. "Taxation without representation," they called it, and feelings ran high.

When on December 16, 1771, the British ship docked at Boston, a semi-pro football team called the Nonpareil Tigers, coached by Samuel (Swifty) Adams, was scrimmaging near the harbor. "Come, lads," cried Swifty, seeing the ship. "Let's dump the tea in the ocean!"

With many a laugh and cheer the Nonpareil Tigers followed Swifty aboard and proceeded to dump the cargo overboard in a wild, disorganized and abandoned manner. "Here now!" called Swifty sharply. "That's no way to dump tea overboard. Let's get into some kind of formation."

And that, fans, is how the "T" formation was born.

President's Message, Senate Loyalty Statement

Borgmann Message

To: Members of the University Senate.
From: Carl W. Borgmann

I can claim little pride of authorship in the resolution now before you - but I will state that I am in general accord with the principles enunciated. Certainly a broad statement of policy on academic freedom and responsibility is better, over the long term, than the pinpointing of particular aspects.

I, too, am concerned that academic freedom be preserved. I repeat my statement of August 29, 1953:

"The future of American higher education is tied to the tradition of academic freedom - of that there can be no doubt. When a competent faculty member no longer can teach what his own original studies and his independent critical appraisal of the studies of other scholars lead him to believe, we are well on the way to a sterile decadence, not only in our schools but in our country. One needs only to point to what happened to higher education in Nazi Germany and to what undoubtedly is happening in Soviet Russia today, to illustrate the point. It should be stressed also that a faculty member worth his salt is likely to be a controversial individual. His findings and conclusions in his special field of competance may appear to the man in the street as heresy, simply because they happen to differ from the generally accepted opinion of the day. Faculty members, naturally, and all freedom-loving people of our country, should strenuously defend the freedom to inquire into any question and to teach the findings. Such has been the life blood of Western higher education for over four centuries.

The resolution presented by by our committee has been recommended as a substitution for the policy adopted by the Trustees on April 10, 1953.

I believe that fairness to you and to the Trustees demands from me a statement indicating how the proposed resolution can properly take the place of present policy. The present policy reads as follows:

1. No known Communist will be permitted on the staff of the University.

2. Any faculty member claiming privilege under the Fifth Amendment will be immediately relieved of his teaching duties. A faculty-trustee committee will be set up at once to investigate the circumstances of the case, and upon its recommendation appropriate action will be taken.

3. A faculty member who admits previous membership in the Communist party, but who now claims that he is no longer a member, will be investigated by a faculty-trustee committee who will make recommendations on his fitness to continue on the staff of the University.

4. A person who is charged with being a Communist and who denies under oath any such connection will be investigated by the faculty-trustee committee should evidence be presented to indicate the possibility of perjury.

Part of the above, namely the establishment of fact-finding committees, has already been superseded by the adoption of the new "Termination Procedure" by the Senate and the Trustees.

Congress has recently enacted legislation known as the "Communist Control Act of 1954" covering the policy statements numbered 1, 3, and 4. Section 4 of this Act reads as follows:

"Whoever knowingly and willfully becomes or remains a member of (1) the Communist Party, or (2) any other organization having for one of its purposes or objectives the establishment, control, conduct, seizure, or overthrow of the Government of the United States, or the government of any State or political subdivision thereof, by the use of force or violence, with knowledge of the purpose or objective of such organization shall be subject to all the provisions and penalties of the Internal Security Act of 1950, as amended, as a member of a 'Communist-action' organization."

As membership in the Communist party is now illegal in the United States, there is no longer need for the specific statements of our present policy, any more than there is for a statement that a faculty member should not commit murder.

This leaves the problem of the use of the Fifth Amendment by faculty members. Some hold that the claiming of privilege places on the professor a heavy burden of proof of his fitness to hold a teaching position. I personally feel that, depending on the facts of the case, the University might well wish to re-examine his qualifications using the procedures already established.

In August, 1953, the Trustees, to clarify the record, voted unanimously against a motion which stated that "the act of invoking the Fifth Amendment is in and of itself, cause for dismissal." However, as I tried to point out last August, the claiming of privilege before any legally constituted body makes the investigations before a faculty-trustee fact-finding committee difficult. Our procedures properly call for all such hearings to be "on the record" and consequently free inquiry by the University group may be impossible with an individual who has claimed privilege. Thus, we are confronted with a faculty member being unable or unwilling to talk freely with his colleagues - a situation which I feel to be improper for a member of a "profession that claims for itself the fullest freedom to speak" and to be possible cause for dismissal.

Senate's Academic Freedom Statement

We, the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, in the spirit and tradition of free universities throughout the world, are agreed upon the following statement of principles on academic freedom and responsibility.

We believe that incorporation of these principles into the Organization of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College will re-emphasize the importance of academic freedom to the basic health of the University, and also serve as a statement of policy on the rights and responsibilities of faculty members at this institution. It has been our intent to state these principles in terms broad enough so that they may be valid not only in these critical times when academic freedom and personal liberty are in jeopardy both at home and abroad, but also in the future insofar as the future can be foreseen.

1. The Necessity of Academic Freedom in Higher Education.

The main purpose of a university has always been, must always be, to stimulate the thinking and the creative powers of its students and its faculty. As an institution it deals in ideas, not only old and accepted ones but new ones that may be full of explosive power. If they are explosive they are bound to be disconcerting, even painful to some on the campus and to many beyond its borders. Inevitably they will be called dangerous by the timid and short-sighted. But to those who really believe in the fruitfulness of human thought, the real danger would appeal only if the flow of such ideas should cease. For then indeed sterility would have taken over our campus. Our faculty would no longer deserve the name of intellectuals and our students regardless of degrees attained, could no longer claim to be educated. They would leave our campus accustomed only to the commonplace, satisfied with the mediocre, ignorant or afraid of ideas which catch fire. Academic Freedom is therefore not solely a right or privilege of the faculty but is the fulfillment of the obligation on the part of the university to provide an atmosphere in which intellectual growth may take place.

11. Academic Freedom and Special Responsibilities of Faculty Members.

We subscribe to the following statement on academic freedom and the responsibilities of faculty members adopted by the American Association of University Professors:

"The teacher is entitled to full freedom in research and in the publication of the results, subject to the adequate performance of his other academic duties; but research for pecuniary return should be based upon an understanding with the administration of the institution.

The teacher is entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing his subject, but he should be careful not to introduce into his teaching controversial matter which has no relation to his subject. Limitations of academic freedom because of religious or other aims of the institution should be clearly stated in writing at the time of the appointment.

The teacher is a citizen, a member of a learned profession and an officer of this institution. When he speaks or writes as a citizen he should be free from institutional censorship or discipline, but his special position in the community imposes special obligations. As a man of learning and an educational officer he should remember that the public may judge his profession and his institution by his utterances. Hence he should at all times be accurate, should exercise appropriate restraint, should show respect for the opinions of others, and should make every effort to indicate that he is not an institutional spokesman."

In addition there are recognized qualifications which must be attained and maintained before the privilege of being a member of the academic profession can be considered a permanent one: satisfactory performance as a teacher, scholarship and high moral standards.

111. Responsibility of the Institution to the Faculty.

The university must defend tenaciously the right of its members to think and express their thoughts freely and to make those choices within the law guaranteed to every citizen. This includes the right of dissent since any democratic institution ceases to merit the name democratic when this fundamental right is denied. Never is this duty more imperative than in those unhappy times when the public opinion of the community would restrain or curtail the free play of ideas. The universities whose roots extend back into the centuries, have a tradition and a duty to maintain an independence or judgement in the face of public emotion. While the universities must be sensitive to the needs of the community and nation, they need not and should not abrogate their position of leadership. This duty of the institution has never been so well stated as by Thomas Jefferson in his letter to prospective faculty members at the University of Virginia: "For here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor tolerate error so long as reason is free to combat it."

1V. Academic Freedom and Tenure.

Tenure is an indispensible precondition for academic freedom. It is, in fact, a guarantee that the institution subscribes to the principle of academic freedom, and that its members may not be dismissed without adequate cause. Termination of tenure should occur only in cases of bona fide financial exigency in the University or when it has been demonstrated that the teacher lacks professional or moral fitness.

In the interpretation and the application of these principles we shall expect the university authorities to be quick to protect its heritage of academic freedom, in doubtful cases remembering that an excess of freedom is always less dangerous than an excess of constraint.

Law And Graduate School Examinations Announced

The Law School Admission Test required of applicants for admission to a number of leading American law schools , will be given at more than 100 centers throughout the United States on the mornings of November 13, 1954 February 19, April 23, and August 6, 1955. During 1953-54 some 8200 applicants took this test, and their scores were sent to over 100 law schools.

A candidate must make separate application for admission to each law school of his choice and should inquire of each whether it wishes him to take the Law School Admission Test, and when. Since many law schools select their freshman classes in the spring preceding their entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised ordinarily to take either the November or the February test, if possible.

Bulletins and applications for the test should be obtained four to six weeks in advance of the desired testing date from Law School Admission Test, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.H. Completed applications must be received at least ten days before the desired testing date in order to allow ETS time to complete the necessary testing arrangements for each candidate.

The Graduate Record Examinations, required of applicants for admission to a number of graduate schools, will be administered at examination centers throughout the country four times in the coming year. Educational Testing Service has announced. During 1953-54 nearly 9,000 students took the GRE in partial fulfillment of admission requirements of graduate schools which prescribed it.

This fall candidates may take the GRE on Saturday, November 20. In 1955, the dates are January 27, April 30, and July 9. ETS advises each applicant to inquire of the graduate school of his choice which of the examinations he should take and on which dates. Applicants for graduates school fellowships should ordinarily take the designated examinations in the fall administration.

Application forms and a Bulletin of Information, which provides details of registration and administration as well as sample questions, may be obtained from college advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J., or P.O. Box 27896, Los Angeles 27, California. A completed application must reach the ETS office at least fifteen days before the date of administration for which the candidate is applying.

Davis To Address AIC; Morgan To Be On Screen

The animal Industry Club has organized itself for an active program this year.

Several prominent men are scheduled to visit the organization; among these, Mr. Ted Davis. Mr. Davis will talk to the club about the management and breeding of horses. However, much of the meeting will be spent in viewing pictures taken of the National Morgan Horse Show. The Morgan Horse was developed in Vermont. Mr. Davis takes an interest in this animal, and spends much of his time breeding them.

Another guest who will visit the club this year is Mr. John Teal. This past summer, Mr. Teal, a renowned explorer, investigated the wilds of Alaska.

Adult Education Post Goes To Professor Lyman Rowell

Lyman S. Rowell, Summer Session director at the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, has been named director of the Adult Education Program at UVM, President Carl W. Borgmann recently announced.

Prof. Rowell, who has been Summer Session director at UVM since 1951 and who directed the inaugural program of the Warren R. Austin Institute during the past summer, will continue teaching embryology and histology courses in the Zoology Department.

Rowell, who succeeds Eugene Eakin, reports that a "complete list of courses to be offered during the fall semester is now being drawn up and will be announced shortly."

He states that while the "major objective of the Adult Education Program will be community service," it is planned to offer some courses for undergraduate and graduate credit as well as a variety for noncredit.

Primarily, the Program will try to offer the "kind of course that will be of interest to adults who wish to extend knowledge and information, without the need of credit." Courses will be available to communities throughout the state as well as on the UVM campus, Rowell states, and he adds that he will welcome suggestions from interested persons concerning particular courses, lectures or programs they would be interested in having available.

India Comes To Vermont

For two performances last Saturday, Mr. Ram Gopal brought a bit of southern India's rich culture to the state of the Fleming Museum theater in the form of the classical temple dance. Clad in exotic, authentic costumes and accompanied by tape recorded temple music, Mr. Gopal not only danced but also gave a short talk on the history and wealth of symbols involved in the 6,000 year old tradition.

Symbolism of movement bared

The Museum's less-than-capacity audiences paid close attention to the bare-footed Gopal as he unfolded the meanings of some of the basic symbols used in the temple dance. He demonstrated the simple, yet eloquently expressive gestures which are the Indian priests' mode of communication.

"The hands are by far the most expressive part of the Indian dancer's body" said Mr. Gopal as he proceeded to represent a fly and than an elephant with them. "Next in importance are the individual features of the face" he explained. "The new student of the dance must learn perfect control of each eye brow, eyelid and eyeball as well as the nose, cheeks and mouth. Not to be underestimated is that tricky little side to side neck movement which interests you westerners so much."

Included in the program were Vishnu Tanadava, Malappu, Thillana, the Dance of Creation, Ajonta Fresco, and the Setting Sun.

Airs views on Int'l Situation Informally

After the performance, Mr. Gopal, dressed in blue jeans and a bright green flannel sport shirt chatted with several members of the audience about his future plans and ideas on present relations between the U.S. and India.

"I was surprised to learn of the average American's ignorance about India. We have much to learn from each other's cultures and philosophies, which is especially important at this critical juncture in history. It is an old observation that ignkrance breeds suspicion while understanding does away with misunderstanding."

Mr. Gopal plans to return to the U.S. for a tour with a company of 50 temple dancers next year. The UVM Dance Workshop sponsored Gopal's presentation.

Hylton, Plender Stein Named As KW Directors

Bob Hylton, George Plender, and Stan Stein have been chosen the Kake Walk directors for the coming year. They have already started making plans for the jazz concert, dance and other features of the big event scheduled for February 17, 18, and 19.

Bob Hylton Sr., a member of SAE was assistant director last year in charge of auditorium arrangements. He comes from Manhasset and is an agricultural economics major. He gained experience last in managing from his chairmanship of the Junior Week peerade Committee. This year he is also Secretary-Treasurer of the IFC, Vice-President of SAE, and on the Kakewalk Disposition Fund Committee.

George Plender Sr., from Tenafly, N.J., is also captain of the baseball team and President of the Varsity Club. While pitcher for the team last year he made an unofficial record last year by pitching 57 scoreless innings. He is in the advanced ROTC and is a marketing and merchandising major. Last year George was assistant director in charge of publicity and programming.

Stan Stein is a pre medical majoring student in psychology. He comes from brooklyn. Last year Stan was the assistant director in charge of tickets and awards. He made dean's list, as well as being the chairman for the arrangements for the homecoming dance. This year he is President of IFC, Bolder Society, TEP. He is also a member of the Joint Social Activities Committee and the Kake Walk Disposition Fund committee.

Lounge Future Unpredictable

Future plans for the lounge have yet to be decided. This will depend, in part, on the opinion of the student body, as well as administrative needs. It is felt by some that in the relatively near future some provision will have to be made for either an enlarged lounge, or for some type of complete student center, perhaps devoting the entire lower floor of Waterman to this use.

But as for the present lounge, almost everybody seems satisfied, and, as stated by Mr. Hardy, "It is certainly something that S.A., the entire student body, and all visitors can well be proud of. It is certainly one strong link in the general trend of progress that is moving the school along."

factory system has no room for the innefficiency which results from inequality of opportunity. Thus the Southern white worker, with increasing frequency, is finding himself working with or even working under the supervision of negroes. Will these same southern white workers now turn around, break the law, oppose principles set down the Constitution and Declaration of Independence and engage in violent action to keep black and white separate?

It would seem that if a gradualistic approach to the problem is used, violence may for the most part be avoided. Ten states and the District of Columbia demonstrated that fact this month.

Army Khaki Turns To White As Shirt Shortage Prevails

By David Spector

Notice how fashionable the ROTC has become lately? Last Friday the campus was treated to a show as the Army put on a premeditated style exhibit. Not that a fashion exhibition was the original idea, but there just were not enough regulation shirts available for the entire corps.

Rather than let the cadets appear on the drill field in "civies," the officers decided to permit white shirts instead of the usual tanish-brownish-grays. Some of the cadets, impressed by this new found freedom from regulation clothing continued the revolt right down to the bootstraps. Well socks at least. These students, mainly naive frosh, wore plaid, I repeat, plaid hose. Some sported stripes, while others were squares, but the predominant figuration was a definite plaid.

A word of advice to these new recruits. It won't work. Plaid shows up too well against a background of regulation slacks and shoes. Now it might not matter, but the Army, no doubt fearing matching plaid, I repeat, plaid, rifle butts and headgear, might decide to exercise their inherent weapon of control, demerits. And so frosh, I am sure that without consulting older and no doubt wiser sophs, you know what happens when the demerits pile up.

And what about the sister service, the AFROTC? What is their reaction to the new style trend. Well nobody wanted to comment, or for that matter seemed at all interested. Last year there was a movement underfoot to wear varicolored bowties instead of the satorial masterpieces normally requested in the rule book, but nothing much ever came of this movement. Perhaps it was the realization that a plaid bowtie would definitely clash with the sedate blue blouse and jackets.

Then there was the plan to dye all shoes a yellowish brown to match Vermont mud but thats another story...

Union Ties Vermont In 14-14 Knot In Grid Opener; Cats Face Tough Maine In Homecoming Game Saturday

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

Old time stuff always interests me. There's nothing so stimulating as history. UVM's athletic history is certainly no exception.

UVM, DARTMOUTH SERIES

I was looking over the old football record books in Ed Bartlett's office the other day and I came up with some good reading matter. UVM had some tough grid schedules in it's day. For a period of about twenty years, during the early 1900's, the Green and Gold took many a licking. For instance, between the years 1898 - 1930, the Catamounts faced Dartmouth twenty-six times, winning only once.

CATS PLAY IVY LEAGUE

We've had our run ins with just about all of the Ivy leaguers. Back in 1910, Vermont dropped a game to Cornell, 15-5. It wasn't until 1928 that we tried another Ivy leaguer on our schedule. But the results were the same: Columbia 20 - UVM 0. Princeton 50 - UVM 0. The next season we gave Yale a try and we lost by only an 89-0 count. They outdid the Harvard boys for in 1930 the Crimson could only score 35 points against us. But all was not black on our side. For, as most of us don't remember, the early 1900's was a time when the Ivy League was considered tops on the gridiron. The history books hold stories even more stimulating than the above. From time to time, when I find things lagging (which happens often in this column) I'll try to insert some of this stimulation. Gee - don't look so glum, we did beat Dartmouth once.

GRIDDERS CONFORM

According to trainer shorty Coty, this year's Catamount football squad has conformed to the latest UVM fad - diarrhea. It seems that the entire campus has been struck by the virus. Shorty credits the epidemic to the fact that the recent hurricanes have upset our resevoirs, causing a reaction from our drinking water.

COTY PRAISES TEAM

Shorty also commended that he feels this year's squad is the best he's seen for a long time and its only trouble should come from Maine and Norwich. It's in tip top physical condition coming through pre-season training without one major injury. Shorty says that he uses about $60.00 worth of supplies a week on just minor irritations. This includes bills for bandages, tape, gauze, liniaments, cold tablets etc. Hats go off to Shorty Cote - the man who holds Saturday's hero together.

HOMECOMING GAME

According to "Football Pictorial", a National Magazine, UVM is the underdog in the Homecoming game with Maine. I still pick Vermont, 13-6, on the light of Maine's loss of Ace Ed Bogdanovich who manhandled the Cats for the past two seasons. I think the Cats got a raw deal last week at Union. For, despite their poor defense and their inability to cash in at certain points, they were victims of a few puzzling penalties. The referees called two "illegal procedure" penalties and four "backfield in motions". According to reliable sources, the officials were unable to inform Coach Donnelly as to the reasons for these calls. The important fact is that these unexplainable "yard losers" were called at crucial points in the game. - "Ma Cherie" - For those who know, there's nothing like "Cherie" after a UVM football game.

Statistics Lie As Catamounts Fail To Cash In

by Ed Willard

Some good breaks and a small but spirited Union "Dutchmen" team combined last Saturday to give Union a 14-14 tie with a favored UVM team, as the two met at Alexander field in Schenectady. Despite an overwhelming edge in statistics, Vermont was forced to settle with a tie, in what should have been, according to the experts, an overwhelming victory. Catamount backs, Capt. Ed Nemer and Ed. Beck ran beautifully at times with Al McLam not only running but kicking expertly. As it was however the outweighed Dutchmen led by sensational quarterback Don Reed proved to be a smooth running ballclub.

Cats Drive Stopped

The Catamounts took the opening Kick-off and after respective 27 and 30 yard pass plays from Semans to Beck, they were deep in Union Territory. Here, interception by Reed behind his own goal line stopped the UVM offense.

In the second quarter, interference was ruled on a long Reed to Sawyer pass to the Vermont 12 yard line. This set up the first score of the game and with the placement it was 7-0 Union. The Catamounts then scored their two touchdowns in rapid fashion, one on a beautiful Semans to McLam pass which carried from the Vermont 27 to the Union 31 yard line. A series of runs produced the score with McLam's placement making it 7- 7. McLam then kicked off into the Union end zone. Union punted with Beck carrying the ball back to the Union 36 setting up the second UVM score. Here again, a Semans to McLam pass clicked with the score going to 13-7. After McLam's placement made it 14-7 Vermont at the half.

Union Knots Count

The third quarter saw a sporadic Vermont defense and some fine pitchout plays from the sensational Reed to halfback Jim Feldmaier produce the tying touchdown and end the scoring for the day.

Two Vermont scoring threats were erased in the fourth quarter, the first coming on long running plays by Nemer and McLam. Here Vermont was stopped on fourth down, goal to go. After a Vermont punt, McLam intercepted deep in UVM territory and the Cats began to move. The drive was stopped again just inches short of the goal as Nemer fumbled with a minute remaining in the game. The clock ended it. Final score; Vermont 14, Union 14.

AS I SAW IT

by Ed Willard

UVM's "Mr. Athlete", Al McLam played his usual whale of a game. Two placements and two kickoffs into the Union end- zone.

Semans threw just one pass to his ends. Natalino, we miss you.

The Catamount down field blocking was fine in places.

Big Salt Johnson played a fine game with Harry Bauman and Bill Farwell showing well in their first varsity appearance.

Union's quarterback Don Reed is from Brandon Vermont and he goes with a UVM girl. Must have caught a train going in the wrong direction.

Hate to be a weeper but Union sure seemed to get the breaks.

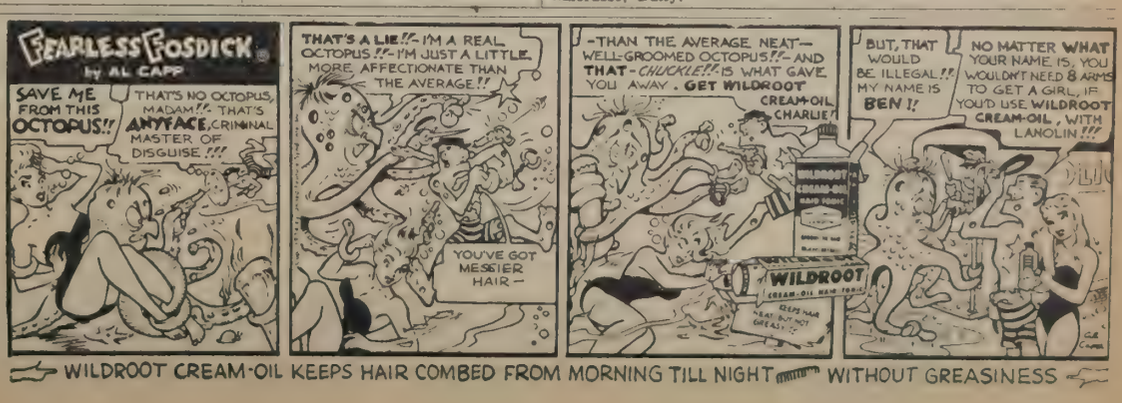
Out To Revenge Last Years Loss To Black Bears

by MARK BERNSTEIN



This weekend the UVM Catamounts take on the Black Bears from Maine in what may very well be the most important clash of the season. Vermont will be out to revenge last years conference loss and also prove that the improvement in this years team is not just hearsay. Maine, being one of the two Yankee Conference teams that the Cats play would definitely be a very worthwhile victim. The Cats have been playing Maine since 1910 and show a dismal 2-6-1 record. For the last four years the Black Bears have beaten Vermont consecutively but this year the story might be a little different.

Bears Use Sophs

For Maine it's a rebuilding job for Coach Hal Westerman, and sophomores will play the key roles. The situation though is far from hopeless with the Little All-American Tommy Golden at Guard. For the first time in years the Bears will take an underdog role in Conference play. Nevertheless, Vermont is not underestimating them.

YC Test

For the Catamounts a victory over Maine would start them on the upgrade toward Yankee Conference Championship play in future years. As of now the Cats are not playing enough Conference games to win a championship this season. But Vermont has resumed their rivalry with Massachusetts and hope to add Rhode Island next year and New Hampshire in 1956. Once back as a "playing member" of the Conference the Catamounts will be eligible for the annual "Bean Pot". The importance of this weekends game is self-explanatory, from here on in its all up to Eddie Nemer and company.

Cross Country Team Opens Saturday Against R. P. I.

Meet The Varsity

by DICK STEIN

ED NEMER

Returning for his third year of Varsity competition, and this season's captain elect, is big Ed Nemer. Coach Donnelly has switched the 21 year old senior, from Lewiston N.Y. from half to full back, to fill the spot vacated by the graduation of last year's captain, Jim Montgomery. Last season, Ed was the team's second ground gainer behind "Diamond Jim".

"Pedro", as his team mates nicknamed him, stands five feet ten inches and weighs 175 pounds. Ed, a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, is enrolled in the Industrial Management course of the school of Technology.

Four Sports

"Steady Eddy" learned his athletics at Niagara Falls and Bishop Duffy High Schools, earning his Varsity letters in football, baseball, basketball, and swimming. In his senior year, "Big Ed" was voted All Catholic Western New York State in baseball and football.

Coach Donnelly expects big things from his veteran back field of Semans, Beck, McLam, and hard running full back Ed Nemer.

MIKE SEMANS

Mike Semans, from his quarter back position, is again at the helm of the '54 Catamount team. A Boston Mass. resident, the 21 year old "field Captain "stands five feet ten inches and tips the scales at 175 pounds. Mike, who is a member of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity and Gold Key Honorary, finished last season seventh in the nation in small colleges, in pass completions. He is now in his senior year and is studying for his degree in civil engineering.

All Boston

Mike, a product of Boston Institute, was voted on the All Boston Football Team in '50 and '51 and also made the All Scholastic nine in 1951.

The Catamount's "field general" comes from a well known football family. His father, the late Henry "Sammy" Semansky won his fame at an end position here at UVM., during the '23 and '24 seasons.

Although he lost through graduation, his ace pass receiver Nat Campana, Coach Donnelly feels that through the use of his speedy halfbacks as targets, Mike will again be one of the nation's top small college passers.

— Sports Question Box —

by Ed Walker

Question - Your prediction of the Maine vs. Vermont football game and why?

Ada Pratt Class of 1957

I think that it will be a close game. Although Maine won last year, we have improved a lot and have a good team so should give them a tough time. I think the score will be about 14-13 in favor of UVM.

Bob Millman Class of 1955

I believe Vermont will take Maine by two touchdowns. Although we have lost "Diamond Jim Montgomery and star end Nat Campana there are adequate replacements available. Besides our line has improved tremendously. The score will be 26-14.

Robert H. Kroepsch, Dean of Administration

It will be a very good game! There is no doubt of the outcome!

Sandy Winterberger Class of 1958

I think we'll win because UVM hasn't won in 6 years, and we're about due for a change.

Frank Adamo Class of 1956

Maine's very good; we're just good - therefore, Maine will win. (My brother thinks so too).

Footmen Led By Damon, Grady; Veterans Return

by Fred Solomon

On October 2, the U.V.M. Cross-Country team will initiate its fall season against Rensselaer at the Cat's home course. The Vermont course has been lengthened so that it is now 4.35 miles long, a more gruelling challenge to the participants. This is the fourth meeting between the two schools.

Fourth Meet

Last year Vermont defeated R.P.I. 23 to 36. The race was won by Rensselaer's Gottschall, Vermont's Grady was second, Wadley of Vermont third, Davies of R.P.I. fourth, Joyner of Vermont fifth, with Vermont's Saurwein and Damon finishing sixth and seventh respectively. The year before last R.P.I. was also beaten by the Catamounts. However, in the initial meeting, Rensselaer turned the tables on the Cats.

Vets Back

This years varsity is led by Captain Larry Damon and Don Grady. Both of these boys run the distances for Archie Post's spring aggregation and should really produce this season, according to Post. John Grover, Ken Wadley, Ray Tafrate, Dave Stephens, and John Fitzpatrick are the remaining men on whom Coach Post is banking more than a few hopes. The squad is smaller this year than in previous seasons which naturally leads to a lack of depth in fourth and fifth place finishers. According to Coach Post the teams have been smaller for the last few seasons, however he feels this team has a lot of overall potential.

Since this is the first meet of the season for both R.P.I. and Vermont, it is difficult to summarize the opponents strength.

The Phi Delts have experien ce in Maccini and Walgren b graduation and varsity footba took their toll and first plac just doesn't seem to be in th picture this year.

The remaining teams shoul finish something like this: Pi Sigma Delta, SAE, Sigma Pi Epsilon, Owls and Acacia.

In League "B", howeve it's a different story to say th least. It looks like a three wa scramble right down to the wi between Kappa Sig, Sigma N and TEP.

Dean Carrigan Keynotes Round Table Meetings

Dean J.E. Carrigan, of the College of Agriculture will lead a discussion on changes at UVM at the first Round Table meeting of the year. The discussion will follow a dinner which will be served at six in the Klifa Club.

According to Max Ansbacher, Round Table President, "Dean Carrigan is an excellent discussion leader, and also a person who is very well informed on the relationship of the State of Vermont to the University." Max went on to say, "We expect from the number of students who have expressed an interest in the Round Table this year that we will have a good attendance for the first meeting. It should finish in time for one to go also to the Welcome Dance."

The Round Table is described by the Freshman Handbook as a "faculty--student group which meets regularly for the purpose of discussing philosophical, social, or political problems of interest to its members...Among other things Round Table tries to achieve a closer relationship between the faculty and the student body."

Many people consider that this chance to see the faculty away from the classroom is one of the most valuable functions of the organization. Commenting on this, Max Ansbacher said, "Not only do the students benefit, but many of the faculty have told me how much they enjoyed meeting the students in this new setting."

Anyone may come to the meeting, provided that they make a reservation before noon Friday by putting a slip of paper with his name on it in the Round Table Box in the Waterman Building information office. The charge for the dinner is one dollar.

Museum Shows Chaplin, Webb In 'Contrasts'

One of the most popular and important activities at the Robert Hull Fleming Museum is the annual motion picture series. The first program this year was on September 20 and presented "The Motion Picture as Popular Art." "Morocco," starring Marlene Dietrich as the siren and Gary Cooper as the red blooded American youth, was shown to point out the standard ingredients of the typical Hollywood movie. Dr. Allan Gowans, Director of the Museum, gave a brief explanation of the topic of the evening and illustrated it with slides.

"Contrasts in Comedy" on October 27, will be the second movie in the series. Clifton Webb in "Mr. Belvedere Goes To College" and Charlie Chaplin in "The Doorwalker" will illustrate the wide scope of entertaining possibilities present in the motion picture.

The third program, "Museum Problems in Motion Pictures,"

Hold Elections For Councilmen; Petitions Ready

Student Association will soon hold an election to choose ten council members According to John Burgess, Chairman of the elections committee, petitions will be available tomorrow to those wishing to run.

Candidates will have one week in which to collect one hundred signatures for their petitions from members of their class. There are three freshman and sophomore openings, and two junior and senior positions. All will serve for a term of one year.

There is no limit to the campaign expenses. However this year the rule prohibiting banners of any kind will be enforced. According to Burgess any infractions of the election committee rules will be turned over to the student court for prosecution.

Formal campaigning is strictly limited to the two days before the election.

Last year twenty-one freshmen ran for the offices of councilmen. "We hope that the interest in this year's freshman class will be just as great as it was last year, and that last year's freshman class will keep up its interest this year," said John Burgess.

Student Association Council Votes Against Awards For Students

Dave O'Brien

Veep O'Brien Gave Resolution

The Student Association Council voted once again last Thursday against allowing SA supported organizations to reward its outstanding members with material benefits. The vote was a close 7-6.

Voting against the resolution were councilmen Lorna Dean, Marilyn Hinsdale, Liz Seamans, John Burgess, Joan Armstrong, Lynn Egar, and Carl Brown.

On the affirmative were Ralph DesLaurier, David O'Brien, Lew Dan, Jean Morrison, Mike Princer and Doug Burke.

In line with its present policy, such things as keys, plaques or trophies will not be paid for by Student Association funds. Any awards of this sort must be paid for out of the members' own pockets.

In theory, there is no written law which makes such stipulation. However, it has been an unwritten policy of the Council to vote down any requests for allocations earmarked for awards. SA President George Lucchina is on record as opposing allocations of student funds for keys or other material benefits.

Vice-president Submits

The resolution to broaden the present policy was submitted by Vice-president David O'Brien. If O'Brien's resolution were accepted, it would have opened the door for the council to make allocations for such awards.

As Dave explained, "The present procedure is as follows: The organization (CYNIC, ARIEL, etc.) petitions for an allotment for funds for awards; the finance committee then recommends to the SA Council that the request be turned down as it is not the policy to grant these funds; the council members then automatically vote negatively for the same reason."

With O'Brien's resolution in effect, a negative vote or recommendation could still be handed down, but so could an affirmative. In this procedure, the vote would be on the basis of the organization and its relative importance on campus, instead of the "automatic factor."

During the Council meeting councilman John Burgess raised the question of a criterion being set upon which allocations could be based.

"I have faith in the integrity of the councilmen," O'Brien shot back across the table. "Leave it to their discretion. I would like to see a token of appreciation given to students who do outstanding work for an organization...they do it on most other campuses."

Keys and Jackets

The question of just where to "draw the line" was raised by Secretary Liz Seamans. "If we give keys to the Ariel, do we also give jackets to Boulder Society?" she asked.

"I am in favor of both" O'Brien answered.

When questioned after the meeting, President Lucchina expressed the opinion that he would continue the present policy of the "automatic negative" vote.

Lounge To Close, Votes Council

Unless conditions become greatly improved in the next few days, and stay that way, the Student Lounge will be closed.

At the Student Association Council meeting last Thursday, a motion to close the lounge for a week was made by Vice-president David O'Brien. The motion was strongly seconded by councilman Lorna Dean.

According to O'Brien, the lounge has been full of cigarette butts, newspapers, and in general has been poorly treated by the students.

The general tone of the council was in favor of closing the lounge. However, the closing was temporarily postponed when Editor of the CYNIC Bradley Gordon informed the body of a plan which had been previously evolved by Cosa Donald Hardy, SA President George Lucchina, Student Photography President Karl Haviland, and Gordon.

Student photography staff members were to take candid pictures of students misusing the lounge furniture, dropping cigarette butts, etc. The pictures appear in this issue of the CYNIC.

The glass covered desk which had been in the front left corner of the lounge has been removed as the glass top was broken when an unknown student decided that the desk top would make a good seat.

The O'Brien motion was tables until the results of the CYNIC'S efforts could be observed. Strong support for the motion indicated that the lounge would be closed without hesitation if the situation does not improve.

Six Imports, One Export Start UVM In Exchange Plan

The Tuition Exchange Plan is in operation for its first full year at UVM. Six exchange students are studying here; only one child of a UVM professor is studying elsewhere under the program.

This program, by which one college grants full tuition scholarships to faculty children of a cooperating college, was expanded nationally last year under a grant by the Ford Foundation.

Ninety-six schools now cooperate on the Tuition Exchange Plan. Though an actual "trade," student for student, isn't necessary each year; over a period of time,

Students Show Cooperation In New Tray System

This year a self-service system has been initiated in the cafeteria. In past years there have been people on the floor to remove trays from the tables. The students now pick up their own trays and deposit them in shelved cabinets.

Mrs. Godfrey, the manage of the cafeteria, said tha the new method is an old on in most colleges. She sai that since it was necessar to reduce operation costs, it was a question of eithe having the students remov their own trays or of raisin the food prices. "I thin the latter alternative woul have been less agreeable t the students," said Mrs Godfrey.

The actual saving in oper ation costs is not yet know but should prove a con siderable one. Where ther used to be twelve to fiftee workers on the floor, ther are now two.

Mrs. Godfrey said that th students have shown "excel lent cooperation" in th cafeteria, and that most c them put their trays awa She said, however, that th don't seem to realize the the new system also applie to the soda fountain, an that they leave dishes ar trays on they tables when th leave, the cafeteria sta would appreciate this sit ation's being corrected.

WRUV Will Expand Facilities To Reach Most Of Student Body By Semester's End

When UVM's own WRUV, 570 on your dial, returns to the air this semester it will reach between 1500 and 2000 people. According to Ted Muller, speaking for the staff of WRUV, "The new station has improved and doubled everything since last year 100%."

Last year the new station had 200 records, this year they have 5000 different tubes and 2000 different records in the studio. The staff believes that it has the best selection of music that any station in this area can offer.

New Equipment

"A large amount of new equipment has been purchased which will provide more enjoyable listening," said Muller. Two tape recorders, a 3 speed turntable and new tapes have been purchased. It is hoped that a new console will be secured by the end of the year.

The old shows have been improved and new ones have been designed to meet with the interests of the students at UVM. If by chance these shows do not meet with public approval they will be changed.

WRUV will be broadcasting up to the minute news with the aid of the new United Press Teletype, which was installed recently. This machine was given to WRUV by the American Tobacco Co., makers of Lucky Strike cigarettes and will give listeners the latest local, national, international, and sports news.

Program

WRUV will be on the air Sunday thru Friday from 7 P.M. to midnight. On Saturday afternoons football games and other sports events in season will be broadcast for the listeners' pleasure and WRUV will try to report the away games also.

Musical shows will be featured also. According to Muller, "We will duplicate every station. We have the material and we will use it."

They will feature variations of music from jazz, "up-tempo" tunes, popular tunes, and standards. The later evening shows are designed to relax the student and give him a break from his studies. These late shows will have mood music and slow tempo tuness. Somewhere throughout the evening there will be an uninterrupted show of classical music.

Plans

Some of the shows being planned are: "The Easy Street Show" with easy listening music that will be heard in the early evening, "Masterworks of Music" which will feature 30 minutes of uninterrupted classical music, "WRUV Takes a Break Show", which will consist of fast talk, wake-up music, and jokes. The show will be conducted by two disc-jockeys, "Sleepy-time Express Show" which is a late show will broadcast very slow music. It's alternate will be "It's Dreamtime," which was very popular last year. Another highlight in their plans for the coming year will be the show featuring the top ten records each week.

WRUV will reach all the mens dorms, Converse, Old Mill Redstone Campus, East Hall, the Theta House, the SAE House, the Delta Psi house, and some of the co-operative houses in the very beginning. Later in the year, they hope to reach just about everyone on the U.V.M. campus.

Staffing the station this year are: Bill Paine-disc jockey, Hal Greenfader-again doing "Dreamtime Show," Dick Hooker-news commentater, Roger Wakefield-News and general announcing, Dave Olivet-sports. Rick Wyckoff-disc jockey, Ted Muller "Take a Break Show" with Rick Wyckoff, Howie Ross-chief Engineer, Bob Newcombe-engineer, Ed Nugent-engineer, and Tony Vydra-president of the Radio Workshop.

WRUV, which is a member of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, will have a a music box in the Waterman Cafeteria. Just drop the name of your favorite record in and they will try to play it for you.

Gals' Gams Losing Shape Doc Blames Tennis Seakers

U.V.M. men are in despair! They have been unquestionably deprived of their greatest pleasure. This, I'm told from a worthy source, is admiring and choosing girls by their lovely game. By chance, have you noticed the enlarged ankles on our lovely co-eds? This catastrophe, I'm certain, is due to the ladies latest foot styles--sneakers.

Now the question is why are sneakers the latest fad? Having asked our girls why, the replies sound something like this. "Sneakersmake our feet feel light and small. They give us a bouncy air and a definite swing to our hips. Being so light and elastic we feel young and feminine. As for other reasons, sneakers are cheap. We have to buy them for gym, and if your the outdoor type, they're just the thing! Sneakers are comfortable and clubby, they're in style and simply everyone wears them!!"

Awful Ankles

Speaking for one side of the opposition and representing the medical viewpoint, we have Doctor William O'Rourke, M.D., Instructor of Pathology at U.V.M. "Sneakers make the feet sweaty and are prone to causing athletes feet. They encourage blisters and corns and offer absolutely no support. If sneakers are worn too long the result will probably be fallen arches. And of course, the most drastic result of all--an enlarging of the ankles."

The men of our university form the other part of the opposition. Their comments run along this line, "Sneakers are generally terrible, extremely unfeminine and quite sloppy. We find them, for the most past, unsightly and absolutely unaesthetic."

So, college co-eds, you have a grave decision to make. Should you have fallen arches and heavy ankles? Should you look unfeminine and sloppy? Or, should you feel light, clubby and stylish? I have a sneaking suspicion you will remain in style as women of the past and present, and probably future will always do.

They say that a dog never bites the hand that feeds it, but we're not dogs (they tell us) so we'll do a little biting.

The Student Association Council last week defeated a resolution which would have cleared the way for SA supported organi - zations to rewardtheir deserving members with keys plaques of some similar token.

For the past three years, ever since Student Associ - ation instituted its present financial policy , the practice of an organi - zation awarding keys to outstanding members of its staff has been 'taboo'.

This particular policy emerged from the Council's desire to allocate as little "unnecessary" money as possible. One of the corners cut involved money previously allocated for awards.

However, this maneuver- has never been written into the bylaws of the Student Association Constitution. It is an unwritten policy which was incorporated into the minutes of a past Council meeting and has been followed without deviation and almost without question by one Student Association Council after another.

Every time an organi- zation includes a request for award money in the budget it submits to the SA finance committee, the committee recommends that the council refuse the allocation. The question of the merits or demerits of the awards or the relative importance of the organization making the request is not considered. The finance committee hands down what amounts to an "automatic no," a decision without a trial.

Likewise, the Council is forced to give an " automatic no " and is fettered by its refusal to break with the precedent set in the past three years. We do not attempt to convince the Council that funds should be allocated for awards. This is at present impossible, for the members of the council refuse to even allow themselves to vote for or against an allocation. In effect, the present system has usurped from the council its right to say " yes " even if they wanted to.

According to the present President of Student As - sociation, the existing policy will remain in effect. The council will continue to have its hands tied whenever the award question arises.

And why? Just because six members of the Council felt last week that it was not Student Associ- ation's place to allocate STUDENT money to STUDENT organizations so that they may award a little silver key to STUDENTS who are more than deserving of them.

We wonder if the Councilmen realize what they voted on last week. You did not vote for or against the allocation of funds. You voted against a resolution which would have returned to the council table the RIGHT to vote...period.

The Faculty Speaks

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

By Professor James Chaplin

This is the first of a series of guest faculty editorials. It is hoped that in this way, the students may learn the views of the faculty on subjects outside the classroom.

The forgotten man in our educational system is the the superior student. If he is noticed at all by his fellow students it will be as an object of derision. "Bookworm," "grind," "intellectual snob," "teacher's pet" and certain other unprintable epithets are his reward for non-conformity to the intellectual mean. At best he is considered a little queer and rapidly becomes a social leper. Even more alarming we are intolerant of any evidence of intellectual individualism, which often accompanies superiority. Our current catch-phrase philosophy stresses the desirability of being "well-rounded." The student who chooses to devote himself to serious study rather than to participate in formal "outside" activities or to join a fraternal organization is viewed with considerable misgiving. He will be looked down on by social snobs, pitied by social grinds and urges to have psychiatric treatment by kindly disposed extroverts.

On the other hand the student with extra-curricular indigestion, the poor student, the maladjusted, the unqualified and the dullard are all objects of great sympathy and concern from students and faculty alike. Study clinics reading clinics, counseling clinics, vocational guidance clinics, "baby" courses, and non-credit review courses are spread far and wide throughout our college campuses in the United States. Yet the average college has no special courses or programs for the superior student. The trend however, is more pervasive than mere administrative over concern with the students who are having difficulties of one sort or another. Textbooks in some fields are becoming more and more like comic books; workbooks, audio-visual aids and courses by television obviate the necessity for thinking; instructors can select books of readings (carefully graded for difficulty), so that they and their students may not have read an original and complete work in years. Finally the campus side shows staffed by specialists provide sufficient anti-intellectual fare to "round out" the average student every moment that he can or cannot spare, and incidentally to do real harm in distracting superior students with their noise and fanfare.

No one who truly believes in the value of education can deny the desirability of educating all who are qualified and of offering a helping hand to those who may be having temporary difficulties. But let us not lose sight of the intellectually superior student and the individualist. It is not a crime to be brilliant or deeply interested in some special field of knowledge. It is not a sin to want to work hard when one is truly interested in learning and not merely in getting high marks or an AB degree. There is both intellectual companionship and social relaxation in discussing great ideas, and this can be just as enjoyable as spending all one's time barnstorming from one campus side show to another.

Today, surrounded as we are by a national atmosphere of anti-intellectualism and conformity, we need more than ever not just to tolerate, but to encourage the intellectual, the individualist and the dissenter. Intellectual superiority and non-conformity made men like Socrates, DeVinci, Beethoven, Paine and Oppenheimer. Let us nourish intellectual superiority where ever we find it. We cannot live without it.

Friday, Sept. 24 - After two years of conflict over the issue of pledging a member of the Jewish faith, Phi Delta Theta at Williams has resigned from the national organization and become a local fraternity, the Order of Phi Delta. This resignation climaxes two years of controversy which began in September 1952 when the Phi Delts pledged a Jewish freshman in defiance of the restrictive clause in their national charter.

At a meeting of the active members of the house last week, the Phi Delts reiterated their decision to stand by the pledge, now an initiated member, and voted to withdraw from the national. On Sept. 15, Phi Delt president Paul Quinn sent the following telegram to the fraternity headquarters: "In a vote that took place tonight, the active members voted to retain the questionable pledge. Massachusetts Alpha, therefore, tenders its resignation from Phi Delta Theta." Now none of the fifteen fraternities on campus have a charter which has a restrictive clause based on race, creed, or color.

National Suspends Chapter

When the issue arose two years ago, the fraternity's decision to retain the pledge brought the support of their alumni, but in February 1953 the national suspended the Williams chapter until this fall when the 50th general biennial convention met. At that time the national decided that the Williams' chapter could not retain the pledge without a change in its affiliation with the national.

Earlier the General Council, which rules the fraternity between conventions, had filed a petition for the revocation of the Williams' chapter's charter. At the request of the Council the chapter filed a brief which the Survey Commission studies before making its recommendations to the convention. Outing Clubbers Journeyed To Camels Hump In Hearse

Thirteen members of the Outing Club journeyed to Camels Hump for their first overnight hike of the fall semester recently. Transportation was provided by the Outing Club's car, "Brunhilde," a 1938 Packard Hearse. Saturday afternoon the group climbed to Montclair Glenn, a cabin located halfway up the mountain. The Club had beef stew for supper, cooked on the stove inside the cabin. Everyone ate in the dark, since the lantern was forgotten. Flash pictures were taken of the mountainside. After a breakfast of pancakes, accompanied, of course, by Vermont Maple Syrup, several of the hardier souls proceeded to climb to the top of the mountain. They returned to campus Sunday afternoon.

Mount Mansfield

Last Sunday, the Student Association sponsored an all-university trip to Mt. Mansfield, "The rooftop of Vermont." The trip was designated by the Club as Mountain Day. The group left from the Waterman Building by bus at 9:00 a.m. and proceeded to the foot of the mountain. They hiked up the mountain to the Cave of the Winds which is the largest cave in Vermont. Nature lovers enjoyed the beautiful fall foliage. After climbing the mountain via one of the four trails, the group returned to the University at 5:00 p.m.

Future Trips

The Club will travel to an island on lake George, October 9 and 10 for the Lake George Canoe Trip sponsored by the Intercollegiate Outing Club Association. All colleges in the East send delegates for a weekend of canoeing, mountain climbing, and square dancing. A hay ride has been planned for Friday night, October 15, followed by a day hike to Birch Glenn on Sunday. The annual fall trip to Mount Marcy, in New York State will take place on the weekend of October 23.

Club Composition

The Outing Club is composed of 120 members, who pay $1.50 at the beginning of the year in addition to $1.50 for an overnight trip and 75¢ for a day hike. Food is purchased in town by the hiking leaders. A favorite dish of the Outing Club is named "Glop," a mixture of hamburgers, onions, celery and rice. Besides hiking and camping, the Club engages in skiing and roller skating. The officers of the Club are Bruce Norcross, President; John Parker, Vice-President; Dorothy Myer, Secretary; and Melvin McKnight, Treasurer.

The purpose of the Outing Club as stated by the President, is "to give students an opportunity to get away from the books and see their state in a new guise."

Rubber Matting Reduces Noise In The Library

About two hundred yards of rubber floor covering has been laid on the first floor of the Billings Library. Made of two layers of rubber, one of sponge rubber laminated to a thinner layer of harder rubber on the top, this material is designed to reduce the noise made by leather heels on a bare wooden floor.

The rubber runners were made possible through two separate gifts to the library by student-faculty committees in the Spring of 1954. The Kake Walk Disposition Committee allocated $500.00 and the Vending Machine Committee gave the additional $600.00 necessary to carry out this improvement on the main floor at Billings.

According to Sidney B. Smith, Director of University Libraries, the installation of the rubber runners has helped very much in reducing unnecessary noise. "We are delighted that the two committees came to the rescue of the library," he said, "and I know that in the future other worthwhile projects on the campus will get as good student support. Let's hope the runners wear well."

Dr. Eakin Leaves UVM To Accept Position In Calif.

Dr. Eugene K. Eakin has resigned his post as Director of Student Personnel and Adult Education at the University of Vermont. He left with his wife two weeks ago to accept the post of Director of Christian Education at the First Methodist Church of Sacramento, California. Dr. Eakin had been in UVM since 1949.

AE Phi's Live In New House; Love It There

The latest edition to the U.V.M. campus is the new home of the A.E. Phi's down at 371 Main Street. This eighty year old home houses eighteen of the twenty-three girls in A.E. Phi. The house has seventeen rooms, one of which includes a distinguished solid white onyx fireplace that was displayed in the worlds fair of 1916, and a dining room floor and staircase that are made of marble. The house also has a very large garage that is used for storing lumber and making posters. In addition to all these main features, the girls have at their disposal five additional fireplaces throughout the house for comfort on the long winter nights.

Rented for Year

Although they have only rented the house for the year, they have already had painting, plastering, plumbing, roofing, and electrical work done. As yet, the A E Phi's have not fixed up the basement, for they are not pressed for space. Some of the furniture that they now have was already there, but beds, dressers, mattresses, lamps, dishes, silverware, and other home furnishings had to be obtained from various sources around campus. Many of the girl's parents helped to make the house successful by donating many of the needed items, and one even donated a T.V. set and a washing machine for added convenience.

Meals started on Monday September 28, and the girls all agree that the food is great. The A.E. Phi's also have a wonderful house mother. Mrs. Childs, who sees to it that the girls mind their WSGA's thru Z's.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "Barefoot Boy With Cheek," etc.)

MY COUSIN HASKELL

I have a cousin named Haskell Krovney, a sweet, unspoiled country boy, who has just started college. A letter arrived from him this morning which I will reprint here because I know that Haskell's problems are so much like your own. Haskell writes:

Dear Haskell (he thinks my name is Haskell too),

I see that you are writing a column for Philip Morris cigarettes. I think they are keen cigarettes which taste real good and which make a pleasant noise when you open the pack, and I want to tell you why I don't smoke them.

It all started the very first day I arrived at college. I had just gotten off the train and was walking across the campus, swinging my cardboard valise whistling snatches of Valencia, Barney Google, and other latest tunes, admiring statues, petting dogs and girls, when all of a sudden I ran into this fellow with a blue jacket, gray pants, and white teeth. He asked me was I a freshman. I said yes. He asked me did I want to go places on campus, make a big name for myself, and get pointed at in fashionable ballrooms and spas. I said yes. He said the only way to make all these keen things happen was to join a fraternity. Fortunately he happened to have a pledge card on him, so he pricked my thumb and I signed. He didn't tell me the name of the fraternity or where it is located, but I suppose I'll find out when I go active.

Meanwhile this fellow comes around every week and collects his dues which are $100. Lately he has been collecting $10 extra each week. He says this is a fine because I missed the meeting. When I remind him that I can't go to meetings because I don't know where the house is, he twists my arm.

I have never regretted joining the fraternity because it is my dearest wish to be somebody on campus and get pointed at in spas, but you can see that it isn't cheap. It wouldn't be so bad if I slept at the house, but you must agree that I can't very well sleep at the house if I don't know where the house is.

I have had to rent a room. This room is not only hellishly expensive, but it isn't the kind of room I wanted at all. What I was looking for was someplace reasonably priced, clean, comfortable, and within easy walking distance of classes, the downtown shopping district, the movies, and my home town. What I found was a bedroom in the home of a local costermonger, which is dingy, expensive, uncomfortable, inconvenient, and I don't even get to use the bed till six o'clock in the morning when my Landlord goes off to mong his costers.

Well, anyhow, I got settled and started going to classes. But first I had to pay my tuition. This came to a good deal more than the advertised rates. When I asked the bursar what the extra money was for, he told me lab fees. When I said I wasn't taking any labs, he said I was taking psychology which counted as a lab because they used white mice. When I offered to bring my own mice, of which there are plenty in my room, he twisted my arm.

So I paid the man and went to my classes where I found that all my professors had spent busy summers writing brand new textbooks. Over to the bookstore I went, saw the prices on the textbooks, and collapsed in a gibbering heap. At length I recovered and made indignant demands to speak to the proprietor, but they told me the Brinks truck had already taken him home for the day. There was nothing for it but to buy the books.

Next I turned to romance—and found it. Harriet, her name was—a great, strapping girl. I first spied her leaning against the statue of the Founder, dozing lightly. I talked to her for several hours without effect. Only when I mentioned dinner did she stir. Her milky little eyes opened, she raised a heavy arm, seized my nape, and dragged me off to a dimly lit place called The Trap where everything was a la carte. She ordered cracked crab ($1.75), sirloin chateaubriand ($7.00), a scuttle of french fries (18¢ the french fry), an artichoke (30¢ the leaf), and compote (80¢ the prune).

After dinner she lapsed into a torpor from which I could not rouse her, no matter how I tried. I banged my glass with my fork. I did bird calls of North and South America. I pinched her huge pendulous jowl. I rubbed the legs of my corduroy pants together . . . But nothing worked, and finally I had to sling her over my shoulder and carry her to the girls dormitory, to the vast amusement of everybody along the route.

But it was not the jeers of bystanders that bothered me. It was the hernia. Fortunately, medical care for students is provided free at the college dispensary; all I had to pay for were a few extras, like X-rays, anaesthesia, operating room, forceps, hemostats, scalpels, sponges, catgut, linens, towels, amortization, and nurses. They would not, however, let me keep the nurses.

So, dear, cousin, if you see me these days without a Philip Morris cigarette, it is not because I don't like Philip Morris cigarettes. I do. I flip when I taste their mild rare vintage tobaccos. But I can't afford cigarettes. I can't even afford matches, what with fraternity dues and room rent and lab fees and textbook prices and my girl Harriet and medical care.

Well, I'll write you again soon. Keep 'em flying.

Yr. Cousin,

Haskell

Around The Green

Edited by Joan Breslin

Are you one of those well-informed people (or so you would like to believe along with the rest of your tutored associates) who is up on all the latest developments in the scientific and other related fields of modern and progressive endeavor? You must know then, as I just found out over this summer, when Fourth of July came late this year to a few of my hometown friends. Some of the local boys (spelled boys) "found" a supply of army firecrackers in a truck at summer camp and walked off with a few gross: Army firecrackers so they found out, are not like the civilian varieties. For one thing the fuse is in the middle instead of at one end, and for another they have more the characteristics of TNT than firecrackers. One bright fellow put one in a footlocker, "just to hear how it sounds" and blew the locker into several small pieces. This surprised him. It surprised the fellow the lid of the locker landed on, too. Several of the undamaged spectators smiled broadly; the fellow who owned the locker didn't because he had to pay for the damage, and the crowd of officers and 1st. Sgts. which had collected didn't put him in a hilarious mood.... After dinner that day, there was an inspection made of lockers and they found everything from firecrackers to 105mm artillary shells (it was a great picnic, I'm told). Surprise investigations always turn up alot of frayed nerves and some rather interesting equipment.

Even if you do come from New Haven you still ought to try Pizza at George's (147 North Winooski Avenue). It would be fun to look at TV over Mozzerella and anchovies. You could even make it color TV by having your date stand before the set with colored crayons in his or her hand (as the case may be..if she (oops, he) is a case.)

Now that it's that time of year again perhaps we should ask you if you've heard the one about the...man (that's original) who put this problem to a baseball-mad friend? "Suppose you came upon your wife and Mickey Mantle, both clinging by their fingertips to the edge of a precipice. Below them yawned a chasm ten thousand feet deep. You had time to rescue only one of them. Which would you allow to perish?" The ball fan's unhesitating answer was: "Are you crazy? My wife couldn't hit the side of a barn with a tractor! (ho-hum)

Just one more and I'll go away)

An Indian in New Mexico was smoke signalling to his Indian sweetheart a few miles away. Right in the middle of his message, an atom bomb test went off, covering the sky with smoke. "Gosh" muttered the Indian "I wish I'd said that.

Right here we'd like to wish the Kappa Sigma Newlyweds happiness and all our best wishes. They are: Bud Dacey, '56, of St. Albans to Betsy Juste, '55, of Caldwell New Jersey; Joe Aidala '56, to Lee Gunsten of Flushing, Long Island.

The Daceys and the Aidalas are playing house in their attractive new apartments in the cottage to the south of the Kappa Sig House. Ed Beck, '56, of Waltham Mass., married Pat Happeny of the same town. Ed and Pat Beck are Mr. and Mrs.-ing at Hungerford Terrace, Jim Kalperis brought his new wife Kila back to Burlington from Greece after a tour of the continent. Here's an official U.V.M. welcome Mrs. K. We're pleased and honored to have you here.

Also a big hello to Howie Braithwaite who is back with us again, after a hitch in the army.

Who could help but notice the new-look to two familiar Kappa Sigma landmarks. The house at Main really "put the colors on" and nobody has to "ramble" very far "in and out of town" to hear the compliments about the becoming decrease a certain well-known Chesterfield representative took on over the past 2 months. If you're still guessing Liggett and Myers..? he was Ariel editor of what we hear is going to be the best issue yet, due to come out sometime - say November 1st.

From the reports the Pi Phis have sent in they seem to have taken the "wedding" cake for the most summer weddings. (at least from the submitted lists) Sally Hickok '54 of Summit, N.J., married A.T.O's pride and Joy, Paul Bousquet '53, of Pittsfield, Cindy Stafford '54, of Montpelier married Wallace "Mac" MacDonald, Montpelier. "Pixie" Ganow, '54, of Caldwell, N.J., tied the fatal knot with Dirk Kuyk, '53, ATO of Middlebury. Nancy Bucheim, '54, of Rutland married Bob Beauchamp '54, of Boston Pharm. College of Rutland. Patti "Military Ball Queen" Speer was wedded to Nate Gilman, Sig-Nu, '54, of St. Johnsbury. Mary Marvin, '54, of Essex, Jct., is now Mrs. David Kelley, '53, Sigma Phi, of Burlington, Ann Bossidy, '53, of Pittsfield, Mass., is now Mrs. Mark Margiotta '53, (now '57, U.V.M. Med. School) Sigma Nu of Waterbury, Conn., Joh Danforth (past president) '54, married John Knickerbocker '53, Sigma Phi Epsilon (now of U.S. Army at Fort Monmouth, N.J.,) Charlotte Parker '54, (Nursing) of Morrisville, married Neal Towne, '52, of East Montpelier, and "Beezie" (Lydia) Sweeney, '53, married of Dartmouth College.

See what we mean-Worlds of best wishes to them all. And another wish of only the best to Liz Semans, '56, of Dorchester, Mass., who is flashing a beautiful diamond as well as a mighty happy smile and it's all because of a certain Mr. Richard Schapps '55, of Harvard.

High struttin' George Hansen, '56, Acacia of Rutland, took a very nice step when he pinned Tri-delt's Marilyn Cooper, '57, of West Orange, N.J., in the Chapel at St. Paul's, last Sunday, September 19th - "Coop" was promptln serenaded by the enthusiastic if not harmouious brothers.

At Theta Chi - there are two more engaged brothers - Lee HitchKock, '56, of Cromwell, Conn., to Diane Kiessling, '56, Alpha Delta Pi, from Middlebury, Connecticut.and your favorite discus thrower and mine, Ron Dornbosch, '56, of Rochelle Park, N.J.; hurled his heart to Joan Burke of Arlington, N.Y.

Congratulations on a fine catch!

The Theta Chi House raises its crossed-swords to salute and welcome back George Martin now in the Class of '55, returned from 2 years of Military Service.

The Alpha Delta Pi's inform us that Nancy Page, '56, now working in Albany, N.Y., is pinned to John Douglas, Delta Tau Delta at R.P.I. '54.

Since Ann Terry, '56, of Troy, N.Y., gave up riding (the-merry-go-round), she caught the gold ring belonging to one Jimmy Akey, '53, of St. Michael's College (Young Mr. Akey is one of Burlington's better-known fashion experts and can be consulted at Miles and Rileys.)

Molly Brady, '54, of Orange, N.J., became the bride of Donald Stelle of West Va., University, of Neptune, N.J. Mr. Stelle did graduate work at Ohio State and Stephens Institute and is now employed at the Engineering Laboratories, Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Furtherhhearts and flowers ness - from the U.V.M. Pill pushers - '56.

Jane Adams, Tri-Delt, of Hartford, Conn., is engaged to John Adams, '54, Med. serving his internship somewhere inside U.S.A. (we haven't pinned it down yet.)

Rhoda Nicholson of Massapequa, L.I., is fianced of Dr. Frank Pitkin former Med. resident of the Mary Fletcher Hospital, recently affiliated with Univeesity of Penn., Med. School.

Jan Tudhope, Kappa Alpha Theta, of South Hero, is engaged to Ned Austin, Sigma Phi '56, of Burlington.

Sig Nu's

The Barn behind the Sigma Nu house was torn down this summer in an effort to improve the exterior of the house. New beds and mattresses were placed in all the bedrooms in the house.

During the past summer, the Sigma Nu Nat'l. Convention was held in Houston, Texas and was attended by Ed Hebb, brought back a great deal of valuable information concerning chapters of Sigma Nu.

Last and most important of all was the pinning of brother Sid Rossuck to Vicki Carlson, T.V. starlet. They are planning to be engaged this Thanksgiving.

Phi Sigma Delta

The Phi Sigs are happy to announce that over the summer some of the brothers were pinned, engaged, or married. Pinned is Ronnie Grossman to Pat Koch from Great Neck, L.I., attending Bennington College; Jerry Myers to Joy Zuckerman, & Myron Kopps to Laura Walsh. Marv Cooper and Pat Henderson are engaged. Scott Brodie became engaged to Gogo Sherman of Skidmore and Lou Barth has ringed Ellie Levin. Married is Allen Epstein to Naomi Meisles and Allen Paul to Elsie Epstein, an A E Phi alum. A braceleting has also taken place--Abbie Dan to Barbara Shapiro.

Mrs. Laura Louden, formerly a public relations officer at the University, endeared in the hearts of many of the faculty and administration, is the new housemother of Fern Hill. Mrs. Val Austin is on leave of absence recuperating from a recent illness.

Phi Sigs are very proud of the Brummer Cup they received for being the best chapter in their National.

Congratulations to Sam Berger, Pal Barofsky, Herb Brown, Dick Dennis, Arnie Davidson, Roy Williams, Marv Levy, Paul Small, and Steve Taub - upon being brothered-up recently.

A.T.O's Ed Callahan was married to Theresa Desilets, of Montpelier; Bob Merchant married Patricia Euan of Waterbury.

Last year's candidate for Kake Walk King, Jerry McKernan, is now in basic training at Fort Dix. Along with Jerry is another A.T.O., Caleb Marsh, also at Fort Six. Last year's president, Joe Rodak, is working with a Securities firm in New York City and Nick Carter is working with General Electric in Pittsfield, Mass. Michael Abdalla is currently in his freshman year in the Medical School and Ralph Haslund has been accepted at Penn State for Graduate work and teaching in Physics. Keith Spaulding is working in St. Johnsbury.

The Taus are currently under-going some major repairs in the house and hope to have the main living rooms refurnished with new rugs and furniture.

Over at 440 Pearl St., the Owl house has undergone quite a change. An apartment has been made from the rooms off the library, and is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Sheean of Newport, Vt. who have accepted, the invitation to be house parents.

To go along with the change, John Whalen, '56, of Burlington, was elected president; Richard Severens, '56, of Saxton's River is secretary. Peter Wood, '55, of Schroon Lake, N.Y., is Steward, Athletic chairman is John Geisler, '57, Jim Johnson, '55, of Portland, Maine has accepted the post of parlimentarian, and Bob Brown, '56, of Enosburg Falls, holds the purse strings.

A board of governors has been elected to aid the president in the running of the house, and they are-Hugh Sullivan, '57, Bellows Falls, Bob Benoit, '56, of Enosburg Falls, and Jan Curran, '56, of Goldens Bridge, N.Y. Jim Thompson, '57, of Saratoga, N.Y., is IFC delegate; Hugh Sullivan is Social Chairman, and Jan Curran is publicity chairman.

Karl Kohm, '55, of New York and Gil Forte have accepted open bids and pledged.

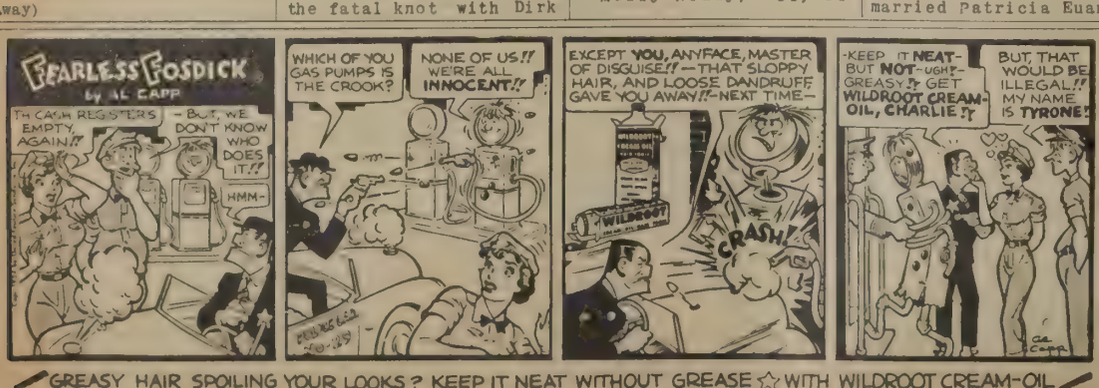
The "This Is Your Life" boy Frank "Hazel Bishop Non-Smear" Carr added a new chapter to his story by pinning Marlene Goodenough, '55, a Gamma Phi, of East Hartford Conn. Frank, Class of '56, is the well known virtuoso of the Acacia House.

John Andrews, '54, of Acacia fraternity was recently pinned to Lee Starke, '57, on Saturday September 25th.

The Class of '55.-

Joy Arioli of Barre, betrothed of Mike Lastra, '51, Norwich (Theta Chi). of Union, N.J., (Need any free passes on the Jersey Turnpike - see Mike!)

Patti Rule, Arlington, Mass., Alpha Chi, is wearing the Kappa Sig Pin of Bill Meyers, '54, of Verona, N.J.



Jane Vanderwerker, of Hudson Falls, N.Y., was married in April, to Myron Story of Smiths Basin, N.Y.

Beverly Cole, Alpha Chi Omega, of East Hartland, Conn., is now Mrs. Roger Gallic, '53, of Windsor, Connecticut, as of last March; now living in Washington, D.C., courtesy of the USAF.

Delt Psi-

Congratulations go to Jim Cronin, '55, of Brant Lake, New York, who became engaged to Mary Towne, '57, Alpha Chi Sorority, of Morrisville, Vermont. Also "Stu" Hadwin, '56, of Bennington, Vermont, who became engaged to Ruth Fifield, student nurse from South Hero, Vermont. Pat Fagan, '56, from Rutland, Vermont, is pinned to Jean Haigh, Rutland, Vermont. Jean attended the University of Edinburgh in Scotland last year and is in college in Boston this year.

The New England Chapter of Theta Province met at a convention held at the Alpha Delta Pi House of Gamma Tau chapter at U.V.M. October 7, through 10. Attending this convention were: The National President Miss Maxine Blake, Seattle Washington; Mrs. Rex E Van Akin, Theta Provincel President. New York State Membership Chairman, Mrs. Joseph T. Gallager, East Greenbush, New York. Also in attendance were the President, vice-president, treasurer, rush chairman and other representatives from: Colby College, Waterville, Maine; Boston University, Boston, Mass.; Syracuse University, St. Lawrence, Canton, N.Y., University of Conn., Storrs, Conn.; University of Rhode Island, Kingston, Rhode Island, and University of Vermont.

Miss Maxine Blake spoke and Mrs. Van Akin lead discussionson rushing pledges, scholarship and finances.

Three pledges from the Gamma Lambda chapter of the University of Rhode Island were initiated in a ceremony presided over by Miss Blake. The event was climaxed by a successful picnic at North Beach.

Judy Carroll, '54, of White Plains returned from a summer tour of Europe in time to take part in Helen Peterson's wedding, and Connie Kemp, '54, of Ausable Forks, New York is engaged to Frank Madden, '57, also of Ausable Forks, New York.

A CAMPUS-TO-CAREER CASE HISTORY

"All the answers aren't in the book"

W. D. Garland, E.E. '52, Univ. of California, is working for the Pacific Telephone Company. We thought you'd be interested in what Don told us about his first assignment.

(Reading time: 45 seconds)

Here Don Garland makes noise distribution measurements with a Level Distribution Recorder

"My job is to help solve problems of noise and other interference on telephone lines due to power interference. Inductive co-ordination is the technical term for the work.

"First thing the Chief Engineer explained to me was that 'all the answers aren't in the book.' He was right. Most of the problems have required a combination of electrical engineering, a knowledge of costs and generous amount of ingenuity. I like it that way. It's given me an immediate opportunity to put into practice the theory I learned at school.

"In addition to this on-the-job experience, I have attended several special training courses conducted by the company. Now I'm breaking in a new man, just like when I started."

Don Garland's work is typical of many engineering assignments in the Bell Telephone Companies. There are similar opportunities for college graduates with Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation. If you'd like to get more details, see your Placement Officer. He will be glad to help you.

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Critic Not Impressed With Varieties

By Diane Tanzi

The recovery from the afternoon's dampened spirits was aided in the evening Vermont Varieties, which went on at 7:30 in Memorial Auditorium to an audience nearing 1,000 Saturday night of Homecoming Weekend.

Under the theme of "Roar" 20's Roar" was presented the widest assortment of campus talent (?). To be congratulated for especially fine work are the song and dance groups who swayed the crowd into the festive mood with their "Varsity Drag" and "Charleston." The vocals for "This Is Your Story" comprised the only entertaining portion of that particular skit, with notice given to Dick Severens and his "Mikado," and the Nancy Brumberg-Marcia Mockridge duet and "Molly Malone." The University Choir, heard for the first time by this member of the audience, was excellent. It is an organization the campus should be most proud of. The merits of the evening's lighting crew were evident in "Night Moods," a very clever and original scene which carried out the well chosen music of the show, with Ken Vanderbilt and Beatrice Hughes singing two favorites "Into the Night" and "Night and Day."

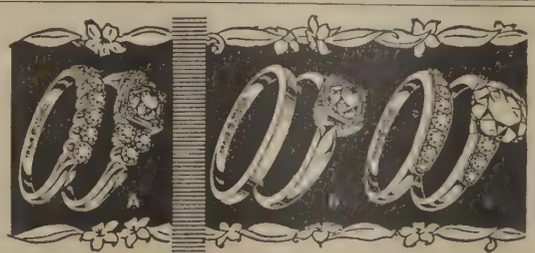
The Dance Workshop's long awaited Thurber number "Unicorn in the Garden" was a perfectly delightful touch of fantasy. The group, under the direction of Marty Howe, presented a very polished performance, and seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves, as did the audience, with one character being especially pleased with himself for his accomplishments. Not every man can rid himself of a wife so cleverly and find such adequate substitutions, even if they are Unicorns.

Realizing the short period of time the University Players had to put on a show, they deserve credit and congratulations for their effort. In doing so, however, a few reservations are in order.

In an attempt to adapt a new policy of co-ordination of the various acts, using the highly entertaining piano of Bob Smith, they ran into difficulties in production. The attempt to produce a show which encompassed so many acts with different purposes, each one of different length, using only one link between these acts was sorely unsuccessful. Had they not tried to use one central theme with so many unrelated scenes, then the purpose would have been justified.

Perhaps the main fault of the production was in it's length, which for any review was painfully long. Even Shakespeare thought enough of his prospective audiences to consider their interest span as enduring for not more than three hours. Rockabye Baby; a soliloquy so ridiculous that it became nothing more than a test of endurance, might well have been dropped from the bill.

The Vermont Varieties, per se, was not what had been expected. There was neither consistency of idea nor continuity of production. The fault does justly fall to lack of time, but with few exceptions there seemed to be a general confusion of the purpose in mind. It is admirable to attempt to create art for art's sake, as exemplified in the choreography and well selected music. The idea of an old vaudeville show could have been digestive, but the endless concoction of good and bad thrown together the other night, was nothing more than review for the helpless sake of review.



There is adequate talent on this campus, as we saw occasionally Saturday night. It should be used advantageously in the future.

Hillel To Bring Lecturers, Artists To Vermont Campus

This year Hillel is presenting four program in a series titled Jewish Expression in the Arts and American Culture. The University Family is invited to attend the recitals and lectures which will all be presented in the Museum Auditorium.

The first program is a "One Woman Show" which is announced as "An Evening With Hilde Marx." It will begin at eight o'clock, on Wednesday October 13. Miss Marx will deliver a program of monologues and poetry. Her performances have been very well received both in the United States and Canada. She uses no script and is therefore able to mold each performance for the audience that she is entertaining.

Hilde Marx has performed in programs sponsored by the United Nations Children Emergency Fund. American Red Cross, and UNSA.

Among the many favorable comments we have heard about Miss Marx' performance is.. "There just wasn't enough of it.." "All of us enjoyed the evening." "It was a perfect evening." "Entertaining.. Superb...Excellent... charming...pure entertainment." "An evening in the best tradition of literary cabaret."

Last year Hillel sponsored a program similar to this one. All of the students, faculty, members, and Burlingtonians who were there enjoyed the evening so much that it was decided to enlarge the scope of the entertainment. Our future schedule will bring to the University men and women of the world of Business, Science, Politics, and the Arts.

The first program, "An Evening With Hilde Marx" will be in the Fleming Museum Auditorium, on Wednesday evening October 13, at eight o'clock.

Welcome Dance At Weathervane Saturday Eve

The Weathervane will be the scene of an all-university dance this Saturday night.

The Fall Welcome Dance will feature the music of the Catamounts and plenty of refreshments will be available.

According to Lew Dan, president of the sponsoring Hillel group, "the dance should give all who attend a very enjoyable evening. We are sure that we have a large turnout. This sort of function is by no means limited to members of Hillel.

The Weathervane is out near the airport. Admission is $1.00 per couple.

is scheduled for November 17, and will feature "Van Meegeren's Faked Vermeers," the story of a struggling artist who becomes so infuriated with the unpopularity of his work that, in desperation, he shams the work of Vermeer and wins immediate success. The second film of the evening is "Williamsburg Restored," which deals with restoration of architecture and related problems.

Other program topics to be presented at later dates are "The Ballet In Motion Pictures," "Surrealism," "Motion Pictures and History," "Sculpture in Motion Pictures" and "The Movies and Literature."

Dr. Eakin held the faculty rank of Associate Professor of Education at UVM, and taught courses in Mental Hygiene, Personality Development, and Adolescent Psychology in extension, evening, and summer session programs. He came to the University from Findlay College in Ohio where he had been a professor of Theology and Dean of The Graduate School of Divinity. He is a graduate of Findlay himself. Dr. Eakin greatly expanded the Student Personnel and Adult Education programs while he was at UVM.

Exchange Plan

UVM must "import" as many as it "exports."

The idea originated among private men's and women's colleges; according to Dean Robert Kroepsch. The usual custom of granting full tuition to faculty children could not be applied to the daughter of a professor at Dartmouth College, for instance. Therefore, an arrangement with a women's college to accept the girl as a tuition-free student was made. In exchange, Dartmouth College would grant free tuition to one of their faculty children.

Benjamin Ansbacher, the son of Professor Heinz L. Ansbacher of the Psychology Department, of Professor Heinz L. Ansbacher of the Psychology Department, entered his freshman year at Amherst College as an exchange student. Studying at UVM under the plan are Artenas Packard, David Michael, and Pat Hoag from Dartmouth; Janice Lancaster of Bowdoin, Irmegard Downie, Colgate; and Rebecca French, Amherst.

UVM Music Club Invites Students To First Meeting

The University of Vermont Music Club will hold its first meeting in the very near future, at which the election of officers will take place. All students are invited to join; no formal musical training of any sort is needed. A deep interest in music of all kinds is necessary. Club meetings will include all types of musical entertainment, from classical to jazz, from old favorites to unknown pieces by well-known composers.

Club plans

The Club's plans for the new year include a trip to Montreal on the weekend of October 15-16, when the members will attend ballets and other musical events. Other trips for concerts and musical performances of all types have been tentatively scheduled, but no dates have been set as yet. At present these trips will be open only to members of the Music Club, but plans are being made which may soon enable all interested students to attend, whether or not they are members of the club. Another tentatively scheduled event is a joint performance with the Dance Club, to take place later in the year. Plans to sponsor a mixed University Glee Club are also being considered.

Past Program

The club's president, Frank Carr, voiced a hope that this year's program may be as successful as last year's. During the preceding year, the club presented two operas -- "Trouble in Tahiti," by Leonard Bernstein, and "Sunday Excursion," by Alec Wilder. In addition, they sponsored a madrigal group, made up of students, which sang before women's clubs and other civic organizations. Entertainment programs for faculty meetings were also organized, and this practice will undoubtedly be continued during the school year.

Cats Clawed From Behind By Black Bears, 23-20
Harriers Post 24-31 Win In Opener With Rensselaer

Damon and Grady In One, Two Spots; Cats Look Strong

by FRED SOLOMON

Last Saturday Archie Post's Cross-Country team opened its season successfully with a 24-31 win over Rensselaer. The 4.35 mile course was covered by first place finisher Larry Damon of Vermont in 25.35.2, right behind Damon was Vermont's Don Grady in 25.59. Rensselaer's top man, keating, finished third in 26.35. The following men also placed; Wadley of Vermont finished fourth, Davies of R.P.I. fifth, Divegart of R.P.I. sixth, Rensselaer's Wejar was seventh, Vermont's Howland was eighth, followed by Tafrate in ninth, and Beaver of R.P.I. in tenth. The time difference between the Cats first and fifth place finishers was 2.23. As the season progresses Coach Post hopes to have his men more closely bunched.

All in all, Coach Post was very satisfied with the results of the meet considering it was the opening test for both participants.

Union Next

This Saturday Vermont plays host to Union College. Last years meeting was won by the Cats 27-31. However, the Union men finished first and second in this meet and figure to be very tough this year. Union is led by Stack who captured first place last year, but Schecter and McKinnon who were Union's second and third place finishers are gone. Lost to Vermont are Joyner and Hawkinson who finished first and fourth for the Cats. Vermont's Damon, Grady, and Wadley figure to place very high in this meet. Since this is Union's opening meet it is almost impossible to know what Union has to offer in third, fourth, and fifth place finishers.

Meet The Varsity

ALAN McLAM

by DICK STEIN

One of the stalwarts of this season's varsity, a 20 year old Junior from East Corinth, Vermont, is halfback Alan McLam. Al, as he is better known, hopes to enter into the coaching field after he receives his degree from UVM's School of Education. Al, who stands five feet eleven inches and weighs 170 is thought by many to be one of the school's most versatile athletes. Not only does Al excell in football; but, also baseball and basketball as well. Last winter Al left the Varsity basketball team to train for Kake Walk. Walking for Kappa Sigma Fraternity along with "Bud" Dacey, Al, took a first place. To round out Al's campus life, it should be known that he is a member of the Gold Key Honorary Society.

Second On Ground

As a sophomore Al was the team's second leading pass-receiving ground gainer behind Nat Campana, who, by the way, ended up ninth in the nation's small colleges in this department.

Al attended Bradford Academy, Spaulding High and the Hun School, where he earned varsity letters in football, basketball and baseball. Al claims that one of his biggest thrills in sports was when he played in the New England High School Basketball Tournament.

EDWIN BECK

This next personality needs no introduction to the sports minded UVM student. Edwin "Eddie" Beck, from Waltham, Massachusetts, stands only five feet, eight and one half inches, 164 pounds; but, is nevertheless one of the hardest running UVM backs. Eddie is a twenty-one year old Junior, who is now a Political Science Major in the Education School. He hopes to remain in sports after graduation in the coaching line.

All State

While attending Waltham High School, Eddie was voted on the All State Football Team for two consecutive years. In his senior year, setting six school records, Eddie co-captained the All State Champion Team and was nominated as a High School All American. He also was a standout Basketball and Baseball player.

Saturday's Hero

During the baseball season, Eddie is Ralph Lapointe's starting left fielder. Like Al McLam Eddie is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity. Eddie is not only a fleet-footed halfback; but, also can pass from that slot. One of Coach Donnelly's favorite players is to have quarterback Mike Semans pitch out to Beck and have him pass to one of the ends. Eddie, if asked, would probably tell you that one of his biggest thrills in football was running the opening kickoff of the second half 82 yards for a T-D against Maine last Saturday.

Vermont Faces Dartmouth "B"; St. Mike Filler

by MARK BERNSTEIN

After a heartbreaking loss to the University of Maine, the UVM Catamounts will attempt to notch up their first win of the season against the Dartmouth "B" team this weekend.

This will be the second meeting of these two teams who began only last year, with Vermont the victor in a 38-13 contest. This game is listed through the courtesy of the Dartmouth Athletic Director "RED" Rolfe, who helped fill the gap after St. Michaels college abandoned the sport last winter.

The strength of the Dartmouth "B" team is for the present time unknown. But the Dartmouth varsity boasts of five good quarterbacks one of whom might see action at Centennial Field this weekend.

The Catamounts last weekend showed off some of their depth on the bench. Guard Harry Baumann excelled more than once as he broke the back of many a Maine play. Not to be forgotten was Johnny Galascione who switched from the backfield to play end. The versatile Galascione proved to be just what Vermont needed, offensively and defensively. With added strength in all positions the Cats will be out to claw the Indians from New Hampshire for the second year in a row.

Vermont Loses Early Game Lead To Favored Maine

by Ed Willard

An early 14 point lead just wasn't enough Saturday at Centennial Field as the Vermont Catamounts went down to defeat before the Black Bear's of the University of Maine by a 23-20 score. The Cat's fine running attack just couldn't carry the whole load as the talent packed Maine backfield, led by halfback John Small and reserve quarterback Pete Kostacopoulas pulled the Bears out of their early deficit and on to victory in the hard, evenly fought struggle.

Cast Open Early

From the opening gun well into the first quarter it looked as if the Catamounts were about to overcome their inability to beat Maine as they scored more points in the first ten minutes than ever before mustered against a Maine team. Captain Ed. Nemer started it off as he recovered a Maine fumble on the Bear's 36. Several running plays with a climaxing pass from Mike Semans to Ed. Beck produced the score and with McLam's placement, the Cats led 7-0. Another fumble, this time recovered by Vermont's Walt Johnson led to the second UVM score. Nemer, who ran hard throughout the contest carried the ball over the line to make it 13-0 Vermont with A. McLam's fourth successive placement of the year making it 14-0.

Bears Growl

In the second quarter, the Bear's began to growl and beginning with Don Douglas' (interception on the 22) they were in the game to stay. Two plays later, John Edgar carried into the end zone. After Co-captain Tommy Golden's placement, it was 14-7 Vermont until the half.

Sub Spoils Setup

Ed Beck climaxed the game for Vermont in the second half as he took the opening kick-off and raced 82 yards through the Maine team for a touchdown. McLam missed the placement, the score was 20-7 and young Pete Kostacopoulos entered the game for Maine. Four long passes later and the score was 21-20 Maine, as Kosty passed expertly to ends Cooper and Woodson.

The fourth quarter saw a lot of rough hard football as the Cats tried desperately to overcome the one point deficit. With less than two minutes to go, some Vermont strategy failed to give UVM possession in an outside kick after Maine had safetied and the game ended 23-20.

AS I SAW IT

The radio announcer from Orano Maine who was sending the game back to the people in Maine announced over and over again, "I can't understand it folks, these people here just aren't cheering". Little did the poor man realize he was observing a phenomena every bit as common at UVM as rain. With a 14 point lead, this quarter won ders if a halfhearted yell or two wouldn't have made the boys go on to better things. No reflection on the Frosh. You can't do it alone kids.

New starters Harry Baumann Howie Braithwaite and Johnie Galascione showed they had it. Boy can that Baumann (bow-man) hi hard for a little guy.

Clause Stricken From Charter Says Local Phi Delt Chapter

By Robert W. Smith

Robert Crawford, of the UVM Phi Delta Theta chapter, has offered evidence in a special CYNIC interview in clarification of last week's report on the controversy involving the Phi Delt chapter at Williams College. Crawford attended the National Convention at Mackinac Island, Michigan, from September 1, through September 4, and considers himself qualified to act as spokesman on this subject. Mr. Crawford is vice-president of the local chapter of Phi Delta Theta.

The history of the controversy, according to Bob, reveals that the National has been discussing eliminating the discriminatory clause from the constitution since 1948. It was felt, up until this year that not enough opposition was presented to warrant dropping the clause. This year there was too much objection to the clause to overlook it any longer. A number of chapters were under administrative pressure from their individual colleges, and with so much interest in the problem by these administrative bodies, something had to be done towards deciding immediately.

A decision was reached whereby the National Fraternity removed any existing discriminatory clauses, thereby eliminating the possibility of administrative repercussions on the local campuses. There is now, since the 1954 National Convention, no discriminatory clause in the constitution of Phi Delta Theta.

The Williams College chapter, now known as a local fraternity and named Order of Phi Delta, was dropped from the national rolls in September 1952. The reason for this suspension was simply a violation of the existing by-laws by the local chapter, then known as Phi Delta Theta, which is an automatic procedure in such cases.

Special Talk By President This Tuesday

President Borgmann will discuss the University's financial program for the next two years, together with its implications for in-state and out-of-state students, in the Chapel this Tuesday, October 19, at 4:00 p.m. All students who do not have other academic appointments at that time are invited to attend. Faculty and staff members are also welcome.

Program Series Will Present 'Pirates Of Penzance' Monday

Scene from the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "Pirates of Penzance." The UVM Program Series is initiating its Fall season with this production Monday evening at Memorial Auditorium.

Curtain At 8:15 In Memorial

By Michael Abramson

On October the 18th, the University of Vermont will have the pleasure of seeing the Pirates of Penzance dramatized by the American Savoyards Company,

The American Savoyards Company was established five years ago in New York City. Under the producer-directorship of Miss Dorothy Raedler, the company has flourished.

In the summer of 1949, the troupe moved into the Jan Hus House in New York City. They were prepared to play at this theater for ten weeks; however, the critics and audiences were so impressed by the performances, that the opera remained there for three and one-half years. This was the longest Gilbert and Sullivan engagement in the city's history.

When the American Savoyards appear here, Rue Knapp will be seen in the leading masculine rule, Mr. Knapp joined the company in 1948. In addition to tenor solo work, Mr. Knapp is the assistant musical director and the company diction coach. Appearing with him is his sister, Miss Sally Knapp. It is she who has the leading soprano roles in the company.

This past summer, the Savoyards played a full season of Gilbert and Sullivan repertory in Monmouth, Maine. From opening night on, the company played before a capacity house.

'Soviet Police' Topic Of Sunday Night Lecture

' The Secret Police -- Keystone of Soviet Totalitarianism " will be the topic of a lecture by Father Leopold L.S. Braun this Sunday at the Cathedral High School Auditorium, at 8:30 P.M.

From 1934 to 1945 Father Braun was stationed in Moscow, as Chaplain to American Catholics. He was pastor of the last remaining Catholic Church.

Throughout the entire period of World War II, Father Braun remained at his post, even during the siege when the Wehrmacht was only nine miles away. During that critical time, the Capitol has been evacuated by the government and the diplomatic corps. The American Chaplain was thus brought to witness scenes and events carefully withheld from public knowledge, the entire body of foreign correspondents having been also evacuated to the temporary capitol of Kouibyshev.

Father Braun speaks, reads and writes Russian fluently and has a long first hand experience with the Russian people in all the aspects of their national life. His contacts with the Russian people and officialdom of the Soviet Union were therefore direct and immediate.

The lecture is open to the University Family. Tickets are available at McAuliffe's on Church Street. General admission is $1.00; Reserved $2.00.

The Burlington Court of the Catholic Daughters of America is sponsoring the program.

Cheers? What Are They? Stands Silent, Team Fights

"I can't understand it folks, these people here just aren't cheering," said the Maine announcer at the football game two weeks ago. As Ed Willard said in the last CYNIC, "Little did he realize he was observing a phenomena every bit as common at UVM as rain. With a 14 point lead, this quarter wonders if a halfhearted yell or two wouldn't have made the boys go to better things."

UVM fans remain emotionless at Catamount games.
By Levine, SPS.

And a talk with the players will assure even the most dubious that some real spirit in the stands could have hade a big difference in the maine game. Instead of the team letting us down, we let the team down!. A lot of students have been saying that something should be done about the situation. Yes, and that's just what the Pep Committee's been shouting for the past month. But the Committee has not only been shouting, they've gone out and really tried to do something about the situation.

Yell, Yell, Yell!

Let's listen to Bob "Sleepy" Hill, president of the Pep Committee while he sounds off on the problem, "During the Maine game their were times when we were right on the line, and yet not a peep came out of the stands. Why, the small card cheering squad made more noise than all the rest of the UVM spectators put together! "We want people to yell, Yell, YELL!"

Besides boosting the team, Bob feels that an audience which is alive to the game

See Improvement In Care Of Lounge Says COSA Hardy

By Stan Sakowitz

As reported in the last issue of the " Cynic,"Student Association Councilman, David O'Brien proposed that the lounge be closed, if students continued to mistreat it. Since that time, it is felt that there has been a definite improvement in the treatment of the lounge by the students.

Mr. Donald Hardy, Coordinator of Student Affairs, feels that "a very small segment of the student body misuses the lounge." He continues that "a small group use it in a way that they wouldn't treat their own home." Mr. Hardy stated that the Student Association is attempting to discover how to encourage better use of the lounge. They also discussed the possibility of closing the lounge on Wednesday during chapel service to help lessen the situation. Mr. Hardy's general impression is that "the use of the lounge has somewhat improved."

When asked how he thought, the students treated the lounge, Dean Kroepsch, Dean of Adminixtration, said: "I think thus far I have been discouraged, but I have hope that students will come to a point where they will want to treat it with respect and if they do, it will encourage others to do so in the future." He added that he was "happy that there is growing concern on behalf of the students."

If furds are available, Student Association hopes to Start Collection Of Paper Bound Books In Library

That books must be signed for when taken from the library, and that they must be returned by a specific date, are time-honored library traditions. For a special collection of books in Billings Library, however, this tradition no longer applies. A collection of over 100 paper bound books has been set up in a book case in the main entrance hall of the library from which students can take books without signing for them and without having them due on a particular date. This is a self-service library where students may help themselves and are asked only to return a book to the shelf when they have finished reading it.

No signature is necessary.

Chances to Spacemen

The collection consists of a wide variety of reading material, both fiction and non-fiction. One may read about the age of Chaucer, or about space travel and life on other worlds. The poems of Robert Browning, or, if you prefer, of Ogden Nash are available. One's taste in fiction might be served by Carson McCullers' "Re-

Advocates Regional Education

By Max Ansbacher

"Vermont college students could have even better facilities in certain subjects if the three Northern New England states would cooperate to form regional schools." This was one of the points made by Dean of the College of Agriculture, Joseph E. Carrigan, last Saturday when he led the discussion at the Round Table.

Dean Carrigan had praise for the Vermont Legislatire, and said that it had been very generous, but he continued, "In some subjects it is just impossible for a small state like Vermont to support all the many facilities required for a complete university."

Dean CArrigan went on to explain that the New England states could easily support schools in dentistry, horticulture, forestry, and veterinary.

" Enjoyable Meeting "

Almost forty people attend the dinner meeting which was held at the Klifa Club. Max Ansbacher, Round Table President, said "From what I've been able to gather, most people enjoyed the meeting very much. I'm certain that those who attended got a good background of the present UVM-State of Vermont relationship."

Dean Carrigan

Dean Carrigan gave an outline of the history of the history of the University of Vermont, emphasising the confusion which existed over the three corporations in one, and the role of the State in financial assistance. In closing, Dean Carrigan stated, "I feel that the people of Vermont want their children to be able to get as good an education for the same cost as the children in other states. I feel confident that this will be fact in the near future."

Election

A short business meeting preceded the discussion, at which Leonnie Strachen was elected Vice-President of the Round Table and Susan Wakefield was elected Treasurer. These posts had become vacant over the summer.

In the discussion which followed Dean Carrigan's talk the granting of scholarships was presented as a possible method of providing low cost education to deserving students. Dean Robert Kroepsch pointed out that this system had many administrative difficulties which made it impractiable.

It was also explained that any extra funds which would come from the legislature at the present session would be used exclusively to lower tuition for Vermont residents, and not for expanding or improving the University.

Museum Acquires New Pieces Get Renaissance, Boroque

By Carol L. Chase

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum has received sixty museum pieces since last August, Dr. Alan Gowan, Director of Fleming Museum, has informed the CYNIC. Among these new acquisitions are a Renaissance and a Baroque pieces which were donated by Mr. C. Ruxton Love of New York City.

The Renaissance piece is a bronze figure of Atlas holding up a large sphere which represents the world; on either side of the figure are candlesticks. The large sphere is in actuality an ink well evidenced by the ink residue around the sides of the sphere. This Renaissance figure was created in the year 1490 by the School of Andrea Riccio.

The other piece donated to the museum by Mr. Love is a replica of a seventeenth century Borghese warrior which Stefano Moderna created in the third or fourth century, B.C. The Borghese warrior is typically Baroque, according to Dr. Gowan, in that it portrays violent mood and action. Both pieces are valued at several thousand dollars.

Numerous materials from Africa and South America are included in the recently acquired group. Mr. Henry Schnackenberg has donated the South American pieces which vary from medicine charms to weaving implements. This South American group dates back to the pre-Colombian period which include the Aztec, Mayan and Toltec tribes.

The Renaissance and Baroque pieces will be introduced on October 20 at 8:00 P.M., in the Robert Hull Fleming Museum at which time the first in a series of teas will be given. The public is welcome. The museum will have open house once a month with coffee and tea being served. During this series of informal teas the pieces recently attained for the museum will be introduced and discussed by Dr. Gowan. There also is a possibility that a number of the more easily-handled specimens will be passed around for closer viewing.

Creative Writing Publication Now Being Organized

" The Centaur," U.V.M's new literary publication, is now in the process of organization. It will be the Centaur's aim to achieve a balance between high a balance between high literary quality and readability in its writings.

Contributions will be encouraged from the students in the creative writing classes, but students majoring in other fields are urged to submit their writing efforts.

The literature will cover almost the entire scope of creative writing - short stories, poetry, essays, and playlets.

The editor-in-chief, Marsha Pearl, and the assistant editor, Hersl Spiro, have announced that an open house to select a staff will be held in the near future.

" The Centaur," which was issued once last spring, is expected to be published three or four times during the current school year.

The idea for this publication developed among the students of one of last year's creative writing classes. It is now under the consideration of the Student Association for its approval and an appropriation.

flection in a Golden Eye," Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein," Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye," Farrell's "My Days of Anger," the short stories of Robert Penn Warren, or works of new authors appearing in "Discovery" and "New World writing." In non-fiction, in addition to Chaucer and space travel, subjects covered by the collection include ballet, show business, the weather, astronomy, geology, history, politics, and religion. Biographies of Eisenhower, Eleanor Roosevelt, Benjamin Franklin, and Agnes de Mille ("Dance to the Piper") are also included.

According to Sidney B. Smith, Director of Libraries, "The Library has provided the basic collection, but it is hoped that students and faculty will donate their own "paper bounds" to the selfservice shelves. In this way the collection will grow rapidly, providing readers with a wide choice of material."

To donate a book simply bring it to the library and put it in the self-service bookcase. In order to keep the collection growing, it is not only necessary that books be added through faculty and student donations, but books must be returned when the reader has finished them, or the collection will be rapidly depleted.

QUARTZ CRYSTALS

How a 1¼ hour "gem-cutting" operation became an 8-minute mechanized job

PROBLEM: Preparing quartz crystals for use as electronic frequency controls calls for the highest degree of precision. So much so, in fact, that prior to World War II skilled gem-cutters were employed to do the job.

But during the war, there were not enough gem-cutters to keep up with the demand for crystals in radar, military communications and other applications.

Western Electric tackled the job of building into machines the skill and precision that had previously called for the most highly skilled operators.

SOLUTION: Here is how quartz crystals are made now—by semi-skilled labor in a fraction of the time formerly required:

A quartz stone is sliced into wafers on a reciprocating diamond-edged saw, after determination of optical and electrical axes by means of an oil bath and an X-ray machine. Hairline accuracy is assured by an orienting fixture.

The wafers are cut into rectangles on machines equipped with diamond saws. The human element is practically eliminated by means of adjustable stops and other semi-automatic features.

The quartz rectangles are lapped automatically to a thickness tolerance of plus or minus .0001". A timer prevents overlapping. Finally, edges are ground to specific length and width dimensions on machines with fully automatic microfeed systems.

Most of these machines were either completely or largely designed and developed by Western Electric engineers.

RESULTS: With skill built into the machines—with costly hand operations eliminated—this Western Electric mechanization program raised production of quartz crystals from a few thousand a year to nearly a million a month during the war years. This is just one of the many unusual jobs undertaken and solved by Western Electric engineers.

Quartz stones are cut into wafers on this diamond-edged saw, with orientation to optical axis controlled by fixture. This is just one of several types of machines designed and developed by Western Electric engineers to mechanize quartz cutting.

UVM Band, Choir, Orchestra, Plan For Coming Year

By Shirley O'Neil

The University of Vermont band will accompany the football team to Northfield for the annual game with Norwich on Oct. 23. The band, under director J.F. Lechnyr, is presently occupied with rehearsals for the pep rallies here on campus and for all the home football games. Concerts and other performances will be held after the close of the football season. The officers of the band for this year include Donald Bicknell, drum major; Howard Klinkostein, assistant manager; Robert Benoit, Gordon Hoxie, Robert Chapman, and Stephen Plumb, quartermasters; Linda Pattison, public relations officer; Carolyn Silsby, Lila Hart, and Ruth Sherlock, librarians.

Joint Concerts

The University Choir, under the direction of Professor Howard G. Bennett, and the Orchestra, conducted by Professor Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, have scheduled several joint performances for the coming academic year. They will join forces in presenting the annual Christmas Concert on Dec. 12, which will feature excerpts from Handel's "Messiah" and Bach's "Christmas Oratorio", favorite Christmas carols, and some modern works. An Orchestra concert is scheduled for March 3, at which the Choir will also sing various selections. The annual Lenten-Easter concert, another joint presentation, will take place on March 20. In addition, various concerts and other musical performances are being planned for presentation throughout the year, but no specific dates have been announced as yet.

Classical Club To Present Movie At First Meeting

By Leonore Weinstein

"The Last Days of Pompeii", an all-star movie, will be shown at the monthly meeting of the Classical Club at the Fleming Museum on Nov. 9 at 7:00. The president of the club, Cynthia Wooster, said, "Everyone is invited to come free of charge to see the movie."

The Classical Club is an honorary society whose purpose is to foster an appreciation of the classics, concentrating mainly on the Greek and Roman civilizations. Membership in the club is attained by achieving high averages in Ancient History, Latin, Greek, or Greek literature courses. At the next meeting there will be the initiation of the new members for the year.

The meetings which are held monthly often have speakers invited to talk on subjects of interest to the members of the club. These meetings are usually open to anyone on campus who wants to attend. Occasionally a meeting's program will be a play or a reading of a work by a Greek or Roman author which is sometimes performed by some of the members.

The big event of the year is the Roman Banquet in February sponsored by the club. A meal, served and eaten in the Roman style complete with togas, reclining couches, and slaves, is enjoyed by the members.

Tentative plans are also

UN Speaker, And IR Club's Program Dinner Highlight

Although the International Relations Club has not held any meetings yet, there are interesting plans under way for this year's program. At a conference last spring, the club came up with the idea of holding a buffet dinner which would feature the serving of foreign dishes and would be run with the help of foreign students on campus.

The club plans to have speakers for several meetings, among which will be a speaker from the United Nations during United Nations week. Also, the members will attend conferences at other colleges.

Although club had a small membership last year, a change for the better is expected this year because a large number of students signed up for it at registration.

Find Fountain No Thirst Quencher

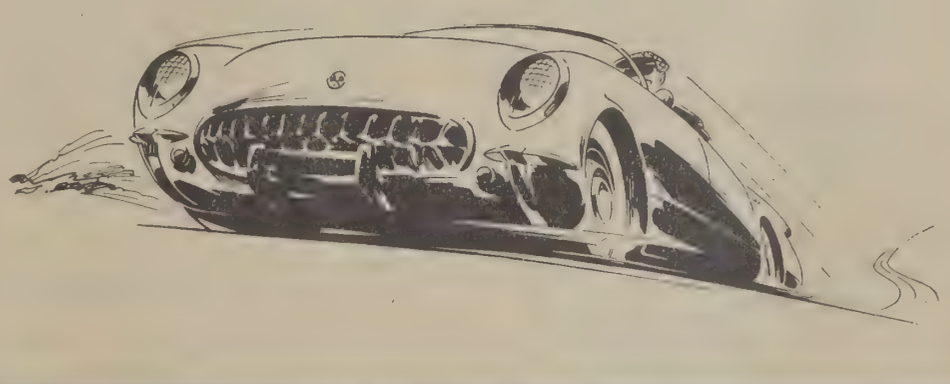
By Peggy Richter

He staggers, he stumbles, he falls...weary are his limbs, wracked is his brain. He is totally, completely and utterly exhausted from what?...waiting.

He waited a long, long orientation week while traditions were crammed into his head. He waited through three tedious beginning weeks of school. He spent long hours and weary moments in his dormitory room -- waiting.

Rumors flew around his anxious ears all day Monday. He was warned to stay in his room. But anxiety surpassed intelligence--he hung out of the windows, raised a racket and caused a general commotion. He even went so far as to center a spotlight on east campus.

The stage is set, the curtain drawn and the freshman waits. He waits through a through a minor parade of upper class cars around Buckham, Wills and Chittenden; and he waits through a weary and long room check.



However, other anxious persons were waiting also. President Borgmann and Dean Kroepsch waited while the freshmen rioted and the cars paraded. Six policemen, fifteen auxilaries and a single paddy wagon waited at the city reservoir.

Tradition has had its tolls though, and the fountain drains dry slowly. The cars leave, Borgmann and Kroepsch patrol, and the freshmen still, endlessly remains waiting for the fountain fight. The campus quiets and the dorms sleep peacefully under a blackened sky.

The only sound on east campus was three girls returning from the library to East Hall. Two were in the lead murmuring softly while the third lagged behind. Suddenly a man stepped out of the shadows and politely questioned, "Would you girls like an escort?" The lone girl warned her two companions to be careful - "you never know who it might be." And going a few steps farther they turned around in the light and saw President Borgmann walking slowly home..

If you drive for the sheer zest of it you owe yourself this hour!

If your hands rejoice in the precise balance of a fine gun or the sweet response of a racing sloop . . . then you owe yourself an hour with the Chevrolet Corvette.

You'll find it is, quite literally, like no other car in the world—a heart-lifting blend of the true sports car with all that is best in American engineering.

There is the velvet smoothness of a Powerglide automatic transmission (but with the classic floor selector-lever).

The trouble-free durability of a Chevrolet "Blue-Flame" engine (but with three side draft carburetors to unleash its flashing 150 horsepower).

The ruggedness of an X-braced box girder frame (but with the astonishing impact resistance of a glass-fiber-and-plastic body).

Luxurious seating for driver and passenger in deep foam rubber (but cradled in the traditional security of bucket seats).

Generous luggage room, the panoramic sweep of a deeply curved windshield, the flair of tomorrow's styling (but within the polo-pony compactness of a real road car).

The Corvette blends all this and more. For it is a driver's car . . . a low-slung torpedo with a center of gravity only 18 inches above the concrete . . . with outrigger rear springs that make it hold to the road like a stripe of paint . . . with a 16 to 1 steering ratio that puts needle-threading accuracy at your finger tips.

Frankly, the Corvette is a "limited edition," made only in small numbers. It is intended only for the man or woman to whom driving is not just transportation but an exhilarating adventure, a sparkling challenge to skill and judgment. If you are one of these, then you owe yourself an hour with a Chevrolet Corvette.

Call us now and let us set up a demonstration run . . . for in a short 60 minutes you can discover that motoring has a whole new dimension of delight.

YOUR CHEVROLET DEALER

on top of the hill

It appears to us that the choice of a Homecoming date is not the only piece of schedule mismanagement in this semester's planning.

With so many important events being written into history these days, the UVM family finds itself isolated on top of a hill with nought but the New York Times to inform us of the present state of world affairs.

There has been to date since the opening of the school year, not one outside speaker on this campus. We remember mentioning last semester the mediocrity of the speakers who had visited the campus during the 1953-54 school year. This year we haven't even had the opportunity to voice an opinion one way or the other.

It was our feeling last year that the Administration and Faculty should do something in the way of initiating a prominent guest lecture series. The Warren Austin Institute presented during the summer months the type of program to which we refer. Outstanding speakers, each an expert on some field of national or world affairs, were on campus nearly every week.

While student groups sporadically bring various speakers to Burlington during the school year, something above and beyond a student-sponsored program is essential in a university of this size. It's time for the Administration to take a few steps backward and obtain a fresh perspective on matters of this sort. In a world which grows smaller every day, it is essential to make a part of one's experience the events which are unfolding in the capitals of the rest of the world. Unfortunately, one cannot subscribe to, and read every newspaper which is published.

The University can fill the void which now exists if it puts its mind to the task presented. We sincerely hope that college educational benefits can be brought to Vermont residents at lower tuition rates; but in attempting to do this, let's first be sure that the educational benefits are available.

who ya votin' for?

With Student Association elections for councilmen coming up in a week or so, we wonder whether or not the candidates for office know what they are getting into. Furthermore, we wonder whether the voters will know whom they are voting for, and why.

On most other campuses that we know of, some sort of party system is existent. Such is not the case at UVM. The CYNIC, however, stands fully behind the party system. We believe it to be the only means of bringing the candidates and the issues to the student body.

Since we find ourselves lacking such a system, the CYNIC next week will bring to the students the candidates and their past records. We will also attempt to bring the major issues to your attention and, wherever possible, the candidates' stands.

Outside The Ivory Tower

Second in a series. A column based on world affairs, written by the nation's top debater.

Germany is a three time loser. Three times the Prussian boot has marched across the face of Europe. Three time losers under American laws get life imprisonment, but in the court of world politics, Germany has been granted both a reprieve and a new pair of boots. The assumption is that they won't march our way next time.

The reasoning which lead to the decision to rearm Western Germany appears sound on the surface. It is Russia, not Germany, which threatens the freedom of the world with one hundred seventy five divisions of troops, twenty-two of which are in East Germany. The diplomats face a grim ultimatum set by the military leaders. It will be virtually impossible to reconquer Europe against an enemy using atomic weapons. Massive amphibious landings are militarily as extinct as The Great Wall of China. Defend Europe or else.... ...yet it is claimed that such defence largely hinges on a rearmed Western Germany.

Reassurances are liberally awarded to those of us who still don't trust the Germany that found no difficulty in destroying six million human beings for no better reason than their "racial inferiority." We are told that Germany will produce no atomic, bacteriological, or chemical weapons. Her troops will be carefully integrated in the overall structure of N.A.T.O. English troops will remain on the continent. But...

What assurance have we that rearmed Western Germany will willingly accept separation from East Germany? Is the growing nationalist, "rightist" trend to be disregarded? Will Germany forget the Saar? Alsace and Lorraine? The provinces ceded to Poland? Have the Hitler-trained youth shed the stamp of the Swastika? Or does the spirit of Hitler lie dormant awaiting the call of the military bugle and the sight of the fanatic waving the nationalistic flag?

We don't mean to suggest that Germany will set out to conquer the world once more. We don't mean that she will become a more terrifying enemy than Russia. Some have pointed out, though, that a rearmed "rightest" Germany might either involve the West in a global war in her fight to regain her lost provinces, or ally once more with Russia and march in the wrong direction.

When the stakes are only twelve divisions, is it worth the risk? Those of us who don't trust three time losers might well say, no!

Poet's Corner

By Jane Clegg

Listen Vermonters and you shall hear
Of how UVM was founded here.
'Twas in seventeen-hundred and ninety-one
That our fair school was first begun.

Ira Allen donated four Thousand pounds, then collected more
And said "Burlington shall be the place."
The General Assembly reviewed the case.

In 1800 four students enrolled
And UVM history began to unfold.
Then College Hall was built and lo—
UVM began to grow.

'Twas in the spring of '24
That College Hall stood there no more.
For a fierce red flame came sweeping 'roun
And burnt our college to the ground.

In the month of June in '25
College interest began to revive.
Burlington, though only small,
Gave the money to rebuild the hall.

Lafayette, coming from Bunker Hill,
Gave the students a mighty thrill,
And UVM claimed him for their own
As he laid in place the corner stone.

Now we of nineteen fifty-four
Look back in awe at days of yore
And as we ponder all of them,
We feel a part of UVM.

Around The Green

Edited by Joan Breslin

Somebody sent us in a little verse pertaining to a rather universal malady, the signs of which are recognizable through letters addressed to a lad named John...often symbolized by either a purple colored piece of wood or metal pole..and sometimes further illustrated by the pulling motion of a long chain...

Here t'is:

I thought that I should never see
Myself a'sailing out to sea
And if I e'er departing went
Not, by george, via sewer vent...
From my life you've made a mockery
I leave descending bathroom crockery!

Pinnings, engagements, and weddings seem to flourish in an Alpha Chi summer, with Anne Bogert pinned to Ken Wadley, Phi Delta Theta. "Diamonds are a girls best friend" is the popular refrain with Joan Gilmore engaged to Paul Low, Sigma Phi; Mary Towne to Jim Cronin, Delta Psi; Donna Newhall to Ronald Larrow, Delta Psi; Jill Mudgett to Jim Murphy; and Trixie Hansen to Nelson Jones of Dartmouth.

Wedding Bells have rung for Jackie Stowell, '54, married to Marvin Krupinski of West Point '52; Bev Cole to Roger Gallic alumnus of '53; Jean McLaughlin, '54, to Ed Peterson Alumnus of '52; and, Vera Saville to Lt. Jim Thompson at the Ethan Allen Air Force Base.

Jan Schenck, '54, Ellen Hind, '54, and Joyce Nunes, Vais, '54, tell us they spent a very enjoyable summer in Europe.

GAMMA PHI BETA

Marlene Goodenough, '55, of Hartford, Conn., was pinned to Frank Carr, '56, of Kew Gardens, L.I., N.Y. (Acacia)

Gamma Phi Alums visiting UVM during the Homecoming weekend were: Katie Corbin, '54, of Chatham, N.J.; Sue LaCroix, '54, of Glen Ridge, N.J.; Sherry Young, '57, of Feura Bush, N.Y. Barbara Erickson, '54, of Pembroke, Mass., is spending six weeks at the Gamma Phi House while practice teaching in the Burlington Junior High School.

Gamma Phi was honored by the presence of its International Membership chairman and International President-elect, Mrs. Gerald Arnold. The actives, pledges and alumnae held a coffee hour in her honor, Wednesday, October 6.

The Gamma Phis did alot of middle aisle marching over the summer, too.

Josie Norton, '53, of Middletown Springs, Vt., married Jere Burger, of Philadelphia, a Theologian student at Harvard, August 28th, in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Barbie Cockey, '54, of Middletown, N.Y., became Mrs. Doug (Clint) Thompson, Sigma Phi of Cleveland, Ohio - now of Windsor, Conn., on July 24th.

We forgot to include this in the Kappa Sig news. The Gamma Phis happioy announce the wedding of:

Mary Strobert, of Maplewood, N.J., to Howie Merrick, '52, Kappa Sig of Brooklyn, N.Y., on September 11th.

Ana Maureen Lyons, '54, of Orange, N.J., to James Buckley, Class of '53, St. Mike's from Whitehall, N.J., on June 26th.

Marilyn Covell, Gamma Phi, '55, became Mrs. William Wakefield, '54, of Hiram College, on June 19th.

Adrienn Elliot, '55, of Rutland, married Richard Cowles, Sigma Phi Epsilon, '55, on June 19th.

And in the Soltaire Section sit:

Joyce McMahon, '53, of St. Albans, who is engaged to 2nd Lt. James Lee Wasson, Jr. of Boise, Idaho.

And Jane Rendlemau, of Anna, Illinois, and alum from the University of Illinois who received her Master's here in '54, to Al Whiting, SAE '54, from Delmar, New York.

SIGMA GAMMA

Sigma Gamma sorority initiated six girls Sunday morning at a sunrise service conducted by the president, Phyllis Bracey. Those initiated include Marion Fassett, '56, of Enosburg Falls, Lea Manor, '57, of Jericho; Martha Monteith, '57, of Enosburg Falls; Ada Pratt, '57, of South Royalton; Mary Ann Wondolowski, '57, of Middletown, N.Y.

On Sept. 27, the alumni held a corn roast for the active members at the home of Mrs. Avery Palmer, in Charlotte.

At the weekly meeting Monday night, several new officers were elected. They include vice-president, Ada Pratt; corresponding secretary, Martha Monteith; news reporter, Lea Manor; song leader, Jan Parker; and assistant song leader, Phyllis Bracey.

The Sigma Gammas had a real reason for rejoicing recently. One of their founders and their first president, Mrs. Consuelo Northrup Bailey, was elected the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor of the State of Vermont. During the past years Mrs. Bailey has been Speaker of the House in Vermont, State Senator, State's Attorney, and on the Republican National Committee.

PI PHI

Sally Smith, '56, Pi Phi, and Fred Hackett, '55, Delt Psi, both of Burlington are engaged as of last weekend. All of only good things are wished them both.

Pat Kolk, Sally Cook, Mary Alice Leete, Lynne Stevens, Norma Jean Palen, Judy Walker, Nancy McMahon (Class of '54), Midge Haflinger, Pat Dolan, Gerrie Quinn, Nancy Hinsdill - all Pi Phis, and Marsha Hollenbeck, Alpha Chi, - partook of Operation R.P.I. this past weekend. Do you find that the world is shrinking, girls? From all reports, it has - also a fabulous time had by all!

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Bobbie Mett, Joanie Holmgren, and Marie Beckman were pledged Monday, October 4. Best wishes to all of them.

The next day a dinner and dessert hour was held in Miss Harris honor.

We're sending prewedding best wishes to Jane Martin, '54, and Bill Thompson, '54, Sigma Nu, whose nuptials take November 20th in Manhasset, Long Island.

And while in the shoes and rice department we's like to send congratulations to these new Theta Mrs.-es and their lucky Mr.-s.

Willie Loding, '54, - Bob Thompson, '52, ATO;
Edie Marsh, '53, - Bill Gambee, '53, Sigma Nu,
Mary LIb James, '54, - Gordon Hay, '50, Norwich,
Nancy Preston, '54, - Bill Johnson, Darmouth, now Harvard Law,
Gail Nelson, '55, - Avery Hall, Phi Delta Theta,
Mimi Merrill, '53, - Roger Fries, '52, Theta Chi, Barbara Hardy, '52, - John Dennismore.

And the proud parents of Kenneth James Blakeman, Sue Wilson, '53, and Bob Blakeman, '52, Sig Nu, announce his 9 lbs. 13 oz., arrival on September 13 in Brattleboro.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The S.A.E. men enjoyed another successful Homecoming this year, with several of the alumni returning. The buffet supper Saturday afternoon, Oct. 2, put on by Bob Hilton, and the party Saturday evening under the direction of Jim Smith were both enjoyed by all. With Homecoming past the Sons of Minerva are presently engaged in the rushing activities. On Wednesday, October 6, S.A.E. was honored by the visit of one of their most important National officers, John O. Mosely. A supper and special meeting, at which he spoke on the history of S.A.E., were held in his honor Wednesday evening. Several of the alumni were present. Last Sunday afternoon an all campus tea, especially for the freshman women, took place and was a success. Next Saturday evening, October 16, there will be a party at the house. Currently, the S.A.E.s are engaged in an extensive redecorating program which includes the complete remodeling of the second and third floors, and at least partial redecorating elsewhere in the house. Also included in the plans is the purchase of many new pieces of furniture for most of the rooms in the house.

SIGMA NU

Last week the following members of Sigma Nu were initiated into the brotherhood: Steve Millard, Albany, N.Y.; Andre Beauvilliers, Montreal, Quebec; Leroy Meshel; Long Island, N.Y.; Bud Esaacson, Tenafly, N.J.

Several alumni returned for the Homecoming week-end. Among those present were: Bill Thompson, Jack Burke, Bob and Dave Willey, John Conant, Tom McGuire, Frank Passaro, John Dowling, Bruce Judd, Howie Bouve, Ron Bowman, John Jackson, John Jacobsen, Fran Perry, Mark Margiotta and Dave Wright.

Sigma Nu started the football season with a decisive win over Sigma Phi, 43 - 6. The record to date is 2 wins and 1 loss.

Several brothers of Sigma Nu attended the wedding of ex-commander Jack Burke to last year's Kake Walk Queen Bev Chase (Tri Delt) on Saturday, October 9th.

Study Classes Help To Orient Frosh Boys

By Fred Jungmann

Under the direction of Mr. Ernest Stockwell, Office of Student Personnel, a new orientation program for Freshmen Men has been initiated this year. The purpose of the program is to acquaint the students with college work, what it offers, and what is expected of the student in the execution of the work.

The first meeting, held in the Ira Allen Chapel September 22, featured a panel discussion on the general topic of college study habits and was attended by all the men in the Residence Halls. Six additional classes are planned for which the text will be "How To Study" by Stratton. The people attending will learn use of the PQRST method.

Experimental Idea

Out of three hundred men who attended the September meeting, one hundred and ninty one signed for the additional six classes. At the first class one hundred and forty three of these were present. A conflict with Army R.O.T.C. physical examinations accounts for most of the forty two signees who did not show up.

Dean Kroepsch referred to the program as Stockwell's idea, eminating out of discussions of the Student Advisory committee. He furthur commented that he thought, "The idea is an excellent experiment, and the results will be helpful in planning future programs."

Mr. Stockwell stated "The tremendous interest on the part of the Freshmen points up the need for this type of orientation," He went on to say "The program this year is experimental and it is hoped that it will be broadened and improved next year."

Professors Instruct

At the first meeting, which was compulsory, the panal consisted of six members. These were: Professor Fred Marston, English Dept., Chairman; Dean Kidder, Arts and Sciences; Professor Donald Gregg, Chemistry Dept.; Fred Hackett, Senior; Dick Ireland, Senior; and Bob Stetson, Senior. The next stage of the program is a series of six classes, also held in the Ira Allen Chapel. The first class featured Mr. Malcolm Severance of the Commerce and Economics Dept., who will discuss the PQRST method and techniques for study.

The second class, also under Mr. Severance, will learn outlining and put the PQRST method in use during the class. Professor Murial Hughes English Dept., will teach both the third class, which will learn the art of listening to lecture and taking notes, and the fourth class, which will be tested on material from the preceding class.

This class will also receive furthur information about outlining and underlining in text books. Dr. Lois Otterman of the reading clinic will handle the last two classes. The fifth class will see a sound film, "How Good Is Your Reading?" The sixth class will be devoted to a discussion preparing for, and the taking of examinations. It will end with a summary of the course.

Foreign Students Relate Their Impressions Of UVM

By Elaine Grossman

"L' Universite de Vermont est magnifique". The eyes of pert blond Joyce McQuilkin sparkled as she discussed some of the differences between U.V.M. and colleges in her native country, Canada. "French is spoken in almost every part of Canada. The school buildings are very old and quaint, and the students are very conservative. The Canadian's dress is similar to the American's; socks and loafers are worn by all the young people. The national fraternities and sororities have their prominent part in college life."

Canadian

Michael Samuelson, another Canadian classmate of ours, says, "The college life in America is basically the same as in Canada. However, the girls in America are tres chic, and even the young children are allowed to go to the movies. This is a privilege that the Canadian youth does not enjoy until the age of 16 years. I've also been introduced to pizza, which seems to be a teen-age fancy here in America."

Columbian

Now we will take a quick trip down the globe to Columbia, South America, where we find the home of Roberto Gutierrex. Since Roberto does not speak English, it was necessary for him to have an interpreter. "Universidad de Vermont es bueno! " he exclaimed with fervor.

It is definitely evident that these foreign students are happy to be in America attending the University of Vermont. Everyone proclaimed that U.V.M. is, by far, the friendliest school they have ever encountered and that the rest of their days here will be packed with adventure and gayety.

Alumni Fund Goal Of $40,000 Will Mean Additions For UVM

By Bruce S. Evans

"On the basis of the 1953-54 effort, the Greater UVM Fund Committee has given us a real assignment - a stimulating challenge. They've assigned us a goal of $40,000 for the 1954-55 Alumni Fund," stated Maurice L. Kelley, chairman of Annual Alumni Giving of the Greater UVM Fund.

"We came up with a new high total in dollars, $29,869.68..." The figure refers to last year's drive for funds. Certain benefits are being enjoyed through application of this money.

The Alumni Memorial Scholarships, totalling $7500, provide aid to boys in need, possessing the qualities of scholarship, character, leadership, and athletic prowess.

Annual Alumni Giving allotted $5500 more for the means of communication between graduates and the University, "Alumni Notes."

Honor scholarships of $200 each are awarded to the top boy and the top girl in Vermont high schools by UVM. In addition to the above, the group donated $12,000 to assist this scholarship program.

Writing of "Tradition Looks Forward," the University's history, is being financed by Annual Alumni Giving. That cost is $4000.

Mr. Kelly, in his message in "Annual Alumni Giving Report of Greater UVM Fund," declares, "No longer are your contributions going into a common pot and losing their identity. Rather, they are being used for a specific program of genuine needs on a university-wide basis."

The two scholarship programs of last year will be continued and "Alumni Notes" will be published again.

In addition, the following purchases are to be made: (1) more books for Billings Library, (2) additional books for the Medical Library, (3) equipment for the Electrical Engineering Department, (4) equipment for Chemistry Department, (5) record players for the Romance Language Department, (6) audio-visual equipment for all departments, (7) a projector for the Agricultural Engineering Department, (8) dissecting binoculars for the Botany Department, (9) equipment for the Civil Engineering Sanitary Lab. (10) anatomical models for the Nursing Department, (11) a tap recorder for the Music Department, (12) a one-way directional window for observation of children with speech handicaps.

Women's Phys Ed Program Offers Many Activities

By Barbara Zack

Another touchdown! The score is 14-7, with UVM's mighty Catamounts again taking the lead. What goes on behind the scenes of a big game? How does the training system operate, ---and what's its real purpose? It has essentially the same goal as the Women's ski team or square dance class: to broaden the interests of the student and develop a well-rounded personality. As pointed out by Miss Jeanne Euler of the Women's Physical Education staff, "Students do not come to school for science, history or language alone. They are to be both mentally and physically educated."

To make the student more appreciative of what athletics has to offer, a variety of activities is planned. The women, working with the Women's Recreation Association, present a great variety of extra-curricular sports. Two hours a week may be spent on team and individual recreation. Climaxing the fall program is the archery and tennis sportsday planned for Oct. 23, in which teams from nearby schools will participate. The emphasis is not so much on competition, as in the men's department, but on developing individual skills and interests. An outgrowth of this belief is the production of a water ballet, and the Tuesday night square dances in the Student Lounge.

Co-educational archery, life-saving and square dancing are recent additions to the program. Basic requirements for graduation are the same in either department. They consist of two years of physical education classes. After these first two years, women may continue with elective sports--skiing, archery, tennis, badminton, bowling or any other one of the many activities offered. The men's department gives full semester credit to a freshman football player at the end of the football season. He will then devote his time to another sport to the following semester. It is obvious that the men's department cannot offer as wide a variety of activities as the women's. This is mainly because their physical education is divided between formal classes and team coaching. Therefore, extra time cannot be devoted to many electives. They do intend to give freshman a grounding in some sports. As is expected, competition is uppermost in the men's sports world. The intercollegiate games and all-campus championships tend to emphasize this point. On the other hand, women's competitive sports include inter-sorority and inter-dorm contests with skiing being their only varsity activity.

After at least four semesters of this vital training, a student is equipped with more than basic skills, an appreciation of athletics, and a greater range of interests. Each department, in its own way, offers these rewards in the manner best suited to the individual.

STUDYING MADE SIMPLE

I have passed my thirty-fifth birthday, and my dewlaps droop and my transmission needs oil. More and more my eyes turn inward, reminiscing, sifting the past, browsing lovingly among my souvenirs, for at my time of life memories are all a man has.

And most precious are the memories of college. It still makes my pulses quicken and my old glands leap to life just to think of it. Ah, I was something then! "Swifty" my friends used to call me, or "Rakehell" or "Candle-at-both-Ends" or "Devil Take the Hindmost." My phone was ringing all the time. "Come on, Devil-Take-the-Hindmost," a cohort would say, "let's pile into the old convertible and live up a storm. I know a place that serves all-bran after hours."

So it went—night after mad night, kicks upon kicks, sport that wrinkled care derides, laughter holding both his sides. "Come on, "Candle-at-Both-Ends," my companions would plead, "sing us another two hundred verses of Sweet Violets."

"No, my companions," I would reply with a gentle but firm smile, "we must turn homeward, for the cock has long since crowed."

"'Twas not the cock," they would answer, laughing merrily. "'Twas Sam Leghorn doing his imitation of a chicken!"

And, sure enough, 'twas. Crazy, madcap Sam Leghorn. How I miss his gaiety and wit! I never tired of hearing his imitation of a chicken, nor he of giving it. I wonder what's become of him. Last I heard he was working as a weathervane in Tacoma.

Oh, we were a wild and jolly gang in those days. There was Sam Leghorn with his poultry imitations. There was Mazda Watts who always wore a lampshade on her head. There was Freddie Como who stole a dean. There was Cap Queeg who always carried two steel marbles in his hand. There was Emily Hamp who gilded her house mother.

Yes, we were wild and jolly, and the wildest and jolliest was I . . . But not right away. I blush to admit that in my freshman year I was dull, stodgy, and normal. I finally corrected this loathesome condition, but for a while it was touch and go. And, dear reader—especially dear freshman reader—be warned: it can happen to you.

The makers of Philip Morris have bought this space so I can bring you a message each week. There is no more important message I can give you than the following: College can be beautiful. Don't louse it up with studying.

That was my mistake. At first, cowed by college, I studied so much that I turned into a dreary, blinking creature, subject to dry-mouth and fainting fits. For a year this dismal condition prevailed—but then I learned the real function of college. And what is that? I'll tell you what: to prepare you to face the realities of the world. And what do you need to face the realities of the world? I'll tell you what—poise, that's what you need. And how do you get poise? I'll tell you how: not by keeping your nose in a book, you may be sure!

Relax! Live! Enjoy! . . . That's how you get poise. Of course you have to study, but be poised about it. Don't be like some clods who spend every single night buried in a book. Not only are they not learning poise; they are also eroding their eyeballs. The truly poised student knows better than to make the whole semester hideous with studying. He knows that the night before the exam is plenty of time to study.

Yes, I've heard that lots of people have condemned cramming. But have you heard who these people are? They are the electric light and power interests, that's who! They want you to sit up late and study every night so you'll use more electricity and enrich their bulging coffers. Don't be a sucker!

Clearly, cramming is the only sensible way to study. But beware! Even cramming can be overdone. Take it easy. On the night before your exam, eat a hearty dinner. Then get a date and go out and eat another hearty dinner. Then go park someplace and light up a Philip Morris. Enjoy the peaceful pleasure it offers. Don't go home until you're good and relaxed.

Once at home, relax. Do not, however, fall asleep. This is too relaxed. To insure wakefulness, choose a chair that is not too comfortable. For example, take a chair with nails pointing up through the seat—or a chair in which somebody is already sitting.

Place several packs of Philip Morris within easy reach. Good mild tobacco helps you to relax, and that's what Philip Morris is—good mild tobacco. But Philip Morris is more than just good mild tobacco; it is also cigarette paper to keep the good mild tobacco from spilling all over the place.

Now you've got the uncomfortable chair and the Philip Morris. Now you need light. Use the lit end of your Philip Morris. Do not enrich the electric power interests.

Read your textbook in a slow, poised manner. Do not underline. It reduces the re-sale value of your book. Always keep your books in prime re-sale condition; you never know when you'll need getaway money.

As you read you will no doubt come across many things you don't understand. But don't panic. Relax. Play some records. Remove a callus. Go out and catch some night crawlers.

Relax. Be poised. Stay loose. And remember—if things really close in, you can always take up teaching.

Any Pep?

enjoys itself more, and at the same time builds up valuable school spirit. The Pep Committee is selling shakers this year for the purpose of giving people something more to wave than just their hats.

Shake It, Girls

So far they have averaged about 250 shakers a game. These shakers are made by the members of the Pep Committee and sold at cost for the benefit of the school.

The Committee has also revised the school cheers and has had them printed in every program so that no one can give ignorance as an excuse for silence.

Life Size Catamount

The Pep Committee's plans for future are all designed with the purpose of creating some pride in the spirit of school. A full sized catamount outfit has been ordered and is on its way here. This outfit is made of a material which looks just like real fur, and is complete with life like eyes and moving jaws.

Another project of the Committee will be the sale of large penants just a bit above cost. The Committee figures it can sell the penants or about one third of the Book Store price. They are also thinking of buying balloons which everyone will release at the first UVM touchdown of the game.

As Bob Hill commented, "If this doesn't get a cheer, then nothing will." It's obvious that the Pep Committee is doing a splendid job this year. They're not asking the students to equal their enthusiasm; all they want is for UVM'ers to give their team the support which it deserves.

Square Dancing Every Tuesday Eve

Every Tuesday night in the lower Waterman lounge from 7:30 to 8:45, W R A sponsors square dancing directed by Miss Jeanne Euler of the Women's Physical Education Department.

For the past three weeks, the square dancing has been to the accompaniment of records but Miss Euler and all concerned would appreciate volunteers for calling, yodeling or any other country style displays of talent.

Dances Explained

One is not expected to be an expert square dancer to enjoy these sessions. Everyone is briefed on each dance before actually taking part in it and there is ample time for questions.

The series began on September 21, and according to Miss Euler, "...will continue on throughout the rest of the school year proveded there is enough interest among the students." Miss Euler also added that so far she'd had an encouraging turnout.

Harriers Cop Second Meet In Rout Of Union Dutchmen;

Damon, Grady Improve On Time In 23-35 Victory

by FRED SOLOMON

Last Saturday the Vermont Cross-Country team chalked up its second successive win by downing the Union College Dutchmen 23-35. Once again Vermont's top duo of Larry Damon and Don Grady finished one, two. Both of these boys topped their winning times of last week and are getting stronger as the season progresses. Damon's winning time was 24.38.5 which is 57.3 seconds better than the previous week and Grady's time was 25.08 which is 51 seconds faster. Union's top men Parillo and Stack finished third and fourth respectively. Also among the top finishers were Wadley of Vermont in fifth, McKinnon of Union sixth, Vermont's Tafrate and Howland were seventh and eighth, Stephens of UVM took ninth, Union's Smallens copped tenth, followed by Fitzpatrick of Vermont in eleventh, and Riley of Union twelvth.

Overall Improvement

The time difference between the Cat's first and fifth place finishers dropped from 2.23 to 2.14 which is quite an improvement since Damon's winning time was so much lower this week.

The UVM freshmen also opened their season on Saturday. The Frosh defeated Alburg 18-40 and lost to Jericho 22-35.

And they're off: UVM's hard working harriers weren't off as they reached the tape first against Union College last Saturday, at Burlington.

Kittens Win 6-0 Opener; Tierny Stars

by RON SMITH

The kittens opened their season for coach Fuzzy Evans last Friday afternoon on Centennial Field by edging the Norwich JV's by a 6-0 score. Marty Johnson went over the goal line from the six yard stripe after he received a pass from quarterback Tom Tierney for the only score.

Tom Tierney, the ex-Marine, Quarterback, led his team in a punt and pass affair that overcame the more polished JV team of Norwich to give the Frosh football teams their fifth straight over the last two years. Tierney showed much of his service ball form as he faked, passed, and punted well to keep the Norwich 11 in the hole most of the afternoon.

Only Score in Second Half

The only score in the game came early in the second half. The Kittens kicked off to start but five plays later the Kittens had the ball on their own 46 yard line. On the first play from scrimmage, Herlihy went around right end for two yards. Andrews who kicked off at the start of the second half in the ball game at end. Tierney went back to pass on second down and found Andrews all alone on the Norwich 40 yard line. Andrews took the ball on the 40 and picked up two blocks to pave the way towards the goal. Some alert playing by the Norwich safety prevented the score by taking Andrews out of bounds on the Norwich 5 yard marker. This only prolonged the situation as four plays later, Johnson took another Tierney pass on the six and carried two tacklers over the goal line.

Tierney's Fine Punts

A total of 11 punts occured in the game and Tierney had an average 40.5 yards per try from the line of scrimmage. His first punt was outstanding in that it went 57 yards from the line of scrimmage and went out of bounds on the 1 foot line. The average for the Cadets in the same department was 26.0 yards. This 14 yard advantage kept the Cadets in hot water most of the afternoon.

This Saturday the Kittens will take on their second of three opponents for the season at Centennial Field when they play host to the Middlebury JV's. The Norwich JV's have beaten the Middlebury JV's so the game ought to show something, especially since the Kittens now have a game under their belt.

With two weeks of the schedule by the board and every team except Delta Psi seeing action, a rundown of the standings shows T E P in complete dominance of the top slot of league "B" with a 3-0 record. Here's how they got it. It was Solomon and Roth all the way as they rode over A E P 47-6. Solomon and Snyder scored 23 points between them as Theta Chi bowed, 29-6 and finally in the first real slaughter of the season, T E P trampled over Sig Nu, 50-6. It was Solomon again, scoring three times for the victors. Ireland accounted for the lone Sig Nu tally in the first period.

Kappa Sig played once, picked up a win and showed plenty of power as they took Sigma Phi 42-13. As the season progresses look for Georgie Gilbert, former BFA flash, to make the difference in this team.

Sig Nu rolled over Sigma Phi 43-6 and AEP took Theta Chi to the tune of a 32-8 score, Rosenthal scoring twice for AEP.

In league "A" Phi Sigma Delta took two while dropping none, edging by the Phi Delts 20-12, Steinman for the Phi Sigs and O'Donnell for the Phi Delts each scoring twice. The SAE's were the other victims, sucumbing 37-6.

The Phi Delts won one and dropped one, getting the win by a 25-6 margin over Sig Ep.

In the dorm league it was Chittenden 1-2 over Wills 3-4, 12-4; Chittenden 3-4 topping Wills 1-2, 8-7; Wills 1-2 bouncing back to beat Chittenden 1-2, 26-6; and Buckham 3-4 toppling Buckham 1-2, 8-6.

Williams Sailors Top SMC, UVM

Williams nosed out St. Michael's in a triangular sailing meet yesterday at Malletts Bay. UVM was third.

Donnelly Charges Unfair Scouting By SMC Coach

BURLINGTON, VT., Oct. 5 - University of Vermont athletic director and football coach Ed Donnelly accused George W. (Doc) Jacobs, St. Michael's College athletic director, with violating coaching ethics through unfair scouting practices.

Jacobs, coach of St. Michael's football team for many years until the school in adjacent Winooski Park gave up the sport after last season, immediately denied the charge.

Donnelly made his statement after viewing movies of the Vermont-Maine game last week and spotting two former St. Michael's football players in the film.

"It wasn't fair coaching ethics for Jacobs to scout Vermont at the Union and Maine games because of the close relations the two colleges have in sports," the Vermont mentor said.

Jacobs said Duke Benz, coach at Norwich University which plays Vermont Oct. 23, asked him to scout Vermont in the Union, Maine and Dartmouth "B" games. Jacobs said he attended the Union game, but did not do any scouting and did not take any notes.

"I did assign Pete Plourde and Frank Cotter, two former St. Michael's football players, to scout the Vermont-Maine game," he said. "Ed Donnelly knew they were going to scout and at my request issued them tickets for that purpose."

Donnelly said Jacobs has many movies of Vermont games in past seasons.

"He also knows the Vermont team and has followed its play closely for several years," Donnelly said. "He knows the personnel of the squad and this is a big advantage to anyone who is scouting. Here at UVM we had several chances in the last few years to show Vermont-St. Michael's films to opponents of the Winooski Park College but refused to do so every time."

Jacobs replied: "as far as pictures are concerned it appears that I am being accused of violating the ethics of coaching, using pictures for scouting purposes. That is something I have never done. Duke Benz at Norwich has as many pictures of Vermont games as I have."

At the Cynic's publishing date, Donnelly was not available for further comment.

Both the varsity and freshman sailing teams of St. Michael's will be busy next weekend. The varsity meets UVM and the frosh are at Dartmouth.

Gridders Score In Win Column Against Green 'B', 19-12
Vermont Travels To Rochester For Tough Contest

Ed Beck Gains Hundred Yards In Ground Attack

An underrated Dartmouth "B" squad met the UVM Catamounts at Centennial Field Saturday and came out on the short end of a 19-12 verdict as the Cats, paced by the running of fleet Ed Beck, took their first victory of the season. The game played before 3,500 well-chilled fans was not a revelation of Vermont power as Coach Ed. Donnelly evidently saw fit to keep his passing attack under wraps with quarterback Mike Semans throwing only eight passes. The UVM running attach, though sputtering at times, ran well with Captain Ed Nemer and Al McLam gaining over 60 yards on the ground as Ed Beck ran for an even 100 yards, all this over a supposedly strong Dartmouth "B" squad.

Cats Scratch Early

Before most of the fans at Centennial were even snuggled into their blankets UVM had their first score as a series of running plays followed by a pass from McLam to end Art Solomon netted the first score. A McLam placement made it 7-0 UVM. The "B"s came right back however and on long runs by Bob Rex and Don Miller they scored on the heels of the Vermont touchdown. Ed Beck beautifully blocked the placement attempt and UVM retained a one point lead. Another Cat touchdown was possibly averted in the first period as Vermont was penalized 5 yards following Clem Forte's recovery of a Dartmouth fumble on their 35.

Seven Points at Half

In the second quarter straight Catamount running plays and a personal foul against Dartmouth "B" put the Cats on the Dartmouth two where Nemer smashed across for the second Vermont tally. McLam's placement failed and the score was 13-6, Vermont at the half.

After converted halfback Johnnie Galascione made a fine runback of the second half kickoff, Vermont scored again as Beck made a neat 5 yard run climaxed by a dive to the end-zone. McLam again missed the placement and the score was 19-6, UVM. From here in, it was Dartmouth "B" as the Little Green" led by the running of Miller and Rex and the passing of quarterback John Dellsola (son of Dartmouth end coach showed a competant offense. The visitors scored once more but the placement failed and the Catamounts had won their first game, 19--12.

AS I SAW IT

Art Solomon seems to be coming along fine at end. The huskie Barre boy caught a nice pass for the first Cat TD.

Veteran Al Stevens back at his old starting tackle slot as returning vet. Howie Braithwaite takes over the center position.

Vermont unveiled two new passing threats as McLam and Beck both passed, McLam for a touchdown.

The cheering seemed better than at the Maine game. Oh well, you know the old saying, "A week late is better than never". E.W.

Frosh C.C. Men Split In 'Meets Over Weekend

The Frosh Harriers of Coach Archie Post split a double dual meet Saturday on their home 2.75 mile course. The Frosh topped Alburg 18-37 while Jericho won over the Frosh by a 22-35 score. Norm Picardi of Jericho was the individual winner as he led his teammate Ron Bishop by 16 seconds.

Acting Frosh Capt. Art Tauber, was the third man home and his time was 17:39. He was closely followed by Bob Hult, fifth; and Jack Clark, sixth for the Frosh. Merrill Prime was the seventh man to cover the Frosh course and the first to come home for Alburg.

The Frosh have a total of six men on the team. Seven in a full squad and five are necessary in order to run. An appeal was made to all track men to think about X - country for next year. The three other places for the Frosh were Stan Reiter, 11; Bill Collier, 13; and Paul Dimick, 14.

Meet The Varsity

by DICK STEIN

CLEMENT FORTE

A product of Fair Haven High School, standing 5 feet 10 inches and weighing 205 pounds, is big Clement Forte. Clem, who is now a senior in the school of Arts & Science, majoring in speech, is playing his fourth year at a starting guard position. The fact of the matter is that Clem never has played anything but varsity ball, even in high school. At Fair Haven High, he won his letter for four years, and in his senior year Captained the All State Team. Upon graduation from Fair Haven, Clem entered Tilton Prep. and played there on the North Eastern Prep School Championship Team.

The Wizard

Clem isn't the only athletic member of his family; the "wizard" as his teammates call him, has a brother, who was a star lineman for St. Michael's, a few years ago.

Forte, who is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, was one of the mainstays of the forward line last season, until he was sidelined with an injury in the St. Mike's game. Coach Donnelly hopes his injury will not hinder his play this season.

Clem feels that one of his biggest thrills in football is the opening kick-off of each game.

Hosts Boasting Strength Depth; Seek Revenge

This weekend the UVM Catamounts travel to Rochester, N.Y. for an encounter with the Rochester "Yellowjackets". These two rivals started their series competition back in 1916; but they didn't meet again until 1946. Since resuming play the two teams have made it an annual classic, with Rochester holding a series edge. Last year the Cats broke Rochesters string of undefeated games by a 28-7 score here at Centennial Field.

Rochester Beat Union

Coach Ed Donnelly faces many pre-game problems with his Catamount eleven. The most important is the fact that Rochester last week beat Union College 26-0, whereas Vermont played Union to a 14-14 tie in their first game of the season.

Strong With Depth

Rochester boasts of an experienced squad with nine returning lettermen headed by halfbacks Tom Gibbons and Dick Devereaux. Devereaux who missed half of last season because of injuries will be Vermont's biggest headache. Coach Elmer Burnham reports, "Our first team should be as strong as last year's and we should have more depth." On the whole Rochester is strongly manned at the Halfbacks and Tackles, but there isn't equal support for ends and guards.

Cinema-Art Group In Full Swing; Show Feature Films

By Ted Rauch

During the one year of its existence, the Cinema-Art Club has solved the many problems of policy and membership, and a method for the selection of films. A large number of films were shown, increasing interest to a point where double showings are now necessary.

Feature length films of artistic value are shown, as well as shorter documentaries, psychological and experimental films, and others pertaining to art, music, dance and drama. These films are discussed informally under the leadership of a specialist in each of the subjects mentioned above. Refreshments are served during the discussion.

Meetings are held once a month during the academic year, at 8 P.M. on Saturdays and Sundays, at 75 Bilodeau Court, the home of Dr. Eugene Lepeshkin, Coordinator of the Club. Anyone attending at least one-half of the meetings becomes a voting member, entitled to participate in the selection of the programs.

The Cinema-Art Club is a non-profit organization. Members and guests attending a meeting are expected to contribute 50 cents per person at each showing - towards the rental and operational expenses for the films.

In the future, the Club intends to bring Gian Carlo Menotti's modern classic prose opera, " The Medium " with Marie Powers and Anna Marie Alberghetti to Burlington, but the cost of rental, near $100, exceeds the resources of the organization. A wide sponsorship is necessary to bring the film to Burlington. The cost per person will not exceed $1.00. There is a notice on the bulletin board for those who are interested.

The following dates were selected for the programs: September 26, October 24, November 21, December 12, January 16, February 20, March 20, April 17, May 15 and June 5.

Announcements containing a short description of the program of each meeting will be printed in the "Burlington Free Press " on the Saturday preceding the meeting and also in the CYNIC. Dr. Lepeshkin will also discuss the program as part of the preview of the moving picture films to be seen in Burlington each week, which will be broadcast every Sunday at 7:05 P.M. over the radio station WDOT.

The first showing of the 1954-1955 season was "The Quiet One ", which received the Critic's Award and the First Venice Festival Award, and was chosen as one of the ten best of 1948 by Time and the New York Times. Produced by Sidney Meyer and Janet Loeb, it is the story of one of the thousands of boys and girls who grow up in modern society without being given any real indication that they are loved, appreciated, or even wanted. This attitude drives the boy in this film into delinquency and reform school, until a sensitive approach makes rehabilitation possible. Professor John Murdock, of the UVM Department of Psychology, led the discussion. A short film about Argentina with a discussion by Dr. Maurice J. Rosenberg of Buenos Aires followed. Spanish American songs were sung by Carlos Garcia, Eva Cortega and others.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT AND STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

L. 72 BURLINGTON, VERMONT OCTOBER 21, 1954 NO. 13

TUITION RAISE IS ANNOUNCED

UVM Budget Over 5 Million Seek 1 Million From State

Majority Is For Aggie College

The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College today presented to Gov. Lee E. Emerson a request for state appropriations totaling $1,372,287.28 for the fiscal year 1955-56.

The request includes approximately $740,000 for teaching in the Medical and Agricultural Colleges plus $518,000 requested for Agricultural services including Extension service, the Experiment Station, related services and the Morgan House Farm.

The request for state appropriations, amounting to less than one quarter of the University's proposed budget of $5,131,039.17 for the 1955-56 fiscal year, was made as the University presented its proposed budget to the Governor.

In an address prepared as a Financial Report to UVM students and faculty, President Carl W. Borgmann said "The budget is a complex one because UVM is a complex institution. It includes the expenditures for teaching in all colleges and divisions; it includes the costs of research in agriculture; the costs of the agricultural Extension work, and of the state service s carried on under the direction of the College. It includes the dormitories, the cafeteria, the bookstore, the libraries, the intercollegiate athletics, and so on. "

The proposed 1955-56 budget of $5,131,039.17 represents an increase of about $500,000 from last year's budget of $4,631,243.52.

Gals Asked Guys To Formal Dance Tomorrow Night

The first big formal of the year, and also the first chance for a girl to ask a boy, is to be held in the ballroom at Southwick on Friday, October 22, from nine to one. Tickets for the dance, which is being sponsored by Mortar Board, will be sold for $2.20 per couple.

The evening will feature the music of Bill Wanamaker and his orchestra, due to the fact that he proved to be such a success at this same event last year.

Robinson Hall has volunteered to take care of the decorations for the dance, and candlelight has been decided on as the theme of the evening. Arrangements have been made so that the music can be heard downstairs in the gym, where there will also be room for dancing. Refreshments will be served.

College Press Freedom Study Of New Group

Ann Arbor, Michigan---- Approval of a draft constitution and election of permanent officers are expected to highlight the first meeting of the National Association for a Free College Press in Washington, D.C. today and tomorrow.

Held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Associated Collegiate Press, the meeting will outline means of investigating alleged violations of campus press freedom and map plans for cooperation with professional groups interested in maintaining freedom of information. Approximately 300 college editors and staffers are expected to attend.

Organized by 24 college newspaper editors from all parts of the country, the association plans to enlist a group of leading professional editors and publishers to serve as an advisory board and cooperate in investigating alleged breaches of editorial freedom in the college press.

According to Eugene L. Hartwig, interim chairman of the Association and managing editor of the Michigan Daily, action on an alleged violation of press freedom would begin when the editor of a campus paper involved notified the execu-

Trustees Approve Four New Faculty Appointments

The Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College approved the appointment of four new faculty members at their meeting here today, President Carl W. Borgmann has announced.

In the College of Arts and Sciences, Morris Leon Simon has been appointed as instructor in the department of political science. He holds the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of New Mexico, and is working towards his Ph.D. at Cornell.

Three appointments in the School of Dental Hygiene have been approved. They are Dr. David S. Faigel, who has been named an instructor of pharmacology and anesthesiology effective Jan. 31 1955; Mrs. Kathleen Smith Lane, who has been appointed instructor in dental hygiene effective Feb. 2, 1955; and Dr. J. Edward Marceau, who has been named instructor of dental anatomy effective Sept. 15, 1954.

Dr. Faigel holds the B.S. degree from the University of New Hampshire, and the'

Costs Jump For Residents, Non-Residents; Prexy Outlines Enlargement Of University

By David Spector

In a speech Tuesday afternoon before the student body, President Carl W. Borgmann announced a tuition rise to take effect in the fall semester, 1955. The increase, from the present $625 to $705, will apply equally to residents and non-residents. The increase, approved by the Board of Trustees last Saturday, is now official. The only students not affected will be residents in the College of Agriculture.

President Borgmann further elaborated by stating "I deeply regret having to make the announcement, and hope you will know that it would not have been made if there was any other course of action open to us at this time."

Costs Still Low

"I might add that UVM costs are still low-for if one compares board and room charges with the present rates, UVM is nearly $200 a year lower than the average at other colleges included in our survey."

This survey shows that various New England colleges have the following fees: Norwich, $711; Dartmouth, $800; Middlebury, $772; and Wellesley, $925. Still other figures point out that if the University is to be considered a state institution, then the rates are very much higher than any other state college. While UVM will have a tuition of $705, the next highest state college, the University of Maine, has a tuition of $316 for instaters and $476 for others. The University of Mass. has the lowest rates, only $139 for instaters, and the University of Conn. charges its out-of-staters $410.

Increased Budget

Last Tuesday morning a copy of the proposed biennial budget for the 1955-57 period was presented to the Governor by the Board of Trustees. Essentially, it calls for an increased expenditure of over $500,000 per year, which will give the school a total budget of $5,149,000. A very high portion of the total will be given for wages and salaries.

The President explained what the new budget meant in terms of income. He called for a continued balanced budget. The budget will request state appropriations to meet the needs of the several agricultural divisions and of the College of Medicine. This sum should come to $1,400,000 a year, an overall increase of $265,367 from this year.

Future Plans

In his speech President Borgmann then turned to future plans for the school. He mentioned just a few that had been considered by the Board of Trustees. He felt "that there is the possibility that ground can be broken for a new girls' dormitory, or dormitories, housing up to 400 girls by the fall. " This would free Converse Hall for use by upper class men and by married students. He also included information about a five-year program to renovate all dorm rooms.

" We Need. . ."

"We need a new library, or at least a major addition to Billings. We know that an auditorium and a gymnasium is urgently needed. We know that additions to the Medical College plant are overdue. We know that the Old Mill can be made into a much more efficient

Enrollment Figures Show Rise As 'Out-of-Staters' Increase

Enrollment at the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, which has been showing a slight decline each year since the post-war peak of 3248 students was reached in 1949, nudged back upwards this year to reverse the trend, according to Harold C. Collins, director of admissions at UVM.

Key to the increased enrollment, Collins indicated, is an increase in the number of out-of-state students enrolled. The number of Vermonters attending UVM declined slightly from last year, he said.

Total enrollment for the fall semester this year is 2861. The figure for last fall's enrollment was 2845. Breakdown of this year's figure shows 1799 men and 994 women enrolled, with 79 medical residents and preclinic nurses rounding out the total. Out-of-state enrollment is up from 1522 last year to 1548 while the figure for Vermonters shows a mild decline from 1241 to 1234.

State Residents

"Perhaps the most significant figures, " Collins said, "are those which show the courses of study Vermonters entering UVM are choosing. " Young Vermonters entering a liberal arts course have declined from 72 in 1942 to 54 this year, while Vermonters entering the College of Agriculture have increased from 26 in 1952 to a total of 59 this year.

Collins said that the University administration concludes that this significant decline in the number of Vermont students enrolling in liberal arts courses reflects the fact that Vermonters in the College of Arts and Sciences have to pay the same full tuition of $625 which is paid by out-of-state students at UVM.

It seems evident, Collins said, that the decline in Vermonters entering the College of Arts and Sciences can be explained by the increase in Vermonters entering the College of Agriculture where

SA Decides To Support Literary Magazine, 'Centaur'

By a unanimous vote, the Student Association went on record last Thursday as being in favor of supporting the newly organized literary magazine, The Centaur. High praise was directed at the first issue of the magazine which came out last spring. Marcia Pearl, the editor-in-chief, said that "the council's friendly support is the moral boost the magazine needs to get under way. "

The decision came out of a discussion held for the purpose of determining what type of publication the Student Association would be willing to sponsor. Lorna Dean initiated the action with motion that "the Student Association should meet as a Committee of the Whole for fifteen minutes to discuss a campus literary magazine. "

Asked to clarify what alternatives were available, the parliamentarian stated that "the council might declare itself to be 1) unwilling to support any magazine; 2) willing to back one patterned after the old literary magazine, the Windfall, 3) willing which should provide a good base for a badly needed magazine. "

None of the councilmen opposed the literary magazine outright, though criticism of the first issue was offered. Bob Smith recommended that more issues should be made available. John Burgees found the issue "a little morbid... too deep for the majority of college students... but much better than Windfall. " Representatives Ralph DeLaurier and Lorna Dean disagreed with Burgees finding the magazine both understandable and well written. Modifying his position, Burgess backed statements by Dick Ireland and Mike Rosco that more variety and a bit of humour would liven the magazine.

Dick Ireland moved that the council go on record as favoring the support of The Centaur. The council thus chose to give its backing to the new type magazine as opposed to a policy of refusing to back any magazine or requesting a magazine

Student Union Fund Questioned

By Herzl Spiro

The Student Court is to rule on the legality of the controversial Student Union Fund this week. The money was set aside by the unanimous vote of the S.A. Council to start a drive for a new student center which would house the many and diverse student activities. Critics of the fund questioned both its legality and wisdom at a Student Advisory Committee meeting on Octobdr 11. Its proponents hope to settle the legal question through the Student Court, and even as this paper goes to press, The Student Association is expected to decide to go to the student body to get its judgement on the fund's wisdom through an all-campus referendum.

The problem traces back to Feb. 1, 1950 when the S.A. Council fmrst set up a Student Union Fund. Unexpected expenses and a lack of safeguards resulted in the use of the earmarked money for other purposes. The '54, report of the Student Union committee reveals that despite the set back, "a Student Union has been the dream of five successive S.A. Presidents.

On May 13, 1954 The Student Association revived the fund by placing its five Thousand dollar surplus in a a local bank. Only the University President himself can transfer that money. The new resolution called for petitions to the Kake Walk dispositions Fund and the Vending Machine Fund to increase the "nestegg." George Lucchina, the first chairman of the Student Union Committee has reported that alumnae have come to him already with offers to organize a committee and supplement these allocations. The alumnae representative on the committee is a former UVM trustee and is presently the President of the Howard National Bank and Trust Co., Mr. William Lockwood.

The discussion now going on in three of the highest Student policy determining groups on campus revolves around four questions: 1) How badly is a Student Union Building Needed? 2) How practical is it for the S.A. council to initiate the drive? 3) Is it legal for the Student Association to use the Student Activity fee for such a long range project? 4) Even if it is technically legal, is it within the spirit of the purposes the Student Association was set up for?

In a statement given early this week, President Carl Borgmann cited a need for six to eight million dollars worth of new buildings, excluding the Student Union. He stated that "compared to these needs, the need for a Student Union appears to be minor."

President of Student Association, George Lucchina, pointed out that "complaints are often made that we lack all-university spirit; that our first loyalties are to interest groups and social groups such as fraternities. When our all-campus facilities are limited to a lounge with totally inadequate seating facilities and a social hall not large enough for a college half our size, what can we edpect?" He deplored the inadequate space given to campus organizations citing offhand a half dozen examples of groups hampered by space difficulties. Pres. Lucchina concluded,

Student Court Hears Cases In New Informal Atmosphere

By Ruth Zindler

The Student Court, an agency of the UVM Student Association, deals with problems of individual conduct and discipline.

The court was originally an extremely formal and legalistic group and professors did not deem it necessary to use the court for students committing various crimes. The members of the court used to wear black robes during the court session. Questioning and aid from both a defense attorney and a prosecuting attorney were usual procedure.

New Informality

The procedure was renovated last year due to the efforts of the senior members of the court. The new procedure stresses informality. The black robes and movie-type courtroom scenes have been discarded. The trial is now carried on without a prosecuting or a defense attorney. A defense attorney is available to any student on trial who desires one. This defense attorney will be assigned to the student by the student court.

Trial Procedure

The trial is conducted by the chief justice. First, the student is formally charged with breach of academic discipline and may plead "guilty" or "not guilty." If he pleads "not guilty", the facts are heard from the professor and the student or defense attorney. The chief justice may ask both parties questions if any of the facts are not clear. After the facts are presented and reviewed, the court will decide if the student is guilty or not, and also the penalty if one is needed. Penalties run anywhere from failure of the work in question to expulsion from school. Should the defense attorney want to appeal the case he may appeal the case to the UVM Council, which consists of the deans of the various colleges and members of the student court.

Mufson Approves

To quote Al Mufson, the assistant chief justice, "As a person who has seen both systems in operation, I feel there is no question as to the desirability of the informal procedure adopted by the Student Court. I feel that both the students and the faculty members, aware of this evolution in procedure, will agree it is a notable step toward the epitome of fair and just trials."

This procedure benefits both the student and faculty member because it avoids the tension and embarrassment which existed in the previous system.

Student Election

The justices of the student court are elected by the students. In order to be eligible one must have an average of seventy-five or above. Two students from each college serve on the student court. The members of this year's court are: Paul Low, chief justice; Al Mufson, assistant chief justice; Fred Hackett, defense attorney; and possible defense attorney, Herzl Spiro.

The justices are Ted Howard, Dick Hooker, Martin Seigel, Robert Park, Ginny Rosse, Jim Slade, Doug Sutherland, Joan Gilmore, and Rees Midgely. The stenographer is Marlene Goodenough and the faculty advisor is Professor Murdock.

At present there is an opening for an assistant defense attorney.

Newman Club Is Offering Class; Meeting Sunday

Representatives of the National Newman Club Federation from college throughout New England will be guests at this Sunday's Newman Club meeting. Father O'Brien, New England Province Chaplain, from the University of Connecticut, and Ronald Bedard, from the University of Rhode Island, the Federation's Vice-president, will discuss the National Federation as it concerns the UVM club.

An executive committee meeting will be held Sunday morning, and the club's regular monthly meeting will begin at 2:00 in room 239 Waterman.

Classes Offered

This week the first in a series of classes in Philosophy, Ethics, and Theology were offered by the UVM Newman Club. Tuesdays at 4:00 Father Fitzsimmons of Trinity College is conducting classes in Scholastic Philosophy. At 4:30 on Wednesdays classes in Ethics are being taught by Father Foster of the Cathedral staff.

Donald W. Sundstrom received his B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering from Worcester Polytechnic Institute in 1953. He's currently studying for an M.S. degree and expects to receive it next year. Like other engineering students, he's asking a lot of searching questions before deciding on a permanent employer.

Don Sundstrom asks:

What are my chances for advancement in a big firm like Du Pont?

Gerald J. Risser, B.S. Chem. Eng., Univ. of Wisconsin (1937), is now assistant manager of the Engineering Service Division in Du Pont's Engineering Department, Wilmington, Delaware.

Jerry Risser answers:

I THINK I know exactly what's behind that question, Don, because the same thing crossed my mind when I first graduated and looked around for a job. That was about seventeen years ago, when the Du Pont Company was much smaller than it is today. And there's a large factor in the answer, Don, right there! The advancement and growth of any employee depends to a considerable degree on the advancement and growth of his employer. Promotion possibilities are bound to be good in an expanding organization like Du Pont.

Right now, for example, construction is in progress or planned for three new plants. That means many new opportunities for promotion for young engineers. And, in my experience, I have found it is a fundamental principle of Du Pont to promote from within the organization—on merit.

My own field, development work, is a natural for a young graduate, because it's one of the fundamental branches of engineering at Du Pont. There are complete new plants to design, novel equipment problems to work on, new processes to pioneer—all sorts of interesting work for a man who can meet a challenge. Many of the problems will involve cost studies—some will require evaluation in a pilot plant—but, in every case, they'll provide the satisfactions which come from working with people you like and respect.

All in all, Don, your chances of advancement on merit are mighty good at Du Pont!

Want to know more about working with Du Pont? Send for a free copy of "Chemical Engineers at Du Pont," a booklet that tells you about pioneering work being done in chemical engineering—in research, process development, production and sales. There's a step-by-step outline of the leadership opportunities that confront a young Du Pont engineer—how he can advance—and how he can obtain help from experienced members of the team. Write to E. Skits To Be Given During Pep Rallies By Fraternities

By Carol Chase

An attempt at partial solution for improved spirit at U.V.M. football games is the aim of the Pep Committee with the inclusion of fraternity skits during the pep rallies.

The Pep Committee is appealing to the fraternities for their active support in these skits. All fraternities have been notified as to the effect and operation of this plan. Several fraternities on campus through individual members of respective houses have complied fully with this innovation and will assume full responsibility. Several members of the faculty and other university leaders appeared optimistic about the fraternity plan.

University-wide Spirit

One of the primary purposes of fraternity participation is to get as many fraternity members as possible to the rallies with a consequent result of improved spirit on a university-wide scale.

Robert Hill, Chairman of the Pep Committee, has this to say as a result of the retort made by the Maine commentator concerning the lack of U.V.M. spirit at the Maine-U.V.M. football game October 2: "When outsiders coming to U.V.M. observe our football team and broadcast back to other schools that our team has no support it's a pretty sad state of affairs. It is my hope that fraternity participation at pep rallies will be one solution to the lack-of-spirit problem. Certainly you would not find silent stands at a Norwich or Middlebury football game. Norwich's rousing spirit was in evidence last fall when their entire student body came to back up their team. We can rest assured that this year Middlebury will be up here in strength to add to whatever they can to inspire their team.

A tentative schedule has been planned listing the fraternities that will participate in our three remaining pep rallies. They are as follows: for the Norwich pep rally: Tau Epsilon Phi, Kappa Sigma, Alpha Tau Omega and Phi Sigma Delta; for the University of Massachusetts pep rally Alpha Epsilon Pi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Acacia, and Sigma Phi; and for the final pep rally which will precede the Middlebury-U.V.M. tilt, the participating fraternities will include Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Delta Psi, Lambda Iota and Theta Chi. This schedule is a tentative one and may be subject to change.

The chairman, working with other members of the committee, would then appoint a team of college and professional editors to visit the campus, interview student editors, members of the administration and others involved, then prepare a report on their findings for distribution to members of the Association, wire services and trade publications.

Members of the executive committee will also work with other college newspaper editors in their area in a continuing review of the status of editorial freedom of the campus press.

Financial support for the Association will come from membership dues of college papers, grants from professional newspaper groups and foundations, and from individual editors and publishers interested in preserving freedom of information.

Enrollment

state support makes possible a $400 tuition reduction which means Vermonters pay $225 tuition while out-of-staters in the College of Agriculture pay the full $625.

Secondary Education Low

"An even more striking example," Collins said, "is evidenced in the College of Education, where qualified Vermonters can enroll in elementary and junior high education courses tuition-free, whereas Vermonters enrolling in secondary education do not benefit from the same support from the state and so pay the full $625 tuition if they wish to attend UVM."

The result, said Collins, is that the number of Vermonters entering elementary and junior high education courses has increased from 39 in 1952 to 49 in 1954 while, in the same period, Vermonters enrolling in secondary education have decreased sharply from 16 to five.

A breakdown of the enrollment figures by colleges and divisions follows.

Arts and Sciences, 937; Technology, 669; Education and Nursing, 429; Agriculture, 427; College of Medicine, 190; Graduate College, 43; School of Dental Hygiene, 33; pre-clinic nurses, 51; medical residents, 28.

There are 833 students in the Class of '58.

Asks For Savoyard Encore In Next Series

By Diane Tanzi

The American component of D'Oyly Carte in England, The American Savoyards, started in 1948 and is now the only such group of its kind in our country which has undertaken, and successfully so, the reproduction of the delightful operas of Gilbert and Sullivan.

Monday night the city of Burlington and the University were indeed fortunate to have such a pleasant evening's entertainment. The American Savoyards, under the direction of Dorothy Raedler, gave us some rollicking fun in "The Pirates of Penzance," with their enthusiastic performance and command of their subject. One could easily be convinced that the Major-General and his company existed soley for our enjoyment.

The solos of the central figures were executed with polish and a naturalness that enhanced the whole performance for the audience, some who had not, perhaps experience similar entertainment before. In Act I there seemed a lack of the volume that is generally associated with the choruses of Gilbert and Sullivan. One point especially that comes to mind, was the superlativeness of several of the encores to the original numbers themselves.

There was some difficulty "getting into" the Pirates in the first act. The audience did not seem to respond to the excitement and good character acting that came to fore in the very first scenes. Gradually, as the last scene of the first act came to a close, the fun of the show had begun to inject itself into the audience. From that time the naturalness and spontaneity caught the audience, who found the curtain falling too soon.

The costuming displayed by the company was very fine indeed. The most fascinating detail was the precision with which the hooped-skirts of the ladies swayed back and forth on the stage. It seemed that they were propelled by individual machines, and the ladies were only mannequins. Gay color and simplicity in design was the theme in costumes, with the Pirate King's black and pink creation leaving nothing to be desired in the line of finery.

The company utilized the advantages of the large Memorial Auditorium stage, as they undoubtedly work with many smaller stages on tour. The drapings of creamy beige and light blue were simple and effective, and the lack of the usual set and properties did not in any manner take away from the presentation.

There is much to be said for and against the repertory group and their effectiveness of production in attempting the works of playwrights, composers or the works of Gilbert and Sullivan, as it were, in the case of the American Savoyards. The repertory group is not the ideal vehicle for producing any show, because before it begins it is immediately set with numerous limitations. There is nothing more exciting than a similar Broadway production, with its large cast and chorus, full-orchestra and all the thrill that goes into big show business.

The American Savoyards have undertaken a large task with their repertory players, in dealing with the works of Gilbert and Sullivan. They have set limitations, one of them being a small cast and especially small chorus. They have compenated for this by having complimentary acting and singing ability. They have, as a result, in particular in the "Pirates of Penzance", a great versatility and variety in presentation which lends itself graciously to the American audience. The Savoyards have cleverness in their methods of giving the audience their best entertainment, which was evident in the simple set, the pleasing combination of piano and organ, and the engaging cast.

There is nothing that can fill the place of classic opera, but the comic opera of Gilbert and Sullivan has established its place in the modern tradition. The American Savoyards have created that tradition in this country. It is pleasant and relaxing; mainly it is refreshing in style.

An encore please, UVM Concert Series, the American Savoyards are more than welcome again next season.

let's try again

The CYNIC has presented this week, in another section of the paper, an overview or what is commonly called the "chaperone problem".

While some parties prefer to use a more limited term, such as "the fraternity chaperone problem", it must be granted that a problem does exist. What is this problem, why does it exist?

For the past two years fraternities have had an increasingly difficult time in procuring chaperons for Saturday night parties. For a time, it was believed that the root of the problem lay imbedded in the now familiar controversy over the use of liquor by minors, ie-in Vermont, those under twenty-one years of age.

At the beginning of last year the University took a stand on the use of liquor by University students, closely following the spirit of the State Law.

However, while clarifying its drinking policy, the University failed, initially, to redefine the role that the chaperone then assumed at a fraternity party when liquor laws were flaunted.

Thus began the present difficulties. Neither student nor chaperone knew where the other stood. Was the chaperone a policeman, was he a guest, was he a guest, was he an overseer with instructions to report infringements to the Administration? Nobody had the answer. Chaperones felt themselves on very uncertain grounds.

The results were rapid and devastating from a fraternity view-point. The original large list of available chaperones dwindled appreciably until there were just about enough to go around, provided every fraternity on campus didn't schedule a party on the same night.

At this point the Administration stepped in, coming up with its new "Role of The Chaperone", and defining the chaperone as a guest." The chaperone should be neither policeman or proctor, nor is he responsible if laws and regulations are disregarded by students who are present."

This took the chaperone off the hook. For awhile, the list of faculty members who would chaperone increased.

But then a very strange phenomenon occurred. Late last year and early this year fraternities found themselves at the same point as they were before the new chaperone policy was announced. Faculty members who were willing to serve as "guests" at fraternity parties were more scarce than ever before.

Where do we lay the blame this time? Is President Borgmann trying to push fraternities off the "hill"? Certainly his chaperone policy seems lenient enough to discredit this claim which we have heard raised.

Is it with the chaperones, themselves. Do they have an aversion to chaperoning? Well, sororities always seem to have chaperons when they need them. Chaperoning in and of itself, then, seems to be not objectionable.

Are the members of the faculty trying to "push fraternities off the hill?" A quick check with the Coordinator of Student Affairs shows, however, that there are a few fraternities who have very little difficulty obtaining chaperons. Guess that possibility leads up a blind alley.

Who is to blame? There's only one answer, and it is inescapable. The difficulty lies with the fraternity itself.

It's time to wake up men. The chaperone wants to be treated like a human being. The large majority of them realize that a party is a party...they were young once. Many still are. Those who object to fraternity parties because of the intrinsic nature of such social events are not going to chaperone anyway.

You can, however, rely on a large number of the faculty to serve as "guests in your house", provided you make an attempt to treat them as such. Invite them to join the party. As was stated before, they are not proctors or policemen. They literally are guests. Offer them a drink. Swap your date for his wife for a dance or two. Have some food on hand. DON'T have a neverending line of assigned "talkers" streaming in and changing shifts every fifteen minutes. That's too much small talk for anyone.

The sooner the fraternities, and particularly the members of the fraternities realize that the solution to their problem lies within themselves, the faster they can set about to find the proper answer.

Until now, perhaps the forest couldn't be seen for the trees. Possibly, this issue of the CYNIC which has brought the faculty viewpoint to student, and vice-versa, will enable the groups involved to more easily solve this touchy situation.

At any rate we'd like to see each side give the other a change to "try again". If you have chaperoned in the past but are not at present, give it another try. The very worst that you can find is one more disappointment.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

This is the time of the year when requests for chaperoning of student parties begin to flood the average faculty member. It is therefore a good time to explain why many of these requests are turned down - albeit somewhat reluctantly.

Of course, I can speak only for myself. Yet I do believe that my conclusions are shared by others of the faculty, so I shall venture on the dangerous paths of generalization, in the hope that something good may come of that venture.

Let me preface my remarks by stating that the situations described below are not universal, that individual faculty members have had very pleasant experiences at student parties, that individual student organizations have been most solicitous towards their chaperons. In my experience these pleasant occasions have been exceptions to the rule that I can expect to be thoroughly bored when I serve as a chaperon.

The point most pertinent to my discussion is that adequate chaperoning is required at mixed student gatherings according to the code of the Joint Social Activities Board. I do not propose to argue the pros and cons of this rule. However much one may agree or disagree with the necessity for chaperons, the rule still holds.

Now I maintain that the vast majority of the students have never really accepted this requirement, and much of the student-faculty-administration hullaballoo about the problems of chaperoning stem from this lack of acceptance.

Is the chaperon a guest? a delegated overseer? or both? While a faculty member serving voluntarily as a chaperon considers himself a guest, students seem to have fastened upon him the overseer role. Thus, a grudging toleration of what the chaperon is made to feel is an unpleasant imposition is usually the result, particularly at fraternity parties.

Certainly students are, in general, poor hosts towards faculty chaperons. It is a not uncommon experience for a chaperon to get the feeling that his presence is really of no account; more often than not, the formalities of a brief introduction to the social chairman having been disposed of, the chaperon is ushered to an anteroom and left there to his own resources for the duration of the evening. Again it happens too often that only the barest, the absolute minimum of graciousness and courtesy which one expects of a host is extended by students present at mixed gatherings. Thus, a small core of unlucky ones may be delegated (how are they chosen?) to keep the chaperons "happy" by regaling them with small talk. It is no secret that neither party is deceived, that both are bored. Familiar faces (usually one's own students and their dates) and introductions sometimes break the monotony - and such incidents brighten the evening for the hapless chaperon.

After a few experiences of the sort described above, a faculty member's stamina breaks down and he usually comes to the conclusion that he can have a much better time of an evening in the company of his friends, or in his comfortable chair with his books and music, and in addition he can get to bed at a reasonable hour. He is not obligated to chaperon.

There are some martyrs who continue to chaperon notwithstanding. Thanks to these individuals the students may have their parties. It would not be amiss to emphasize again - these men could be

Belittled Character

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Since when is it the policy of the UVM CYNIC to print a picture which gives an unfavorable impression of the student body; especially when those involved in the picture were asked to pose for it. I am making reference to the picture which appeared on October 7, 1954, entitled "Chair or Table".

I was one of the students asked to pose for the picture and it is my belief that the photographer overstepped his bounds. To me, the picture belittled my character.

I have been constantly referred to as the boy responsible for the possible closing of the Student Lounge, by students as well as in-

The Faculty Speaks

Our guest faculty columnist this week is George V. Kidder, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

What is the meaning of "Liberal Arts", and why should anyone take that curriculum? The question is so often asked that an attempt to sketch the outline of an answer may be in order. We might ask first, "Why go to college at all?" Education has unquestionably a double objective, to help young people prepare to fulfill the special, peculiar functions for which they are especially fitted, and at the same time to accept their place in a social order in which they will share with others a common heritage and a common responsibility. Each must have his own part, but it must be within the whole, which is modern society.

Our educational program should teach us much about the world in which we live, both the historical origins and the process of development, of our society and our culture. We must also have some special skills, some capabilities, so developed as to be marketable and earn us a living. Most of the arguments about education turn on the ways in which these two can or should be combined. To achieve either objective fully within a lifetime of study is a real challenge; to achieve both in a four-year college program is an impossibility. Endless are the arguments as to which comes first.

Philosophy of Program

In general, the philosophy of the Liberal Arts program is that the first, the background, is of paramount importance, and that specialization, especially when directed to a definite vocational goal, should follow the laying of a broad and solid foundation. Emphasis will be put on learning the development of our culture and its present qualities, the interrelationship of all the many phases of it, without neglecting entirely the concentration on some more limited area in relation to other areas. If this foundation is well laid, a variety of careers, rather than one only, can be built upon it.

Obviously no curriculum, no arbitrary combination of subject-matter courses, can guarantee the attainment of the objective. A right attitude on the part of student and instructor is required, both engaged in a cooperative effort to understand "how" and "why" rather than "what" the ultimate rather than the immediate. Since it is only through the specific and particular that we approach the universal, we must study specific subjects. Some things must be learned and remembered, but most important is the end product of an ordered and disciplined mind, capable of critical judgment to distinguish not merely the true from the false, but the better from the worse.

Aims of Program

The Liberal Arts Curriculum aims to give the student some experience in each of several areas of knowledge, in which the subject matter and methods of approach may differ, and then to require somewhat deeper penetration in a more limited area. So far as possible, we aim in each course to emphasize development of the individual student more than the details of the subject matter. However, it is at present, of necessity, left pretty much to each student to integrate for himself the knowledge he has acquired in various courses, both in the early stages of distribution and in the later stages of specialization. In this direction we hope to make further progress; attention is being given to the problem. In the meantime, here as elsewhere students can and do accomplish much for themselves. Teaching, after all, is but the handmaid to learning.

Low And Inside

By George Hertzberg

After over three weeks of suffering, the campus is finally beginning to rally back; and victory seems certain. Thanks to the miracle drug, Kaopectate, the days of the "green death" are numbered. After weeks of experimentation, the advantages of Kaopectate have been proven over those of Wasson Infirmary injections and tea and toast in the "end" result.

The freshman class has reason to rejoice; the Student Association has voted to look into the matter of purchasing new washing machines for the residence halls. The ones now being used apparently have coin boxes that, are too tempting for anyone with a little ingenuity, and have too many knobs for anyone without much ingenuity.

The Sophomore class held a magnificent meeting last Thursday night. There were all of seventy students in attendance, out of a class of around seven hundred. The class's executive committee, which should consist of four members, only consisted of one. This was due to the fact that three of them are no longer with us. This called for an election. Since nominations were limited; and approximately one hundred hands were raised (which is pretty good for seventy people) only those who had friends in the first few rows were nominated.

Shortly after the ballot stuffing had begun, a transfer from C.C.N.Y. walked in; he took one look at the huge turnout and muttered, "No wonder we lost the 'Cane Rush.'"

Among those elected was a lucky young lady who wasn't even there.

Another momentous decision was made at that same S.A. meeting --- after ten minutes of debate our governing body decided to charge $ 2.50 instead of $2.25 for two surplus lounge chairs that are being sold (it might have been a better idea to leave them in the lounge temporarily until new ones are bought).

And then there was the upper classman who, upon receiving his student I.D. card, exclaimed, "Great Scott, it looks like ME ! ! !

Screeches And Laughter Accompany ID Cards

By Peggy Richter

The screechs, and sighs, groans, and complaints, mumblings and laughter slowly die down and, in the midst, we can hear a wise old voice from somewhere saying, "To thine own self be true." Now, we generally take it for granted that what Shakespeare said many, many years ago still remains true in our modern, uncivilized world.

But, look, slowly our picture begins to revolve and we see ourselves, perhaps, ten years ago? There you are, standing in front of your spacious looking-glass, loudly demanding, "Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the fairest of us all." And..naturally, it was you, so you sauntered away ecstatically.

But, ho, how the pain twists and turns now, like a knife in your body. You look, you sigh and throw up your hands saying, "It couldn't possibly be me." That face staring back at me from that peach card--ha!, it's a farce!! You chuckle, "Someone must have forged by signature." And the number, I was never tagged before. Must be some mistake, I live in 307 not in 264773. But something's wrong--what can it be? The card says "U.V.M.," that's true. "Student Identification Card," why everyone knows that." 1954-55," taken for granted. Something's still wrong. (Oh, now that pain begins to throb.) That date of birth looks.. loo ks..looks..mighty familiar. Couldn't be mustn't be, oh no!!!

Let's face it kids, we're just a homely mess. Couldn't be the camera that erred! Guess it's us. Sad, but true we're a bunch of hoods, a group of slicks, a slew of panty-waists and a gob of freaks.

Don't feel so bad though. They say the I.D. cards for the Dartmouth "B" string look just as bad!

Brando's Acting High Point Of Cinema's "Julius Caesar"

Those who saw "Julius Caesar" this past week, well know that they came a little closer to the world of Shakespeare. Most movie audiences exist merely for what they are going to receive in entertainment. It is far from foremost in the average audience's mind when they enter the theatre, that they are going to have to give themselves to enjoy the picture.

Acting was the high point in "Julius Caesar." The Mark Antony of Marion Brando was superb. Perhaps even better than that qualifying adjective, Brando's portrayal of Antony re-created that character from the pages of Shakespeare for the audience. At times he almost underacted to establish the effect he was striving for in characterization.

Clever, Powerful

This Antony was quiet, steel-eyed and reserved in his introductory scenes. Just as effectively he became clever, powerful and very much alive in his oration on the Senate steps, the climax of the play. From "A Streetcar Named Desire" to one of theatre's most treasured roles, Marlan Brando made the transition from tough guy to polished actor more than adequately.

As Casius, John Gielgud, one of the prominent Shakesperian actors of the century, became very much a true "Chamberlain's" player, His very presence created resentment in the audience. Casius, through Gielgud, truely had. a "lean and hungery look."

Superior Acting

In James Mason's Brutus, the moral idealist typical to most Shakespeare, was exemplified. He played his role convincingly, but seemed to chew his words. Much of his character was lost to that part of the audience in the back of the theatre. Mason stepped out of his element when he took the rule of Brutus.

For those of us who find the exceptional actor, properly cast in worthwhile roles, the acting was superior and much of a treat. The vehicle for these men was not only the play itself, but the authenticity with which the director, Manikiewicz staged and filmed "Julius Caesar."

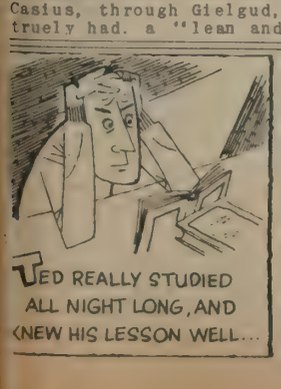
Celluloid Shakespeare

Shakesperian language effectively in use, rather than the usual poor mixture of slang and English context. The movie was not only an exciting performance, it was also a stimulating experience.

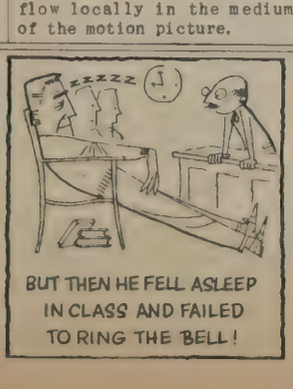
Certainly "Julius Caesar" became a convincing defender in the case for celluloid Shakespeare. More important, it has revealed to the casual theatre patron that Shakespeare can be exciting. The thirsty urchin of the arts revived himself at Shakespeare's cup, which, unfortunately, doesn't overflow locally in the medium of the motion picture.

Vote For Your Favorite Ugly Man Wednesday

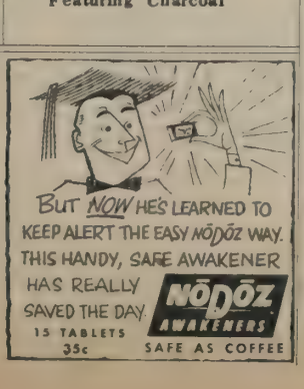
Who's the ugliest man on campus? Difficult to answer? Not if you have a lot of money to throw into the bottle of your favorite campus celebrity.



The Varsity Club is conducting the voting for UVM's first "Ugly Man Contest" which comes off next week. The winner will be announced at the all-University Junior Class-sponsored- Jazz Concert after the Massachusetts game next Saturday.



Campaigning will run from this Monday through Friday and competition is open to any University male student Pictures must be in by this Saturday.



Elections will beheld Wednesday through Friday. Votes will consist of money tossed into the kitty of your favorite "ugly man" and the richest man at the end of the three days is declared the "ugliest". All proceeds will go the the Varsity Club.

So come on you "filthy Wall Street war-mongers and Capitalists", shell out!

WHAT EVERY YOUNG COED SHOULD WEAR

Gather round, girls. Snap open a pack of Philip Morris, light up, relax and enjoy that mild fragrant vintage tobacco while Old Dad tells you about the latest campus fashions.

The key word this year is casual. Be casual. Be slapdash. Be rakish. Improvise. Invent your own ensembles—like ski pants with a peek-a-boo blouse, like pajama bottoms with an ermine stole, like a hocky sweater with a dirndl.

(Dirndl, incidentally, is one of the truly fascinating words in the English language. Etymologists have quarreled over its origin for years. Some hold with Professor Manley Ek that Dirndl is a corruption of Dardanelle and is so named because it resembles the skirts worn by the women of that region. This theory is at first glance plausible, but begins to fall apart when you consider that there are no women in the Dardanelle region because of the loathesome local custom of female infanticide.)

(Another theory is advanced by Dr. Clyde Feh. Dirndl, says he, is a contraction of "dairy in the dell" and refers to the milkmaidish appearance of the skirt. But again close examination causes one to abandon a plausible hypothesis. As every child knows, it is not "dairy in the dell" but "farmer in the dell", in which case the skirt should be called not dirndl but firndl.

(There are some who contend we will never know the true origins of dirndl. To those faint hearted Cassandras I say, remember how everyone laughed at Edison and Franklin and Fulton and Marconi and Sigafoos. [Sigafoos, in case you have forgotten, invented the nostril, without which breathing, as we know it today, would not be possible.] The origins of dirndl will be found, say I, and anyone who believes the contrary is a lily-livered churl and if he'll step outside for a minute, I'll give him a thrashing he won't soon forget.)

But I digress. We were smoking a Philip Morris and talking about the latest campus styles. Casual, we agree, is the key word. But casual need not mean drab. Liven up your outfits with a touch of glamor. Even the lowly dungaree and man-shirt combination can be made exciting if you'll adorn it with a simple necklace of 120 matched diamonds. With Bermuda shorts, wear gold knee-cymbals. Be guided by the famous poet Cosmo Sigafoos (whose brother Sam it was who invented the nostril) who wrote:

Sparkle, my beauty,
Shimmer and shine,
The night is young,
The air's like wine,
Cling to a leaf,
Hang on a vine,
Crawl on your belly,
It's time to dine.

(Mr. Sigafoos, it should be explained, was writing about a glow-worm. Insects, as everyone knows, are among Mr. Sigafoos' favorite subjects for poems. Who can ever forget his immortal Ode to a Boll Weevil? Or his Tumbling Along With the Tumbling Tumblebug? Or his Fly Gently, Sweet Aphid? Mr. Sigafoos has been inactive since the invention of DDT.)

But I digress. We were smoking a Philip Morris and discussing fashions. Let us turn now to headwear. The motif in hats this year will be familiar American scenes. There will be models to fit every head—for example, the "Empire State Building" for tall thin heads; the "Jefferson Memorial" for squatty ones; "Niagara Falls" for dry scalps. Feature of the collection is the "Statue of Liberty," complete with a torch that actually burns. This is very handy for lighting your Philip Morrises, which is very important because no matter how good Philip Morrises are, they're nowhere unless you light them.

We come now to the highlight of this year's fashion parade—a mad fad that's sweeping the chic set at high tone campuses all over the country. All the gals who are in the van, in the swim, and in the know are doing it. Doing what, you ask? Getting tattooed, of course! You just don't rate these days unless you've got at least an anchor on your biceps. If you really want to be the envy of the campus, get yourself a four masted schooner, or a heart with FATHER printed inside of it, or a—

I interrupt this column to bring you a special announcement. A runner has just handed me the following bulletin:

"The origin of the word dirndl has at long last been discovered. On June 27, 1846, Dusty Schwartz, the famous scout and Indian fighter, went into the Golden Nugget Saloon in Cheyenne, Wyoming. The Golden Nugget had just imported a new entertainer from the East. She came out and did her dance in pink tights. Dusty Schwartz had never seen anything like that in his life, and he was much impressed. He watched with keen interest as she did her numbers, and he thought about her all the way home. When he got home, his wife Feldspar was waiting to show him a new skirt she had made for herself. 'How do you like my new skirt, Dusty?' said Feldspar. He looked at the large voluminous garment, then thought of the pink tights on the dancing girl. 'Your skirt is darn dull,' said Dusty. 'Darn dull' was later shortened to 'dirndl' which is how dirndls got their name."

'Chaperon Problem' Appears To Be One-Sided

No General Problem Exists Says Dean; Poor Social Tone

By Fred Jungmann

Dean Robert H. Kroepsch has stated that no exact problem concerning chaperons exists. It is primarily the "social tone" of the parties, rather than the disregard for regulations.

He said that "There is no general chaperone problem. In specific situations there are problems; and it may be that faculty members are embarrassed because some organizations do not observe the social code which has been adopted by the Joint Board."

Joint Social Board

The Joint Social Board, to which Dean Kroepsch referred, was created to "establish and carry out policies and procedures for the conduct and co-ordination of social functions at the University of Vermont." Dean Kroepsch referred specifically to instances where chaperones had not been welcomed to parties, did not see many of the guests, and were generally overlooked in an impolite way.

To back up his belief that the regulation concerning liquor consumption is not the major consideration in the difficulties, he sited a passage from the new faculty handbook which instructed chaperones. "The role of a chaperone should be that of a guest....Chaperones should be neither policemen or proctors, nor are they held responsible if laws and regulations are disregarded by students who are present."

Social Tone

As backing to his belief that social tone is the prime factor in many difficulties, Dean Kroepsch pointed out that there is no trouble in getting chaperones for teas, dinners, formals, open houses, etc., where the social tone is better. He went on to say that the only action a chaperone can take, if he or she is displeased with a party, is to file a negative report with COSA, the Dean of Administration or the Dean of Women.

He further pointed out that often a faculty member wishes to avoid unpleasantness and not create a scene which includes filing a negative report. Therefore, if a chaperone has once run into conduct he does not care for, he will be reluctant to chaperone such an affair again.

As a summation, Dean Kroepsch suggested that the obvious remedy for difficulty in procuring a chaperone for a party would be an improvement of the social tone of such affairs.

Wrong Room?

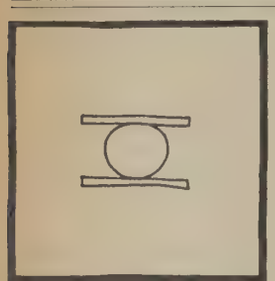
This letter was received last year. It is reprinted in conjunction with the CYNIC's spread devoted to the chaperon problem.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Some time ago my wife and I chaperoned a fraternity party. What fraternity? It doesn't matter. The Social Chairman was a nice boy who did his best, and I'd rather not embarrass him.

Now, strange as it may seem, this was the first fraternity party (or any student party, for that matter) I ever attended in this country. I was naturally curious to see how American girls and boys entertain themselves.

Well, I did see. And I don't want to see it again. There will be one less couple available for chaperoning on the campus.



No, it wasn't the drinking. Of course we all know there isn't supposed to be any drinking at fraternity parties. That's the rule, or should I say theory. I am a scientist, and reasonable discrepancies between theory and practice are tolerable even in science. So I wouldn't be too much alarmed. I believe in temperance rather than in abstinence and the story of Cana of Galilee proves that I have support in quite high quarters. Besides I cannot agree with the theory which claims that a boy of 18 is mature enough to be drafted into the army and get killed but isn't mature enough to have a drink. Enforcing such a theory to the letter, by the way, just pushes many a boy into showing off that he is smart enough to break it.

But what I cannot take is exhibitionism. The few chairs in the main room where the dancing took place were constantly occupied by couples engaged in a kissing Marathon. And the way they did it definitely excluded 'love thy neighbor' as a motive.

Now, I don't intend to embark on moralization. But I must say that it is simply poor taste. It reminded me of another place I once saw such manners -- it was a third rate tavern in Antwerp. The company was that of sailors and their girl-friends, the latter of a variety usually not included in the Social Register. I thought it was rather natural for those people to behave that way. Am I expected to accept such manners as natural for American girls and boys? Still, at this fraternity party, nobody seemed to be disturbed or even surprised.

Frenchmen have a witty saying about an ideal wife. She is supposed to be a cook in the kitchen, a lady in the parlor, and a courtesan in the boudoir. Some of our UVM coeds got the rooms all mixed up. I am afraid they'll also be ladies in the kitchen and kitchen-maids in... well, you know what I mean. As for their future husbands, serves them right.

spending the evening elsewhere with their own choice of entertainment. Treat them well!

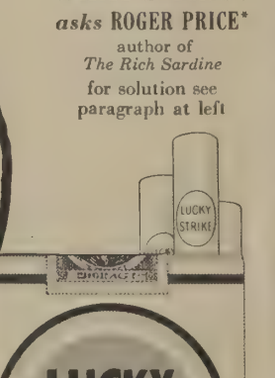
Students must supply the answer to the questions: Why should I (or any faculty member) serve as a chaperon? Am I (or any faculty member) expected to resign myself to boredom and lack of consideration?

Not many will stand for that boredom and casual, offhand treatment too long, as witness the present situation when chaperons are in such short supply.

I do not mean to imply that the party should revolve about the chaperons, or that chaperons should be scrambled into the main current of the party as a matter of course. Chaperons are quite aware that student parties are held for purposes other than amusing faculty members. But students, as hosts, must display that initiative for entertainment which provides a reasonably good time for all - including the chaperons. A good host gives a little prior thought to the likes of his guests. Some of the chaperons like cards, others like good music, dancing, singing, stimulating conversation, etc. Some, whose oats are not yet sown may wistfully wish to join the party if an invitation were forthcoming. All of the chaperons do like to meet the other couples at a social. None of the chaperons are fond of dirty, drafty rooms, solitude and hunger pains.

In conclusion, I am certain that the problem of an adequate supply of chaperons will not solved unless and until 1) 1) students really accept the regulation requiring chaperons and,
2) realize that faculty members are free agents and,
3) act accordingly by treating chaperons as guests.

Sincerely,
Arnold H. Schein
Associate Professor of Biochemistry



P.S. If an honest, determined effort is made in this direction conceivably the time will come when chaperons will look forward to attending student parties, when it will be a delight and a pleasure to be a chaperon.

Doubtless, you've guessed that the Droodle at the right is: Careless two-gun cowboy enjoying better-tasting Lucky while waiting in ambush. Lots of other two-gun cowboys—and many millions of no-gun folks—agree that Luckies taste better. Students, for example, prefer Luckies to all other brands, according to the latest, biggest coast-to-coast college survey. Once again, the No. 1 reason is that Luckies taste better. They taste better because Lucky Strike is the cigarette of fine tobacco . . . and "It's Toasted" to taste better. "It's Toasted"—the famous Lucky Strike process—tones up Luckies' light, mild, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. So, enjoy the better-tasting cigarette . . . Lucky Strike.

Chaperon And Wife Cite Problems At Meeting

By Fred Jungmann

On Monday in the Student Association Council room, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Severance spoke informally with the Social Chairmen of six UVM fraternities. The subject of the discussion was the trouble fraternities are having in getting Chaperons for parties. The Severances chaperoned many parties last year.

Mr. Severance opened the session on the note that the treatment of chaperons was the key to the problem, but that he felt there was no set method he could recommend. He suggested that the attitudes at parties of certain members of the faculty may vary from those who join in and even drink, to those who just like to be left alone.

Mrs. Severance pointed out that often some common courtesies were forgotten, and that faculty members go to parties to meet the students on a social level, not just for the sake of going. She further pointed out a need for variety in the treatment of Chaperons, and that fraternities sometime forget to reemburse couple for baby sitting expenses.

Mr. Severance suggested that fraternities must get to know the chaperons, find ones suited for the type of party, find their likes and dislikes, and whether they drink at parties. He went on to point that some faculty members wish to abide strictly by the liquor code while others may be "As lack as the students." Another of his suggestions at this point was that fraternities should have alternate chaperons ready, and to let chaperons do what they want at the parties. Mrs. Severance backed him up by saying chaperons are more at home if they are made to feel like part of the party, and that they enjoy moving with the crowd as at Christmas formals. She again emphasised variety. They both stated that a common complaint given in negative reports was boredom.

The question arose as to why the two chaperon couples will often disagree in their reports. Mrs. Severance said that often a couple likes to choose the other that they are going to chaperon with. She was asked about couples who are reluctant to make such a choice and what can be done about couples who want to have an enjoyable time but refuse to specify their likes and dislikes.

Another point brought up by the social chairmen was that chaperons cannot tell whether trouble makers are members of the fraternity or not and that such individuals cast an undue reflection on the house in the minds of the chaperons. A further complaint often mentioned was that fraternities not only it difficult to discuss problems with chaperons, but are also denied equal representation and the right to give their side at meetings of the Joint Social Activities Board. Mr. Hardy then stated that his motion to have all but the final judicial proceedings of the Joint Board open to all interested parties had been adopted at the last meeting.

Mrs. Severance suggested that chaperons go to representatives of the house before filing a bad report. She also said that she knew of some chaperons went into the parties with a negative attitude at the start, due to former experiences and boring evenings. It was suggested to her that if a chaperon was displeased he could indicate it during the evening so that the social chairmen could have a chance to do something about it. She answered that social chairmen and house presidents could watch the reactions. There was a general agreement that sometimes the fraternity will just get a bad chaperon. Mr. and Mrs. Severance stated that this year the faculty have found chaperoning much more of a pleasure. The question of why chaperons were necessary was raised and the Severances said that the only actually reason was for the protection of women at parties. The Social Chairmen stated that if a couple wanted trouble they certainly did not have to go to fraternity parties to find it. The Severances were asked why so many faculty couples refused to ever be chaperons. They answered that with many it is lack of available extra time and also that couples do get tired of doing it. Mrs. Severance stated, some couples felt it to be too much of a responsibility because, "If anything really tragic occured the chaperone would be sacrificed even if the University says they are not to be held responsible." Mr. Hardy said that a few couples objected solely because of the drinking aspects. The Social Chairmen suggested that because the list of available chaperons is getting smaller, perhaps alumni, prominent townspeople and parents of local students. could be allowed to chaperon. This point was discussed further. Mr. Hardy suggested that at the next meeting, all of the Social Chairmen attend and each should bring one couple who had chaperoned at their parties.

Just What Is A Chaperone ?

According to the Faculty Handbook, "Chaperons are present at mixed student functions as representatives of the University to lend maturity, dignity, and graciousness to those social gatherings and to assist the students with their social training and development. Members of the faculty and administration are not required to accept invitations to chaperon; and when they do so, it is primarily because they enjoy meeting students in a social setting and because they are willing to help them with their social education. The role of the chaperon should be that of a guest. It is easier for a chaperon to feel like a guest when the student organization is willing and able to maintain acceptable social standards. Chaperons should be neither policemen nor proctors, nor are they held responsible if laws and regulations are disregarded by students who are present; however, when in their opinion such action is warranted, they should call to the attention of the students in charge of the party, those conditions which they feel are unsatisfactory, or in poor taste. Needless to say, the chaperons themselves are expected to observe both the spirit and letter of all University regulations."

Problem Not On JSAB Slate Says Woodard

Miss Florence Woodard, chairman of the Joint Social Activities Board, had little to say concerning the chaperone problem in an interview which took place after the first meeting of the board.

"Since no one at the meeting brought up the topic of chaperonage at fraternity parties, the topic was not placed on our agenda," said Miss Woodard. "Until a specific request is made for review of the question, it will not be considered for discussion."

"The policies and procedures for the supervision of social functions are established by the Joint Social Activities Board and administered through the office of the Coordinator of Student Affairs," quote the COSA handbook of university regulations. The board has a Calendar Committee which schedules topics for discussion. It also has a Steering Committee which "carries on studies and surveys and formulates policy and procedure to be submitted to the Joint Board for action." The latter committee is the logical one to study the chaperonage problem, as it would study any other problem which falls under the jurisdiction of JSAB, with or without a specific request.

IFC Aiming At Solution

By Myron Lench

Attention Chaperons! The day of the brawling, drinking, wild fraternity party at UVM is over.

In past years chaperoning of parties by faculty members required nerves of steel, skin of leather, and saintly toleration for "this younger generation".

A fraternity party was rated a success by the amount of alcohol consumed, the quantity and intensity of the vile language used, and the strain and embarrassment inflicted on the chaperon.

Understandably, most chaperons found that one fraternity party was enough to satisfy their appetites for this type of affair for a lifetime. It was the rare masochist who came back again.

Time marches on and chaperons start disappearing faster than the American buffalo. Thus, the chaperon problem was created -- "Where are all the chaperons of bygone years?"

New Policy

The IFC is now trying to make amends for the actions of their predecessors. Their aim is to inculcate fraternities with the idea of seeing that the few remaining chaperons at fraternity parties enjoy themselves enough to want to return.

The effect of the IFC campaign is already visible as evidenced by the reports of chaperons at recent Homecoming parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovejoy, of the Economies department, went to chaperon their first fraternity party with a feeling of apprehension, having heard the wild tales of veteran chaperons. The SAE boys quickly ridded them of all apprehensiveness by going out of their way to make the Lovejoys feel at home. Mr. Lovejoy felt that his evening was profitable in that it afforded him the opportunity to spend some time with the students on a level other than that of the classroom.

Theta Chi

Lieutenant and Mrs. Aldrich, attached to AROTC, have nothing but nice words for the men of Theta Chi after having chaperoned their Homecoming party. He said that he heard not one swear word, saw no signs of excessive drinking, and felt he was treated as an honored guest. Lieutenant Aldrich would accept with pleasure any further invitations from this group.

The formula for having your chaperon leave your party with a desire to return is a simple one. The COSA regulation book offers these suggestions - Select a chaperon who will mix well with your group, and then give plenty of notice.

Fraternities Do Realize That Problems Exist

By Paul Kalis

Two years ago acquiring a chaperone for a fraternity function was like pulling teeth. Practically all the university approved chaperones were undesirous of entering houses floating in beer, filled with profane language, and marked by adolescent behavior.

"Who could blame them? College 'men' and 'women' were acting like immature school children. President Borgmann was thoroughly disgusted with the situation and on the verge of completely cutting out drinking on the UVM campus, thus making it a puritanical dry one. At this point a remark

Text Of President Borgmann's Address

I have important news for you students - some of the news I regret having to bring - other news I am happy to spread --- but I have wanted you students to have the news first-hand.

This morning a copy of our proposed biennial budget for 1955-57 period was presented to the Governor by our Board of Trustees. This afternoon's and tomorrow morning's papers will carry the news and some detail. Essentially it calls for an increased expenditure of over $500,000 per year, increasing the total budget from $4,631,000 to $5,149,000 during the second year of the biennium.

The budget is a complex one because UVM is a complex institution. It includes the expenditures for teaching in all colleges and divisions; it includes the costs of research in agriculture; the costs of the agricultural extension work, and of the state services carried on under the direction of the College. It includes the dormitories, the cafeteria, the bookstore, the libraries, intercollegiate athletics and so on. A very high portion of the total (80-90%) is expended for wages and salaries.

The money to meet these expenses comes from two principal sources --- governmental (state and federal) appropriations and payments by students for tuition, fees, room and board.

Why the increase in budget? Boiled down to simplest terms, it is the insistence that UVM at least maintain, and if possible increase, the high quality of educational service to you students and to the people of our State and Country. This insistance comes from our Board of Trustees and from our whole staff.

Two years ago, the same problem was faced and some progress was made in terms of a salary scale permitting us to continue to hire well prepared, top teachers and researchers. We haven't yet licked the problem and another major increase is necessary. The proposed budget will be used primarily to make this necessary step-up of our salary scale.

What does the new budget mean in terms of income? Certainly a continued balanced budget is called for. Thus our request for state appropriations to meet the needs of the several agricultural divisions and of the College of Medicine is close to $1,400,000 per year as compared to our present support from the state of $1,134,633.00; an increase of $265,367 per year. The expenditures planned to all other colleges will have to be met in the only other way presently possible - an increase in tuition. Without State appropriations these Colleges (Arts and Sciences, Technology, Education and Nursing, Graduate) have to operate as the private colleges of our region do. A survey has been made this fall of tuition and required fees at all independent colleges in New England, New York and New Jersey with student bodies of over 500. The average figure is $743. Examples are Colgate - $850; St. Lawrence - $700; Middlebury - $772 for men and $748 for women; Dartmouth - $800; Colby - $718.25; Tufts - $825; Norwich - $711; Wellesley - $925 and so on.

It will be necessary for UVM to raise its tuition to $705 ($720 for tuition and fees) beginning the fall of 1955. The Board of Trustees approved this increase last Saturday and it is now official. It will apply to all out-of-state students in the College of Agriculture and to all students in the undergraduate colleges and in the Graduate College. I deeply regret having to make the announcement, and hope you will know that it would not have been made if there was any other course of action open to us at this time.

I might add that UVM costs are still low - for if one compares board and room charges, UVM is nearly $200 a year lower than the average at the other colleges included in our survey. I cannot promise that some small change may not have to be made in these rates., We will try our best to hold them near the present figures.

On the other hand, as I have tried to point our continously, Vermont is the only state in the Union that does not provide at least one recognized university, which their residents can attend at low tuition rates. A survey of 1954 resident tuitions at all the land-grant universities in our country indicates a figure of $160 per year as the median. In this list, Vermont stands first and by a margin of over $300 per year. So an appropriation bill has been authorized by the Board of Trustees for presentation to Legislature calling for an annual appropriation of $478,000. Actually, there are savings in other present appropriations such as those for senatorial scholarships presently held by UVM students and for the Elementary and Junior High Education scholarships to present UVM students. The net cost to the people of the State can be approximately $306,000 per year. Such an appropriation will enable UVM to reduce the tuition for residents of Vermont to $225. We shall bend every effort to accomplish this end result - for we strongly feel that only in this fashion can the young men and women of Vermont have opportunities for higher education similar to those of all other American youth.

But let us leave the pressing problems of the present to dream ahead a few years. Your Board of Trustees has many dreams for the future under their present consideration. Let me just list a few. There is a possibility that ground can be broken for a new girl's dormitory or dormitories housing up to 400 girls by next fall. This will free Converse for use by upper classmen and by married students. A plan to begin a five-year program of renovation and refurnishing of all dormitory rooms are being forumlated. We know that a new library, or at least a major addition to Billings, must be faced. We know that additions to the Medical College plant are overdue. We know that East Hall cannot possibly be used for more than five more years. We know that the Old Mill can be made into a much more efficient class room building. We know that more endowments are needed. We know that more scholarship and loan funds are urgent. We also know that it is unrealistic to expect the people of Vermont to be able to meet most of these needs through tax support. It is completely clear that a continuing and intensified search for outside funds must be undertaken at once. The Board is presently considering appropriate action to intensify our search for funds with which to make our dreams become realities.

I have talked much of mundane things today - for this I would apologize if they were our only dreams. But they are not. We all know that buildings, salaries, tuitions are not the important aspects of education. The factors of prime importance are the ideas of teachers and students - the attitudes toward learning - the ideas of how to better do our task of keeping men free and able to do their part of the world's work. Our UVM, as as is true of all land-grant colleges, seeks to blend the liberal education needed to keep men free with the practical to allow men to accomplish their part of the world's work. None of our colleges has really solved this blending problem. It is my hope that UVM will lead the way to the solution - for the ideals of the land-grant colleges were born in Vermont. Where better than a State with its natural contrasts - the cold strength of granite and the delicate beauty of marble ---the production of maple syrup and machine tools - the rugged strength of the Green Mountains and the gentle beauty of a sunset on Lake Champlain --- where better to expect a solution to the blending of the liberal and the practical to be found?

class room building. We know that more endowments are needed. We know that it is unrealistic to expect the people of Vermont to be able to meet most of these needs through tax suuport. The Board is presently considering appropriate action to intensify our search for funds with which to make our dreams become realities. "

Social Chairmen

able transformation took place. The fraternities came of age. Mature thinking and cooperation on the parts of the leaders of the various houses commenced. These student leaders met with the president, conferred, and decided upon a probationary period in which the then present vulgarities had to cease--and they did.

The social chairmen finally realized that the chaperones do them a favor by attending their functions. The chaperones by so doing have sacrificed a large portion of their free time to the students; all they ask is that the students run the function in a decent manner. Fraternities now realize their dependence on, and their responsibilities toward, the chaperones.

The social chairmen, assisted by the membership at-large, are tendering the chaperones the respect and gratitude they so richly deserve. Every effort is made to make them feel at home and to provide them with the comforts of home. Many social chairmen investigate the chaperones' interests and to provide a program for them in which they do things which are of interest to them. Every attempt is made to make the evening as enjoyable as possible for the chaperones, who are also encouraged to bring any of their personal friends. At all houses they are served coffee and at some they are invited to dinner either before or after the particular function.

It is now demonstrated to the chaperones that they are wanted. Practically all the students introduce their dates to the chaperones. Provisions are made so that at no time are the chaperones left with no one with whom to converse unless, of course, they so desire.

Suggestions, Anyone?

In a further effort to alleviate any student-chaperone difficulties, the Coordinator of Student Affairs and the social chairmen convene every other Monday to discuss any existing problems. Part of the agenda is to have one chaperone speak and comment on his pet peeve or problem. All conclusions and recommendations are reported to the Interfraternity Council. An excellent suggestion, offered by many fraternity members, is that Mr. Hardy distribute questionnaires to the chaperones, quizzing them as to their likes and dislikes--this would act as a type of orientation for both the fraternities and chaperones.

As a result of this good common sense, interaction of fraternity and chaperone, the chaperone reports have become complementary and faculty-student relations have improved. Fraternity men have rightly come to feel obligated to the chaperones.

Student Union

"The Student Union could supply the missing unifying factor. In our long range planning, a Student Union must have a place."

Lucchina defended the practicality of the Fund. "The five thousand dollars is just a start. I have been reliably informed that the Student Union could be realized within ten years." Critics of the idea have expressed concern over the innumerable little funds that get no where. They recommend that the money should be put to some practical, immediate purpose.

President Borgmann recalled experienced at Nebraska and Colorado where beautiful student buildings were usually empty because they weren't central to campus life. Lucchina agreed that this problem is a serious one and suggested that the university has an option on a property across from Waterman Building on College Street.

The third issue, that of legality, now awaits court decision and thus does not loom so prominently. Student Union backers defend their position on the fourth issue on the grounds that the very purpose of a Student Activity fee is to better student activities and a Student Union is now vitally needed to do just this. On the other hand, Ass'st Dean of Women Wing has pointed out that student activity fees should be used for immediate student activities.

President Borgmann feels that "the students should be consulted before such a sum of money is laid aside." All Student Association Council members that would be contacted as this article was written favored this suggestion. It seems probable now that these questions will be ultimately settled democratically by vox populi, the voice of the people.

International Relations Club, Hillel Sponsor UN Speaker

Father Benjamin Nunez, the Representative from Costa Rica to the United Nations, will speak on Friday evening, October 22, at 9:20 p.m. in the Ohave Zedek Synagogue on North Prospect Street on "The United Nations This Year. "

This opportunity to hear an active participant in the United Nations while he is in Burlington this week is presented by the International Relations Club and the Hillel organization of UVM. All are welcome to this international gathering. The sponsors of the program recommend this as an ideal date for those who are not going to the Mortarboard formal.

Father Nunez, now spending most of his time at the United Nations in New York, has also been a professor of sociology at the University of Costa Rica in Central America. For several years he was Minister of Labor and Social Welfare in the Costa Rican government and in 1941 he founded the Costa Rican Democratic Union Movement. His education was in Costa Rica and the United States, where he recently received his Ph.D. in sociology from Columbia University.

The Costa Rican U.N. Delegate is in Vermont for a day during United Nations Week to help various communities observe the ninth anniversary of the coming into force of the United Nations Charter on October 24th. President Eisenhower, and Governor Emerson for Vermont, have proclaimed United Nations Day for that date. The University family is invited to hear a distinguished and interesting foreign speaker as part of the observance in Burlington of this celebration.

The presentation is made as part of the regular program of Hillel which is interested in bringing all students to a better understanding of their positions as world citizens. The International Relations Club offers this talk as the first of a series of events this school year.

The meeting is open to the whole community and is free.

WUS Sets $2500 Goal For UVM; Helps To Build Hospital

By Susan Wakefield

$2500 is the UVM goal of the World University Service drive this year. The fund raising campaign, a project of the Religious Activities Committees of Student Association, will be held the week of November 7.

"World University Service" is an international voluntary agency which operates a program of material assistance and international education to aid the world university community.

"Our organization this year seems to be extremely well knit. The Religious Activities Committee plans to surpass the income of all past drives by the cooperation of both students and faculty," said Marsha Pearl, general chairman of the drive.

UVM students will help to build a badly needed student hospital ward in Japan with half of their contributions. The rest will go into the WUS general fund. Last year the University assisted Indian students in building a student hostel in Calcutta.

The drive has been organized with Marsha Pearl as general chairman. Working with her are division captains. Captain of the publicity division is Mickey Rotanelli; special events; Barbara Weiss and Pat Henderson. Captains of the soliciting division have been appointed for each living unit. They are Sandra Winterberger, girls' dormitories; Carol Coen, fraternities; Gwen Lockwood, sororities; Frank Thurston, boys' dormitories; Bob Smith, faculty; John Mooney, off-campus units.

UVM and 700 other United States colleges will join with schools from all over the world in this mutual "investment in humanity." The faculty and students of even the poorest nations of WUS contribute to the common effort to help others help themselves. American campuses have given about five million dollars in the past fifteen years.

WUS is a nonsectarian, non-political organization. In the USA it is sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, the National Newman Club Federation, the United States National Student Association, and the United Student Christian Council.

ROTC Programs Enroll 910 Male Students

A total of 910 UVM students are enrolled in the University's Air and Army ROTC programs, figures released by the Air and Military Science Departments show.

The Army ROTC program at UVM has 460 men students enrolled, according to Lt. Col. William E. Cox, professor of military science. Breakdown shows 210 freshmen, 145 sophomores, 55 juniors and 50 seniors enrolled.

The Air Force ROTC program has 450 UVM men enrolled, according to Col. Allen F. Herzberg, professor of Air Science, with 207 Freshmen, 170 sophomores, 36 juniors, and 37 seniors enrolled.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures show that all U.S. motor vehicle exports in 1952 included only one passenger car to Russia. No trucks. No buses.

You're Not Seeing Double! Two Pair Of Frosh Twins

By Elaine Grossman

Lately, have you seen those two boys who wear bright red jackets? Have you often wondered who they are? Well, these jackets are worn by the Krauser twins, Arthur and Robert. Because they both have brown hair and brown eyes, and are practically the same size, it is somewhat difficult to tell 'Who's Who.''

The opinions and interests of Bob and Art are quite similar. They both enjoy debating and hope to become members of the UVM debating team. Photography leads their hobby list, and tennis and swimming are their favorite sports. They are looking forward to the cold, snowy winter months so they will be able to ski. Bob's main dislike, and there are other students who agree with him, is that romantic language, French.

Social Interests

The twins are very social minded and like "to date." Variety is the spice of life, but the only thing that we are serious about is our studies." Some day we will see a sign saying, "Arthur Krauser, DDS," Bob is undecided at present, but he thinks that he might turn to business and follow in his Dad's footsteps.

New York must have several sets of twins, because Mary Ann and her brother, William Hulburt, also hail brom there; this time it's Schenectady instead of Brooklyn. Mary Ann stands 5'4" and Bill hits a grand height of 5'11". They both have hazel eyes and light brown hair.

Likes Music

Mary Ann's favorite colors are pink and yellow. Therefore, you'll find that she has many different blouses and sweaters of these colors. Mary Ann enjoys keeping up with the latest "fads and fashions" which occur in newspapers and fashion magazines. A soft voice is usually heard every now and then on third floor of Coolidge, and you soon discover that Mary Ann is singing some of her favorite songs. She treads on enchanted ground when she hears piano music. One of her dislikes is writing compositions. "Don't ever ask me what mark I received in a composition. I hope the familiar saying, "practice makes perfect", will guide me."

Photography Fan

Bill likes photography and plans to use his camera quite often. "I see so many interesting things, that I really don't know when I should click my camera." Although he enjoys badminton and swimming, he'd rather spend his time working with outside organizations.

The Army ROTC has already given him a demerit. The following is a warning to all ROTC members: "Don't think that your hat covers your hair; get a hair cut."

Mary Ann and Bill have their goals in the medical field. Maybe in the near future they will be working side by side as doctor and nurse.

Dum - Da - Dum.... Council Names Security Committee

By Robert W. Smith

One of the most used rooms in Waterman has been the topic of discussion of a special Student Association Committee for the past several weeks. The room in question is the Coat Room in the lower hall of Waterman.

The committee, known as the Coat Room Security Committee, was appointed by the Student Association Council to investigate and report on conditions regarding the advisability of a closer watch being kept on books and clothing temporarily placed there.

It was felt that such a committee should be set up because several instances of reported losses had been presented which seemed to warrant an investigation and report. The committee has the problem under consideration and is interested in any other instances of anyone else having lost anything of value. Any information may be given to Dave Ireland, co-chairman of the committee.

During the investigation it has been discovered that most of the losses have been somewhat classified. The big item during the first few weeks of school was new text books and manuals. Recently several items of clothing, including suit or sport jackets, sweaters, topcoats, raincoats and slickers have been reported missing. These are the majority of things reported, but there are other personal items too.

Several plans are under consideration to attempt to alleviate the situation, and if found necessary will be employed. It is suggested that books and articles of clothing should not be left in the coat room overnight. Articles of more personal value should never be left in this room. It is understood that anything left there is left with no obligation on the part of Student Association under any circumstance, but rather at the risk of the individual. It is the wise student who keeps close watch over his belongings.

It is not intended that the coat room should not be used for student facilities, but that a better interpretation be presented for those interested in using it. In most cases the room is used as it should be. It is only for the few instances where it is not correctly used that this article is written.

WRA Draws Up New Set Of Laws

The Women's Recreation Association has drawn up a new constitution which differs from the former one in three main ways. These changes involve the name of the organization itself, membership and the awards system.

Formerly, WRA was WAA, which stood for Women's Athletic Association. However, members of the physical education department feel that the word "recreation" in place of "athletic" is more appropriate as some of the sponsored activities such as square dancing cannot be categorized under the latter title.

Active Members

In order to become an active member who participates in the government of WRA and who may represent UVM in sports at other colleges, one is requested to pay a fee of one dollar. It had previously been 25 cents. Under the new constitution, the active member has more responsibility.

The third significant change concerns the issuing of awards. Under the old system of points more than one girl could achieve the same award if she worked for it. Now, an award will be given only to one outstanding girl from each class by vote of the Executive Council.

to back a publication which embodies certain changes from the Windfall." In the ensuing discussion, the first two alternatives were supported by none of the members. The main focus of dicussion was the first issue of The Centaur; was it an improvement over the Windfall? what other changes should be made?

David O'Brien, Vice-president of the Student Association, pointed out that "previous magazines posed financial problems; The Centaur should try to maintain sounder financing." He went on to say that "the first issue of The Centaur was very good and did appeal to the majority of the students." The Vice-president concluded that "the magazine could serve a very useful purpose."

Mike Rosco, chairman of the Constitution Committee, especially praised the new editorial board for its democratic policy of accepting any who show sufficient interest as members of the staff. He cited The Centaur's constitution as being "a good one along Windfall lines. The editors of Centaur have expressed their gratitude for the "vote of confidence" and have announced that they will adopt the S.A. recommendations. The motion passed does not bind the council to any specific financial policy.

At the same meeting the council took action to get the constitutions of all S.A. affiliated organizations filed by next month. Unco-operative groups will not be allowed to request funds. Committees were set up to investigate the washing machine problem and to find a third advisor.

Gridders Seek Third Straight In Facing Norwich Cadets

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

Dear President Borgmann, all the ships at sea, and everyone else concerned with the existing athletic facilities situation at U.V.M.

You've got a problem, you need a solution. Your problem is entitled, "Physical Education, its needs." Work fast boys before that roof blows off again. I can see it coming, day by day. It's the story of Jericho re- written.

Things are simply this. Your numerous situations, which are rather disgusting, cannot be solved, due to an apparent lack of organization, responsibility, and resources. Here is a brief resume of this "stuff" to which I refer.

Mr. President, and all of your ships, and everyone else, take a walk down into the dungeon of our dilapidated gymnasium. This dungeon is lined with rows of lockers. These lockers are used by gym classes. These lockers are so close together that it is impossible for a "Phys-ed" student to get packed in any closer than he is locked in when there are seven or eight students locked in also. Now this "locked in" situation can become quite embarrassing, particularly while attempting to dress after a shower. While we're at it, what are showers? I know what a cold is. Okay boys, so you've got a bad situation down in that dungeon. You know it. What do you do about it? Who's responsibility does it come under? Where do you get the money? Is there a plan for improvement? So far, we've seen no answer followed by no solution. Then somebody comes up with this comment; "It's a disgrace that a University of our size has only one lone outdoor basketball court." This only court is in such bad condition that the backboards are rotting and the rims are egg- shaped. So you try to find out how to go about solving this financially inexpensive situation. Under whose jurisdiction does it come? The athletic department has no money for it. Buildings and Grounds Department is "in the dark." Nothing happens. Finally someone puts gravel on the ground. What next?

Let's hop over to tennis. You've got ten courts for this sport, but the only difference is that you have over six hundred tennis rackets. There is a need; but is there a plan for future expansion to relieve this congested situation? The few courts we do have are in out of the way places. "P.U. on tennis," this guy says. "I've got to wait on line to get my shots, only to feel guilty, for when I finally do get to play, the guys in the line behind me are looking at me as though I were a hog or something."

Speaking about hogs, will we ever get that new gym? This is as much space as I will waste on this need, except to say, that it would be nice to have a basketball court which our school could call its own. Just imagine! Fuzzy's boys could even practice everyday without worrying about conflicting schedules with the local high school teams.

Ice Hockey? Now there's a sport! That's what Middlebury and Norwich say. Soccer? Okay we don't have the dough but can't there be some plan? Some organization? Some attempt towards obtaining it?

What is sailing? Is it a Varsity sport conducted by the Athletic Department, as it is in other schools? Or do the guys on the team have to partially support themselves? Shall I stop? Here you ships at sea getting closer. Or are you sailing out to meet the ill winds of the ocean? Can you hear me?

Still can? Good! Who supports the baseball southern trip? Well, fraternities do in part. Southern trip comes from Kake Walk Funds. Should this Athletic function be sponsored by fraternities or should it be subsidized by the school?

Ski instruction as a "phys- ed" elective? Sure, Student government used to underwrite the cost of having a ski instructor. Students paid for lessons and the money was returned to A.A. But S. A. doesn't do that anymore, and the Phys Ed department is undermanned as it is. So bang your head against the wall. "But, I came to Vermont to ski," someone said. "Look, go to the top of Mount Mansfield, close your eyes, push off and pray."

The plan, the organization, the resources, where are they? As the story goes, some guy took a trip to Europe. He dug to Nero's fiddle, and now he's playing like a mad man while the UVM Physical Education system burns to the ground. Fireman, fireman save my child! We definitely need a fire department.

Coach Cautious Over Horsemen Potential Talent

by ED WILLARD

The UVM Catamounts, fresh from victories over Dartmouth "B" and a strong Rochester eleven go into their 46th meeting with the Norwich Horsemen as favorites in the always hard fought state contest. UVM Coach Ed. Donnelly, though pleased over last week's victory at Rochester, is still cautious about this one. Coach Donnelly believes the Horsemen have a load of potential talent and adds, "You can bet it will be a close hard fought game." This may be the usual cautious outlook of any University coach but when one remembers a supposedly weak Vermont team defeating a Norwich powerhouse 28- 27 in 1952, it is easy to see that anything could happen.

Meehan Veteran Passer

The Horsemen, victors over Bates and Brooklyn College in five outings have had their ups and downs. But, paced by the passing of 6' 2" Ed. Meehan and the hard running of Captain Dom Passalaqua, Norwich seems to be better than their record. The Maroons starting eleven will probably see Tom Hekker and Bill Hayes at ends, Ed Calacurcio and the veteran Harry Hale at tackle, Jack Barrigan and Fred Haynes at guard and Bob Hoagland at center. The backfield will probably see Meehan at quarterback, Passalaqua at left half, Paul Maloney at right half, with converted halfback Chet Swejkowski at full back. Haynes, a freshman, started in place of veteran Frank Wisinski at Brooklyn and was very impressive.

Williams Starts on Line

The Catamounts with their trouble spot at end finally jelling, proved last week that they could overcome a first class team as they defeated a strong, hard-running Rochester eleven. First time starter Roy Williams played a fine game at guard last Saturday, again illustrating the depth of the Vermont line. Ed Nemer played a first rate defensive game against Rochester as he made many fine tackles. The Catamount backfield will probably have Mike Semans at quarterback, speedy Ed Beck and Al McLam at halfbacks and Captain Ed. Nemer at fullback. Art Solomon and Johnnie Galascione seem set at ends with Bill Farwell sure to see a lot of reserve action. At tackles, it will be Walt Johnson and Al Stevens; Paul Harasimowics on reserve. The starting guards will come from Ken Kurjiaka, Roy Williams, Harry Baumann and Clem Forte. Howie Braithwaite has pretty definitely nailed down the starting center spot.

Norwich Up For Game

A "no holds barred" battle is almost sure to follow when the Catamounts meet the Horsemen at Sabine Field in Northfield Saturday. Don't let the record over the years, Vermont 29 victories - Norwich 12 victories - 4 ties, fool you. Norwich is sure to be "up" for this one.

Kitten Gridders Crush Panthers; Unscored Upon

By Ron Smith

The Kittens won their second straight shutout of the season in as many starts as they topped the Middlebury Cubs here Saturday on Centennial Field by a 27-0 score. Coach Fuzzy Evans' football warriors played well as the bench was cleared to an effort to take a look for next year.

Johnson Intercepts

The Kittens struck paydirt late in the second period after Marty Johnson intercepted a pass on the Middlebury 45 yard line and ran it back to the 36 yard line. It took just four plays to run it over. Gerald Herlihy took it over from 13 yards out on an end sweep. Quarterback, Tom Tierney, booted the first of three extra points to make it 7-0 at the half.

In the third period the Frosh opened up with two more touchdowns. The Kittens kicked off to start but after three futal attempts at scrimmage, Lee, booted to Tierney on his own forty yard line and he raced all the way back to the Middlebury 27, which was nine yards behind the line of scrimmage of the punt. On the second play. Tierney went back to pass and found end, Harry Zingg, on the five-yard line. Harry just hit the corner of end zone before he ran out of bounds.

Another Interception

Don Nimphius intercepted another Middlebury pass to setup the third touchdown. Johnson scored this one on a plunge from two yards out. At this point Dave Michael took over for the Frosh and led the team well from the quarterback slot.

In the middle of the last quarter, Pondero ran the ball down to the two-yard line with the help of some fine blocking. From the two Michael sneaked over to make it 27-0. The pass from center for the last conversion was high.

Kitten Defense Unscored Upon

It is noteworthy that the defense has as yet to give up a touchdown and the play of the whole line is very strong. Play in the backfield on pass defense was outstanding as the home Frosh captured 4 of 10 passes caught. Middlebury pitched a total of 22.

Ed Scores Three In Teams Ground Gaining Romp

by MARK BERNSTEIN

An underrated Catamount football team seemingly confounded the so-called experts and most of all the Rochester "Yellowjackets" by inflicting upon the New Yorkers a stunning 19-12 defeat. This victory for Vermont ended a Fauver Stadium "jinx" which had existed since UVM last topped the Yellowjackets in their home park back in 1946.

Beck, Beck, Beck

The Cats gave their best performance of the season, in trimming the powerful New Yorkers. But despite the over-all team showing, Ed Beck stood out as the star of the day. Ed scored all three UVM touchdowns and rushing for 111 yards net. That gives him seven TD's this year to lead the state scoring race with 42 points. UVM drew first blood late in the first period, when Beck scampered 14 yards to pay-dirt following a Rochester fumble on the RU 17 yard line. McLam converted and Vermont led 7-0 going into the second quarter. With four minutes gone in the second period the Cats marched down to Rochester's two yard line from where Beck notched his second of the afternoon.

Forte Recovers Fumble

Rochester's first score came early in the second half when the RU line broke through and blocked an attempted kick by McLam. Tom Gibbons, speedy back, lost no time in picking up the pigskin and carrying it over for the TD. The pressure eased as Vermont guard Clem Forte recovered a Rochester fumble on their 38 yard line, after which Beck broke away for a 31 yard TD run. Rochester threatened again by intercepting a Semans pass and then having Back Dick Devereaux pick up their second TD by a 3 yard plunge into the End Zone. But the determined Catamount team was not to be denied as they fought off all attempts for a possible tying score. Roy Williams, standout lineman last year on the freshman team played his first starting game Saturday and proved to be the extra punch Coach Ed Donnelly has been looking for. Captain Ed Nemer was a spark on defensive play and netted 50 yards on the ground in addition.

This weekend the Cats take on a powerful Norwich team, looking for its third victory of the season. If the Rochester game is any criteria for what will happen in the following games, we might be witnessing the burst of Vermont strength that has been expected from the beginning. The team is in top physical condition and is in a perfect position to make a few people look twice before counting them out.

TEP Plays Delta Psi For Championship This Afternoon; Fred Solomon Wins Scoring Title; Steinman Second

League Winners Place Spotless Records On Line

Despite the fact that the Intra-mural football schedule is not completed, the League champions have already been decided. Tau Epsilon Phi of league "B", and Delta Psi of League "A", both spotted Loseless records. Chitterden 3-4 winner of the Dorm League also had a goose egg in the Loss Column.

League Champs Decided Last Week

Last Thursday the fraternity Championships were simultaneously decided as the 1-2 teams in both leagues faced each other. The Delts outdid the Phi Sigs 13-0 in a rough and crumble affair highlighted by a fine defense for the winners. TEP tumbled over Kappa Sigma, 20-7.

Fraternity Championship Today

The Leagues "A" vs. "B" game is being held today on back campus at 4 p.m. Both TEP and Delta Psi are in full strength. High scoring Fred Solomon (TEP) and Bill King (DP) will be battling for scoring honors.

The All Campus Championship is tentatively scheduled for tomorrow.

As the CYNIC went to press the standings were:

Charles Traverse, Coach

The highest shut-out victory for UVM was in 1922 against the NU Cadets, 61-0.

Horowitz Leads Dorm League In TD Scoring

Marshall Horowitz was the leading scorer in the Dorm league. Horowitz, Chitterden 3-4, garnered 32 points on five T.D.'s and two extra points in five games.

Four Men On Champ Team

Horowitz was followed by Ireland (Buckham 3-4) with 25 points. Gil Martin, Rutherford, Chestnut, and Cantine followed in that order. Rutherford, Chestnut, Gil Martin and Horowitz were all members of the winning Chittenden 3-4 Club which tentatively meets the Interfraternity Champions tomorrow on the back campus field.

Speedy TEP Back Gets Seven TD's; Bill King Third

The following is an attempt by the CYNIC Sports editor, Gerry Goldman, to compile individual and team scoring records which can stand and perhaps become the base for comparison to teams of future years. The accuracy of the statistics have been checked and rechecked with the aid of the athletic department's records for seasons play. Of course, with the great amount of forfeits and partially incomplete individual game reports, it is impossible to state that these compilations are exactly correct. But the closeness is highly positive, if not positively positive. It is our hope that this will be a beginning for intra mural official records.

Solomon Score Seven Times

Flashy halfback Fred Solomon, Junior, of Tau Epsilon Phi, is the Interfraternity League's leading scorer this season. Solomon hit T.D. ground seven times in five games, as his team completed the regular season with a 5-0 record in League B. Solomons point, total was 49. Fred is a member of the Varsity Track Team, and Vice-President of Tep.

Steinman Paces League "A"

Earl Steinman, Phi Sigma Delta's ace end, was second to Solomon, scoring 38 points on six touchdowns and two extra points. Earl, in his fourth year of I.F. football, is the varsity hoopster who led the state in scoring in his freshman year. Earl's team placed second to Delta Psi in League 'A'.

King Leads Delta

League "B" also came up with the third highest scorer in the person of Bill King, Delta Psi Stalwart who scored 37 digits. King, a junior, is also on the Varsity basketball team.

Cheerleaders Aid In Attempt To Induce School Spirit

Gimme a V-E-R-M-O-N-T. Let's hear it! Above are pictured UVM's hard workingCheering squad which has faced the problem of apathy amongst Catamount football fans. So let's start making some noise.

by ED WILLARD

Which group is the most unappreciated on the Vermont campus? The answer to this question in many minds is a simple one; the cheerleaders. Last week's Cynic took up the overall story of lack of school enthusiasm at football games. Today, it's the story of the cheerleaders themselves.

Work, Work, Work

You may think those people in green running around madly with megaphones during athletic events are finished when the game is over. This is far from true. The cheerleaders like any other well functioning team have to practice. This year, they practice anywhere from two to three hours on both Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. At this time new cheers are tried out, old routines are polished up and new cheerleaders are broken in to the routine.

Record Turnout

The turnout this year according to retiring Captain Sandy Johnson has been the largest on record as over thirty candidates turned out for the two varsity openings. The final choice is based on coordination and pep as well as pleasing appearance.

This year's squad is made up of a boys unit and a girls unit. The girls unit is headed by Joan Keinast succeeding Sandy Johnson who retired. The Varsity girls are; Bev Cameron, Dottie Hurlinger, Ellie Hopkins, Ann Duncan, "Muffin" Knapp, and newcomers Clair LaPort, and Nancy Reimers. The alternates are Jean Keily, Jan Schmidt and Lee Ann Knoph. The Varsity boys are; Captain Wally Seigal, Dick Jones, John Trowbridge, Doug Warren, Scott Carson, Dick Albert and Pete Lallos.

Upperclass Example

This reporter asked two members of the squad, Sandy Johnson and Dick Jones for a few comments about their outlook on the situation. Sandy said "The Juniors and Seniors should set the example. It's the Freshmen and Sophomores that cheer. It seems as though one is afraid to start cheering because it would embarrass them in front of the person standing next to them" (Maybe if a few upperclassmen started cheering, it would be catching) Dick Jones just shook his head, "We need a lot more support. We feel alone out there".

Frosh Harriers Knotted By BHS In 27-27 Run

by DICK SCHATTEN

The frosh cross-country team of UVM tangled with Burlington High School's harriers last Saturday, and when the dust had cleared each squad had counted 27½ points. The tie could easily have been averted by the Vermont boys, but failure to cut inside a marker about thirty yards from the finish cost them victory.

Carron Breaks Tape

Before the meet Coach Archie Post stated that BHS's top man would probably be senior Art Carron. And sure enough Mr. Carron broke the tape first with a time of 17:39, just six seconds better than UVM's top freshman harrier, Artie Tauber. Tauber led for a good part of the race, but was overtaken with 125 yards to go, and from there Carron had just a little too much for the young Vermont freshman. The BHS ace was third in the state of Vermont last year as a junior.

Kittens Third, Fourth

Bob Ault ran third for UVM with Tom Hackett of Burlington fourth. Their times were 17:59 and 18:07 respectively for the two and three quarter mile grind. The duel for fifth and sixth places wound up in a tie. Eighth and ninth went to the green and gold while the seventh and tenth spots were captured by Burlington boys.

The next frosh meet is a triangular one in which they will encounter Vergennes and Middlebury this Saturday.

Meet The Varsity

By DICK STEIN

From tackle on the grid iron to Kake Walk King! That's the story of big number 74, Walt Johnson. The 22 year old senior, from Rutland, Vt., is playing his fourth year of Varsity Ball for the Catamounts. Walt got his football experience at Rutland High School, where he co-captained the All State Champs, and at Tilton Prep, where he was a teammate of Clem Forte's. Not only was Walt a stand-out lineman in his high school days, but also captained the Varsity Track Team, and played on the Basketball team.

Walt, who is single by the way, is enrolled in the school of Arts and Science, majoring in economics. No doubt one of Walt's biggest thrills was being selected by the brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon to run for last winter's Kake Walk King, and winning. -------Next comes the White House!

QUESTION: WHAT ARE THE PRIMARY NEEDS OF THE ATHLETIC SETUP AT UVM? WHAT IS MOST LACKING?

Larry Van Benthuysen - Public Relations

Primary need is better attendance at UVM's homegames with more support for the teams.

Carol Wicks

I think that what is most lacking in the field of sports at UVM is ice hockey. Vermont is noted for its winter sports and it seems to fulfill this in part by the interest in skiing. But I feel that UVM definitely needs an exciting spectator sport like hockey. Hockey seems to be taking the place of basketball in New England and in my opinion it is more interesting. I think that since other schools in Vermont, namely Norwich and Middlebury, have hockey teams, UVM should definitely have one.

F. D. Carpenter - Head Tennis Coach and UVM German Professor

Hard surfaced tennis courts, ten or a dozen in number, would fill a deeply felt need. They should be near the campus and dormitories. They would be available for use by the general student body, for early spring practice by the tennis team, and for playing matches which would otherwise have to be cancelled on account of wet courts.

Burt Friedman - Class of 1955

UVM needs more spirit and attendance at the secondary sports, such as track, cross-country, sailing, and skiing. Lacking on campus are good gym facilities such as a proper field house where a variety of indoor sports can be carried on.

"Tiny" Brown - Former UVM Student

As an ex- UVM student, it seems to me that the main thing this school needs is more spirit. The teams from UVM are usually average or better. If the student body would get behind their teams, they would find UVM going far in athletic activities.

Dorothy Rothmann - Class of '57

One of the things which I think UVM lacks is college spirit at football games. We all want our college to be victorious but very little enthusiasm is shown. Our cheerleaders do a good job in leading cheers, but they get very little response. Everyone seems more interested in what's going on around them than in what is happening.

R. N. Searles - Admissions Office and Former Ski Coach

It seems to me that our primary need in the area of athletics is for improved facilities. Specifically, a gymnasium of adequate size and equipment is badly needed on our campus. Such a building would permit the Physical Education Department to increase its program and at the same time the basketball team would have a home court for practice and games.

By Fred Solomon

Last Friday, the Vermont Cross-Country team traveled to Middletown, Connecticut, to meet the Wesleyan varsity in the Cat's third encounter of the season. As was expected the meet was exceptionately close with Wesleyan winning 27-29.

Grady and Damon Again

The four mile course was covered by first place finisher Hinman of Wesleyan in 20.35. Hinman, who is a sophomore, was the New England Freshman Cross-Country Champion last season. Vermont's Larry Damon and Don Grady took second and third respectively. Wesleyan's Thorgersen, who is the New England half-mile king captured fourth place. Young of Wesleyan took fifth, with Wadley and Tafrate taking sixth and seventh for Vermont. Baer of Wesleyan finished eighth and then teammates Cox and Jenkins placed in front of Vermont's Howland to give Wesleyan the meet. There was only a four second interval between Cox in ninth and Howland in eleventh. As the runners were coming into the last quarter mile Howland was leading both Cox and Jenkins, however they overtook him and that was the meet.

Howland Produces

According to Coach Archie Post, Howland is the only sophomore who is producing this season and since there are only six freshmen candidates out of one hundred and thirty men who claim track experience, things may not look so bright in the future. Coach Post stated that Hurricane Hazel had absolutely no effect on the results or anything concerned with the meet.

Next Saturday the Harriers meet the Black Bears of Maine at Burlington.

ORDER OF FINISHERS

Student Union Building Hinges On Results Of Referendum Vote

By Herzl Spiro

The future of the Student Union Fund will be determined by an all-campus referendum. The Student Association Council decided last week that the student body should be consulted on a project as important as this one.

The referendum was proposed a few minutes after the announcement of a Student Court decision ruling the Student Union Fund constitutional. Mike Rosco, Junior Councilman, suggested that the council should now try to settle any remaining doubts about the project. He proposed that the following question should be before the students; "Shall the Student Association use its surplus and initiate action to set up a fund for the purpose of establishing more adequate student facilities in the form of a Student Union?"

George Lucchina, the Student Association President, has announced that "if the answer is in the affirmative, the Student Union Committee will consult with the administration and plan out a program to get the fund under way." Lucchina went on to say, "a negative decision would be a severe setback; we would have to explain the problem to the students through a publicity campaign and eventually bring the issue up for a re-vote."

This is the first time in the stormy four-year history of the fund that the issue is to be voted on by the student body. The planning of five consecutive Student Association Presidents came to fruition in a unanimous Council decision to re-establish the fund last May 13. Since then the project has been discussed not only in the Student Court and Student Association Council, but also in the Student Advisory Committee and in the highest administrative offices.

A second referendum will also be sent to the student body; "Would you want a new Alma Mater to be substituted for Champlain?"

Costa Rican Delegate Asks Less National Sovereignty

By Fred Jungmann

"The United States and all other countries must yield some of their sovereignty to make the United Nations a success," stated Father Benjamin Nunez, Costa Rican delegate to the United Nations, in an address sponsored by the International Relations Club and Hillel Association last Friday.

In addition, the attitude of the American Press toward the U.N. and accomplishments of the U.N. so far, were major points of Father Nunez's speech.

"As long as Communist China continues to show an aggressive policy," he added, "it should not be admitted to the United Nations." In his view, and China will not be admitted unless it is able to demonstrate a sincere desire, by adhering to the principles of the Charter."

People's Support Necessary

Father Nunez opened his address on the note that the UN is "one of the most true efforts of the people to create a family of nations to give all men full enjoyment of rights and happiness." He continued saying that he must insist on the fact support of the people is needed or that the UN is an artificial organization. "The peoples of all nations must stand behind the UN, and it must represent the citizens of nations, not the governments of Nations," Nunez said. He commented that the UN must have "soul as well as life," and that Spiritualism contributes much to the success of the United Nations.

"Scandal-Loving" Press

He cited two areas of action in the UN, these being "the Political Area and the Social Area." He emphasized that standard objections as, "The UN is a talking center, place for fifth columnists, sounding board for Reds, and useless," come from people who see only the political area.

Father Nunez went on to say that the main sounding board for the political area is the Security Council where most conflicts occur, and that it is this area and particularly this body which supply the most meat for "the scandal-loving press." He said that Press, TV, Radio, and News-Reels like sensationalism and are "more than happy to report fights between delegates of the council." He further cited the tremendous amount of attention devoted to the Political Committee of the General Assembly where the press again looks for sensationalism.

Sororities Will Aid In Raising Of WUS Funds

Co-captain Barbara Weiss and Pat Henderson of the special events division of the World University Service drive have announced part of their program to be held during the week of November 7. The special events will be climaxed by the band concert to be held in the Ira Allen Chapel, Sunday afternoon, November 14. Admission is fifty cents.

Past Stunts

During the week, sororities will run concessions in lower Waterman the proceeds of which will be donated to WUS.

Last year the sororities raised $177.02. They ran the following booths: Alpha Chi Omega ran a penny pitching booth, Alpha Delta Pi sold bubblegum, Alpha Epsilon Phi sold jelly apples, Tri-delt sold lollipops, Gamma Phi Beta ran a contest to select the cutest baby picture of a faculty member. A penny counted as a vote.

Kappa Alpha Theta asked people to contribute money with guess as to the number of beans in a jar. The person with the closest guess was given two tickets to the Black Cat. Pi Beta Phi gave shoe shines. Sigma Gamma sold cookies and fudge.

Ghosts Invade Us Halloween Night At UVM Spookoff

By Sue Wakefield

Follow the hobgoblins to the COSA office to get your tickets for the spookoff.

On Halloween night, Saturday, the entire University of Vermont will be haunting the second annual Spookoff. It will be held from 8:30 to 12:00 midnight in the Waterman building. Admission is fifty cents a piece.

Boulder Planned

Sponsored by the Boulder Society, Senior Men's honorary, the affair is the second all campus open house of the school year. It will feature the Catamounts and Jacqueline Howley, their songstress.

The entire Waterman building will be open for dancing, cards, free bowling, ping pong and pool. All the fraternities have cooperated by closing their houses to attend the Spookoff.

Door Prizes

Twelve doorprizes will be awarded at eleven o'clock. Four free airplane rides in the flying club air plane as well as four free tickets to the Middlebury-Vermont jazz session will be given to the "lucky winners." Topping the prizes will be two pairs of

Student Union Fund Legal, Decides UVM Student Court

By Max Ansbacher

Funds for student Union building may legally be set aside by the Student Association, advised the Student Court late last week. The court was asked for its opinion on the matter last week as a result of doubts some critics had as to the legality of setting aside student activity fee money for such a long range project.

In its action the court set a precedent which holds that the Student Association is completely sovereign as to the purpose of any money which it appropriates. However the constitution does limit the Student Association as to whom it may appropriate money.

"No Doubt "

The court was asked to give an advisory opinion on three seperate points and voted unanimously in favor of each one. Chief Student Court Justice, Paul Low, commenting on the fact said, "There seemed to be no doubt in the minds of the justices as to the legality of the fund."

Herzl Spiro, Council for the Student Association who presented the case said, "The effect of this decision is that it gives the Student Association a green light on the Fund. I doubt whether the question of the legality of the fund will ever again be brought up.7

Administration Veto

If the administration of the University is against the Fund, as certain comments if President Carl W. Borgmann would seem to indicate, the University through the Student Advisory Council has the power to veto the appropriation.

The Student Association wished the matter to be brought before the court for clarification because it felt, in the words of Herzl Spiro, that "As long as there existed doubts in the minds of the members of the Student Association as the legality of the fund, there would be a great difficulty in obtaining the necessary funds."

Voters to Decide

The question of whether or not a student union fund such as the present one is a good idea for the school was not under consideration. That question will be put before the students of the whole University tomorrow at the semi-annual Student Association elections.

The opinion was handed down in the following three points: 1) The Student Court has the power to decide upon the legality of the Fund, 2) The Student Association has the power to appropriate money of its own agencies, and the Student Union Fund is an active committee of the Association, therefore an agency of the Association and, 3) The Student Association has the power to grant money to the Student Union Fund from its Student Activity Fees.

The third point was necessitated by the fact that critics of the fund have pointed out that Students at the University now would be forced to give part of their money, through the student activities fee, to a project from which they would receive no benefits.

Spiro pointed out that if the long rangeness of a plan was made a criterion for judging its right for appropriations, then the difficult question would arise of what should be considered, long range.

Seven out of the ten justices were present at the session, the quorom being six.

Ski Trails Given 'OK' By Outing Club President

"All the ski trails are in first class condition for the coming season," Bruce E. Norcross, president of the UVM Outing Club, said recently in regard to the objective of the club's trip to Bryant's Cabin last weekend.

The group of ten left from Waterman at 1 p.m. on Saturday for the cabin on Bolton mountain, between Camel's Hump and Mt. Mansfield.

After working on the trails Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, the group returned to the campus at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Day Hike

This is only one of several trips the club has taken this semester. Birch Glen, near Huntington Center, was the site of a day hike on Sunday, October 17.

Mr. Ellis of the physics department, and Dr. Schien and Dr. Landen of the Medical College were among those who participated.

Referring to this outing, Sigrid Albrecht, a member of the club, said, "Despite the breakdown of the hearse, we managed to get there and have a good day of hiking and fun."

Lake George Meeting

Mr. Roger Mitchell, of the zoology department, accompanied the officers of the Outing Club and a few other students to the International Outing Club Association meeting at Lake George on the weekend of October 9.

'Ugly' Contest Going On Now In Waterman

Elections for the " Ugly Man " of the campus are now taking place in the main lobby of the Waterman Building.

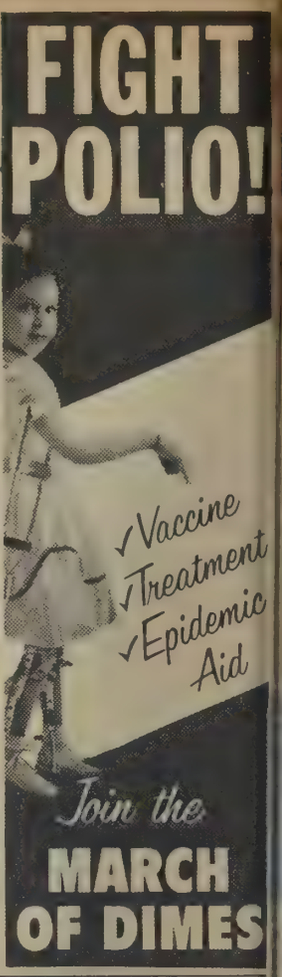
Sponsored by the Varsity Club, the Ugly Man Contest is the club's means of raising funds to provide for a tutoring service to UVM athletes.

With Fred Solomon as chairman of the project, candidates were selected by seven of the campus fraternities. Campaigning for the candidates took place on Monday and Tuesday of this week and voting started yesterday.

When placing their votes, students will drop five cents into a box under the picture of their favorite "Ugly Men ". The candidate whose box holds the most money by the close of the Contest Friday, will be elected official Ugly Man of UVM.

According to George Plender, president of the Varsity Club, this system of raising money has worked very well at the Universities of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. "This is the first time such a contest has been tried at UVM, " continued Plender, "and we hope that it will be as successful here as it has been in other schools. "

'Lost And Found' Wares Available



There is a great quantity of last year's unclaimed "Lost and Found " material which Student Association is now ready to dispose of. If your group would be interested in selling this material and using the proceeds for charity work, or other service projects, please contact the COSA office by 10 a.m. on Monday, November 1st. At this time the material will be disposed of.

'56 Jazz Concert Tomorrow Night

Max Kaminsky, popularly known as "Mr. Jazz," and his Dixieland "All Stars " will hold forth with a jazz concert on Friday in the UVM Cage from 8:00 until 11:00 Admission is $1.00.

This jam session, the first this year, is being sponsored by the Class of 1956 and should be the weekend high light for the Massachusetts vs. Vermont game.

There will be an "after hours " concert to be held in the Fraternity that buys the highest percentage of tickets.

Catholic Students Now Bring Offered Religious Classes

By Shirley O'Neill

Classes in Scholastic Philosophy, Ethics, and Theology are now being offered to all Roman Catholic students at the University, announced Reverend William Mulligan Chaplain of the Newman Club. The purpose of these classes will be "to afford the interested Catholic an opportunity to understand and defend his or her faith in a more intellectual manner. "

For the first semester these classes will be conducted for one-hour periods each week. All classes are being held in Room 248 of the Waterman Building, and all begin at 4 pm.

Each Tuesday, Reverend Edward Fitzsimmons of the Philosophy staff of Trinity College is conducting a class in Scholastic Philosophy. This is a study of Catholic philosophical principles based upon the scholastic system of St. Thomas Acquinas.

Ethics will be taught each Wednesday afternoon by Reverend Edward Foster of the Cathedral staff. This course will place particular emphasis upon the Church's teaching in the field of morality.

On Thursdays, Father Mulligan will offer instruction in Theology. This course will consist of discussions on the fundamental doctrines of the Catholic faith, such as papal infallibility and the immortality of the soul.

Although some students may wish to take all three classes, Father Mulligan feels that this might not be advisable due to the pressure of regular classes. Therefore, he feels that each student should select one, or at most two, of the classes offered. Freshmen and sophomores are asked to give particular attention to the Theology course given on Thursdays, whereas the upperclassmen might gain more from the classes in Ethics and Scholastic Philosophy.

.earn To Live With People s Family Relations Theme

By Claire Lissner

A course in family relations is offered by the me Economics Department of e University. Its purpose s to better the student's derstanding of family life the United States, and s understand the interersonal relationships of e various family members. his course carries three urs of academic credit and s given during both fall d spring semester. It is en with full credit to all dergraduate students of e University, the prequisite being completion of neral Psychology.

e Family Unit

Through lectures, reading, scussions and visual aids e course aims to help the udent gain for himself a althy attitude toward ting, courtship and engement as a preparation for rriage and a successful mily relationships. The urse begins by comparing e typical modern urban mily of today with the pical rural family of two nerations ago. It is iefly concerned with the fference of structure and nction in these two family its. It progresses into rent-child relationship and e effect this relationship s on shaping the childs rsonality and his attitudes ward other persons. The urse interests itself with owing the effect of the mily on their child and upon the family the child establishes when he marries.

Strictly Academic

It is important to note that this is not a course in marriage counseling. It does not deal with marital problems or in any way consider family disorganization. This course is of an academic nature and regards the topics that it covers from a positive standpoint - aiming to show the purposes and obligations of the dating, courtship, and engagement periods as a foundation for marriage in our society. By doing this the course intends to guide the student in setting up for himself concepts that will lead to happy and successful family relations. It helps the student not only in preparation for his own marriage but also in helping his offsprings adjust to the family group, to be better equipped to guide them through adolescence, and to understand their problems.

As any social scientist will tell you the family unit is the basis of our society. With the growing complexity of this society in which we live there is more and more need for aiding people in a true understanding of the purposes of marital preparation toward happy and successful family groups. This need is being fulfilled by the Family Relationships course open to all those who have taken Psychology 1 and are juniors.

$478,000 can mean $225

It seems to us that much ado about nothing' is the watchword of UVM students these days.

We refer of course, to the recent announcement of a general raise in tuition. Those students who hail from beyond the borders of the Green Mountain state certainly have no reason for discontent. A survey made of tuition and required fees in independent colleges in the New England area shows UVM below the average figure of $743. To illustrate, Colgate-$850: St. Lawrence-$700: Middlebury-$772 for men and $748 for women: Dartmouth -$800. These figures are typical.

The present budget calls for funds which, in the main, will meet the needs of the agricultural divisions and the Medical College. The expenditures planned for the other divisions are being met, President Borgmann feels, "in the only other way presently possible--an increase in tuition."

As for the tuition scale as related to the Vermont resident, we extent our deepest sympathies. For a number of years you have been saddled with a legislature which has not seen fit to provide for top-flight low-cost higher education for the young men and women of the state. There is not one other state in the Union which has not been able to see far enough ahead to realize that, in this present-day society the future of any collective group depends on a well educated youth.

In addition to the standard budget request, President Borgmann has requested an additional annual appropriation of $478,000. This appropriation, if granted, will enable UVM to reduce the tuition for residents to $225.

It is generally accepted that the legislature is starting to come around to the modern concept of low-rate education. If Vermont residents wish to assure themselves of a lower tuition, we advise that you take advantage of the democratic principle of informing your legislative representative of your desires. Comes election time, most representatives make an attempt to show their constituents that they are acting and voting with the best interests of the citizens in mind. A politition is the same in all states, even Vermont.

Student Union, Cooperation

Tomorrow the polls open. It is not a federal or state, or city or county election. It is rather an election of councilmen to sit on the Student Association Council, the group which represents you, the Student. For a number of months they will administer some $40,000 of student money. For this same period of time they will decide policy on matters ranging from organizational budgets and constitutions to Student Union Funds. Vote wisely.

In addition to the Council elections tomorrow, a referendum is to be placed before the students. It will ask you to decide on whether or not you want a Student Union Building. At the present time, no one seems to know what a Student Union is or whether or not it can be built even if the students vote affirmativly.

We are very anxious for the Student Union Fund Committee to sit down with the Administration and iron out the rough spots.

It is ridiculous to continue in the present vein. An enterprise of this enormity takes cooperation by all the parties concerned. At present, this cooperation is lacking.

Is this where we pay the tuition?

intercollegiate roundup

By David Spector

So you think our new tuition rates are high? Take a look at these figures for some PRIVATE institutions. Cornell charges $916; Stevens Institute, $823; and M.I.T. is $900. Wellesley tops them all with $925.

We are not the only institution that is currently experimenting with card tricks. The Temple University News reports that in a recent demonstration the students were told to put their cards (for cheering at football games) at eye level. The only trouble was that half the students put the bottom of the cards at eye-level; the other half placed the top of the cards at eye-level.

Texas Technological College and Baylor University have jointly announced a cooperative five-year program in engineering. The student would study three years at Baylor, and then would attend Texas Tech for two years and a summer session, majoring in some branch of engineering. At the end of the five years, the successful students would receive both the Bachelor of Arts degree from Baylor and Bachelor of Science degree in the appropriate branch of engineering from Texas Tech.

A similar system is in use between Amherst and M.I.T.

The Postscript, student paper of the Richmond Professional Institute, announces that students with cars now get school license plates made of metal, rather than decals. These attach to the state license plates. Chief claim is that they do not obstruct visibility. If it were Vermont instead of Richmond the chief claim for their adoption would be that they can be put on in winter, without fear of freezing and chipping.

The Williams Record reports the loss of a dear friend. The "Purple Cow", their famed humor magazine has been discontinued. "The Purple Cow has run dry and will not publish any news this year. Although some interest has been shown by Freshmen and Sophomores, it is doubtful whether the Cow can get back on its feet. The debt incurred last year will be paid, but funds with which to start anew are still lacking. "The Williams humor magazine was first conceived in 1907. Remember the poem about rather seeing a purple cow? How about this for a conclusion...

Stupid poets, God and how
I'd like to kill the damn one
Who wrote about the purple now
For, you see, I am one.

Well, at least, we still have a Centaur.

letters to the editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I dropped into the gym the other day to chat with the boys and to bring myself up-to-date on the athletic program at good old state. After exchanges of pleasantries I indulged in a copy of the CYNIC.

Mr. Goldman was pretty hard on the old gym which has served so long, so well. It was all right for our gang and it seems these young sprouts are pretty hasty when they chastize it so severely. It's better than nothing and until the state, the federal government, the alumni, and administration get together and work for it, it will have to do.

Now to touch on the chaperon problem. The whole darn thing could be settled if each house put in a supply of games such as:

Camelot
Tiddledy Winks Jumbo
Mumbly Peg
Crokinole
Jack Straws
Pick-Up-Sticks
Fun on the Farm
12-card Lotto
Pit and Rook (a card game).

Then the faculty wouldn't have an excuse to be bored.

Twisting the dials on a television set, one can obtain some interesting effects. If one turns the knob marked "contrast" sharply to the right, a harsh, distorted black and white image appears on the screen. The picture becomes unrealistic and rather ugly. Most of us couldn't stand watching it for very long.

Some people like to paint our political picture in these same stark black and white pigments. That which vaguely resembles "creeping socialism" is all black. That which is remotely related to "one hundred percent American free enterprize" is pure white. The associating of an idea with one of the two extremes establishes its sanctity or sinfulness. Thus the expansion of any government agency must be evil, and the turning over of government contracts to private enterprise must be good.

This is the brand of reasoning that lay behind the rather involved Dixon-Yates deal. The Tennessee Valley area needs a power plant to replace six hundred thousand kilowatts of electricity drained off by the Atomic Energy Commission. The Tennessee Valley Authority, that "socialistic creep" that has served the valley so well, was not consulted. Chairman Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission turned a deaf ear to the objections of three of the five commissioners and negotiated a contract with Mssrs. Dixon and Yates for power which eventually would be sold back to the T.V.A.

The procedure followed by the not-too-admirable Admiral Strauss in arranging the deal was quite amazing. No bids were sought and no notice was given to other companies that the prize was available. The location of the plant graciously granted by the Admiral is handy for Dixon and Yates, being adjacent to their power lines; unfortunately though it's on the wrong side of the Mississippi River meaning that Uncle Sam will have to build an expensive cable bridge.

The taxpayer will pay $4,138,000 per year more than he would have if T.V.A. had supplied the power. Over a twenty-five year period, the total extra cost will run from ninety to one hundred fifty million dollars.

This fascinating deal was pushed through Washington on the pretense of defending private enterprise against socialism.

The importance of the transaction has probably been over emphasized. Only the politically desperate would insist that President Eisenhower is purposely engaged in graft and favoritism. The multi-million dollar bungle will hardly show in a multi-billion dollar economy. Of what importance is this rather unsavoury deal to those of us in a northern ivory tower?

The trend towards a rigid black and white code to judge political policies is dangerous. Appeals to emotionally loaded words; capitalism and individualism on the one hand, socialism and "Kennel dogs" on the other, often replace critical judgements of individual situations within their contexts. Rugged individualism may be helpless against floods, droughts, and power monopolies.

Many of us would agree that "that government is best that governs least," but our government shows a tendency to control more and more what we think and say, and to do less and less in some economic areas where it help is needed.

Television knobs and governments turned too far to the right are rather unpleasant.

raternity Party Petitions Granted Tuesday Deadline

y Robert W. Smith

A Tuesday deadline for petions for fraternity parties s approved by the JSAB in a eting last week. Previously ch petitions had a deadline the Thursday of the prior ek of the event. Now, beuse of the new ruling, petions must be complete by esday of the week of the ent.

"I think we have hurt any NIC, COSA, and fraternity cial chairmen's attempts to lve our present chaperone oblem, " COSA Donald Hardy ated after the meeting.

This change was prooosed by an Stein, president of IFC behalf of the IFC. Mr. ein explained that such a ange was requested because me parties are planned one ek-end before they are to ke place, which means that ey cannot be held since the rmal petition was not on le from the previous Thurs-y.

An example was given where e of the fraternities did ld a tea on a Sunday after-on with most of the deans of e school in attendance, yet student women guests were vited because no petition s handed in. It was felt at such a group of deans d their wives would have en sufficient chaperonage, t because of the inflexi-lity of the rule the tea held without women student sts.

Tony Rockhill, speaking for Stein and the IFC explained t "if the rule were changed it would give leeway for parties on consecutive weekends. Sometimes a party goes so well that the fraternity plans another one for the following week. Under the old system the second one could not be held, but under the new plan it could. "

Miss Wing cited that it was because of the parties on consecutive week-ends that the old rule was put into effect; it was to protect the social chairmen who was responsible for the party as well as contacting possible chaperones. Dean Kroepsch agreed with Miss Wing and again emphasized that the social chairmen would be under more obligation under the new ruling because of the short time involved. He also asked whether or not the JSAB would stand behind a ruling for late petitions.

Dave O'Brien made the motion that "Those petitions received after the deadline of three o'clock the Thursday of the week prior to the event shall have no right of appeal, and that the COSA shall be the sole judge of their completeness. " This motion was carried.

Mr. Murdock proposed an amendment to try the new system for one year. Mr. Hardy further proposed that the system be tried for one semester. Mr. Hardy's proposal was accepted. The original motion with Mr. Hardy's amendment was passed, and the new system is to take effect immediately.

Hallowe'en Stimulates New Love On Campus

By Ann King and Barbara Zack

It's funny how tradition affects some people. Take Hallowe'en for example. When black nothingness appears, when mysterious wings pulse through the night and stars pin up a curtain of darkness, a hushed excitment rushes through nearly barren trees and its long sweeping fingers reach out to tingle the spine of every passer-by.

We can laugh. We can hurry off to our parties. And we do. We crowd together in merriment. We joke at our white-bucked Ira Allen who shrouds himself in a black cloak for the occasion. But what of those of us who through chance venture alone; who hold about them no protective coat of merriment. To these people I speak--to the lonely co-ed who chose to spend her evening in quiet study within the warm and sedate walls of good old Billings. Now tired, now weary, she piles her books together and wraps about her the traditional camel' shair, Hardly a soul seems afoot as she pushes her body against the heavy doors out into the cool, eerie darkness of the night. To this girl, to the girl who feels a chill and a bell of a familiar tone ring out somewhere in her mind, let this article speak--whoever and wherever she may be.

Let it speak of another among us who cannot laughoff the chill of the air, the clock resounding, the hand of weirdness--the hand through which irony will bring these two people together for their most ill-fated meeting. He has no reason to laugh. Listen to me carefully, and you may see no more reason to be merry. First of all, what does Hallowe'en signify to you? Above all, mystery. And what's the greatest mystery of the world? The mind of man. Now, you say, what's the connection? The mind of this latter one is affected by the tradition of Hallowe'en--its wizardry, destruction and myths. He's a med student--with an unusual background.

No, our sophistication will not let you think along these lines. It has caused you to lose some of your natural emotion of fear--fear which was our only instinct for protection. We laugh. We scoff at the very things upon which men have pondered for ages, and of which even our most learned men of today are uncertain. Yet among us, still lives in the mind of a med student the sorcery at which we so scoff.

This student has the power of life and death, bequeathed to him by past generations. His ancestors felt the obsession to strike on All Hallow's Eve. After being dormant for so many years, thus feeling again finds its way in a burning fury, inbred with in the soul of a boy.

Should the eyes of this boy meet with those of a lonely co-ed, her fate is but one: she will be forever thrust into a land of the supernatural, from which there is no return. Call her dead, call her what you may. Unless you are willing to be carried off thus, let this be a warning.

HOME, SWEET HOMECOMING

A great number of people have been asking me lately, "What is Homecoming?" Yesterday, for example, as I walked from my house to the establishment of Mr. Sigafoos, the local lepidopterist where I had left a half dozen luna moths to be mounted — a distance of no more than three blocks — I'll wager that well over a thousand people stopped me and said, "What is Homecoming?"

Well, what with company coming for dinner and the cook down with a recurrence of breakbone fever, I could not tarry to answer their questions. "Read my column next week," I cried to them. "I'll tell all about Homecoming." With that I brushed past and raced home to baste the mallard and apply poultices to the cook, who, despite my unending ministrations, expired quietly during the night, a woman in her prime, scarcely 108 years old. Though her passing grieved me, it was some satisfaction to be able to grant her last wish — to be buried at sea — which is no small task when you live in Pierre, South Dakota.

With the dinner guests fed and the cook laid to her watery rest; I put out the cat and turned to the problem of Homecoming.

First of all, let us define Homecoming. Homecoming is a weekend when old graduates return to their alma maters to see a football game, ingest great quantities of food and drink, and inspect each other's bald spots.

This occasion is marked by the singing of old songs, the slapping of old backs, and the frequent utterance of such outcries as "Harry, you old polecat!" or "Harry, you old rooster!" or "Harry, you old wombat!" or "Harry, you old mandrill!" All old grads are named Harry.

During Homecoming the members of the faculty behave with unaccustomed animation. They laugh and smile and pound backs and keep shouting, "Harry, you old retriever!" These unscholarly actions are performed in the hope that the old grads, in a transport of bonhomie, will endow a new geology building.

The old grads, however, are seldom seduced. By game time on Saturday, their backs are so sore, their eyes so bleary, and their livers so sluggish that it is impossible to get a kind word out of them, much less a new geology building. "Hmphh!" they snort as the home team completes a 101 yard march to a touchdown. "Call that football? Why, back in my day they'd have been over on the first down. By George, football was football back in those days — not this namby pamby girls game that passes for football today. Why, look at that bench. Fifty substitutes sitting there! Why, in my day, there were eleven men on a team and that was it. When you broke a leg, you got taped up and went right back in. Why, I remember the big game against State. Harry Wallaby, our star quarterback, was killed in the third quarter. I mean he was pronounced dead. But did that stop old Harry? Not on your tintype! Back in he went and kicked the winning drop-kick in the last four seconds of play, dead as he was. Back in my day, they played football, by George!"

Everything, say the old grads, was better back in their day — everything except one. Even the most unreconstructed of the old grads has to admit that back in his day they never had a smoke like today's vintage Philip Morris — never anything so mild and pleasing, day in day out, at study or at play, in sunshine or in shower, on grassy bank or musty taproom, afoot or ahorse, at home or abroad, any time, any weather, anywhere.

I take up next another important aspect of Homecoming — the decorations in front of the fraternity house. Well do I remember one Homecoming of my undergraduate days. The game was against Princeton. The Homecoming slogan was "Hold That Tiger!" Each fraternity house built a decoration to reflect that slogan, and on the morning of the game a group of dignitaries toured Fraternity Row to inspect the decorations and award a prize for the best.

The decoration chairman at our house was an enterprising young man named Rex Sigafoos, nephew of the famous lepidopterist. Rex surveyed Fraternity Row, came back to our house and said, "All the other houses are building cardboard cages with cardboard tigers inside of them. We need to do something different — and I've got it. We're going to have a real cage with a real tiger inside of it — a snarling, clawing, slashing, real live tiger!"

"Crikey!" we breathed. "But where will you get him?"

"I'll borrow him from the zoo," said Rex, and sure enough, he did.

Well sir, you can imagine what a sensation it was on Homecoming morning. The judges drove along nodding politely at cardboard tigers in cardboard cages and suddenly they came to our house. No sham beast in a sham cage here! No sir! A real tiger in a real cage — a great striped jungle killer who slashed and roared and snarled and dashed himself against the bars of his cage with maniacal fury.

There can be no doubt that we would have easily taken first prize had not the tiger knocked out the bars of the cage and leaped into the official car and devoured Mr. August Schlemmer, the governor of the state, Mr. Wilson Ardsley Devereaux, president of the university, Dr. O. P. Gransmire, author of A Treasury of the World's Great Southpaws: An Anthology of Left Hand Literature, Mr. Harrison J. Teed, commissioner of weights and measures, Mrs. Amy Dorr Nesbitt, inventor of the clarinet, Mr. Jarrett Thrum, world's 135 pound lacrosse champion, Mr. Peter Bennett Hough, editor of the literary quarterly Spasm, and Mrs. Ora Wells Anthony, first woman to tunnel under the North Platte River.

Agriculture College Aims To Benefit State And Student

Dean Joseph Carrigan, of the College of Agriculture, the College of Agriculture, stated at a recent Round Table meeting that "the agricultural college renders a very important service to the state, and is an important part of the University."

In a later interview he elaborated on that statement by explaining that the teaching part of the Agricultural College is really only a part of the overall picture. There is also the extension service and the experiment stations which must be considered. The extension service is statewide and very diversified in its activities. Some projects of the service are aid to farmers in an educational sense, farm meetings, lecture groups, and 4-H club work.

The experiment station deals with new processes in agriculture. These problems may vary from soil research to animal breeding. For this purpose the Agricultural College runs six farms, comprising 2000 acres in all. These include a maple research farm, a forestry farm, two dairy farms, a horticultural farm, and the Morgan Horse farm. The greenhouses on the campus are also under the jurisdiction of the Agricultural College.

The Agricultural College, which formerly occupied only Morrill and Pomeroy Halls now fills Hills Hall, the Agricultural Engineering Building, the Dairy Building, the Home Economics Building, and other buildings around the farms. This has been made possible by a fourfold increase in state financial aid since 1945.

There were 200 students before the war; now there are 427. Sixty percent of the Agricultural students are native Vermonters. Dean Carrigan feels that the Agricultural program has increased in relative importance in the past few years, a fact recognized by a $1,200,000 budget, twice as large as the budget of the next financially large college.

The Agricultural College also has 230 employees of all types, by far the largest college in terms of manpower. One hundred fifteen of these hold M.S. or Ph.D. degrees.

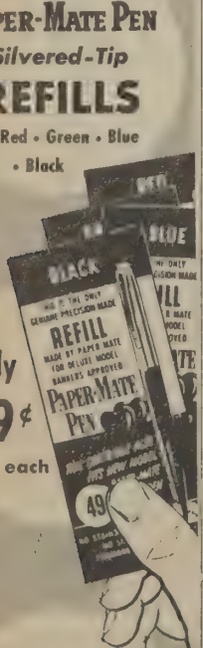
All the milk sold at UVM is processed at the Dairy Building here on campus. UVM Students out drank rest of nation 2-1 last year.....in milk that is.

Six Farms Maintained By College Help Teach Aggies

By Claire Lissner

Six farms are operated under the direction of the College of Agriculture. These farms are maintained as laboratories for agricultural research and observation.

What part do these farms play in the education of the students in the College of Agriculture? The students here at the University do not do any of the actual work in the maintainence of these farms. However, the students use the farm as a laboratory for observing and judging types and breeds of animals, farming methods and efficient farm operation.



The farms include the University dairy and the Hoyd dairy here in Burlington, which are the main sources of all the milk products sold through the University. The Forestry farm is located in Jericho, Vt., and the Maple research farm, known to many students for its spring time sugaring-off party, is in Underhill, Vt. About 70 acres of land near Shelburne, Vt., are used as a Horticultural Farm. On the Shelburne farm apple trees, small fruits and vegetables are grown. Nearly 1,000 acres of land in weybridge, Vt., comprise the Morgan Horse Farm.

Farms Affect Populace

Vermont farmers are able to do a better job today because of the job done by the experimental research farms. In 25 years production per worker has doubled on Vermont farms. Undoubtedly credit must be given to the hard-working intelligent Vermont farmer, but we must not underestimate the role of the experimental farm in providing the answers to many baffling problems.

The farmer is not the only one who has benefited from this research. As farm life and efficiency improves, the consumer, too, benefits. The health and prosperity of a state depend on the nutrition of the people and the nutrition of the people depends on the welfare of the farmer.

Several Projects Underway In Agricultural Research

By Michael Abramson

"Research is basic to sound and effective teaching ....." Mr. Paul R. Miller, Associate Dean of Agriculture and Coordinator of University Research, said when asked about the various projects of the Agricultural College.

This year the College is engaged in research that involves the problems of producing better plants and animals, control of agricultural insects and diseases, and improved nutrition. These are just a few of their goals.

Strawberry Experimentation

The Horticulture Department is carrying on several research projects. The breeding of new productive, disease-resistant strawberries is being carried on. About 7,500 seedling strawberry plants are set out annually to determine promising selections. A number of these are now being tested by strawberry growers. After further trials the most outstanding ones will be named and made available to the public.

Additional horticulture projects include the testing of vegetable varieties and strains for Vermont, apple nutritional studies, and research work with blueberries.

Agronomy Projects

In the Agronomy Department the following projects are being undertaken; time of seedling and responses of forage seedlings to climate, the evaluation of forage crops varieties and strains of their uses and adaptation in the northeast, plant breeding studies with synthetic strains of ladino clover for use as a perennial pasture and hay legume.

The Agricultural Engineering Department is carrying on projects that deal with the mechanical and structural aspects of harvesting, curing, housing, and removal from housing of grain, hay, silage and bedding.

In the Agricultural Economics Department, studies are being made of marketing Vermont's maple products, reducing milk marketing costs, individual farm planning, economic analysis of roughage programs on dairy farms.

Vt. Extension Service Helps State's Farmers

By Pat Donnelly

The Vermont Agricultural Extension Service of the College of Agriculture, directed by Dean Joseph Edward Carrigan, exists to serve the people of the state. Its main job is teaching Vermonters how to apply the research findings from the Vermont Experiment Station and from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Service employs specialists in the fields of agronomy, dairying, farm and home economics, poultry, forestry, horticulture, engineering and animal pathology, who work with the state agents.

PROGRAM

Educational programs are developed by the Extension agents in each county. Farmers are kept informed on the latest developments in all phases of farming by the agricultural agent; the home demonstration agent helps women with problems of home; the 4-H Club agent assists boys and girls develop moral values and social skills.

Students Learn And Earn By Working On Farm

Rise At 5:30 AM To Start Work; Classes Start At 8

By Myron Lench

Have you ever gotten up in the morning to find the sun in total eclipse? As an aggie student living and working on the University farm you might have a similar experience to this several times a week.

There are five student workers over at the farm, three of them work full-time. Lewis Mowry, a junior, sleeps in a comfortable double room in the home of the farm manager. At five-thirty A.M. the quiet of pre-dawn is shattered by the alarm clock. Lew rises and dresses quickly. Before six he is cleaning out the barn and electrically milking the cows. The cows milked, the barn cleaned, and the rest of the UVM student body awake, Lew starts out for his morning classes.

He takes courses like "Fertilizers" and "Woodland Management," but also a healthy dosage of liberal arts course. Finishing his academic schedule by noon he returns to the farm for a quick lunch in his room and back to the farm chores.

The last few weeks have been devoted mainly to the cutting of corn, but these chores vary according to the season. In the spring there will be fencing, repairs, harrowing, and planting to be done.

At four o'clock Lew returns to the barn to clean up and milk the cows again. He finishes up in the barn at about dinner time. After dinner he gets down to the business of preparing the day's assignments. This chore often continues far into the night leaving little time between retiring and milking time for sleep.

Lew works six days a week and every other week, seven days, working seven hours every other Sunday.

To the average UVM student such a schedule might seem a bit trying. Lew claims that its merely a matter of getting into the habit.

This farm work is not only a means to a lot of practical experience for him, but it is also a source of extra spending money that comes in so handy and he seems pretty healthy for it all.

UVM Agricultural Students do a lot of "work around the house." "Practical training prepares "aggies" for future farm careers.

Many Degrees And Honors Fall To UVM's Dean Carrigan

Dean Joseph Edward Carrigan of the College of Agriculture is indeed an amazing man. He has devoted his entire life to the problems and administration of agriculture in Vermont. His whole life is tied up with agriculture, and it is his most consuming interest.

UVM Alumnus

Born in a small Vermont farm in Pittsford, in 1891, Dean Carrigan came in contact with agriculture in his early youth. A graduate of the Pittsford High School, he entered UVM as a student in 1910. Immediately after his graduation in 1914 he joined the Extension Service. In 1915 he became the Addison County agriculture agent. By 1917 he was assistant state leader of the County Agriculture Agents.

Dean Carrigan was appointed Extension Director in 1931, and in this post he furthered the extension serviced projects which include such deversified fields as 4-H club work and lectures on improving crop field.

Mr. Carrigan was made Dean of the College of Agriculture in 1942, along with the task of being director of the Experiment Station. This is his 44th year of service to the university.

Dean Carrigan received his MA degree in 1931 and holds two honorary degrees; one issued by the University of Maine in 1946, being a Doctor of Laws, and the other, a Doctor of Economic Science presented in 1950 by the National University of Ireland. He is also a member of Epsilon Sigma Pi, honorary fraternity of Extension Service, which selects just one individual to its ranks each year.

Dean J. E. Carrigan

From 1948-50 he received a leave of absence in order to work with the Marshall Plan, on aid to Ireland. As a member of the mission to spend the allotted $146,000, he aided in assigning funds to cover all sorts of reactivation aid, including advice to the Irish government on how to improve the farmland, and how to purchase U.S. farm goods.

Through his continuing efforts the agriculture department of UVM can be rated as one of the finest in the United States. Speaking of his own department Dean Carrigan concludes "if renders a very important service to the university and to the state. Its actions are one of a continuous field of progress..."

He pointed t that some countries refuse give up any sovereignty, nt only the benefits of the , and will not share in the ligations which are necessary r the happiness of all mannd.

"Unless we decide to live to the ideals we preach, are talking of a free world thout meaning it," he emsized. "We must establish a ee world in our practical ves, for this is the meaning the UN."

Animal Industry Club In Action

By Carol Chase

The principal purpose of the Animal Industry Club is the promotion of student interest in animal and dairy sciences.

The club's two main projects for the year are, the Annual Beef Barbecue, which is held during Homecoming weekend, and the Annual Catamount Livestock show which is held in the spring.

At this year's Beef Barbecue 380 alumni, faculty, and students were served. At the Annual Catamount Livestock show livestock is exhibited and prizes are awarded.

The prizes are awarded on the basis of the fitting of the animal, and showmanship of the contestant. The basis for judging the livestock are the general improvement of the animal, appearance and knowledge of the animal's showmanship and the manner of the contestant in the ring.

The horses on exhibition are from the Morgan farm. Each livestock student cares for one of the horses for a period of one month.

Last year the A I C held a Coed Milking Contest. In this contest a team of four girls from each sorority and dormitory on campus compete for a cup. The prerequisite for eligibility is that the contestant has had no previous milking experience.

The contest is in the form of a relay race. Each girl is given a test tube and the first team to fill up their test tubes is announced the winner by the Dean of Women, who is the judge. This year the A I C is planning to hold another Coed Milking Contest.

This year's program has not yet been established because plans for this year's Homecoming Beef Barbecue had to be made exceptionally early.

Rosemarie Eurich, President of the Animal Industry Club, is very optimistic about this year's membership. She states, "There is an increase of 30 members which brings the membership up to 45. The response in the freshman class was very encouraging and everything points to a good year."

The next monthly meeting of the A I C will be held on November 11 at 7:30 pm in the Dairy Building. The program will include a talk with slides by Elva Wetje concerning her experiences on a western ranch this past summer. There will also be a film entitled, "Green Mountain Land." Refreshments will be served and everyone is welcome.

The AIC was founded February 7, 1952. Membership is open to all and the University family is invited to attend the monthly meetings which are held on the first Thursday of every month.

Annual Dean Hill's Sugar on Snow "party is held at Stowel Agricultural Clubs sponsor the event.

Kopasetic Corn

(Thank you - Wild One)

In this generation of alligators and hepcats (pard me, brother and sister cats. it's been shortened hasn't it?) an icky will find himself so far off the cob that he'll be coming up on the wrong riff almost continuously. No gate or chick who wants to be kopasetic can can afford to be beat for jive. If he can't beat up the chops without being capped himself he'll find his green turning black. Even his queen may plant him if he doesn't stop being a fraughty issue. Any guy with his boots on is sure to find himself in the groove, a regular hummer.

But just as everything else there's a time and a place for jive. The lady next door is from another beat and thinks you are just spouting. Trickeration is all right in its place but when you put the twister in the slammer of your own cubby, strip your gears and remember to signify only when everyone is on the same beam. If you don't take it easy when you're not sure of the story you will be ranked, but good. Even though you think you are sadder than a map, take it slow.

When you get back into circulation you can put your boots back on and bust your conk over any buddy ghee or barbecue. If you're right on the beam then beat it out, but when the story's strange stick to corn.

ALPHA DELTA PI

A tea was held Sunday afternoon, October 17, at the house in honor of the new housemother, Miss Catherine Wilcox, of Bargon. Miss Wilcox, is an alumna of the University of Vermont.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Severance who acted as chaperones and their little daughter Lynn, Miss Mary Jean Simpson, the former Dean of Women. The Alpha Delta Pi alumnae, housedirectors and representatives from the campus sororities, fraternities and dormitories also attended the event.

ADPi's Social Chairman, Diana Kiessling of Waterbury, Conn., was in charge of the tea. Carolyn McNeil, Lakeville, Mass., chairmaned the committee and was assisted by Penny Collins of St. Albans, Carolyn Wicks of Canton, N.Y., Rusty Clark, Ho-Ho-Kus, N.J.

Marcia Mockridge, '55, of Nutley, N.J., is pinned to George Griffin of Waterville, Maine, Delta Upsilon, who is a graduate student of U.V.M.

TAU EPSILON PHI

Congratulations to Mike Princer on his appointment to the Student Association

It was a baby girl (Beth by name) for Hal and Fran Weinberger.

Happy Birthday to Steve Gottlieb, Bob Levine, and Phil Snyder who celebrated last week.

Tep proudly copped the football league title this year.

SIGMA GAMMA

Summer Weddings for Sigma Gammas included those of:

Nancy Russell to Olaf Garcia of Hutchinson, Minnesota.

Barbara McBride to Lawrence Martin of Syracuse, N.Y.

Beatrice Gates to William Griswold, Fort Ethan Allen and Carolyn Davis to Carl Stone on July 10, in the United States Army.

There were summer engagements too-

Phyllis Bracey, '57, of Hardwick to Charles Matchen, from Bloomington, Illinois, presently stationed abroad the USS Des Moines and Judy Black, '55, of Hyde Park to John P. Blanchette from Keene, N.H.

DELTA PSI

The Delts tell of a very successful Homecoming Weekend. Many alumni were back to enjoy the buffet supper and the party.

The Ladies Club met last week to continue plans for redecorating the fraternity house.

Four men were formally initiated into the brotherhood of Delta Psi on Monday evening last.

Jason Wark, '55, Williamstown, Vt., Joseph Wark, '56, also of Williamstown, Gerald Baril, '55, of Lyndonville, Vt., and Stuart Hadwin, '56, Bennington, Vt.

Fred Hackett, '55, of Burlington, Vt., is engaged to Sally Smith, '56, Pi Beta Phi of Burlington, Vt.

Delt Psi and U.V.M. welcome back to the ranks, Don Standen and Clayton Plumb.

KAPPA SIGMA

Recent returnees to the KE house were Pete Knox, '54, Joe Casey, '54, Beenie Ravenna, '53, Bill Kurkul '53, and Ed Watkins, '53.

Bruce McAlister has returned to the house after spending five weeks as chauffeur to Alfred Hitchcock.

Newly initiated brothers are Stan Talbot, '56, of Woodstock, Vt., John Brown '56, of Barton, Vt., and Bill Jay, '57, of Burlington, Vt.

Jack LaFave, '57, Malone, N.Y., Fred Rex, '57, Jersey City, N.J., have been pledged.

The house has purchased 10 more pieces of furniture, and a rug, making a total of twenty-five new since the fall semester.

Bud Dacey is the newly elected coach of the football team.

Brothers Willets and Olden visited the Brown Chapter on an official trip, and reported the lights went out due to Hurricane Catamount.

Brother Bullis, District Grand Master, will visit the chapter the 26th thru the 30th of October for inspector of facilities. While in Burlington, he will be escourted by Brothers Olden and Russell.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

S.A.E. has several married brothers now, with others contemplating this serious step. The most recent is Dick Hooker to Louise Tracy on August 21. Mrs. Hooker is a junior English major from Fayetteville, N.Y. Dick is a senior Poli Sci. Major from Dewitt, N.Y. Best of luck to Louise and Dick from U.V.M. and the sons of Minerva!

And best wishes are in order, too, for another happy couple: Tom Thomas, S.A.E.'s president, '55, of Burlington who became engaged to Mary Ann McKillop, '55, of Laconia, N.H., over the summer.

In the line of something similar, but not quite, is the pinning of Joe Heald '56, of Burlington, to Pat Clarey, a graduate last June of B.H.S.

LYMAN HALL

Congratulations to Roz Faber '57, of Teaneck, New Jersey and Merry Jewel '58, of Woodstock for copping two of the feminine leads in the University Players forthcoming production of Taming of the Shrew. Roz plays Katherine the Shrew, and Jerry is the widow.

The "Lyman Ladies" join the Tri-Delts in welcoming back Sandy Herrup '57, of New Bedford, Mass., who successfully won her bout with polio this summer. So happy to see you.

The Bolder Look

"Girls...Does your long straggly hair get in your eyes or wiggle down the back of your neck? When you are at the beach, do you look as though your bangs were long, very long? If these, or other things bother you, why not try our new ' bold look ' haircut. Yes, ladies, you too can have that new ' bold look' injust twelve minutes."

Fool that I was - I listened and now I cringe when I have to think about it (which is every time I look into the mirror). Yes, it was at that moment "THE GREAT IDEA" began to formulate. You see my hair was just the kind the jovial announcer was talking about.

However, I do nothing without consulting my boyfriend. The next day I asked him, "Hammerslog, do you think I should get a ' bold look '?

Hammerslog looked aghast, then whispered, "But Snookie, you know I don't approve of those plunging necklines! However, if you really want to, PLEASE, don't let me stop you."

When I explained what I meant about the ' bold look ' he once more was stunned and issued this ultimatum: "If you have your hair cut we are through."

Well, that was that. After I had talked with all my friends and discovered not one of them wanted me to get my hair cut. I made an appointment with La Vogue, Hair stylist.

The fatal day, hour and minute came too soon. Each step I made was slow and deliberate - bringing me closer to my doom. Into the store, into the chair - and then one curl, two curls, - on and on for twelve minutes the scissors snipped and my shining tresses fell to the floor. Suddenly it was all over!

To be sure, the haircut itself is over but to my sorrow I'm still experiencing the effects of short hair. Take for example the day I went horseback riding with Hammerslog who was finally becoming accustomed to my new coiffure. On the way home we stopped off for a small one, --coke, of course.

Wanting to make myself as beautiful as possible I left Hammerslog and started toward the ladies lounge. My humiliation was complete when the attendant stopped me on the way and said, "I'm sorry, sir. The Men's Lounge is in the other direction."

Homecoming Nets Profit For First Time

For the first time in four years, Student Association has made a profit on the Homecoming weekend, finance chairman Herzl Spiro has announced. A total profit of $109.01 was realized.

Players Profit

The Homecoming Committee, for the first time, allowed the University Players to stage their Fall Varieties program as part of the weekend.

The Player's production made a profit of $700, due to the excellent attendance of the fraternity men who opened their houses later in the evening in order to help make this the best Homecomming weekend yet.

This is the second year that a dance has been held with a name band supplying the music. The barbecue also cleared a profit although the exact amount is not yet known.

The total money collected for the weekend was $2025.60. Total expenses were $1916.59.

the GOLD MINE

UVM's fine historical heritage does not always take its rightful place in present day student discussion. We tend to "tear down the golden walls of antiquity" (how else can I put it!) Let us not overlook that of which we can be proud!

Speaking in a vein of ancient history, there is a fact which many of us are not aware of. A man of sports, a very famous man on the National Athletic Scene, was a student-athlete at UVM some years ago. This man is now head football coach at a famous University in New York City. He has been a coachat this University for 25 years. Every football follower in the country knows him by name.

He attended the University of Vermont in 1915, after recording a brilliant record in high school football. He didn't disappoint Catamount grid fans as he became one of the finest guards in our school's history.

There are many green mountain oldtimers left who remember the day when Lou stopped a powerful Colgate eleven almost single handedly at Centennial field. Lou was a "guts" player.

His teammates thought so much of him that he was elected captain of the football team at the end of his sophomore year, an unprecedented honor.

But he became so widely known for his football feats that by the fall of his junior year, he had jumped to "big time football", switching to the University of Pennsylvania.

But he left a piece of himself in UVM's proud athletic history. For Lou Little, of Columbia University, is now one of the greatest football coaches, most respected men, and one of the finest personalities in Americas Athletic Scene today.

Ed Donnelly finally got his bonus last week as the Catamounts clobbered the Cadets, 41-0. Ed waited almost three years to cash in on his hard work. He's looking forward to another big day on this Saturday as his boys take on the University of Massachusetts in a Yankee Conference game. From this angle, the game is a big one in more ways than one. The Redmen from Mass. have one of the strongest clubs in New England. This will be a test. But what's more important, is that this contest may be a deciding factor on the road toward scheduling of more Yankee Conference teams in the future, particularly with that St. Mikes hole still to be stuffed. So far this University has been cautious of YankConn participation in view of the fact that the other teams are much more heavily endowed in respect to athletic scholarship and facilities, along with about a half dozen other advantages. Vermont teams have a poor 3- 10 record in Conference play, over the leagues seven year existance. But a win over Mass., coupled with a fine earlier showing against Maine, may move some wheels in a new direction, which could provide the Conference with the "purest" participating underdog in the league.

Kittens Defeat S.L., 12-0; Third Undefeated Season

by NORM FISHKIN

Under the excellent leadership of coach "Fuzzy" Evans, th freshman eleven completed thei third consecutive undefeated sea son. In topping the St. Lawrenc team by a score of 12-0 the tean also won their third straigh shutout in as many starts.

- 2nd Quarter Rally

The second period of pla dominated the scoring as U.V.M struck paydirt twice. Both touch downs were scored by halfbac Gerry Herlihy. Quarterback To Tierney, ran his team in magnifi cent fashion as they moved th ball beautifully on sever occasions.

ST. LAWRENCE MOVES

The St. Lawrence gridders loo ed sharp on occasions and threa ened early in first quarter. Wit halfbacks Renzi and Mynt running hard, St. Lawrence retur ed the kickoff deep into UV territory. In the following serie of plays they moved the ball dow to the four yard line and th the Kitten defense stiffened, a held. Good defensive jobs Ends Zingg and Curran; linem Hollenstein, Jim Dunn, and Bi Gilbert; and backs Herlihy, Ti ney, Caruso, Johnson and Nymp us held this tough oppo scoreless as they did to Norwi and Middlebury. Score by perio went as follows:

	1	2	3	4
UVM	0	12	0	0	- 1

Kittens Defeat Waterbury High In Cross Country

The cross-country Kittens ran into some pretty tough competition last Saturday on their home course as they took on Vergennes High School and Waterbury High School in a quadrangular. The final scores were: 18-37 Vergennes over the UVM frosh, 19- 36 Vergennes over Waterbury, and 23-32 the Vermont boys over Waterbury.

Veysey First, Tauber Third

Running for Vergennes was highly-touted Lee Veysey, undefeated in two years of competition. Lee is the number one cross-country man among high school runners in Vermont as well as New England champion. Lee broke the tape first with a time of 16:59, ten seconds better than teammate Charlie Ross. Third place was taken by Kitten Art Tauber, UVM's top frosh harrier. Art, although beaten, turned in his best time of 17:21.

Vermonter 3rd

Vergennes took fourth, seventh, and eighth places as well as first and second. UVM took third, tenth, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth while Waterbury captured fifth, sixth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth. Jack Clark was the second Vermont finisher in tenth position, with Bob Ault taking twelfth and Paul Dimick thirteenth. Jerry Harriman number seven man in the state last year ran a fine race for Waterbury finishing fifth, but there was no beating Mr. Lee Veysey last Saturday. By the way, Veysey was the first man to break seventeen minutes this year on the freshman course.

Meet The Varsity

by DICK STEIN

JOHN GALASCIONE

One of the sophomore sensations of this season's Catamounts is end Johnny Galascione. This position is not new to Johnny, he played at it for two years at Montclair High School, N.J., his senior year he was selected All State End. Upon entering UVM though, Johnny was placed at half back position, by freshman coach Fuzzy Evans, in order to take full advantage of his speed. As things turned out, Galascione finished the season as high scorer for the Kittens. Aside from playing football last year, John also was a member of the Frosh basketball team and was first string catcher on the UVM Freshman nine. A good prediction might be that Johnny will again play the role of back- stop, but this time for Ralph LaPointe's Varsity Nine.

The 19 year old sophomore stands 5 feet 9½ inches and weighs 170 pounds. John, a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, is a Pol. Sci. major, in the school of Arts and Science.

Keep your eye on the name Johnny Galascione; he is one of the most versatile athletes ever to attend UVM.

ARTHUR SOLOMON

Trying to fill the shoes vacated by Nat Campana, is big Art Solomon. Art, who last season was overshadowed by Nat, who by the way ended the season 11th in the nation in small college pass receivers, is finally getting a chance to prove himself. The 19 year old junior from East Barre, Vt. learned his football at Spaulding High School, where he earned his varsity letters football, basketball, and baseba Art not only holds down a starti end position on the gridiron, also is a member of the Catamo Baseball Team.

Tau Epsilon Phi Wins IF And All - Campus Titles In Victories Over Delta Psi And Chittenden 3-4

Defeat Delts 33-30 Before 200 Spectators

A fast moving Tep team defeated the Delta Psi's before 200 fans, Thursday afternoon on the gym field by a 33-30 score. Jampolis and Solomon lead the favored Teps with their brilliant offensive and defensive play.

Coming from behind early in the second quarter, the Teps took command and were never headed as they made the most of all the breaks. The Delts went in front early in the first period but they failed to cash in on the second period scoring and went down to defeat.

Score Tied

The Delts drew first blood on the first time that they got the ball on the kickoff from the Teps. Shuttle scored the TD on a pass from Vern Currier. The pass attempt over the middle for the extra point was incomplete. The lack of scoring on attempts for points after touchdowns led to the downfall of the Delts. Jampolis and company came right back after the score with Jampolis getting Roth in the end zone for the score. The PAT try was blocked by big Bill King to make it 6 - 6.

Currier threw another TD pass, this time to Joe Wark who was in the end zone. The PAT try was as good as was all of the tries by the Delts, This score, 12 - 6, was the count at the end of the first quarter. The leagues' high-point scorer, Fred Solomon, added to his total with another touchdown as Jampolis hit him near the goal line. Carr took an extra point pass to make it 13 - 12 Tep.

Solomon Scores Again

Tep intercepted a Currier pass deep in their territory but offside nullified the change of possession. Two plays later, Solomon deflected a Currier pass in the flats and fortunately found the ball in his hands and he raced 50 yards for the score. Carr scored the second of the three extra points to make the score 20 - 12, which was the half time score.

Tep kicked off to start the second half but the kick was short and the Delts easily went over from 30 yards out. Ron Larrow did the scoring this time to make it 18 - 20. Bill King kicked off but made the mistake of keeping the kick inbounds and Tep went all the way for the score with Millman finally carrying the pigskin across the goal line.

Referees Join The Contest

The game became a four team contest as the refs began to blow whistles and dispute with each other. Play resumed and King dropped a perfect pass in the end zone on the next play. However, this play didn't bother the Delts as they completed a Currier to Larrow pass for the TD. This made the score 26 - 24, Tep.

King again kicked inbounds and again the Tep seven, came back, this time to the ten yard line. Jampolis went back to pass and he couldn't find anyone open, so he ran the ball over himself for the score. The PAT setup was the same as Jampolis went over again to make it 33 - 24. The Delts tried hard as the third period ended but they just couldn't score from one foot away on three tries.

Tep had the ball at midfield with about seven plays left. Jampolis, playing heads up ball called for five running plays through the line. Bernie Roth setup this series with an intercepted pass. with two plays left, the Delts hit paydirt on the last play. Bill King, the third highest scorer in regular play took an end zone pass as Tep was walking off the field to make the final tally 33-30. There was no try for the extra point as the game was already decided.

Score By Periods:

Delta Psi	12	0	12	6	- 30
Tau Epsilon Phi	6	14	13	0	- 33

The Line Up:

Tep - - Jampolis, Solomon, Weisman, Golding, Carr, and Roth, (subs) Zettian, Snyder, Millman, and Friebaum.

Delts - - Currier, Larrow, Quimby, King, Wark, Towne, and Shuttle. (subs) O'Conner, Wark, and Presault.

Win Over Dorms 27-12; Solomon, Jampolis Shine

Tep captured the school championship Monday in intramural football as they topped Chittenden 3 & 4 by a 27-12 score before 150 fans.

Keith Jampolis and Fred Solomon led the winners as they completed their first undefeated season. The Teps didn't take long to score after they lost possession early in the quarter with Jampolis intercepting a dorm pass, combining with Roth to go all the way to break the ice at 6-0. The try for the extra point was not good.

The dorm team came right back with a score on the following kickoff. Dave Rutherford held the ball after a mad scramble in the end zone. The PAT attempt was blocked. At this point the Teps worked hard for the next TD with Millman catching a perfect Jampolis pass in the end zone.

Dorm Uprising

The dorm team began to hit their stride but the referee called a play back that saw Larry O'Toole score. The play was argued for minutes but to no avail.

The last half saw the Teps go in front at one point, 25-6. The Chitts gamely tried and fought back to a 25- 12 count. The final two points came when, Harry Trayman was caught in the end zone by Mel Friebaum for a safety.

The University of Vermont Athletic Council, through Director of Athletics J. Edward Donnelly, announced today that arrangements had been made and council approval given for the use of UVM's Centennial Field November 11 by Burlington and Cathedral high schools.

Hill N' Dalers Lose At Maine Yankee Conference Next Stop

FRED SOLOMON

Last Saturday the UVM harriers dropped their second meet of the season, to the Black Bears of Maine by the score of 25-30. The meet was held in Burlington and was won by Firlotte of Maine who covered the course in 24:08.9. Following Firlotte were Larry Damon and Don Grady UVM's top men. The fourth place finisher was Turrow of Maine, Hanson of Maine took fifth, with Vermont's Wadley in sixth. Stinson and Emery finished seventh and eighth for Maine, and Tafrate and Stephens captured ninth and tenth for the Cats.

Next Conn. At Kingston

Next Saturday the Cats travel to Kingston Rhode Island to participate in the Yankee Conference Championship meet. The contestants are the University of Maine, University of Massachusetts, University of New Hampshire, University of Rhode Island, and the University of Vermont. This meet was initiated in 1948 and was won by Rhode Island. In 1949, Rhode Island again took the honors, but in 1950 Maine broke Rhode Island's hold on first place. Massachusetts won in 1951, and repeated in 1952 and 1953.

The distance of the Kingston course is just 200 yards under four miles and should be a fair test to all the participants. The best time recorded this season was 21:47.

Last year Vermont's Don Grady finished 12th, with Joyner in 16th, followed by Wadley in 19th, Damon in 28th and Saurwein in 32nd position.

Coach Post hopes for a marked improvement this year.

This Saturday lists two important games, as Connecticut plays at New Hampshire and the Wildcats have a chance to insure at least a tie for the Bean Pot; while Vermont tackles UMass at Burlington.

The Catamounts who spoiled the weekend for the Norwich fans, will be once again in full strength. The Donnelleymen are now moving on all cylinders. Ed Beck is showing "Little All American" potentiality; Ed Nemer, the driving "plowhorse" showing his prowess on both offense and defense and looking better than ever is halfback Al McLam who was shiftier and faster than ever this past weekend. Finally, the mastermind behind each Vermont play is that of quarterback Mike Semans who also played one of his finest games at Norwich. The starting line now is well balanced in all positions and has needed depth which Coach Donnelly ably used in the 41-0 rout.

Catamounts Go On 41-0 Rampage At Northfield! Play Host To Mass. In Yankee Conference Clash

Seek Fourth Win AgainstRedmen; Beat Harvard

by MARK BERNSTEIN

This weekend the UVM Catamounts, who are riding at the moment on a three game winning streak, will meet the powerful Redmen from Massachusetts State. This will be our fifteenth game played against Mass., since 1903. The game holds prominence due to the fact that this is a Yankee Conference clash and also because it is a step toward the annual "Bean Pot."

Roof Caves In

For the Redmen it was a brilliant season until two weeks ago when the roof caved in. Coach Charlie O'Rourke began by knocking off A.I.C.; pulled what was considered a big upset by beating Harvard University; and then finished his winning streak by romping Conn. But all was not bliss for the Redmen as they first fell to the claws of Rhode Island 52-6 and then this week to the Huskies from Northeastern to the tune of 39-0.

In total this may be the top grid classic of the year here at UVM. Mass. is not a weak team and they willhave only vengeance looming in their hearts when they step out on the field this Saturday. A win over the Redmen for the Catamounts can serve to show the rest of the Yankee Conference that Vermont is a team to be reckoned with in the future.

Make Mass. Number 4!

Record Stands At 3-1-1; Gain 476 Total Yards

by ED WILLARD

The UVM Catamounts went on a rampage last Saturday as they trounced a hapless Norwich Horseman eleven 41-0, before over 5000 fans, a good number of them from UVM, at Northfield's Sabine Field. The Cats had a field day as backs Al McLam, Ed Beck and Captain Eddy Nemer ran up a grand total of 353 yards on the ground. McLam had his finest day at UVM as he ran for two touchdowns, one on a 44 yard run, and kicked five extra points before a downhearted Norwich Homecoming crowd. Overall, the Catamounts rolled up 476 yards (passing and ground) compared to the Cadets 246.

Cats Start Slow

The first quarter did not completely show the shape of things to come as Vermont scored but once on a lucky break. After the Cats bogged down on their first possession, they punted. Norwich with Captain Dom Passalaqua running savagely, couldn't get started and it was here that McLam intercepted a bobbled Meehan pass and ran untouched 55 yards for the first score. McLam converted and it stood 7-0 Vermont.

Linemen Excell

In the second quarter, Norwich was halted by the UVM line. On the first Catamount possession, McLam skirted left end on a neat 44 yard run and with his conversion, it was 14-0. A Norwich fumble followed by McLam's 29 yard run set up the third Vermont tally. A Semans to Galascione pass put UVM on the Norwich 15 and Ed Nemer, who also had a great day with 116 yards gained, took it over to make it 20-0. McLam's conversion made it 21-0. That was the way it stood at halftime as Cat reserves entered the fray in full force for the first time this year. The Vermont and Norwich bands put on a fine show at halftime.

Semans To Beck

In the third quarter, Vermont still couldn't seem to slow up and led by the savage blocking of "Tiger" Art Solomon and Roy Williams, they added 13 more points. Ed Beck ran back the second half kickoff 23 yards to the Cat 47. Beck and Nemer combined to carry it to the Norwich 20 where Mike Semans passed to Beck for the fourth T.D. McLam missed the placement. The score stood, Vermont 27; Norwich 0.

Nemer set up and scored the next one as he ran 40 yards to the Cadet 30 and two plays later raced 18 yards into the end zone. McLam converted to make it 34-0. The final UVM touchdown came on a Semans to Beck toss as McLam converted once more to place the score at 41-0, the reserves were turned loose on the Cadets hopelessly outclassed but still gamely in there. Reserve quarterback Joe Teta almost produced another score as he passed a beautiful long one, barely overshooting McLam in the end zone. Here the game ended as upwards of 1000 loyal Vermont fans turned happily homeward and partyward.

AS I SAW IT

Mike Semans left the playing field early in the fourth quarter this marked the first time durable Mike has been off the gridiron this year. That's quite a feat. Congrats Mike!

Cat blocking was superb. Galascione, Stevens, Forte, Braithwaite, Williams, Johnson and Solomon, (the starting line couldn't have been sharper.

Reserve backs Jim Lee and Dick Jannonni as well as reserve center Ronnie Hill also sparkled.

To Duke Benz; Duke, you didn't fool anyone by saying Meehan might not play. He hasn't "been able" to play for the last four years. Only missed one though.

The Vermont UMass game Saturday here, looms a thriller. Mass beat Harvard, Harvard beat Cornell, Cornell walloped Princeton. Hmm! Wonder if we could beat Princeton.

Too bad we couldn't get the poor Union showing out of our systems in practice. A 4-1 record would look nice. But then, 3-1-1 isn't half bad.

Noted Author Is PS Speaker

By Carol L. Chase

The UVM Program Series sponsors John Gunther, tonight, at 8:15 in the Ira Allen Chapel. Mr. Gunther, author of the "Inside" series, will lecture on his most recent book, "Inside Africa," which was published this fall. He spent the major part of a year combing Africa from Cairo to Capetown to get material for this book. His talk will include present conditions in Africa.

Mr. Gunther has been kept extremely busy with his voluminous writings and this will be his first lecture tour in fifteen years. He will visit only twenty-five places during his tour.

Past Publications

Mr. Gunther is known as "the chronicler of continents." He has worked in nearly every country in the world gathering materials for his "Inside" series, which includes, "Inside Europe", "Inside Asia," "Inside Latin America," and

"Inside U.S.A." When he was correspondent for the Chicago Daily News he covered stories of the wars in Syria, revolutions in Spain, conferences in Geneva, and Coup d'etats in the Balkans.

An Open House is being held this afternoon in honor of Mr. Gunther from 4:00 - 6:00 PM in Waterman Building. The entire University family is cordially invited.

WUS Drive This Weekend; Aims At $2,500 Goal For UVM

By Susan Wakefield

Part of UVM's contributions to World University Service will provide equipment and fixtures for a student tuberculosis ward in Japan. The WUS drive to raise these funds will be held from this Sunday, November 7 to November 14.

The thirty-three bed student ward at Inada Noborito Hospital in Japan was built during the past three years as a project of WUS. However, the building is lacking equipment and fixtures. It is this need that contributions from UVM will alleviate.

The first contribution toward the construction of the ward was made in 1950 by a tiny theological school in the west. One hundred twenty-five students raised $325 by selling their blood to a nearby hospital.

The goal of the WUS drive at UVM this year is $2500. This is the same goal that was set last year. Of this quota, only $1600 was raised. The drive begins Sunday. Let's go over the top!

Joint Endeavor

The story of their contribution was printed in Tokyo newspaper by the Japanese WUS executive. Immediately Japanese offered assistance. The director of the Inada Nodorito Hospital gave land for the ward on the hospital grounds. A young architect drew the plans free of charge. A Tokyo glass company donated all the glass for the building. Students and professors of universities all over Japan raised money.

One student, bed-ridden for six years with TB, contributed thirty cents for one or two nails for the building.

A Korean refugee student earned the equivalent of three month's room and board by begging in the streets; then turned it over to the fund.

International Cooperation

Work camps were organized during the summers of 1951 and 1952 to level the ground and lay the foundations. Americans, Koreans, Japanese, and other students worked together. $20,000 was raised, half of it by the Japanese themselves. There now is a "modern, attractive "sanatorium with facilities for a dining room, library, and recreation room.

The WUS national office has reported, "We can be proud of this project and the international cooperation that produced it. This is not 'charity'; this is a share in productive, constructive, effective, work."

Students Suffer

The problem of taking care of Japan's tubercular students is described as "serious" by the WUS. While there are about 15,000

Bill Wanamaker To Be Featured After Midd Game

A jam session featuring Bill Wanamaker and his combo will be presented after the Middlebury game this Saturday 6, by the UVM and Middlebury senior honoraries. The concert will be held in the gym and cage, and will last until 6:00.

Free coffee and doughnuts will be served. Admission is fifty cents and any profit which is made will be split four ways between the four sponsoring organizations. Judy Patten, Mortar Board chairman of the concert, said, "The purpose of the concert is to build up school spirit and inter-college good will."

"I know that concert will be good, and I think everyone will have a great time there." Bill Wanamaker's combo consists of about seven members besides himself.

Greeks' More Than Social Clubs, States Faculty Report

By Max Ansbacher

"Fraternities must become more aware of their relation to the University, considered as an institution of learning, and not regard themselves as social clubs to which the University is merely an adjunct." This is one of the points included in the report of a student-faculty committee set up last year to describe the role of the faculty fraternity adviser.

The committee pointed, out that this particular problem was just one aspect of the much larger relationship of the fraternity to the University. For this purpose the committee recommended that a study be made of the "ways in which the fraternities and sororities could be made a more integral part of the university."

The role of the advisor was described partly as that of (1) a liaison officer between the fraternity and the administration; (2) a personal adviser to individual members of the fraternity; (3) a promoter of correct social procedure; and (4) one who instigates scholarship.

Urge House Mothers

The committee strongly recommended that fraternities consider the idea of having a house mother (or house parents). It was felt that a house mother would raise the decorum, improve physical conditions, provide a homelike atmosphere, help in securing and entertaining chaperones, and enable the fraternity to have women guests at certain hours.

If any fraternity was unable to have a house mother because of the expense involved in remodeling the house, the committee recommended that the University grant that fraternity a loan to cover the expense.

633 Vote For Councilmen; Student Union Gets 'Okay'

By Bruce S. Evans

Three representatives were elected from the freshmen class, three from the sophomore class, and two from the junior class in the Student Association Election for Councilmen last Friday. The Student Union and Alma Mater Referendums were both passed.

"We were very pleased with the turnout of voters this year (633) as compared with last year's fall election at which only 375 people voted," stated John Burgess, liason between the Elections committee and the SA Council.

No one ran from the Class of '55, their representatives having been elected last Spring.

Nancy Becher and Herzl Spiro won the balloting in the Junior Class. There were 173 people voting. Eighty-seven votes were necessary for a post.

Roberta Baker, John Burgess, and Bob Smith are the newly chosen representatives from the Class of '57. With 232 sophomores participating, 78 votes were required for election. Burgess and Smith were elected for their second consecutive term.

Joan French, Bill Ireland, and Andy Skroback were selected by the freshmen. Out of the 164 votes cast, 55 were necessary for selection.

The Student Union referendum was favorable, by a count of 523 to 110. George Lucchina, president of SA, when questioned on the meaning of the referendum ballot in a CYNIC interview, stated, "This is a definite progressive step in the achievement of our primary goal of better and more adequate student facilities. Barring any further complications, the Student Union Committee will meet with the Administration to iron out any misunderstandings, and then we will proceed to set up a program to develop the fund, probably with the addition of a few alumni to the committee."

The referendum calling for a new Alma Mater was favorable, 454 to 164.

Catamounts Topple UMass 27-25

By Ed Willard

The onrushing UVM Catamounts made it four in a row as they overcame a strong University of Massachusetts team 27-25 in one of the best played games Vermont fans have been in many a year. It was a savage defensive line, three outstanding running backs, a smart quarterback; i.e. a team, playing before a rapidly enthusiastic crowd of about 3500 composed mostly of students that won the victory. Al McLam and Ed. Beck, the Cats two great halfbacks with Mike Semans calling a smart game and passing for 85 yards were the offensive greats as the Catamount offense ran up 341 yards over a heavier Redmen team.

Early Scoring on Both Sides

The game was an "on your feet affair" from the opening gun as Ed Beck fumbled the kickoff. Mass. recovered on the Vermont 22 and scored one play later on a pass from John Noble to Dick Wright. Phil Surgen kicked the placement; the score 7-0 Mass. Several Beck running plays moved the Cats from their 40 to the Mass 7. Here a diving catch of a Semans pass by end Art Solomon in the end zone made it 7-6 as McLam missed the placement. Vermont kicked off to Mass, a long run by Don Johnson putting the Redmen on the Catamount 8. Surgen scored but McLam blocked the placement, the first of three Mass placements to be blocked and Mass. led 13-6. Beck ran the ensuing kickoff back to the 36, Semans flipped to McLam for 38 yards as Beck ran for 14 and 18 yards to put Vermont on the Mass 6. Semans fumbled but redeemed himself one play later as he recovered a Mass fumble on the Redmen's 8 yard line. Two Nemer, McLam runs later and Ed Beck plowed over from the one to score.

Prexy's Announcement Of East Hall Renovation Initiates Reaction Among Other Departments

Almost immediately after President Carl W. Borgmann announced that East Hall would only be used for another five years, several other departments in the University Family expressed discontent with their present facilities. Both the Library and Music Department fall into this category.

Borgmann Predicts Five Year Life For East Hall Structure

"We know that East Hall cannot possibly be used for more than five more years," President Carl W. Borgmann in a recent speech before the student body.

According to the President, East Hall is a structure which was designed as a temporary building which now has a leaky roof, and walls in poor condition. Maintenance costs are rising.

The building, which houses 36 girls, 13 classrooms, numerous English offices, and the Department of Geology, was erected in 1947 on the UVM campus. In addition, it originally held a library for reserve books from Billings, which has been replaced by a girls dormitory.

Camp Endicott, in Rhode Island, dismantled the building and sent it to UVM on orders from the Federal Works Agency. It was formerly a hospital. After being transported to the Vermont campus, the building was re-erected and named East Hall.

Here, at UVM, a building program is necessary. Within the next three years, it is planned that a girls' dormitory, housing 400, will be built, which will clear the East Hall dormitory space for other purposes. During a two-year period following this, plans call for remodeling the Old Mill, and the additional classroom space will make complete evacuation of East Hall possible.

President Borgmann indicated, that successful fund drives are the key to this program. East Hall might have to last more than five years if the University doesn't realize sufficient funds to initiate a program of building construction.

East Hall was erected as a temporary structure. For the past ten years it has been temporary. Above scene shows original construction carried on in blanket of snow.

Library Inadequate For Vermont - Smith

By Shirley O'Neill

"The physical facilities of the University libraries are now inadequate to service all the needs of this, a modern university of 2500 to 3500 students," according to Sidney B. Smith, Director of Libraries.

The University Senate Library Committee has recently made an extensive study of this problem, in response to a request made by President Carl W. Borgmann. They recognized the fact that the servicing of undergraduate students must be of primary importance, and that an expanding program to meet the needs of graduate students must also be kept under consideration. According to evidence presented to the committee, the needs of the student body for library materials are constantly increasing, and library facilities must therefore be expanded to meet these needs.

Space Survey

According to a survey which reported on the amount of space needed by a library to meet the demands of enrollments of various sizes, a school the size of UVM should have a library containing approximately 50,000 square feet of space. This space would be utilized for books, journals, and documents; for the staff of the library; for an adequate seating capacity for both faculty and students; and for miscellaneous items, such as stairways, a public catalog, and so forth. The Billings Library presently has only 18,000 square feet of space; therefore, approximately 32,000 square feet will have to be added.

The following alternatives were presented by the Committee as possible solutions to the problem:

1. A greater use of the stacks and the reading rooms in Waterman which are now used for storage. However, not enough space for readers is available there, and the project would involve great expense.

2. A remodelling of the Billings Library, particularly in regard to the possibility of adding a second floor at the balcony level. The attic running the length of the north reading room could also be converted into usable space.

3. An addition to the Billings Library, requiring a building which would contain 32,000 feet of floor space.

4. A departmental library program. However, this would mean great expenditures for the shelving and staffs of separate libraries.

5. The remodelling of some present campus building.

6. An entire new building, which would undoubtedly be the ideal solution. However, this would cost between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 and there are no immediate prospects for gaining such a sum.

The Library Committee recommended that an authority on library structure be employed to study the problem in the light of the proposed alternatives.

Music Curriculum Curtailed By Space Shortage - - Bennett

By Jane Clegg

Is the Music Department at UVM adequate for a university of this size? According to various members of the Music Department faculty and also student in the music curriculum, the answer is an emphatic "no."

"The department's main problem is lack of space," states prof. Howard G. Bennett, head of the Music Department. At present all music courses are held in a former home on Williams Street. The small rooms of the building can easily be used for listening and practice rooms, but for the number of students who take the music courses they are not adequate. Those courses with an enrollment of 50 or more students, such as Survey of Music Literature, Survey of Opera, and The History of Music, meet in three rooms. With the instructor in the room which forms a right angle with the other two, the students in one room are able to hear the instructor but cannot hear the comments or questions of students in the other room.

Curriculum Curtailed

"As far as the courses which the UVM Music Department offers are concerned," Prof. Bennett continued, "we are now offering as many as we are able to with the amount of space and the number of teachers that we have. With a larger building and more members on the staff, we might be able to institute lessons in instrumental music in addition to those which are now given in violin, piano, organ, and voice."

A larger building would also be beneficial to students not in the music curriculum who wish to listen to the department's collection of classical records. At present, although the Carnegie Record Library is open to anyone wishing to make use of it, the fact that there are only two listening rooms and several classes which require outside listening, makes it almost impossible for individuals to use this facility.

Faculty and students agree that a much larger building would solve the immediate problems of the Music Department. As Prof. Bennett pointed out, "we should have more phonographs, but with no more rooms to put them in, they would be of little use.

to 20,000 Japanese students suffering from TB, there are no specific sanatorium facilities for these students. General hospital facilities in Japan are very inadequate-113,000 beds for two million cases of this disease.

A TB patient has to pay as much as the average monthly income of amiddle class family for a month of care and treatment in an ordinary hospital. For the majority of students this financial burden is said to be crushingly heavy. The many students who work their way through school have no means at all to meet hospital expenses.

'What Is Right' To Be Topic At Next Round Table Meeting

"What is Right?" will be discussed by students and faculty members under the leadership of Professor George Dykhuizen of the philosophy department. The discussion will be a week from this Saturday and is a part of the regular meeting of the Round Table.

Although attendence is partly limited by the facilities, the Round Table president emphasized that any student who is interested in discussion is welcome. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner at 6:00, and like all Round Table meetings will be held in the Klifa Club at 342 Pearl Street. Reservations may be made by putting a slip in the Round Table box in the Waterman Information Office indicating the name and number of reservations desired.

An Ancient Puzzle

The question of what is right is one which has puzzled philosophers through the ages. Professor Dykhuizen has indicated that one of the ways to attack the problem would be through the view-points of different ideologies. Does Communism, Christianity, Judaism or Atheism have the best answer to the question of What is Right?

Max Ansbacher, President of the Round Table, commented, "This is the type of question which I feel best lends itself to discussion in a group such as Round Table. I think that everyone has at some time thought of the problem, and probably has some ideas which he would like to express. Under the guidance of Professor Dykhuizen I am looking forward to a very successful meeting."

Professor Dykhuizen was on a leave of absence last year when he lectured in Egypt. The trip was made through the grant of a Fulbright fellowship. He has been with the University of Vermont since 1926, and is now the Chairman of the Philosophy Department.

Three Students Win Howard Prize For Scholarship

The Howard Prizes for outstanding scholarship in the freshman year for students in the College of Arts and Sciences have been awarded to Lianne Tryon, of Fort Sill, Oklahoma; Marvin A. Nierenberg, of Jamacia, N.Y., and Patricia A. May, of Barton Vermont.

Lianne Tryon had a ninty six average. Marvin Nierenberg was in the ninty-three to ninty-five bracket and Patricia May was in the ninty to ninty two group.

Faculty Advisor

That fraternity advisers be appointed for a period of one year was another proposal of the committee. At the end of the period, May 1, the fraternity would consider which member of the faculty it would like to have for its adviser for the coming period. At the same time, the Dean of Administration would notify each faculty advisor that his term has expired, and that he would not be reappointed unless notified by the Dean.

Functions of Advisers

It was also suggested that the faculty advisors be invited to attend business meetings of the fraternity occasionally, that the fraternity president keep the adviser informed of all matters concerning the University-fraternity relationship, and that he invite the adviser to dinners and other social events.

The committee recommended that the faculty adviser be aware of his responsibilities, that he attend as many business meetings of the fraternity as possible, that he cooperate "in all ways possible with the alumni advisers of the fraternity and the national officers."

"Excellent Ideas"

President Carl W. Borgmann stated that the report, "Contained some excellent ideas which I hope will be discussed by the several interested groups, and I also hope that it will be possible to adopt many of the suggestions."

The members of the committee were Professor Jack Trevithick of the English department, chairman: William Battles, SAE; Lee Dye, Theta Chi; Professors Milton Potash and Lyman Rowell both of the zoology department; and H. James Wallace, Delta Psi.

English Professor Named To Staff Of National Magazine

By Lenore Weinstein

Professor John W. Aldridge of the English department has been named as a contributing member of the staff of The Nation beginning with the October issue of this weekly magazine on national and world affairs.

Professor Aldridge reports that his first article in the current issue is part one of a two-part essay entitled "The American Writer and the Hypocrisy of Status." It is a discussion of the literary situation in America today, he states, in relation to "the ivory tower and the market place."

The first article deals with the "ossification of the modern movement in the universities" and takes up the "state of publishing since the war, the rise of the pocketbooks and the opportunities and disadvantages for the writer."

Extended Coverage

He relates that his will be a "regular department of extended criticism where there will be room to do more than just review books." The articles will offer general discussion of literary problems, and he says that a future one will deal with literary pocketbook magazines, a fairly recent arrival in the publishing field begun by Professor Aldridge with Vance Bourjality, author of the novel, "The End of My Life."

He states that his series "represents a new effort on the part of The Nation to give a critic space to write on controversial literary issues with the hope that this can help to bring the issues alive.

Background

Professor Aldridge, who teaches courses in creative criticism and a new course in advanced creative writing at the University, came to UVM in 1948 as a lecturer in criticism. He is now an assistant professor in the department of English. Last year he was on a leave of absence at Princeton where he gave the Christian Gauss Seminars in Criticism to Princeton faculty members and to members of the Institute for Advanced Study.

He has lectured at Columbia, City College, the University of Wyoming, and Boston University besides having critical writings published in Harper's, the Saturday Review, the New York Times and many other publications.

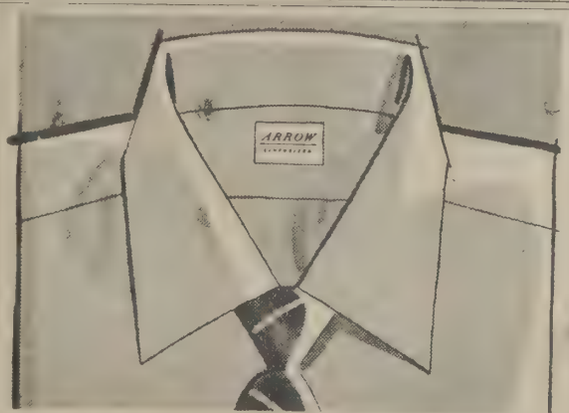
Annual John Dewey Lecture Given By Leading Scholar

On Wednesday evening, the John Dewey Club at the University of Vermont held it's annual John Dewey Lecture at the Ira Allen Chapel.

Jerome Nathanson who is is Chairman of the Board of Leaders of the New York Society for Ethical Culture gave the address. His subject was, "John Dewey and the Liberal Spirit." Dr. Nathanson is author of several books including, Forerunners of Freedom and John Dewey, the Reconstruction of the Democratic Life, the latter book being one of the best expositions of John Dewey's philosophy.

The John Dewey Club plans to hold several informal gatherings on the campus within the next few months at which time members of the faculty will be invited to talk. Look for these notices on the club bulletin board in Waterman and do attend for an enjoyable few hours.

Debate Season Opens; UVM Team In Tie At Middlebury



By Mary Davidson

"Resolved that the United States should extend diplomatic recognition to the communist government of China." This was the national debate question at Middlebury on Wednesday, October 27, when the first of the series of debates in the third annual Round Robin Tournament was held. UVM and St. Michael's ended this debate in a tie, with the Vermont negative teams winning two of the rounds. Professor Helgeson accompanied the group. The teams participating were St. Michael's, Middlebury, and UVM.

The four varsity division participants were Cynthia Wooster, a junior from North Adams, Mass., on the first affirmative team, Pat May, a sophomore from Barton, Vermont, on the second affirmative team, Edwin English, a junior from St. Albans, Vermont, on the first negative team, and Herzl Spiro, a junior from Burlington, Vermont on the second negative team.

Coming Events

Twenty different eastern colleges, including UVM, will attend the Hamilton College tour at Clinton, N.Y., this weekend. Professor Huber, head of the speech department will accompany the eight novice debators chosen to attend. Both of the affirmative teams will be made up of freshmen; including Nancy Samuels, Louis Kiefer, Joan Morrow, and Donald Karp. On the negative teams will be Sandy Winterberger, Irwin Fisner, and Bob and Arthur Krauser. UVM debators won this tournament last year with a record of ten wins and two losses, which was the highest percentage score. According to Professor Helgeson, "The UVM team is not expecting to win this year, due to the large number of novices, (26 in all.) Although they are a very fine group of debators, we have not yet been able to give them a long enough period of concentrated training.

WUS -- Let's Support

The World University Service Drive gets underway this weekend. The goal set for UVM is $2,500, the same as last year. UVM's actual contribution however, was $1,633. This amount was high enough to place Vermont fourth among New England colleges, topped only by Yale, Amherst and Smith College. It is a figure of which UVM may well be proud...proud not only of the numerical value but also of the fact that an organization exists on this campus which realizes the importance of sponsoring the WUS drive.

WorldUniversity Service funds are used to aid fellow students in various locales around the globe. Last year a portion of UVM's funds helped to build and furnish a hostel for students of India. This year, the Religious Life Committee, which administers the fund raising, has earmarked part of the Vermont collection for a Tuberculosis Ward for Students in a Japanese hospital.

It is difficult for us to visualize the conditions under which thousands of students attend foreign colleges. These conditions are far from comfortable.

Let's give just that little bit extra this year...let's meet our quota...let's give other students the opportunities which we so readily take for granted.

IFC -- Negligence

We wonder whether or not IFC is taking a rather negligent attitude in relation to the liquor regulations of the State and University. For a group which asked for, and was granted the jurisdiction over fraternity infractions, IFC seems to be turning a rather convenient cold shoulder to the drinking violations which occurred blatantly during rushing banquets.

Just how long is IFC to ignore drinking in fraternities by minors. We believe that this " responsible, mature university undergraduate organization " should attack the problem on a positive level instead of sitting back and ignoring what seems obvious to nearly all others.

You do have a responsibility to the University -----remember?

PEP -- Abundance

To by-pass the outstanding job which is being done by the UVM Pep Committee would be somewhat of a slap in the face of this group. Undoubtedly, spirit is at a higher level than it has been for some time. Part is due to the everpresent, always hustling cheerleaders. Part is due to Coach Ed Donnelly and the team which has given us something to cheer for. Part is due, we feel, to the CYNIC'S articles pointing to the state of affairs as of two weeks ago. A large share of the plaudits must fall on the Pep Committee itself. This year the committee has gone all out to stir the campus spirit, the new Catamount Mascot being a sign of progressive realistically thinking people. Let's keep it up. We like it this way.

The Wright Way

By Gary Wright

"Well, we've waited the customary fifteen seconds and Professor Meebly isn't here. Lets go!"

The class filed solemnly out, sniffing and dabbing at their eyes with bits of notebook paper.

"How come, friend," I asked a common stranger.

"Police burned him to the ground for running a stop light on Church Street. Thought he was a student. White Bucks, yaknow."

"Rum go," I said, "I pay good, fresh, Confederate money and no show. Gadfry!"

The stranger left, humming an old campaign speech, and and I stomped indignantly down the hall. Indignantly got up and we had to it. This was the signal for Fracas, who mistook our Scrabble game for the class bell.

I did so wish to talk to dear old Professor Meebly so that very afternoon, after checking his office hours and acquiring a wrecking bar, I broke in. He probably wondered what the devil was coming off as I sprawled full length on the rare, imported, Persian carpet.

"What the devil is coming off," he bellowed.

"No class, dog and cur," I snapped right back. "And next time tell your butler to leave the bloody door closed until I get in a few good whacks."

"Brewster, my boy," he belched happily, "Have a chair."

I selected the most comfortable and put it in my pocket.

"We missed you in class today," I began. "We had a peachy time."

"Shall I tell you a story, Beauford?"

He did and it was foul.

"I'm afraid, Professor Meebly sir, that my study methods are wrong. I came out of the hour test owing you points."

He snorted.

"Why did you snort?" I asked pleasantly.

"A man has an endowed right to snort," he snorted. "Snort, snort, snort."

"Yes sir," I said, covered with rue.

"And furthermore, Boarding well, any lip from you ffftt."

"Ffftt, sir."

"Aye, ffftt. Now what is your trouble?"

"I've tried studying before and after lectures, I even bought a translation in Sanskrit. It's no go. I just can't read the catalog."

"There, there, Bradley," he patted me gently on the back with a letter opener. "Do you think you are being reasonable?"

"No sir, Reasonable got a 105."

"So he did. A brilliant boy. Officer material.

A proud gleam illuminated his good eye.

"Perhaps you study too long and tediously," he chuckled.

"If you don't stop chuckling me I'm going to get off your lap. And I don't study Long and Tediously either. I'm all through Freshman Comp."

"Good for you. Have a Camel."

"No thank you, sir, my bicycle is just outside."

"Tell me, Bridgeton, have you any outside interests, any diversion from your long hours at gruelling study," he rolled on the floor in silent laughter.

"Oh yes, sir. I have the complete works of Walt Kelly; Blanch White's latest book, Floyd Boyd's Fight for Lower Tuition; and the Complete and Unconfiscated Treasury of old Psych Exams."

"Rah! Yea team! Fight!" he broke out in a gay display of banners.

I left and walked to Waterman, humming a speech from an old war movie, and not once stepping on a crack.

Public Nursing Initiates New Program At UVM

The University of Vermont, in association with the State Department of Health, has completed plans to begin a new student program in Public Health Nursing during the second semester at UVM. An informal coffee hour recently marked the setting up of classroom and office facilities for the program in the Pomeroy Building on the UVM campus.

The program, made possible by a grant of $25,000 from the Commonwealth Fund, will make use of State Department of Health facilities in this area around Burlington to provide UVM's nursing students with field experience in public health nursing, according to Miss Jane Y. Harshberger, who will head up the program.

Train Eight Weeks

Miss Harshberger said that students in the Nursing program at UVM will receive instruction in Public Health Nursing for a total of eight weeks during their junior year. Five or six weeks of (continued on page seven)

The following poem, taken from The Harvard Lampoon, is appropriate now that exams are upon us:

I think that I shall never see
A mark as lovely as a B.
A B whos fat and lucious curves
Will please the eyes and sooth the nerves.
A B that drives away dull care
And bringeth gladness everywhere;
A B that may in time, I wist,
Increase fourfold to make Dean's List.
D's are prob'ly made by fools,
But not according to my rules;
For in this place it seems to me
That only God could get a B.

Current campus controversy is about the proposed student union building. What are other colleges doing about the problem? Norwich University, in Northfield, Vt., will construct a student union building which will include dining facilities for the entire 700 man cadet corps.

The building, whose foundations will be laid this fall, will be finished late in 1955. The building will include an expanded university store, increased recreational facilities, and additional classrooms on the third floor.

Roosevelt College in Chicago, Ill., has a unique system in use that voids imposing a rigid grading curve on all classes. The new system provides complete flexibility in that the instructor is given an index of the scholastic ability of each student in his classes. This rating curve for each student is prepared by his percentile rank in special tests, in his percentile rank in high school work, and in the percentile rank he holds from the previous semesters work.

Therefore each student is marked against the quality of work that he is known to be able to do. He is not marked against the quality of work that the class as a whole is capable of. This is supposed to give a truer and fairer marking system.

Man! Dig That Crazy Lingo; Vermont Has Own Dialect

By Barbara Zack

Satchel your britches.
What's the idear?
I want to see the folks and get some peaches.
I druther go downstreet and git some boughten bread.

All this may be strange to your ears, but it probably won't be for long. Respectively it's simply Vermont lingo for---

Hurry up.
Why?
None of your business.
I'd rather buy some bread at the store.

Many of the colloquiallisms heard around UVM recently are picked up and easily made a part of an out-of-stater's vocabulary. Let's see how you "foreigners" do in figuring out your classmate's description of a saved-off girl who took a poor pig to market. Give up? Well, here goes - a short girl married a man who never amounted to much. Easy, isn't it?

Some of their phrases aren't so subtle. I'm sure you've heard that whistling girls and cackling hens always come to some bad end. That's typical Vermontese, by gravy! Don't like someone? Tell him to go to hell in a wheelbarrow. The Vermonter seems to think that's a much more delicate way of putting it.

You can tell alot about a people from their phrases and expressions. Ask any Vermonter, and he'll tell you that if you argue with a fool that makes two. See how his views are put forth in these expressions: While you're alive, live; make do, or do without; or what counts isn't your position, it's your disposition. Here's one we could all think about--the best way to kill time is to work it to death. Could anyone have put it any better.

All these expressions are thoughts that have been handed down by generations of Vermonters, and are of particular interest to Miss Muriel Hughes, of the English department. It is her task to collect comparisons, expressions, pronunciations and proverbs peculiar to Vermont. The American Dialect Society will then incorporate them in a forthcoming dictionary. It would be real scuntifick wonderful, to you, if any of you have found some verbal oddities that you would like to add. Listen around campus for some--but beware--because the Vermonters tells us that "eavesdroppers never hear good of themselves."

You can see through a keyhole with both eyes, if a Vermonter thinks you're narrowminded. Heaven help you if you're pleasingly plump. A native of this state will say he doesn't have to shake the sheets to find you. Talking about Vermont weather, as we always are, we hear that if it doesn't please you, all you need do is wait a minute. When it snows, we're told it's crotch-deep on a nine-foot Indian. And of course, it never rains in this lovely state----it spits.

They saintenly have figured out human nature in these parts, judging from their need to winter and summer a person before they can say they know him. A chip on the shoulder indicates wood higher up may be a good one to remember. All this talk isn't buttering any parsnip, so I'll satchel my britches and git goin' like greased lightning. Just remember that when life presents a problem, "eat it up, wear it out, and make it do." and by thunderingcanthooks you'll learning a lesson from ol' Vermont.

Father O'Brian Urges Return To Newman Nat'l

The UVM campus was the scene of the annual New England Province meeting of the Newman Club. The weekend was highlighted by the presence of Father o'Brian, Catholic chaplain at the University of Connecticut and president of the National Federation of Newman Clubs.

Father O'Brian spoke to the club at the regular monthly meeting Oct. 24. The purpose of his talk was to tell of the advantages and need for joining the National Confederation. The Vermont Newman Club withdrew from the National three years ago, due to financial reasons, which President Gary O'Halloran stated were still evident.

National Organization

Father O'Brian stated that belonging to the national would strengthen and enable the national to establish Newman Clubs on secular campuses which are without Catholic organizations. In addition, Father O'Brian stated that the national can be of great help to the individual Newman Club through its pamphlets and manuals on Catholic teaching and the method of conducting an effective Newman Club. He felt that belonging to the national would give the Catholic student an indirect voice in national and world affairs, as weel as a feeling of spiritual unity.

Prof. Ansbacher Leaves Tuesday For Germany

Prof. Heinz L. Ansbacher of the University of Vermont psychology department, has been awarded a Fulbright Fellowship to lecture at the University of Kiel, Germany, this year, for which he has been granted a year's leave of absence.

Dr. Ansbacher's visit to Kiel is at the request of University officials there, who initiated action with the Fulbright Commission in Germany to have him receive a year's fellowship as guest professor.

The UVM professor will place the main emphasis of his teaching at Kiel on quantitative, or "typically American" methods in psychology, "principally statistics, testing, and opinion polling," he relates, "since these are least emphasized in Germany." The winter semester at Kiel lasts from November through February, the spring semester from May through July.

Prof. Ansbacher will sail for Europe this Tuesday. Mrs. Ansbacher and the youngest of their four sons will join him at Kiel in "a month or so." The three older sons plan to meet their parents in Europe next summer.

His visit to Kiel marks the second time he has been requested to serve as guest professor at a German University. In the summer of 1950, he taught at the University of Maine through a grant from the U.S. Department of State.

Dr. Ansbacher came to UVM in 1946.

New Governor, Lieutenant Are UVM Grads; Bailey First Woman To Hold Post In State

For the first time in the history of the state and of the university, UVM graduates will occupy the posts of governor and lieutenant governor of Vermont during the same administration. With the election last Tuesday of Joseph B. Johnson as governor and Consuelo Northrup Bailey as lieutenant governor, UVM alumni moved into the two highest elective offices in the state.

Governor-elect Johnson, mechanical engineering graduate of the University in 1915 and former trustee of the institution, has combined an active career in business with equally active participation in the political life of the state. Rising from "odd jobs" assignments held before his college days to the position of voce-president and general manager of Bryant Chucking Grinder Company in Springfield, Vt., Mr. Johnson has been identified with the manufacturing activities of that Vermont industrial center throughout his working years. He left Bryant in 1949 to establish a practice as a private consulting engineer. He has served as representative, state senator, and lieutenant governor.

Mrs. Bailey, who received her Ph.B. from Vermont in 1921 and her law degree from Boston University, had many "firsts" to her credit before she became the first woman to be elected lieutenant governor of Vermont. Other "firsts": first woman admitted to the Vermont bar; first woman in New England and second in nation to be speaker of a state house of representatives (she was speaker in the 1953 Vermont General Assembly). A founder of Sigma Gamma sorority and a member of Phi Beta Kappa at UVM, Mrs. Bailey practiced law in Burlington for a number of years, was Chittenden County state's attorney, and was a member of the Vermont senate before becoming a member of the house.

She is a member of the Republican National Committee, serving as one of that committee's four vice-presidents.

Mr. Johnson is by no means UVM's first contribution to the state gubernatorial office. Four other Vermont graduates have served in that position during the university's long history: Vermont's Civil War governor, John Gregory Smith, Class of 1838; Roswell Farnham, Class of 1849, governor 1880-1882; Asahel Peck, Class of 1830, governor 1874-1876; and Urban A. Woodbury.

Dramatics Honor Society To Hold Poetry Reading

The National Collegiate Players Poetry Reading will be given this year at Southwick on November 23, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The theme is Poetry in English Translation. Both students and professors will read.

If you would like to participate in the program send a note including the name of the selection, a short resume of it, your name, address and phone number. The time limit for each reader is five minutes. Address your applications to Eleanor Levin, Old Mill or leave them in the University Players mailbox, or on the bulletin board in 203 Pomeroy.

Honorary Society

National Collegiate Players is an honor society of college students who work with collegiate theatrical groups and are interested in the theater. The award is granted to students who have earned a specific number of points through working on college productions. In addition to the points earned on "crews," the students must meet academic standards and must have taken courses that develope a background for understanding and enjoying drama. The purpose of the National Collegiate Players is to encourage and develope interest in American Theater.

THE INTELLIGENCE QUOTIENT OF NED FUTTY

Chloe McColgate was a beautiful coed who majored in psych and worked in the I.Q. testing department of the university. She did not work there because she needed money; she worked there because she loved and admired intelligence above all things. "I love and admire intelligence above all things," is the way she succinctly put it.

Ned Futty, on the other hand, was a man who could take intelligence or leave it alone. What he loved and admired above all things was girls. "What I love and admire above all things is girls," is the way he put it.

One day Ned saw Chloe walking by on the campus. "Holy Toledo!" he exclaimed. "How sweetly flows that liquefaction of her clothes!"

The following day he saw her walking past again. "Great balls of fire!" he exclaimed. "Next, when I cast mine eyes and see that brave vibration each way free, O, how that glittering taketh me!"

When he saw her again the next day, he could no longer contain himself. He ran up and blocked her way. "Excuse me," he said, tugging his forelock, "I am Ned Futty and I love you beyond the saying of it. Will you be mine?"

She looked at his quarter-inch haircut, his black rimmed glasses, his two-day beard, his gamy T-shirt, his tattered jeans, his decomposing tennis shoes. "You are not unattractive," she admitted, "but for me beauty is not enough. Intelligence is what I require in a man."

"I'm smart as a whip" said Ned with a modest blush. "Back home everybody always said, 'You got to get up pretty early in the morning to get ahead of old Ned Futty.'"

"Maybe so," said Chloe, "but if you don't mind, I'd like to make sure. Will you come into the I.Q. testing department with me?"

"With you I would go into a malted milk machine," cried Ned Futty and laughed and smote his thigh and bit Chloe's nape in an excess of passion and high spirits. Scampering goatlike, he followed her into the I.Q. testing department.

"First I will test your vocabulary," said Chloe.

"Shoot!" said Ned gaily and licked her palm.

"What does juxtaposition mean?"

"Beats me," he confessed cheerily.

"How about ineffable?"

"Never heard of it," smiled Ned, plunging his face into her clavicle.

"Furtive?"

"With fur on?" said Ned doubtfully.

Chloe sighed. "How are you on arithmetic?" she asked.

"A genius," he assured her.

"What's the difference between a numerator and a denominator?"

"My feeling exactly!" said Ned with an approving nod. "What's the difference?"

"If a man earns fifty dollars a month," said Chloe, "and saves 12% of his earnings, how long would it take him to save $100?"

"Forever," said Ned. "Who can save anything on $50 a month?"

"How do you find a square root?"

"How should I know?" replied Ned, giggling. "I'm no square."

"How are you on English?" asked Chloe.

"I speak it fluently," said Ned with quiet pride.

"What is the present tense of wrought?"

"Wreet," replied Ned, clutching Chloe to him and dancing 32 bars of the Maxixe.

"Next I will test you for manual dexterity," said Chloe. She handed him a board punched full of oddly shaped holes and a collection of oddly shaped pegs. "Fit the pegs in the holes," she instructed him.

"Let's neck instead," suggested Ned.

"Maybe later," said Chloe. "First the pegs."

He fumbled about for a longish interval. Finally he tired of it and reached for Chloe.

But she fended him off. "Ned Futty," she said, "you are dumb. You have the highest dumbness score of anybody I have ever tested. Consequently I cannot be your girl, for I love and admire intelligence above all things."

He hurled himself on the floor and clasped her about the knees. "But I love you!" he cried in anguish. "Do not send me from you, or you will make my world a sunless place — full of dim and fearful shapes!"

"I am sorry," she answered, "but you are too dumb."

"Reconsider, madam," he bagged, "else a miasm looms before me."

"Go," she said coldly.

Spent and speechless, he struggled to his feet. With leaden steps he made his painful way to the door. There he stopped and lit a cigarette. Then he opened the door and started away to his gray and grisly future.

"Stay!" called Chloe.

He turned.

"Was that," she asked, "a Philip Morris you just lit?"

"Yes," he said.

"Then come to me and be my love!" cried Chloe joyously. "For you are not dumb! You are smart! Anybody is smart to smoke Philip Morris with its fine vintage tobaccos, its cool relaxing mildness, its superior taste, its snap-open pack. Ned, lover, give me a cigarette and marry me!"

And they smoked happily ever after.

Chaplin and Webb Star At Museum

By Bruce S. Evans

The illustrious buffoon, Charlie Chaplin, is the lead character in the "Floorwalker," one of the films shown at the Fleming Museum for its monthly presentation on October 27. Clifton Webb, the man who knows everything, appeared in "Mr. Belvedere Goes To College," the second and final moving picture of the month's program.

Dr. Gowans, director of the Museum, in a concise lecture before the showing, compared the two characters. He indicated the following:

Chaplin is similar to the court jesters of medieval days. He acts like a fool, but actually knows more of what is going on than anyone else. Belvedere may be compared with Hercules, who became an object of ridicule because of his extraordinary feats. He is the superman who thinks he is so infallible that his fallability is only too obvious. Chaplin is making a fool of himself; Belvedere is making a king of himself.

The showing was aligned with the Museum's program demonstrating motion pictures as a form of artistic expression. Each month, a different aspect of the art of film-making will be viewed.

"Museum Problems in Motion Pictures" is the next session, on November 17. The first film "Van Meegeren's Faked Vermeers," deals with the career of Hans Van Meegeren, a painter so infuriated by the refusal of art experts to praise his work that he determined to discredit their judgement by counterfeiting the work of Vermeer, the great 17th century Dutch painter. The other film for this showing will be "Williamsburgh Restored," which is concerned with architecture and its associated problems.

"Morrocco," with Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper, (1930) was the first picture of the semester's program. It illustrated many of the popular cliches in the Hollywood repertoire.

Also, once a month, there are public discussions about the Museum's exhibits. Coffee is present for refreshments.

When asked, the objective of this year's program, Dr. Gowans stated, "I hope that this program will be an integral part of the Museum's educational program and its cultural services to the community."

Doctor Alan Gowans, Museum Director, has brought many new ideas to the UVM campus. Among them are discussions of contrasting or otherwise pertinent films presented at Museum.

Max Kaminsky And All Stars Rock Cage With Their Jazz

By Dick Lewis

Max Kaminsky and his All-Stars "blew" into town last Friday night and attracted a good size crowd of jazz devotees to the UVM cage. Although the program called for Dixieland, Mr. Kaminsky and his group played everything from Tenderly, an old standard, to Dixieland via the St. James Infirmary route and then back to a version of Perfidia.

A gentleman by the name of Eddie Barefield created, in my opinion, a mild sensation with his wonderful clarinet work. His ability to improvise in his solo work caught the attention of the audience and they hailed him each time that he appeared. Mr. Barefield plays one of the sweetest clarinets that I have ever heard. It is not a true Dixieland Clarinet, but one that has come out of the swing era of the late 1930's and early '40s.

Jimmy Crawford, a rather colorful drummer, provided the audience with a few good laughs and set them at ease. His ability to handle the sticks is quite remarkable. Mr. Crawford has played with a number of dance bands, including that of the late Jimmy Lunceford. This writer does not consider him to be a true Dixieland drummer when compared to such men as Cliff Leemans and Buzzy Drootin.

Max Kaminsky is an old timer in the jazz field and this is quite apparent, even to one who knows little of the personal lives of these musicians. His trumpet work can be described as soleful and yet it is somewhat harsh. Mr. Kaminsky is in the same class as such greats as Buck Clayton, & Wild Bill Davison.

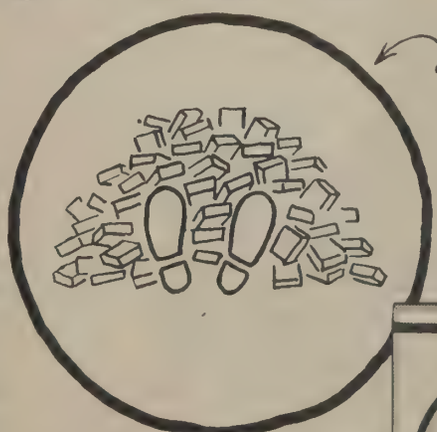
the program will be in field experience, she said, with the first center for this experience set up through the Vermont State Department of Health office in Essex Junction.



The UVM students will work with the State Department of Health and UVM nursing personnel in visiting area homes. The students will also receive classroom instruction in the program at UVM, Miss Harshberger said, adding that plans are being made to work with some Burlington agencies during this period.

The working out of the program was with the active cooperation of Dr. Robert E. Aiken, director of the State Department of Health, and Esther Martinson, director of the State Dept. of Health, Division of Public Health Nursing. Both are serving on the steering committee for the program. Heading the committee as chairman is Prof. Faye Crabbe, chairman of UVM's department of nursing.

What makes a Lucky taste better?

"IT'S TOASTED" to taste better!

What cigarette do college students go for? According to the latest, biggest coast-to-coast survey, students prefer Luckies to all other brands. And once again, the No. 1 reason is better taste. Of course Luckies taste better. First of all, Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. Then, that tobacco is toasted to taste better. "It's Toasted"—the famous Lucky Strike process—tones up Luckies' light, mild, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. Try a pack. Maybe you'll be as fortunate as the student in the Droodle to the right, titled: Lucky smoker . . . faulty cigarette vending machine. Even if you're not, you'll enjoy the better-tasting cigarette . . . Lucky Strike.

"WHAT'S THIS?" asks ROGER PRICE*

Around The Green

Edited by Joan Breslin

Gamma Phi Beta initiated three actives and one alumna on Sunday October 24th.

The actives initiated were Lois Butler, '56, Hasbrouck Heights, N.J., Pauline Le Moine, '56, Rochester, N.Y., Marilyn C. Wakefield, '55, Wells River, Vt., and Miss Elizabeth Paulsen of the Zoology Department was initiated as an alumna of Gamma Phi.

Hearty congratulations go out to the newest Phi Sig pinnings, Izzy Zalkin of popular Birchwood Lodge to Bobbi Weiss of Forest Hills, N.Y.

Catching up with the summer marriages, "Congrats" to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Katz. Bob is a Nyack resident while Joanie is formerly of Skidmore, both are now seniors here at UVM.

On a different level, the Fern Hillers extend congratulations to Marv Nierenberg who last week was awarded a Howard Prize for maintaining the second highest average in the sophomore class last year.

Also on the scholastic side, best wishes are extended to three of the Fern Hillers who have already been accepted to Medical Schools. Arnie Manheim of Burlington has been accepted at Vermont. Brad Gordon is also on the happier side these days, having been accepted at New York Medical College, Washington University in St. Louis, and New York University - Belleview Medical Center. Ken Weinstein has New York Medical and Albert Einstein under his belt.

Four other Phi Sigs are still waiting patiently. They are Jay Selcow, Lou Dan, Lou Barth and Al Mufson. They all guarantee an open house "on them" as soon as all are accepted. We wish them all the best of luck.

The brothers of Delta Psi moved to Norwich over the weekend. They had a reserved section on the 50 yard line, complete with sandwiches and coffee. Some attended parties at Norwich and some went to Brother Bruce Quimby's home (or should we say Swiss Chalet) at Mad River. All reportedly had a wonderful time.

Plans are being made for the Middlebury weekend. The Chi Psi's of Middlebury will be guests at the Delt house this weekend. Along with the buffet dinner there will be a party and entertainment on Saturday night.

AEPhi has been mighty busy, since we moved into their new house. On Sunday there was a gala Housewarming party to show off their new home.

The summer has proved very eventful for the AEPhi's. Marlene Ginsberg is engaged to Doug Sinensky, Med. Student at Bellvue Med. School, Doris (Dori) Ackerman, AEPhi alum, engaged to Aaron (Mugs) Margolis, Pi Lam at Dartmouth. Arlene Pasteelnick engaged to Stan Fleischman, Phi Sig '52. Lynne Soloff, AEPhi alum, will be married to Abe Gordon of Bridgeport, Conn., on November 7. QUARTZ CRYSTALS

How a 1¼ hour "gem-cutting" operation became an 8-minute mechanized job

PROBLEM: Preparing quartz crystals for use as electronic frequency controls calls for the highest degree of precision. So much so, in fact, that prior to World War II skilled gem-cutters were employed to do the job.

But during the war, there were not enough gem-cutters to keep up with the demand for crystals in radar, military communications and other applications.

Western Electric tackled the job of building into machines the skill and precision that had previously called for the most highly skilled operators.

SOLUTION: Here is how quartz crystals are made now—by semi-skilled labor in a fraction of the time formerly required:

A quartz stone is sliced into wafers on a reciprocating diamond-edged saw, after determination of optical and electrical axes by means of an oil bath and an X-ray machine. Hairline accuracy is assured by an orienting fixture.

The wafers are cut into rectangles on machines equipped with diamond saws. The human element is practically eliminated by means of adjustable stops and other semi-automatic features.

The quartz rectangles are lapped automatically to a thickness tolerance of plus or minus .0001". A timer prevents overlapping. Finally, edges are ground to specific length and width dimensions on machines with fully automatic microfeed systems.

Most of these machines were either completely or largely designed and developed by Western Electric engineers.

RESULTS: With skill built into the machines—with costly hand operations eliminated—this Western Electric mechanization program raised production of quartz crystals from a few thousand a year to nearly a million a month during the war years. This is just one of the many unusual jobs undertaken and solved by Western Electric engineers.

Quartz stones are cut into wafers on this diamond-edged saw, with orientation to optical axis controlled by fixture. This is just one of several types of machines designed and developed by Western Electric engineers to mechanize quartz cutting.

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

It was Saturday! It was raining. It was cold. They braved it. They got out the old galoshes, stripped the beds of the blankets. They slipped on the raincoats. Raincoats, galoshes, and blanket under arm, they walked across the campus, down the hill, past the corner cottage. They made a right turn, and as they reached the gate, they whipped out the I D cards. They went in, sat down, huddled close together.

Some of them didn't turn right at that gate though. They went straight to the locker room and had to get dressed. Pads, numbered Jerseys, cleats, had to be substituted for the raincoats, galoshes and blankets.

A cheer went up. The numbered jerseys were out there on the field. The raincoats were waiting impatiently in the stands.

The man in the striped shirt blew the whistle.

There it was, eleven students at the University of Vermont football team working as one unit to accomplish a desired goal. The rest of the University behind them working as one unit to accomplish the same goal.

No pay, no scholarships, no headlines, no trophies - just exercise and fun. Years ago a guy started this game for exercise and fun. Colleges caught hold of it. It became a monster, but not here. Here it was erercise and fun. Nobody had to pay athletes. The stands were made of wood. The field was small. No monster. This exercise and fun may not be nationally "advertised" but it was there. Isn't this what the power football schools are overlooking? An entire school, players and spectators fighting together, screaming together, exercising and funning together. They did it together. They beat UMass 27-25.

Notice, Ed Donnelly overlooked everything last Saturday night, even his ulcers.

Vermont's fourth victory marked the most football wins since 1949, when the green and the gold had a 6-2 record. If we dump Middlebury this Saturday we will have compiled our most successful gridiron year since 1897 when we were, 3-0-2.

Something big is brewing! President Borgmann has made clear his policy in regard to Yankee Conference participation by UVM. He has relayed his views to the Athletic Council which will meet next month to take action on the president's policy.

The President was out of town and could not be reached as to his plan, but next week the results will be printed.

Evansmen Initiate Drills For Coming Court Season

By MARK BERNSTEIN

With the football season drawing to a successful finish, the spotlight slowly turns toward a new season of Vermont basketball. Coach Fuzzy Evans started practice and tryouts for this years Catamount squad, November 1, the date which is set under NCAA ruling.

This years outlook is one of extreme optimism. Graduation has taken four out of the five starting players from last years team; the sole survivor being captain Keith Jampolis. But with the return of Earl Steinman, Bob Lovejoy and additional Sophomore strength the picture is far from dismal.

Toughest Schedule

The Evansmen will be playing a twenty-one game schedule that is regarded as one of the toughest in years here at UVM. Last years weak teams such as McGill, Bates, and Union have been replaced by three powerhouses; Colby, Williams and St. Anselms. Once again, the Cats will play every Yankee Conference team with the exception of Conn.

State Teams Strong

As far as state competition goes, the story is always one of doubt and upsets. St. Michaels has added a 6-7 center transfer from Seton Hall. With high scoring

Capt. Jampolis

Bob Young also back, the Purple Knights might give plenty of trouble. Norwich and Middlebury both show additional strength. Tommy Hart, top rebounder in small college basketball has returned to the Middlebury lineup after his suspension of last year. The spectacular Sonny Dennis will also be back. The Cats can look for no romps when they meet their state rivals this year.

Mainstays returning from previous seasons at UVM will be Keith Jampolis, Bob Lovejoy, Earl Steinman, Barry Stone, Rollie Massimino, Ray Flannery, and Bill King. Two sophomores that Coach Evans will be counting on in particular are Billy Mann and Art "Skippy" Burkhardt. As far as starting berths are concerned, none are definite.

It will be keen competition among all returnees and sophomores, right from the opening whistle to the end of the season.

CATNIPS

Vermont offensively will show a great amount of strength, maybe even more so than last year. On defense the problem is inexperience, but Coach Evans is confident that this also will come to par. . . The Catamounts have more height than last year with the addition of the sophomores. . . Bill King is expected to show that his one year of experience has made him a Catamount threat both defensively and offensively. . . . Out of last years seven losing games, five were lost on the foul line.

DamonThirdInYankeeConf.; Vermont Team Runs Fifth

Last Saturday the UVM Cross-Country team placed fifth at Kingston, Rhode Island in the Yankee Conference Championship meet.

The Cats placed fifth, behind first place Maine, second place Connecticut, third place Rhode Island, and fourth place New Hampshire. The University of Massachusetts captures sixth place.

Damon Third in YC

The course, which was in very good condition, is two hundred yards less than four miles and was covered by first place finisher Firlette of Maine in 20:52, Horn of Massachusetts took second, with Vermont's Larry Damon in third, Stieglitz and Dyson of Connecticut captured fourth and fifth respectively, Furrow of Maine took sixth, Rhode Island's Macquattie placed seventh, Vedeler took eighth for New Hampshire, Massachusett's Lepkowski held onto ninth, and Maine's Hanson cornered tenth.

Vermont's Grady finished 15th, followed by Wadley in 18th, Tafrate in 27th, Fitzpatrick in 33rd, and Howland in 35th.

The grouping of the Cats was similar to previous meets except for Don Grady. He seemed to have what is termed an "off day". Grady was 48 seconds behind Damon whereas in the Maine meet he was only 7 seconds behind Damon.

The score of the meet follows: Maine 58, Connecticut 69, Rhode Island 72, New Hampshire 89, Vermont 96, and Massachusetts 110.

Players,Coaches CreditUMassWin To Entire School

By Ed Willard

Does a crowd of cheering fans have any effect on a football team fighting out a tough game on the gridiron? You bet it does and you don't have to take this reporter's word for it. The University of Vermont student body did a fine job of supporting their team as the Catamounts defeated a tough UMass team last Saturday. They pleased President Borgmann, they pleased Dean Kroepsch and they they pleased the general faculty. Most important however is the fact that student support had a decided effect on the conduct of the team on the field. Some feel that cheering is "Tomfoolery" and doesn't mean much to the boys on the field. Here's what a cross section of the football team thinks and said after the Mass game;

Players Overwhelmed

Captain Ed Nemer- "The guys kept mentioning it during time outs. They really knew the students were behind them. It's no bunk that a victory is 60% the team and 40% the cheering. Everybody played a great game. It's just an example of what cheering can do."

Center Howie Braithwaite- "Best I've seen in many a year. Especially when the chips were down in the second half; they cheered all the time, not just when we were scoring.

Assistant Coach Ralph Lapointe- "I noticed it. . . the ballplayers mentioned what a difference it made."

Guard Clem Forte- "For the first time since I've been on the team, I couldn't hear the quarterback's signals and had to ask him to repeat them. It was great!"

Coach Ed Donnelly was also greatly pleased with the student response. So, from a coach's side of it- -"I thought it was wonderful. . . It all reverts back to the fact that spirits were on the outside, not on the inside."

Halfback Al McLam summed it up from the player angle.-"When we were two touchdowns down, that was the reason we came back. IT WAS A SCHOOL VICTORY."

Frosh Take Track Meet

In their fourth meet of the season last Saturday at Burlington, the freshman harriers of UVM romped over the Vermont State Aggies (known to many as the Randolph Aggies) by a 19-36 score.

It was a closely contested battle for the first position between the Kittens' Art Tauber and Randolph's Perry Hodgden. Tauber, who seems to be improving every week, nosed out his opponent by 4.3 seconds with a sparkling time of 17:19.3. Art's best time for the course had been 17:21, run in a quadrangular meet against Vergennes and Waterbury.

Coach Archie Post, who was unable to be at the meet because of an engagement in Rhode Island with the varsity, would have been well pleased to see his squad finish as they did, for in addition to first place his forces also captured third, fourth and fifth. Paul Dimick took third with a time of 18:05, and Jack Clark and Bill Collier were close behind with times of 18:07 and 18:09 respectively.

THERE WILL BE A MEETING OF ALL THOSE INTERESTED IN THE WOMEN'S SKI TEAM ON NOVEMBER 9th, 5:00 IN THE WOMEN'S PHYSICAL EDUCATION OFFICE IN WATERMAN.

VOA Volunteers Correct Vision Aid To Hunters

Other states are now following the lead of Vermont, whose State Optometric Association in 1951 initiated a program for the evaluation of hunter's vision. Members of the Vermont Optometric Association are again this year volunteering their services to any individual who presents a current Vermont hunting license to evaluate the three major visual skills necessary to safe hunting, namely; 1) Ability to distinguish fine details at a distance, (Visual Acuity). 2) Ability to recognize colors and to distinguish one from another accurately, (color vision). 3) Ability to see objects or movement to the side of any target while keeping the eyes fixed on the target, (Visual fields).

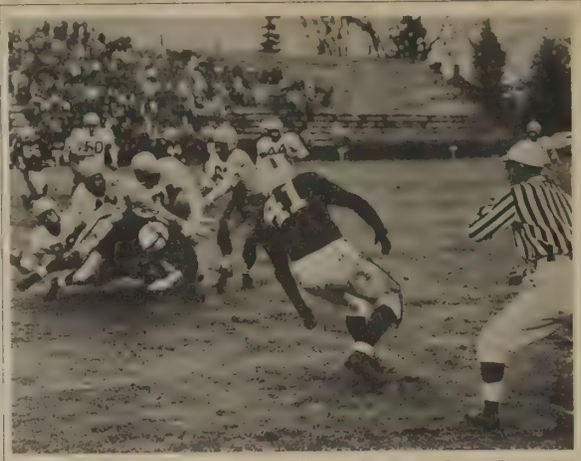
The Vermont Optometrists are rendering these professional services at no charge to the hunter as they believe this to be the best way that they may serve the public interest in helping to prevent hunting accidents where vision might be a factor. BE SURE OF YOUR TARGET

Varsity Club Aids Athletes ForManyYear

By-Norm Fishkin

Under the advisorship of Charles Traverse, the Varsity Club has, for many years, been a source of great benefit to Varsity letter athletes. Anyone who earns a letter from a particular sport automatically becomes a member and everyone who does become part of this organization takes great pride in the outstanding work and principles of it.

Many Activities



Some of the institutions provided by the Varsity Club are: Ushering at all types of sporting events sponsored by the University. Last year at the Yankee conference Track Meet the UVM Varsity Club members acted not only as ushers but also as judges for many of the contests. Another duty performed by the club is the providing of blankets for graduating athletes. One of the most important things done by this organization, which has not been mentioned as yet, is the employing of tutors for the sole purpose of giving free aid to those athletes whose marks are not up to par or who are having difficulty in a particular subject.

Varsity Club Alumni

Funds needed to support the club are raised by means of contests such as the recent "Ugly Man" Contest. Last year money was supplied by a raffle.

The Varsity Club also has a very active Alumni Association which has always given them the extra support and confidence to keep the wonderful interest in UVM athletes in the minds of the students and anyone else who is part of, or comes in contact with the University.

UVM took on University of Massachusetts last Saturday and came from behind to win 27-25.

Vermont Title To Be Decided In Tradition Tilt

"State Title or Bust" is the cry this week as the Catamounts play host to the Middlebury 11 on Centennial field Saturday. Both teams have perfect intra-state records as both teams hold wins over Norwich.

Two weeks ago on a dry field, the Vermont 11 topped the Cadets, 41-0 before an enthusiastic crowd at Northfield. This past weekend, the Middlebury team took the measure of the Cadets on a wet and muddy field by a 39-26 score. On paper it shows about 10 points in favor of the more defensive UVM team.

UVM Leads in Total

Over the years, the records show that the UVM teams have come out in front of a series that started in 1897 by a close 22-20-5 count. Last year the Middlebury team won a close 7-0 victory at Middlebury. As far as the state championships are concerned, the tally favors the home team by a 15-14 count.

See U Saturday

The wet field victory for the Middlebury forces can not give the exact indication of the strength of the team. However, the forces of coach Ed Donnelly came from behind to top a strong UVM team this past week on another wet field. With the strongest team in years, it looks from this corner that the home team will be the best team Saturday. Let's see you all (drunk) at the game to support the first state championship that UVM has had in four years.

McLam's placement tied it at 13 all. Mass marched 80 yards up the field after the next kickoff and scored on a Noble to Porter pass. Porter seemed to go outside the end zone flag on this one but he had evidently crossed the goal first. On the point after try, Clem Forte bowled over placement holder, ball and kicker and Mass led 19-13 at the half.

Cats Come From Behind

Mass seemed to have it al sewed up when early in the third period Dick Wright ran 80 yards to paydirt. The third successive placement was blocked; the score 25-13 Mass. A less spirited team would have thrown in the sponge at this time but the Catamounts with a rain-soaked but vociferous student body cheering them on clawed right back. Roy Williams recovered a Mass fumble on the Mass 41 Semans passed to McLam in the end zone and Mac converted to make the score 25-20 Mass Vermont then made another bi as Nemer and McLam ran to the 14 but here Semans fumbled The rock ribbed Vermont held th Redmen and a poor Mass pur found the Cats in possession o their own 29. Five plays later McLam swept left end to scor and kicked the placement to pu Vermont ahead to stay 27-25. a time rapidly ran out. A little temper display marred the game waning moments as the Redme sought to accomplish with fist what couldn't be done by clea hard football. A never say di Catamount eleven had done 27-25 over the early season down ers of Harvard.

Plans Being Formulated For New Girls' Dormitory

To House 400 UVM Women

By Carol L. Chase

There is a possibility that ground will be broken for new women's dormitories here at UVM in the near future. President Carl Borgmann in his address concerning the raise in tuition states "...there is the possibility that ground can be broken for a new girls' dormitory or dormitories, housing up to 400 girls by next fall."

A building committee of faculty and administration has been doing vital research as to cost, approval of site location, style of architecture, and other general specifications which have to be made before actual building can begin. The plans, when completed, will have to be approved by the trustees.

Architectural Plans

As a starting point dormitories from Radcliffe College, University of Connecticut, University of New Hampshire, University of Wisconsin and Castleton Teachers College, Castleton, Vermont, were inspected by the building committee of faculty and administration to determine what is typical in new women's dormitories throughout the country.

The architects, Freeman, French, and Freeman of Burlington, have drawn preliminary sketches showing their interpretation of the new dormitories. They propose a style of contemporary architecture. Their plans call for three units with a lounge and dining room on the ground floors of each of these units. The bedrooms will be on the upper floors. Each unit will consist of four floors.

Fund Aids

Cost data were compiled on present dormitories. It was found that the cost of operation per student in smaller dormitories such as Robinson Hall, Lyman Hall, and Sanders Hall is higher than the operation of larger dormitories such as Coolidge which houses 140 women. Therefore, the consolidation of the smaller houses into one large dormitory is more practical.

David D. Demsky, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, said in an interview that there are at least fourteen vital steps which must be incorporated in the construction procedures for new buildings to be erected on the campus. Among the preliminary steps are the submitting of plans, analysis of the plans, and later the actual development of the plans in the finished building.

The most serious handicap at the moment is arranging the finances for the new construction. President Borgmann has indicated that he is "searching for outside help to find the necessary fund."

Forty Six Teams Here For Annual Debate Tourney

By Robert W. Smith

The Ninth Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament will be held at UVM next week. Teams representing forty six colleges and universities from nine states and Canada will expound on the national debate question, "Resolved that the United States should extend diplomatic relations to the Communist Government of China."

The tournament will open Friday, November 19, with registration of the teams. The large number of teams participating reveals the fact that this is the largest tournament of its kind in the East.

The first round of debates is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday evening, and the second immediately follows at 8:45 P.M.

Saturday is to be a full day with three rounds scheduled. The first debate on Saturday will begin at 10:15 A.M., the second at 1:30 p.m., and the third at 3:30 P.M. There will be approximately seventy debates going on at the same time in rooms and buildings all over the campus.

Following the last round of debates on Saturday a banquet will be held for all those participating in the tournament. At the banquet

New Artist Series Ready To Roll, Announces Borgmann

Have $20,000 Annual Budget

By Max Ansbacher

The George Bishop Lane Artist Series will be managed next year by the present Program Series Committee according to President Carl W. Borgmann.

The $300,000 fund was presented to the school last year by Mrs. George B. Lane, wife of the late UVM alumnus, the stipulation that the interest from it be used to bring an artist series of high calibre to the University. Approximately $12,000 will be made available in addition to $8000 in ticket sales.

President Borgmann asked the Program Series Committee "to form the nucleus of the Working Committee of the Lane Artist Series" and to " add to the present staff of students in accordance with my organizational plan." The plan listed six positions for students.

However, the President stated that the organizational plan was for this year only and "will be reviewed in May of 1955. . .and will be revised and amplified at that time." The purpose of the working committee is to " present an artist's series of high quality in keeping with the terms of Mrs. Lane's request."

Advisory Committee

In addition to the working committee the President has made provisions for an advisory committee, whose members will be nominated by the working committee and appointed by the President. Three ex-officio members are provided for in COSA; Donald Hardy, Public Relations Director G. Richard Hopwood, and Assistant Treasurer George Clerkin.

The purpose of the advisory committee will be "to give advice on the selection of programs and to supply ideas, comments and criticisms." The committee members will be "faculty and staff members, townspeople and students who are respresentative of general interest areas."

WUS Drive Nears End; Sororities Stage Midway

By Susan Wakefield

Only four days remain to make your contribution to the World University Service. The drive will end Sunday.

During this week the sororities on campus are raising money for WUS by operating booths in the halls of Waterman. Last year they contributed $177 earned in this way.

Barbara Weiss, and Pat Henderson, co-chairman of the special events committee said: "We appreciate the wonderful cooperation the sororities have given WUS, not only this year, but in our past drives."

Sorority Booths

Sigma Gamma is selling cookies and apples; Tridelt girls are offering lollipops; Alpha Delta Pi bubblegum and Alpha Epsilon Phi candy apples. Professional shoe shines are being given by the Pi Beta Phi girls.

At the Gamma Phi booth, the boy and girl whose telephone numbers are drawn from those entered, will win dates with Sandy Perry or Walt Johnson. One may win a free dinner for two by guessing the number of beans in Kappa Alpha Theta's jar.

Alpha Chi Omega is selling candy kisses from their magic wishing well.

WUS Wheels

The fraternities are contributing to WUS by running a taxi service from Redstone to the main campus.

The UVM drive for World University Service has been organized with Marsha Pearl as general chairman. Working with her are division captains. Captain of the publicity division is Mickey Rotanelli; co-captains of special events are Barbara Weiss and Pat Henderson. Captains of the soliciting division have been appointed

May Scrap Future All - University Open Houses

By Theodore Rauch

As a result of the poor participation by the students at the second annual "Spookoff", further all-university functions may be abandoned. Only 280 people attended the affair, resulting in a $40 loss by Boulder Society, its sponsor.

Contrary to popular opinion on the campus, President Carl W. Borgmann doesn't state that we must have these affairs. They had their inception a few years ago at a meeting, between President Borgmann and the student leaders to develop closer ties among the student body. The President decided that these All-University functions would develop a feeling of oneness among the students and give a social outlet to those students not connected with fraternities and other clubs on campus. His only stipulation was that all fraternity houses be closed the night of the affair. The President set aside $1000 for all of the expenses except deco-

Cats Whip Panthers To End Grid Season

Vermont crushed Middlebury last week 30-6 to close out the 1954 grid season with a 5-1-1 record. Instrumental in the team's success has been UVM's potential Little All-American, Eddie Beck (33), above. Key block was thrown by Dick Jannoni (11), on ground.

By ED WILLARD

The Vermont eleven closed its football season in a blaze of glory as it trounced a Middlebury Panther eleven 30-6 before a crowd in excess of 8000 fans. It was UVM's fifth straight victory. It was a great UVM line stopping the Panthers almost cold and springing Eddie Beck, the "Waltham Flash" loose time and time again that won the day. Seniors Walt Johnson, Al Stevens, Clem Forte, Howie Braithwaite, Ed Nemer, Mike Semans, Tony Calorusso and "Plumber" Bill Tresler all played their hearts out for this one as Vermont held Midd to a total of 27 yards gained from scrimmage during the entire game with the Panthers loosing more ground than they gained in the second half. For Beck, it was a great day as in addition to 124 yards gained on the ground, he passed, punted beautifully and played a fine game on defense. Vermont was hurt at the outset when Al McLam, Beck's running partner injured his hip. Dick

Cinema - Art Club Presents Various Films And Comments

The Cinema-Art Club of Burlington will have its meeting Saturday, November 20 and Sunday, November 21, 8 P.M., sharp at 75 Bilodeau Court (off East Avenue, at foot of street). Guests are very welcome.
The program follows:

"The feeling of Rejection." The story of a girl who as a child learned not to risk social disapproval by taking independent action, and who now is unable to assert herself. The help of a psychiatrist finally enables her to regain a normal way of life.

Produced by the National Film Board of Canada, and shown through the cooperation of the Vermont State Department of Health. 21 minutes.

Dr. Elizabeth Kunder, Assistant Professor of Psychiatry will lead the discussion on the film.

"The Cathedral of Chartres." French architecture and sculpture. 10 minutes.

Dr. Allan Gowans, Director of the Fleming Museum will comment on this film.

"Yoshi No Yama." A classical Japanese dance in the Kabuki and Ruyo tradition, using face masks, and filmed in color. Explained and danced by Nakatani of the Yamamuro School in Osaki. 20 minutes

Mr. Aki Hotta from Japan will comment on this film.

"Spain-Land and People." 10 minutes.

Dr. Wilhelm Raab who has recently visited Spain will comment on this film. He will also show some color slides taken by him in Barcelona and Madrid, including works of the controversial architect Gaudi.

Next SCA Meeting To Be Held Sunday

The next general meeting of the Student Christian Association will be held Sunday, November 14. A panel discussion on the topic "Life-More Abundently" will be the program of the evening. It will take place following the supper at six p.m. The charge for evening fifty cents to cover the cost of the supper.

UVM Band Gives Concert Sunday For W U S Drive

The UVM Band will give a concert for the benefit of the World University Service this Sunday, at two-thirty. The concert will be presented in the Ira Allen Chapel. Admission is fifty cents and all the proceeds will be donated to the WUS fund drive.

The band is composed of UVM students from all the colleges including AROTC and AFROTC Cadets. The man who has been leading the band at all football games is Don Bicknell, the Drum Major. Don is helped by a staff which includes Ann Mercury, manager; Howard Klinkostein, assistant-manager; Carolyn Silsby, Ruth Scherlock, and Lila Hart as librarians. The band is under the direction of Dr. Joseph F. Lechnyr, with Captain David E. Barnett, U.S.A., serving as advisor.

The program will include scenes from "The King and I", Ballet Parisian by Offenbach, Song from "Moulin Rouge", Victor Herbert Favorites and will be concluded with "Cotton Babes."

More than four out of five vacation trips in the U.S. are by automobile.

the results of all the debates will be announced for the first time.

Jerry Quinn, Student Chairman, and Susan Wakefield, Assistant Student Chairman, are desirous of getting as many chairmen time-keepers as they can. This particular tournament requires 400 time-keepers, so any and all cooperation from the student body will be appreciated.

Many upperclassmen have served as time-keepers at previous tournaments and they will be asked to help again.

WHO ARE INDUSTRY'S TOP YOUNG SCIENTISTS?

Ten men between the ages of 26 and 40 were featured in a recent national magazine article which presented a portrait of the young scientist in America today. These particular men are a sample of the most brilliant young scientific minds in industry.

It's interesting to note that three of the ten are with Bell Telephone Laboratories, three with General Electric and one each with four other companies.

The variety of opportunity in research and other phases of telephone work has always attracted an unusually high percentage of the nation's best young men.

Consult your Placement Officer about opportunities with Bell Laboratories . . . also with the Bell Telephone Companies, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation. Your Placement Officer will be glad to give you details.

FRATERNITIES FAIL IN SUPREME COURT

BIAS QUESTION INVOLVED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—The Supreme Court refused today to hear an appeal from a lower court ruling upholding the right of the State University of New York to bar national fraternities and sororities from its campuses.

No substantial Federal question was involved, the high court said, in a brief order dismissing the appeal of a group of Greek-letter societies.

The court's action left standing a decision by a three-judge Federal Court that a university edict requiring social organizations on the campuses to sever their affiliation with national groups was a proper exercise of its authority.

Also involved was a ruling of the university's trustees that no social organization would be allowed to operate that barred students "on account of race, color, religion, creed, national origin or other artificial criteria.

The ban affected more than 20,000 students at twenty-two units of the university, including eleven state teachers colleges, six agricultural and technical institutes and two medical colleges. Twelve other units, known as "contract colleges," were not involved since they are operated by other colleges, universities and communities on behalf of the state.

The edict of the trustees was issued in October, 1953. Its primary purpose was to abolish racial discrimination at the state institutions.

Denial of Rights hCarged

The Suit was brought by Earl Webb, president of Sigma Tau Gamma, and Delta Kappa, Inc., Phi Sigma Epsilon, Alumni Association of Iota Chapter of Alpha Kappa Kappa, Inc., Pi Kappa Sigma, Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority, Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority, Theta Sigma Upsilon Sorority and Roger Mueller.

It was their contention that the university's ban was a denial of civil rights and of freedom of speech, assembly and religion guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution. They also contended that it deprived them of due process and equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Judge Augustus N. Hand, who since has died," delivered the opinion of the three-judge court. He held that the board of trustees seemed "clearly within its supervisory powers in making the decision that social organizations, other than strictly local autonomous ones subject without question to local control by the university, are detrimental to the educational environment at units of the State University." Prior decisions of the Supreme Court, it was held, had settled the constitutional questions involved.

Dr. William S. Carlson, president of the board of trustees, testified at the hearing on the fraternities' suit for an injunction, that the immediate concern of the university was specific instances of racial and religious discrimination by fraternities and sororities. He asserted that restrictions or prohibitions against national fraternities or sororities were established policy at many universities and colleges.

Nathaniel L. Goldstein, Attorney General of New York, contended in briefs filed with the Supreme Court that the regulation did not constitute a general public prohibition against social organizations and affected no one except in his capacity as a student at a state university. He argued that the Supreme Court had settled the question of the basic authority of universities to impose such restrictions when it upheld a law abolishing fraternities and other secret societies at the University of Mississippi.

'Gratified,' Carlson Says

ALBANY, Nov. 8 (AP)—Dr. Carlson said today he was "gratified by the court's decision.

"We were confident the court would uphold our action, which permits orderly administration of student affairs," he added. "We can continue to keep discrimination from our State University colleges and to provide a healthy social life for all students."

Compliance by Most

Special to The New York Times.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 8—Former Supreme Court Justice Clifford H. Searl, who is counsel for Sigma Tau Gamma and Alpha Kappa Kappa, said that many of the fraternities and social groups at the colleges of the university throughout the state had ended national affiliations but that some still had not done so.

Workshop Spotlights UVM On Radio Show Every Sunday

By Myron Lench

If you had your radio on Sunday afternoon you may have stopped what you were doing when "Cotton Babes," the Jerkewalk theme, suddenly came on. If you listened further you would have heard the program announced as, "Spotlight On UVM."

"Spotlight On UVM" is the new Sunday radio show designed to acquaint Vermonters with their university, its students, and their activities. The show is for the enjoyment of UVM students, but was primarily created as a public relations service.

It is a documentary review of the previous week's events and a preview of the coming week's event's, on campus. These activities are selected by a series of taped, on-the-spot recording.

Student Workers

The show is directed by Professor Lewis of the Speech Department and as a product of the Radio Workshop. The participating students are Hal Greenfader, Rudy Deetjen, Midge Halfinger, Ann Terry, and engineer, Ed Hugent. These students, equipped with tape recorders, document the campus life of UVM.

"Spotlight On UVM" can be heard each Sunday on WCAX at 12:45 P.M., on WJOY at 1:00 p.m., and on WDOT at 1:30 P.M.

Past Programs

The first show featured the Norwich pep rally - the band, cheeers, speeches, and all. The Mortar Board dance was then described by two girls in conversation.

Professor Frederick Marston, IFC advisor, discussed rushing. Other club news andplans were announced through interviews.

On the following Sunday "Spotlight On UVM" featured an interview with Max Kaminsky, leader of the Jazz concert band, and the band manager. No music could be taped from the concert because of recording commitments and union rules.

Although the show is now heard on all of the Burlington stations, plans for wider coverage are in the making. It is hoped that "Spotlight On UVM" will be broadcast from local stations all over the state and possibly even into New Hampshire, New York, and Massachusetts.

Estonian Student Here On WUS Scholarship ; Endorses Project

By Susan Wakefield

A World University Service scholarship has enabled Toomas Laaspere, an Estonian refugee, to study electrical engineering here at the University of Vermont. Such scholarships are part of the WUS Refugee Service, the only international agency concerned with aiding student refugees.

Tom, as he is called by his friends here, is a tall blonde young man. He was born in an Estonian town near the Russian border where his father was a city official. When Tom was twelve years old, the Russians took over Estonia.

Russian Arrest

Tom relates this story about the period of Russian occupation: "One day I was visiting my uncle's home, when the Russian police came and arrested my Uncle's family. My uncle was hiding elsewhere, for we had been suspected before hand that the Russians would arrest him. When he heard that they had seized his family, he gave himself up and asked to rejoin his wife and children. He never saw them again. At the railroad station where they were loaded into cattle cars to be transported to Russia, the families were all separated. In this one night the Russians deported one per cent of the Estonian population."

Displaced Person

In 1941 the Germans invaded Estonia. Three years later the Russians reentered the country. Tom fled Estonia, and after the war was over, ended up in a German displaced persons camp.

Through hard work and obstinacy Tom managed to get through high school. Taught by the most educated of the refugees at the camp. After high school Tom faced a dilemma.

"I had no money to go on to college. I was completely alone in the world for my parents were left in Estonia. I still don't know where they are or whether they are still living."

However there was some hope for the future. Tom applied for one of the World University Service scholarships awarded to outstanding refugee students. He was chosen to come to the United States to study at the University of Vermont.

Because Tom had been conscripted to the German labor service while Estonia was occupied by the Nazi army, the McCarren Act almost prevented his entry into the United States.

Tom arrived in New York in June of 1951. He came to Vermont immediately in order to work in a resort hotel. Basin Harbor, which is 30 miles from Burlington. In the fall of that year Tom entered the electrical engineering course. He maintains approximately a 95 average.

Red Suchman Wins Ugly Man Contest

Erwin "Red" Suchman of Alpha Epsilon Pi won the recent "Ugly Man'" contest sponsored by the Varsity Club with a total of 191 votes. He was presented with a trophy at the jazz concert last Saturday. Barry Stone of Phi Sigma Delta and Joe Sdala of Kappa Sigma took second and third place with 163 and 136 votes respectively.

The gross earnings of the Varsity Club was $37.55, which will go toward a tutoring service for UVM athletes.

Choir Needs More Tenors And Basses

Additional singers, especially tenors and basses, are needed to augment the University Choir in choruses from Handel's "Messiah" and Bach's "Christmas Oratorio", which compose part of the program for the Christmas concert. Men will be accepted without tryout, provided they can harmonize with the ensemble. Some women who have already tried out will be invited to participate if the balance of parts permits; others who have not tried out, may do so by appointment.

The concert by the University Choir and Orchestra will take place Sunday afternoon, December 12. New members are requested to attend one rehearsal a week, preferably Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel.

Fraternities... Obligations

The United States Supreme Court refused Monday to hear an appeal from a lower court ruling which upheld the right of the State University of New York to bar national fraternities and sororities from its campuses.

The ban was issued last October by the Board of Trustees at the State University of New York. Its primary purpose was to abolish racial discrimination at the state institutions, specifically racial discrimination which stemmed from social organizations that barred students " on account of race, creed, color, national origin or other artificial criteria."

The man instrumental in bringing about the state university edict is William S. Carlson, President of the State University of New York. Carlson preceeded Carl W. Borgmann as President of this University. We are proud to be able to say that President Borgmann and the University Senate have seen fit to initiate the same legislation at the University of Vermont State Agricultural College.

Last semester the University Senate ruled in favor of a motion presented by professor Lewis Feuer which asked for the banning from this campus of all those fraternities and sororities which maintained there selectivity clauses for more than seven years after the ruling received final approval. Since the passage in the Senate, the proposal has been presented by President Borgmann to the Board of Trustees of the University. The Board has reserved judgement since that time, having decided to present the question to the student body for their recommendation. It is believed that the students will be polled during registration for second semester. At that time we hope that the student decision is in favor of the University action.

This particular question, as important as it is, is only one facet of a much larger area... the area of the relation of the fraternity and sorority, particularly the fraternity, to the parent organization, i.e.- the university.

Ideally, and this ideal is expressed in the statement of policy of the National Interfraternity Council, the fraternity is expected to function within the framework of the University of which it is apart. Ideally, membership is decided on the merits of the individuals involved.

Obviously, most fraternities on this campus do not abide by the first ideal, and many do not live up to the second. We are practical enough to realize that perfection is never completely attained, but in these cases we seem to be avoiding rather than approaching the ideal.

To cite a few examples:

-five fraternities on this campus maintain discriminatory clauses.

-fraternities (and independents) constantly abuse the liquor regulations of the University.

The Social Chairman of IFC states, in reference to the recent poor attendance at the Smookoff, " The IFC should be asked for approval of the dated for these (all-university) functions. The fraternities were deprived of parties that night."

Who in blazes do fraternities think they are? Policy on this campus is, or should be, decided by the Faculty and Administration. If fraternities and sororities cannot reconcile themselves to this fact, then they have no place in this, an educational institution.

Fraternities have backed the Administration to the wall...it's time for some defensive action, President Borgmann, before the round is lost.

"Well, Horace, I'm going to be pretty busy this winter - See you next Spring.

Nu Beta Pi Holds Formal Initiation

At a formal initiation meeting November third, six new members were admitted to the engineering honor society, Nu Beta Pi.

The new members; Earl Schiring, '55, Robert Webber, '55, Toomas Laaspie, '56, Philip Grover, '56, Mervin Merriman, '56, and Gordon Hoxie, '56, were chosen on the basis of outstanding scholarship and exemplary character.

The initiation was presided over by President Nelson Stiles, Vice-President Lawrence T. Sullivan, Secretary Melton Miller, and David Perrin. Professor Stephan Knight, faculty advisor, Dean McKee, and other faculty members were present.

The Faculty Speaks

Our guest faculty columnist this week is Professor George Dykhuizen, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy.

An arresting chapter in Horace Kallen's The Education of Free Men is the one entitled "High School and College in the Social Prolongation of Infancy." In this section of his book, Professor Kallen argues that the ordinary college does not do all it could do in helping students attain intellectual and emotional maturity. Rather, through its paternalism the average college creates situations in which students are treated as though they were little children, and through its tolerance allows situations in which students frequently disport themselves as though they were in grade school. The connotations given such terms as "college man", "college women", "collegiate" reflect this state of affairs on American campuses. To be collegiate is to belong to a favored and pampered class, to wear "collegiate" clothes, to use "collegiate" speech, to drive "collegiate" cars, to conduct one's self with questionable taste, and to take one's responsibility lightly and "get by" with it.

Some other areas of experience contrast sharply in this respect with the schools. Professor Kallen mentions two. Religion is one of these, the armed services are the other. Traditionally, Christianity has assumed that when a girl or boy has reached the age of twelve or thereabouts, he has attained his " years of discretion " and is to be held responsible for his acts: At this age, the child may be "confirmed" or "baptised" or otherwise admitted into the church with the full understanding that he is answerable before his God for what he does. In Judaism, a boy of thirteen becomes Bar Mitzvah, a member of the congregation in full adult standing and responsible before his Creator for what he does or does not do. The armed services draft a boy when he is eighteen, train the competent ones for responsible positions, and in a very short time make them lieutenants, captains, majors, and colonels with all the duties and responsibilities which are attached to these grades.

There is plenty of evidence that the age-period covered by the years in high school and college is one of immense potentiality and that maturity and responsibility need not be put off till some later date. Profeesor Kallen cites some cases: "Benjamin Franklin was on his own at twelve, and hawking his own verses on the streets of Boston at thirteen. Thomas Jefferson became the head of his own family and the planner of his own career before he was thirteen .... Blaise Pascal had devised his arithmetical machine at nineteen. Horatio Nelson went to sea at thirteen and commanded a ship at fifteen. Montcalm and Wolfe were generals at sixteen. Lafayette was one at nineteen .... Galileo was seventeen when he determined the law of the pendulum ... Edison, Einstein, Leibnitz, Darwin and Spinoza came into their vocations before they were twenty. "

The truth, as Professor Kallen conceives it, is that high school and college youth are capable of far more mature and worthwhile experiences than the schools and colleges in America are ready to admit. If this judgement is correct, then university life, curricular and extra-curricular, can stand some drastic changes. So far as our campus goes, I suggest as an initial point of attack those extra-curricular activities which to me seem to reflect the triumph of the child over the adult in the college student, such activities, namely, as beauty queen contest, ugly man contest, peerades and other cup-winning efforts. It is a melancholy thought that these and similar juvenile activities are on the increase rather than on the decline at our university.

The Wright Way

By Gary Wright

While romping playfully across the campus toward ivy-covered Billings, I was beshocked and astounded to see three zombie-like creatures somberly approach. One of them seemed hideously familiar. I ventured a salutation.

"Quo vadis, padre? "

I turned aside to hide my guffaws. (They are old and worn, and I was ashamed)

Silence.

" Oh tell me, most passionate ones, what brings you forth in such a state of uncontrollable mirth? "

I turned aside to hide Snickers, my roommate. (A most pompous clout)

"Hour test! East Hall! Urk, " they entoned together.

"Urk? I asked hopefully.

"Urk and phsaw, " they answered.

I was cauterized.

"Sayers of dirty words, " I cried as I made a break for wall.

I finished my trek to East Hall (non-ivy covered) in silent contemplation of my toenails. There, a surprise awaited. It is still standing, but down the hall hurtled a wild-eyed apparition, and did in those confines and with a madman's voice, cry,

" HAVOC! " and slipping on a dog, crashed into a pillar.

Being a naturally sensitive person, I was Easily Upset. This so confused the instructor that he called Rapidly and In Succession. I answered to neither and promptly went to sleep. I was just entering a gigantic hall bedecked with shimmering foundation garments, when a cry rung out. (Or a rung out cry, allysame)

"Hour gest, hour test, whup ho. "

Two students in the front row immediately turned to stone. One girl smiled primly. Another decomposed. Someone broke into hysterical laughter and someone else exploded in a cloud of Vat 69.

The air cleared and through the carnage struck the instructor. He passed amon the living and upright pieces of parchment and mad it known that we shoul mark them with signs an characters. He scribed o the board strange words turned and smiled.

" Ho and ho, " thusly di he spake.

"Where in the bright-eyed Buick did he drag that from, a scholarly voice asked.

Silence.

I stared fixedly at th cold words. Short bits o Mother Goose and whole book of the Koran dashed Pel Mell through my mind. (Smoke versions) Then a light, a inner glow, my glazed eye balls shone with a might knowledge. I had to go t the men's room.

Intercollegiate roundup

Conflicts

A plan to eliminate conflicts in mid-term and final examinations will be put into effect this year at Pace College. The basic idea of this plan is to eliminate any conflict that may arise. The student can be assured that he will have no more than two tests in any one day. Under the new schedule the exams will be 100 minutes long instead of the normal two-hour exams.

Probation

Students on probation will not be automatically prohibited from extra-curricular activities, except in the case of inter-collegiate activities, announced Dean Vander Lugt, at Westminster College (Pennsylvania).

A new ruling presented by an advisory committee and approved by the faculty asserts that the regulation concerning probationary periods will be administered by the academic dean upon reviewing each student's individual record.

Foreign Service

A course of study in Foreign Service, preparing men and women for diplomatic and commercial assignments overseas, was announced recently by Baylor University. President W.R. White said that the new major field of study has been accomplished by correlating courses in a number of the university's departments. Economics, history, philosophy, political science, and sociology are mainly tied into the study program.

Liberal Art Engineers

Engineering students at the University of Detriot now must complete a number of philosophy courses before they receive their degree. The idea seems to be to give the engineering student a broader background in liberal arts before he completes his school work.

This is in line with what other specialized or technical colleges are attempting. Throughout the East much news concerns giving a technical student a broad education. Other universities are considering experimental programs in this field and some will make up schedules permitting such a plan for next year.

On The Other Hand

In response to a demand by industry for engineers with more basic training in physics and mathematics, Pennsylvania State College has approved establishment of a curriculum in Engineering Science. This demand, has resulted largely fro the rapid growth of industry and government research and development labs during the past few years. It is expected that the first degrees in this new course will be issued in 1956.

Quote

Quote of the Week.... "Changing the name of Lowell Textile Institute to its new designation, 'Lowell Technological Institute of Massachusetts' is more suitable since it implies a greater breadth of its services than does its former name," stated President Martin J. Lydon.

Forty Percent Of Vt. Students AwardedGrants

Forty percent of the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College have been awarded scholarship aid totaling $383,230 for the 1954-55 college year, a report of the Committee on Student Aid reveals.

The report, made at a meeting of the University Senate today, showed that 923 UVM students are benefiting from scholarship aid. Of this total, only 64 (seven percent) are out-of-state students who have been awarded $26,500 (seven percent) of the over $380,000 total.

In all, 1201 grants were made with 278 duplicates making the net total of 923. The average scholarship aid amounts to $415.20, reflecting an increase from the 1953-54 average of $385.68.

Breakdown of the figures shows that $208,350 of the scholarship total represents state aid to 706 students, including medical, senatorial, and agriculture scholarships, and scholarships to elementary and junior high education students.

Scholarships from the University to 418 students amounted to $140,978, with $72,875 from the Wilbur Fund constituting the largest aid source here. This Wilbur Fund total represents an increase of more than $22,000 over Wilbur Fund aid given in 1953-54.

Rounding out the scholarship picture are special gifts totaling $26,100 awarded to 77 students. Largest aid source here is $11,565 in Alumni Memorial Scholarships paid to 24 students.

In addition to scholarship aid, a total of $105,511.98 was made available to students in loans during 1953-54. Student repayments of loans totaled $64,430.11 during the same year.

European Travel Offered At Low Student Rates

By Elaine Grossman

Girls, have you ever had the opportunity to travel through Europe? No, most of you haven't been out of the United States. Here is your chance of a lifetime to take that long trip that you have dreamed about so often.

The Simmons Tours of New York are your sponsors. The trip takes place in the summer, and it usually lasts for ten weeks. Just think--ten weeks packed with adventure and joviality! Eleven college girls are chosen to go and they decide the places they wish to visit. The most widely visited countries are: England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Spain and Italy. When you decide upon those countries you wish to see, the Simmons Tours will map out an itinerary.

You pay your expenses in advance, so you don't have to carry a large sum of money with you.

If you want further information about the Simmons Tours, contact Audrey Reuben, the UVM representative, AEØ, 371 Main Street.

The instructor strode among us, armed with a shield and a short handled axe, chopping off the hands of those who still wrote.

I was silent for a time. Then with a great shriek I came erect and hurtling out the door with Ate by my side come hot from hell, did in those confines and with a madman's voice, cry,

Did You Know?

Did you know...that the University of Vermont was the first college in America whose charter expressly forbade that any religious sect should be given perference in the institution? Other colleges (notably Columbia) had provided earlier that no one was to be denied an education because of his religious beliefs; but the UVM charter of 1791 as drawn up by the state legislature went beyond this somewhat negative provision to require that the by-laws of the university should give preference to no denomination. In keeping with the spirit of this ruling, the legislature appointed as the first board of trustees, not a group of clergymen representing an established or otherwise favored church, but a group of thirteen public-spirited citizens, only three of whom were clergymen. One was a Baptist, one an Episcopalian, and one a Congregationalist.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "Barefoot Boy With Cheek," etc.)

DECEMBER AND MAY: ACT I

Of all the creatures that inhabit the earth, none is so fair, so warm, so toothsome, as a coed.

This is a simple fact, well-known to every campus male, and, to most campus males, a source of rejoicing. But not to all. To some, the creamy brows and twinkling limbs of coeds are a bane and a burden. To whom? To professors, that's whom.

Professors, according to latest scientific advice, are human. Stick them and they bleed, pinch them and they hurt, ring a dinner bell and they salivate, comfront them with a round young coed and their ears go back, even as yours and mine.

But, by and large, they contain themselves. After all, they are men of high principle and decorum, and besides, the board of regents has got stoolies all over. So, by and large, they contain themselves.

But not always. Every now and then a coed will come along who is just too gorgeous to resist, and a professor — his clutch worn out from years of struggle — will slip and fall. White though his hair, multitudinous though his degrees, Phi Beta Kappa though his key, he is as lovesick, moonstruck, and impaled as any freshman.

But he's far worse off than any freshman. After all, a freshman can thump his leg, put on his linen duster, and take out after the coed with mad abandon. But what can the poor smitten prof do? How, in his position, can he go courting a young girl undergraduate?

In this column and the next one, I am going to deal with this difficult question. I will relate to you, in the form of a two act play, an account of a professor's attempt to woo a coed.

The scene is a typical office in a typical liberal arts building on a typical campus. In this shabby setting, we find two men, Professors Twonkey and Phipps. They are lumpy and bent, in the manner of English lit professors.

PHIPPS: Twonkey, a terrible thing has happened to me. A terrible, ghastly thing! I've fallen in love with a coed.

TWONKEY: Now, now, that's not so terrible.

PHIPPS: Oh, but it is. Miss McFetridge—for that is her name—is a student, a girl of nineteen. How would her parents feel if they knew I was gawking at her and refusing my food and writing her name on frosty windowpanes with my fingernail?

TWONKEY: Come now, Phipps, no need to carry on so. You're not the first teacher to cast warm eyes at a coed, you know.

PHIPPS: You mean it's happened to you too?

TWONKEY: But of course. Many times.

PHIPPS: What did you do about it?

TWONKEY: Looked at their knees. It never fails, Phipps. No matter how pretty a girl is, her knees are bound to be knobby and bony and the least romantic of objects.

PHIPPS: Not Miss McFetridge's—for that is her name. They are soft and round and dimpled. Also pink.

TWONKEY: Really? Well, I'll tell you something, Phipps. If I ever found a girl with pink knees, I'd marry her.

PHIPPS: It is my fondest wish, but how can I, a professor of fifty, start a courtship with a girl of 19?

TWONKEY: Very simple. Ask her to come to your office for a conference late tomorrow afternoon. When she arrives, be urbane, be charming. Ask her to sit down. Give her a cigarette.

PHIPPS: A Philip Morris.

TWONKEY: But of course.

PHIPPS: I just wanted to be sure you mentioned the name. They're paying for this column.

TWONKEY: Give her a Philip Morris.

PHIPPS: That's right.

TWONKEY: Then light her Philip Morris and light one yourself. Say some frightfully witty things about English lit. Be gay. Be insouciant. Keep her laughing for an hour or so. Then look at your watch. Cry out in surprise that you had no idea it was this late. Insist on driving her home.

PHIPPS: Yes, yes?

TWONKEY: On the way home, drive past that movie house that shows French films. Stop your car, as though on a sudden impulse. Tell her that you've heard the movie was delightfully Gallic and naughty. Ask her if she'd like to see it.

PHIPPS: Yes, yes?

TWONKEY: After the movie, say to her in a jocular, offhand way that after such a fine French movie, the only logical thing would be a fine French dinner. Take her to a funny little place you know, with candles and checked tablecloths. Ply her with burgundy and Philip Morris. Be witty. Be gay. Be Gallic . . . How can a nineteen year old girl resist such blandishments?

PHIPPS: Twonkey, you're a genius! This will be like shooting fish in a barrel . . . But I wonder if it isn't taking unfair advantage of the poor little innocent.

TWONKEY: Nonsense, Phipps. All's fair in love and war.

PHIPPS: You're right, by George. I'll do it!

(So ends Act I. Next week, Act II)

rations and the orchestra. These functions are sponsored by various groups on campus, and will be continued only as long as the students show an interest in them.

Quotes

According to Tony Rockhill, chairman of the Social Committee of IFC, "the IFC should be asked for approval of the dates for these functions." Since the fraternities were not consulted about the affair a general boycott of the latter resulted. Reese Midgely, a member of Boulder Society stated that "these functions are only good when backed by the whole school." Mr. Rockhill said that the "IFC should have been consulted to decide on a date for the party. The fraternities were deprived from having parties that night."

The few people who attended the affair had an enjoyable evening. Free rides in the Flying Club airplane were won by Liz Johnson, Bob Chapman, Liz Milner and Janet Collins. Tickets to the Middlebury-Vermont jazz session were given to Dave Noyes, Sandra Brink, and Ted Zeitlin.

NOW! A filter cigarette real smokers can enjoy!

WINSTON

FINER FILTER!

FINER FLAVOR!

KING SIZE, TOO!

Winston tastes good— like a cigarette should!

■ Winston brings flavor back to filter smoking —full, rich, tobacco flavor! No wonder college smokers are flocking to Winston—on campuses across the country! Along with real flavor—the kind you've been missing in filter smokes —Winston brings you a finer filter. This exclusive Winston filter is unique, different, truly superior! It works so effectively, yet doesn't "thin" the taste or flatten the flavor. Winstons are king-size, too, for extra filtering action—and easy-drawing for extra good taste. Try a pack of Winstons!

A TOWNSMAN'S GUIDE TO country creatures - to help the Cliff Dwellers among us to feel at home in Vermont.

a HEN

A HEN

The hen saunters through life, pecking her way in toothless bliss. One is bound to admit that a hen's brain is not a very large object. Nothing to choke a horse with, certainly, or to weigh the hen down seriously. The egg is the hen's answer to the atom bomb. Whether a hen is a lady, or not can be seen by the ease and grace, or lack of these, with which she tosses off an egg. The patrician biped lands on her posterity with the ineffable preoccupation of Miss Bette Davis passing her gloves to a servant.

a COW

A COW

The cow is erected on four legs like a lake dwelling. If the legs are straight up and down, you are very likely to find the rest of the cow up on top; that is to say, the cow is standing up. If on the other hand, she appears to be somewhat lacking in height, with the limbs in a fairly horizontal plane, the forelegs kind of crumpled up, she is, as the professionals say, laying down. Contrary to general belief, the cow does not give milk. You have to take it, and sometimes with a good deal of vehemence.

a plow HORSE

A Plow HORSE

If you take a cow and cob out her horns, exchange the bellrope tail for a inch of long strings replace any broken bones with some more sturdy and well-fit. choke up the cloven hoofs with putty, make her taller, wider, longer and eats oats mostly, that's a horse. Plow horses are fond of hats, shun saddles.

a DUCK

A DUCK

The duck is very good at just floating and has no plug which you can pull out and make him not float. Duck is really quite excellent surrounded by vegetables, his air compartment poked full of bread and sage. Ducks travel in pairs, if there are two of them, hence are called a brace. Three ducks are a set, and four or more are just plain hilarious.

a SHEEP

A SHEEP

The sheep doesn't really do much more than stand around and raise wool. If you put a fluroscope up against a sheep's head, nothing much would interfere with the view. A sheep looks like a goat dressed for going with Hyrd. The sheep gets a haircut as often as he needs it, and sweaters are woven out of the sweepings. Sheep, children, or lambs, have a good deal of rubber in their composition and bounce around considerably. A flock of sheep is called a bunch, a lot is a company, and two are known as "just married."

a GOAT

A GOAT

Goats are manufactured along somewhat the same lines as sheep and call their children "kids" as we do. They are a gum-chewing wisecracking lot. Most goats are equipped with doohickies sticking from their heads, called "horns," after Felix von Horn, their inventor. Horns (the things) are used for butting. Goats are bored by people who pun about their being the butt of jokes. Some goats bore people.

a PIG

A PIG

Actually, for our purposes, the pig is a rounded oblong of compacted groceries which has been dropped down on the bottom four corners and become feet, pushed out at one end and become a head, or Philadelphia scrapple, wiggled out at the other end and become a tail. Except for his orifices, the pig is completely covered on the outside with pigskin.

SIGMA NU

Sigma Nu recently accepted Charlie Hicks into Sigma Nuv as a pledge. Pete Van Vorres and Bruce Keezer were extended social privileges.

Sigma Nu Rushing Banquet was held last week at Happy Acres. La Verne Trinkino as Master of Ceremonies. Guest speakers were: Dr. William Slavin, Mr. C. Clause and MR. Trembley, faculty advisor.

Plans have been completed and accepted for the pine paneling of the dining room and play room at the Sigma Nu house.

Mike Morse has recently been elected as the Athletic Chairman of Sigma Nu. He is also the proud recipient of the annual Flush award for this year, given each year at the rushing banquet. On hand were the three past winners, John LaBelle, John Conant and Sid Rossuck. Hal Moore has been appointed basketball coach and Dave Ireland the bowling coach.

Last week-end, after the Middlebury game, there was a party in honor of the new pledge class. Later, the Delta Upsilon Fraternity from Middlebury were the guests of Sigma Nu for a Buffet supper and party following.

Several alumnae returned for the Middlebury game. Among those present were: Jack Burke, Tom McGuire, John Bowling, John Conant John Jackson, Dick Spaulding, John Bloomer, Dave Filley, Chick Healey and Bill Meyer.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Thetas boast that they've initiated seven new KATs. Marrie Beekman, '56, Verona, N.J.; Nancy Hawkins, '57, New Rochelle, N.Y.; Joan Holmgren, '56, Tenafly, N.J.; Virginia "DeeDee" Ireland, '57, Burlington, Vt.; Barbara Mett, '55, Schenectary, N.Y.; Romaine "Mike" Ruggles, '57, Bend, Oregon; and Connie Suhr, '57, Greenville, Delaware.

We hear that pumpkins, witches, and black cats as well as 150 real live people attended the Theta Halloween Open House, on Saturday, October 30th, after the Massachusetts game. Everybody had a ghostly time and the spirit of the exciting afternoon prevailed.

The Thetas recently held an exchange dinner with their back-door neighbors, the S.A.E.s. Social chairmen Jane Engel of Theta and ------ ---- of S.A.E. were in charge of arrangements.

Our very best wishes to Theta, '53, Judy Edwards of Manhasset, Long Island, and Roy Weber, '53, Phi Delta Theta, whose engagement was recently announced.

ALPHA EPSILON PI FRATERNITY

A E Pi held its rushing banquet Tuesday night, November 2, at the Apple Orchard Room of the Hotel Vermont. Dr. Whitcher of the Chemistry Department and Mr. Alpert of the Medical College were present in their roles as faculty advisors. The brothers and pledges were very pleased that Mr. Hyman Abraham, who is to become an associate brother of the chapter, was able to attend.

The supply of ready wit and humor of Brothers Gordon, Goodman and Lt. Master Suchman added to the warm-feeling of the banquet. Steward George Hertzberg's is choice of sauce for the ice cream was roundly applauded. (hmmm!)

Chapter President and Second Lt. in the Air Force ROTC Corps, Larry Epstein, tells us pretty Lenny Weinstein of Jamaica, New York, will be under his command for the evening of the Military Ball.

This past weekend the brothers and pledges of the chapter visited the historic Major Rogers Trading Post at Crown Point, New York. They made the rounds of the place and really "guzzled everything up."

(A direct quote)- A more ardent group of sightseers couldn't be found we'll bet. Ed.)

Mr. George S, Toll, Executive Secretary of the National Fraternity, visited the chapter on October 18 and 19. Mr. Toll announced that within thirty days, deal for the purchase of the 275 South Willard chapter house would be effected and that occupation of the chapter house by February 1, was now a reality. The future chapter house is owned by the Patric Estate.

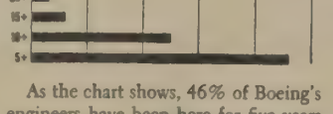
1931 — revolutionary Boeing B-9



1954 — Boeing 8-jet B-52, America's outstanding heavy jet bomber

Leadership is a long-time tradition at Boeing

In 1931, Boeing engineers designed the B-9, a revolutionary low-wing bomber that could outdistance any contemporary pursuit plane.

Today, they've produced the free world's outstanding heavy jet bomber, the B-52, and America's first jet transport. Boeing also builds the record-breaking B-47 medium jet bomber, conducts a major guided missile program, and research in nuclear power for aircraft.

These growing programs mean expanding opportunities at Boeing for engineers of virtually EVERY type, including mechanical, civil, electrical and aeronautical. It also means plenty of room for advancement. Boeing, which now employs more engineers than even at the peak of World War II, promotes from within, and holds regular merit reviews to give you individual recognition.

As the chart shows, 46% of Boeing's engineers have been here for five years or more; 25% for 10 years; and 6% for 15 years, and many have been with the company 25 years or longer.

Boeing offers engineers an unusual variety of experience, from applied research to production design, from work with new materials and techniques to co-ordination of a vast subcontracting program which provides contacts with a cross-section of U. S. industry.

Boeing also helps engineers continue their graduate studies, and reimburses them for tuition expenses.

Hill N'Dalers Win State Title In Run Over Panthers

Damon Is Winner With 25:33 Time; Grady Is Second

By FRED SOLOMON

Last week the Postmen entertained the Middlebury Panthers and drubbed them 20-36, to garner the State Championship Cross Country team.

Vermont's Damon, Grady, and Wadley finished first, second, and third, before one Middlebury runner registered.

Damon won in 25:3.3, followed by Grady in 25:10, and Wadley in 25:42. Middlebury's top man, Hayward, was clocked in 25:55. The fifth place finisher was Tafrate of Vermont; Tremaine, Hagemeyer, and Hurt of Middlebury captured sixth, seventh, and eighth respectively; Fitzpatrick and Howland of Vermont took ninth and tenth; and Glidden of Middlebury comered eleventh.

The finishers are as follows:

Damon	Vermont	25:03
Grady	Vermont	25:10
Wadley	Vermont	25:42
Hayward	Middlebury	25:55
Tafrate	Vermont	26:00
Tremaine	Middlebury	27:08
Hagemeyer	Middlebury	27:11
Hurt	Middlebury	27:14
Fitzpatrick	Vermont	27:34
Howland	Vermont	27:57
Glidden	Middlebury	28:40

Last Wednesday Larry Damon, UVM harrier placed sixth in the Connecticut Valley Championship meet at Amherst, Mass. Damon placed sixth out of the 29 participants who finished. The course is 4.6 miles long and was in excellent condition. The entrants were as follows: Springfield, Coast Guard, Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Vermont.

Yearling Harrier Team Wins Over Castleton State

By Richard Schatten

In their final meet of the 1954 campaign, Archie Post's freshman harriers swept over Castleton State Teachers College by a 21-34 score.

Tauber Again

As has been the case in past encounters, Art Tauber crossed the finish line first; his time was 17:11. Tauber, who performed well all season, ran by far his best race last Saturday. He took only one severe beating all season, that one at the hands of Lee Veysey, number one high school harrier in New England. Veysey, running for Vergennes, toured the two and three-quarter mile course in sixteen minutes and fifty-nine seconds, fastest time recorded this year.

Kittens 3, 4, 6, 7

A Castleton man took second place, but the Vermont boys swept third, fourth, sixth and seventh. Jack Clark was third, Bill Collier fourth, Paul Dimick sixth and Stan Reiter seventh.

The big gun in the UVM backfield this year has been the Catamount's choice for Little All-America, Ed Beck. Shown above, Ed picked up good yardage again last Saturday and played an outstanding defensive game at the same time.

Midd. Game

Jannoni, diminutive speedster played a fine game in relief of McLam.

Semans Plunges Over

The Catamounts stalled for a while in the beginning as the first quarter was scoreless. In the second quarter, Vermont ran up the field with Mike Semans plunging over for his first touchdown of the season. It was 6-0 Vermont. Midd's speedy halfback, Sonny Dennis took the Vermont Kickoff on his own Seven and made an electrifying 93 yard for the Panther's only score and only bright spot of the game. Mike Semans set up and scored the next one also on a quarterback sneak. Vermont's halftime lead of 12-6 was enough but after some halftime entertainment by the UVM and Middlebury bands, the Cats dished out some more.

Beck Again

A Middlebury fumble on the ten set up the next Vermont touchdown as Beck went over from the 6 two plays later, making it 18-6. Beck also scored the next one as he ran 20 yards to paydirt. Middlebury was completely stalled as the Vermont line muffled their fourth best in the nation's passing attach. In the fourth quarter just for assurance, the Catamounts scored again with Captain Nemer running it over from the 8. Final scoreUVM30 - Midd 6.

AS I SAW IT

The closing of the 1954 season marks the most successful year in modern times with the possible exception of Fuzzy Evan's 1949 team which had a 6-2 record. The Catamounts lose six starters but with exceptionally capable line reserves, some good freshman backs and five of this year's starters, things look very hopeful. This season's record; 5 wins, 1 loss, 1 tie.

Vermont coaches Donnelly, Evans, Lapointe and Traverse did a great job. They brought out all the team's possible potential.

Injuries were at an amazing low. Until the last game, not one man was benched for injury. Good physical condition and a good trainer; Shorty Cote.

As Captain Ed Nemer put it. "The fans were really behind us the last two games. I was very proud to have been Captain of the. 1954 Vermont team."

This writer disagrees emphatically with a certain well known sports writer, when he claims the personal foul called on Midd's Sonny Dennis was unjustified. It seemed much more justified than the "personal" called on Beck when he remonstrated after being "rabbit" punched twice by a Midd man.

Congratulations to a great teamplaying Vermont eleven.

Gridiron Statistics Show Most Startling Team Marks

By Norm Fishkin

Along with completing one of its greatest years, record wise, the UVM football team compiled one of the most startling statistical years in its history.

Ed Beck Outstanding

Halfback Ed Beck stood out throughout the entire season as he set several UVM records. In carrying the ball 105 times he gained a total of 620 yards rushing, 68 yards passing for an overall total of 688 yards gained. This, along with his 72 points scored, set a new record for points scored and yards gained in one season by one man. Ed Nemer did very well also, as he gained 476 yards while carrying the ball 94 times.

Semans Much Improved

Quarterback Mike Semans, also did very well and helped immensely in the Catamount's record shattering season. In 100 attempts he completed 43 and gained 647 yards. Mike threw 7 touchdown passes which rates only a few behind the nations leaders. In his two years of quarterbacking Semans holds the record for most yards gained by passing in a varsity career. Al McLam boosted the team with his 14 points after touchdown and finished second behind Beck in the scoring column with 44 points.

Team Has One of Best Years

The UVM gridders had one of their best years as they compiled great figures in their seven game stand. In winning 5 losing 1 and tying 1 they had their best year under the coaching of Ed Donnelly. Rushing, they gained 1620. yards while their opponents were held to 1111 yds. They had seven scoring passes and gave up only three. The total offense outgained the opposition 2350 to 1558 yards and outscored them 170 to 92. As shown above, the Catamounts not only had a victorious season but one that will remain known in the UVM record books.

The scores per game in our 5, 1 - 1 record were as follows:

Opponent	Own Score	Opp. Score
Union	14	14
U. of Maine	20	23
Dartmouth "B"	19	13
U. of Rochester	19	13
Norwich	41	0
U. of Mass.	27	25
Middlebury	30	6

Interfraternity Hoopsters Predict Net Outlook

Sports Writers Choose Little All Americans

By Mark Bernstein

Within the past two weeks the possibility of a Little All-America, Eddie Beck, from the University of Vermont has been mentioned both in the Cynic and in local publications. It will be the purpose of this article to relate to the students of UVM just how a Little All-America is selected.

National Poll

To begin with, Little All - America selections are run on a national poll by the Associated Press. To simplify matters the AP is divided into sections, each with a Sports Director at its head. Our particular section is New England, with Boston being the central location of the Sports Director.

Nominations for this honor are made usually by a local sports writer. These nominations are given for the most part in the beginning of the season so that other sports writers can make notations that may either hinder or help the candidate. Nevertheless nominations are still made during the season because of extraordinary brillance that demanded it.

New England District

At the conclusion of the season All - America forms are sent to approximately the twenty-five local sports writers from the New England district. On these forms final tabulations and necessary data are given for their nominations. The number of sports writers that vote for a man determines the chances for his election. These forms are then sent to the Sports Director in Boston who compiles the votes and knows exactly who he wants to nominate when he reaches New York City.

The Sports Directors from each district meet this month at the Associated Press Sports Editorial Board and here final tabulations are made. Here the nominees record is checked in reference to offense, defense, outstanding play, temperment, and whether or not he is a team player. From this Board come eleven Little Americans.

KS, TEP, Sig, Nu Ready For Play Beginning Dec 2

By Dick Stein

This is the first in a series of articles previewing the forthcoming fraternity basketball season. This is the time when the houses put away their pigskins and start looking around for their five fastest, tallest, and most accurate hoopsters.

The inter-fraternity league is sponsored by the men's athletic office and all basketball games are referred by students. The The fraternities are split up into two leagues, seven teams per loop. At the end of the first round (each team playing six games), the top four teams in each league are combined to form one eight team league. The winner of this loop then is proclaimed inter fraternity champs, and then is pitted against the winner of the men's dorm league. The team that emerges victorious is crowned All Campus Champions.

Here is a run-down on how some of the fraternities stack up this season.

KAPPA SIGMA

Last year Kappa Sigma went through their first round of competition undefeated (seven wins - no losses). In the second round, it ended up in a tie between Kappa Sig and Sigma Nu. Kappa Sigma won this game and later went on to become All Campus Champs. K.S. lost one of the mainstays of their team thru graduation, Ed Rynn. Coach Bud Dacy thinks that this years squad will again be very strong, with such men as: Stevens, Beck, McLam, Galacione, Rex, Russell, Gilbert, and Mauro.

SIGMA NU

Last season's second place team, Sigma Nu has high expectations of jumping one step on that ladder to the top. Coach Hal Moore says that he has a fast running ball club and this incoming pledge class will support the veterans in the forth coming campaign. Hold-overs from last years club are: Sharkey, Rossuck, Henderson, Millard, Meschel, Dick, and Dave Ireland, and Denny Copeland,

TAU EPSILON PHI

Marty Carr, coach of the TE five, tells that by the use of fast breaking ball club and using their over-all height to be advantage, they can cop this seasoned title. TEP ended last year's campaign third behind Kappa Sig and Sig NU. Returning "letter" men are: Bernstein Weissman, Roth, Solomon, Millman Goldman, and Arnie Lachs. TE has a good freshman potential Bill Pickens, Bernie Sussman Dick Schatten and Pete Rubiti

Norm Strassburg, Director of Interfraternity Athletics.

Whitehead Sees Strong Rifle Team In ROTC Ranks

"We ought to have a good rifle team on the range," Sgt. Whitehead remarked at an interview this past week. "We have a very good group of freshmen to bolster the ROTC team but we lack some of last year's veterans and frosh who are no longer in the school, to give us the strong varsity we should have," he added.

This year the team has nine veterans returning from last year's riflemen. This group includes Juniors: J. Hibbard, M. Soshnick, S. Allen, Ouelette, and Norcross. Sophs include: J. Long, O. Leblance, and B. Bartels. With this as a start, the rifle team will have a good season, especially under the leadership of Sgt. Whitehead, the Virginian sharp shooter.

Hearst Trophy

The highpoint of the rifle season is the shooting for the William Randolph Hearst Trophy which is awarded to the highest scoring team in each of the Army Districts. Last year Norwich took the trophy for this district, but Sgt. Whitehead is hopeful that the Hearst Trophy will come back to the UVM camp this year.

Missing from last year will be J. Vincent, the leading scorer in the New England College Rifle League. Vincent had a 288 average out of a possible 300 perfect score. Included in the league are such outstanding teams as Dartmouth, MIT, Boston U., Conn. U., Mass. U., and Al

Last Year's Records

Records from last year show that the Varsity won 16 and lost 1 while the ROTC team had a 17-1 record. This year the teams will have more opponents than last year, including some new ones from the West. One of the biggest problems facing the team throughout the years is the lack of funds to transport the team to away matches. Therefore most of the matches are postal setups with 10 men firing at each school and sending the scores to each other in the mail to determine the winner. With this setup, UVM competes against schools as far as Georgia, Washington, Pa., and Wisconsin.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT AND STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

VOL. 72 BURLINGTON, VERMONT NOVEMBER 18, 1954 NO. 16 / 7

Vermont, New Hampshire Conclude Regional Plan

Kingston, R.I., Nov. 16.-An agreement which provides state aid for selected college graduates from New Hampshire to study medicine in Vermont was recently concluded by the Universities of the two states, Carl R. Woodward, President of the University of Rhode Island and chairman of the conference of New England State University Presidents, announced yesterday.

In the opinion of President Woodward, this is a significant step inadvancing the program of regional cooperation in higher education among the State Universities of New England. It is noteworthy, also, as a practical approach to the growing problem of medical education, he said.

$2,000.00 Per Head to UVM

Authorized by act of the New Hampshire legislature in 1953, which appropriated funds "for the purpose of contributing to the operational costs at colleges and universities of qualified New Hampshire residents in courses of instruction not available at the University of New Hampshire," the agreement provides for payment to the University of Vermont of $2000 per year for each of the New Hampshire students, not in excess of four, selected for attendance at the Vermont College of Medicine.

New England Cooperation

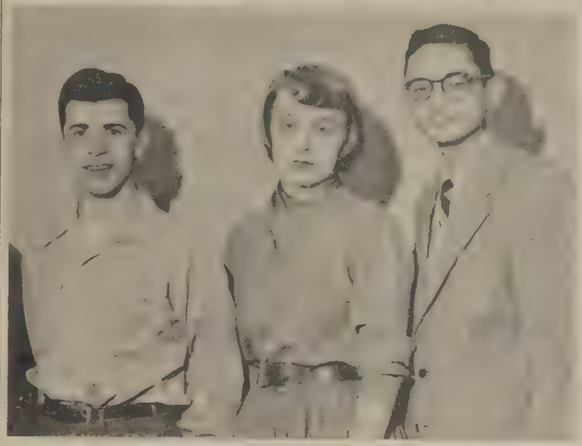
With this contribution from his home state toward the cost of his education at the University of Vermont, each of these New Hampshire students will be exempt from paying the usual out-of-state fee, but will pay the regular in-state tuition rate of $550 a year charged residents of Vermont, Mr. Woodward said.

"Regional cooperation among the state universities of New England actually was initiated in 1948, when the governing boards of the six institutions endorsed the principle, and authorized the respective presidents to put a cooperative program into effect. In subsquent conferences, the university presidents have developed a workable plan.

Second Priority

"Earlier this year a schedule was instituted for avoiding duplication in specialized fields of instruction, with preferential admission to students from the New England states. In certain fields of advanced study each institution agrees, after accommodating applicants from the home state, to give second priority to candidates from the other New England states."

The special fields recognized in this plan are: at the University of Maine-pulp and paper technology; at New Hampshire-hotel management and occupational therapy; at Vermont medicine; at Massachusetts -landscape architecture and food technology; at Rhode Island-textile chemistry, textile engineering, marine biology and oceanography; at Connecticut-law, pharmacy, social work, physical therapy and insurance.



At the University of Connecticut, the out-of-state tuition is waived for all New England students enrolled in these special curricula.

Visitors Face 28 UVM Orators

By Robert E. Smith

The Ninth Annual Invitational Debate Tournament will be held on this campus this week-end. Seventy-seven pairs of teams from forty-nine colleges and universities representing nine states and Canada will debate the national debate question "Resolved that the United States should extend diplomatic relations to the Communist Government of China," with the UVM teams.

A debate team consists of four people, two affirmative and two negative debaters, so there will be a grand total of 308 visiting debaters. There will be seventy-two visiting faculty, bringing the total of visitors to 380 people. The University of Vermont will use twenty-eight debaters of a squad of thirty-two for this tournament.

Seventy-seven At A Time

Five rounds of debates with seventy-seven debates being held simultaneously each round means a total of 385 debates. UVM will participate in fifty of them. The debates will all take place on campus except for the Saturday morning varsity teams which will be held in Burlington High School.

The chairmen time-keepers will be UVM volunteer students. The tournament requires 385 time-keepers and 65 administrative workers. Dr. Robert Huber, head debate coach at UVM will act as Manager of the Tournament. He said in a special CYNIC interview that, "The amazing thing about the tournament, as far as the visitors are concerned is the way our student body cooperates to see that the debates have chairmen time-keepers, and the way that they do everything

Grete Isbrandtsen Crowned Queen Of Military At Ball

By Michael Abramson

The Arnold Air Society and the Ethan Allan Rifles held the annual Military Ball at the Southwick Memorial Auditorium, this past Friday night. Music was provided by Bill Wanamaker and his orchestra.

The contest for the selection of the Queen of the Ball was run by the Arnold Air Society this year. Letters were sent to the different sororities and dormitories on the campus inviting them to pick a candidate for Queen of the Military Ball. A committee chose five girls from the entries, as the nominees for queen. Elections were held and the results were announced on the night of the ball.

Isbrandtsen Chosen Queen

Grete Isbrandtsen was chosen as Queen of the Military Ball. When asked about how she felt being chosen queen, Grete replied that she "wished everyone could have won." Grete, who lives in Bay Shore Long Island, has an interest in outdoor sports, especially sailing.

At 10:30 P.M., a bugle was sounded, and the dance floor was cleared. Two columns of men, Air Force and Army, marched in and stopped in the center of the dance hall. The columns then separated moving in a circular pattern until they faced each other again. A command to present arms was given, and a canopy of sabers was formed. The queen and her escort, followed by four attendants and their escorts walked under the sabers to the stage. The queen went up the center steps to the throne, while her attendants sat on the steps.

She was then crowned, and and her escort, Ed Nemer.

Caine Mutiny Here This Monday

Paul Douglas Has Lead In P S Show

By Mary Davidson

An array of Hollywood and Broadway stars will troop into Burlington this Monday to present, under the sponsorship of the UVM Program Series, "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial."

The cast is headed by Hollywood's Paul Douglas, Wendell Corey and Steve Brodie and is rounded out by twenty-three other actors.

The presentation will open in Memorial Auditorium; curtain time is set for 8:15 PM. A packed house is expected for this, the main event of the 1954-55 Series, Marjorie Powell has informed the UNIC. Miss Powell is Chairman of the UVM group.

Is Broadway Version

The "Mutiny" company will appear here straight from its performances in Canada. Only two other New England performances will be given. According to a Hollywood critic who saw both the original Broadway production, and this road version, the company appearing this Monday offers a superior performance.

Star of the "Caine" is Paul Douglas in the portrayal of Captain Queeg, the man on trial. Those who saw the movie version will remember Humphrey Bogart as Queeg. Greenwald, the lawyer in the case, is portrayal by Wendell Cory. Jose' Ferrer played this role on the screen. Steve Brodie steps into Van Johnson's shoes to play the character of Lieutenant Maryk.

Paul Douglas as Queeg

Robert Anderson questions Jerry Crews.

Mental, Physical Collapse

The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial is presented by Paul Gregory and directed by Charles Laughton. Those who saw The Program Series presentation of "John Brown's Body" last year may recall that these men produced and directed that group also. Starring Tyrone Power and Ann Baxter.

Unlike the movie version, "The Caine Mutiny", which recreated the entire book by Herman Wouk, the Broadway version is devoted entirely to the Court-Martial scene. It fully traces the character development of Captain Queeg and vividly depicts his gradual, then sudden complete mental and physical collapse under the pressure of Greenwald's strenuous cross-examination.

Co-chairmen for this particular Program Series presentation are Elinore Hashim of Pittsfield, Mass., and Bradley Gordon of Brooklyn, N.Y.

WUS Still Short Of Goal; Effort Will Continue

By Susan Wakefield

According to preliminary results of the WUS drive, as of Monday the University of Vermont had contributed $491 in cash, and $172 in pledges to be paid by December 1. The band concert earned $33 for the drive.

On Monday, solicitors from the sororities and fraternities had not turned in any money, nor had the receipts from the sororities' booths in Waterman yet been given over to WUS.

Solicitors will continue to contact students and faculty until everyone has been reached.

"The money has been coming in slowly," said Reverend Raymond A. Hall, advisor to the WUS drive. "Much more must be contributed to reach our goal of $2500."

Some of the sororities have announced winners at their WUS fund-raising booths. Carl Brown was awarded a free din-

Tutor Of Tibetan Dalai Lama To Give Lecture At Chapel

A man who lived for seven years within the walls of the palace fortress of the Dalai Lama in Lhasa, the "forbidden city" of Tibet, as the tutor of the Lama, will speak at UVM on Thursday, Dec. 2.

Heinrich Harrer, author of "Seven Years in Tibet", and the only European ever permitted to live within the walls of the Lama's Tibetan fortress, will speak in the Ira Allen Chapel at UVM. His 8p.m. lecture is being co-sponsored by the UVM International Relations Club and the Vermont Conference in cooperation with the Vermont Council on World Affairs.

Escape — Disguise

A native of Austria and an enthusiastic skier and mountaineer, he was a member of Austrian Olympic Ski team in 1936, and later was chosen as a member of a German reconnaissance expedition to Kashmir. While he was in India, World War II broke out, and he was interned by the British, but managed to escape and, disguised as a pilgrim, he made his way with a fellow-escapee across the Tibetan border.

It took him 21 months to reach the capital city of Lhasa where foreigners in general and westerners in particular, have long been unwelcome, and he and his companion were threatened with expulsion by every local potentate. They made friends, however, with the natives living in the extreme elevations, and learned the language. Without weapons, and often pursued by bandits, they often were close to starvation or death by freezing, but managed to survive through 21 months.

Tutored Dalai Lama

When Harrer reached the "forbidden city", he was almost penniless and without papers or status and when his was discovered, his talents were made use of, first as a translator of foreign news, then as an engineer for the construction of small irrigation projects and, finally, as tutor for the Dalai Lama, a position he held for seven years.

The seven years ended late in 1950 when Harrer fled with the Dalai Lama to escape the Chinese Reds who moved into Tibet at that time. The Tibetan ruler later returned to his capital city, and Harrer turned to the writing of a book on his experiences entitled "Seven Years in Tibet".

Tickets for his lecture are available at the office of the Vermont Council on World Affairs, 107 Old Mill, UVM.

Post At Mass General Hospital Goes To UVM Medical Protessor

Dr. Robert P. Smith of Burlington, an instructor in medicine at the UVM College of Medicine, has been named by the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, Mass., as the first trainee in the hospital's newly established program to provide specialists in the developing area of care of the chronically ill and disabled.

Dr. Smith, who is the only physician on Vermont's five-member Commission on Chronic Illness and Old Age, and who is Medical Consultant for and Chairman of the Medical Advisory Committee of the Alcoholic Rehabilitation effective January 1, 1955. He will be affiliated with the Boston hospital, for one year, during which time he will give up his private practice in Burlington.

Long Term Care

The program of training in the field of medical rehabilitation is being inaugurated at the Massachusetts General Hospital to help solve the problem of the increasing number of patients who require medical care over a long period of time. Crux of the problem, as Dr. Smith has said, is that modern hospitals are designed to deal primarily with short term illnesses, with the result that patients needing longtterm care are generally unable to meet the continuing expense of present day-hospital care.

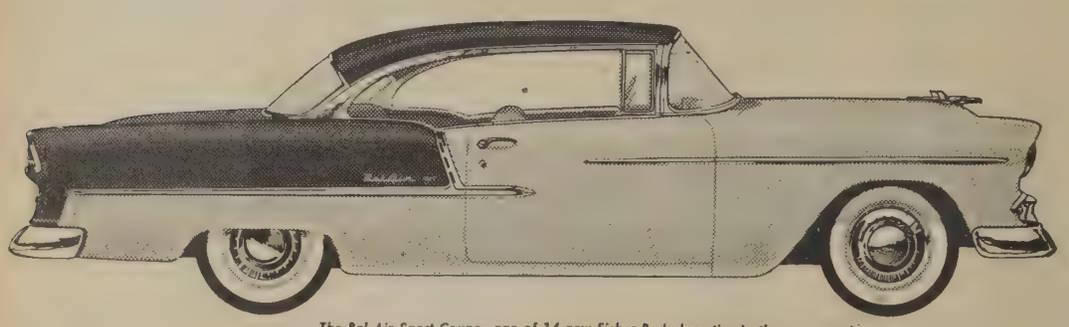
Commenting on Dr. Smith's appointment, Dr. George Wolf, dean of the UVM College of Medicine, said that "Dr. Smith's work in this new program in rehabilitation reflects Vermont's concern with the need of the chronically ill citizen, and recognition of the action already taken by the state in making an effort to determine the needs of its citizens."

Harvard, Princeton, Vermont

Dr. Sold pointed to the fact that the Mary Fletcher Hospital and the College of Medicine are both interested in having a rehabilitation center here, and that the Catholic Diocese is forming a long-term care hospital in this area.

Dr. Smith is a graduate of Princeton University and received his M.D. degree from Harvard. He held a residency in pathology at the New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston and interned at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

He was appointed to the staff of the UVM College of Medicine in 1952.



Dr. Smith's service at the Massachusetts General will be under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer, professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School and chief of medical service at Massachusetts General, who is regarded in the medical profession as a "pioneer" in the field of medical rehabilitation.

Players To Stage 'Taming Of The Shrew'

Opens First Week After Recess

The University Players will present William Shakespeare's comedy "The Taming of the Shrew" at Southwick on December 2, 3, and 4. The Dec. 2 performance will be for all high school students in the state who wish to attend. The public and college students will be admitted to the last two performances. The admission is seventy-five cents, and the production will start at 8:30.

Gregg Falls, the director of the University Players, says "This should be the best show we have put on yet. We are expecting capacity crowds each night."

Elizabethan Costumes

"The Taming of the Shrew" will be done in the Elizabethan style of the time with authentic costumes. The cast stars Roz Faber as Katherine, the Shrew; Dick Ireland as Petruchio, who tames the Shrew; Baptista, the father, is played by Robert Smith.

All three stars have been in other University Players productions as well as the Varieties.

Dancers

The dancers and attendants are: Judy Pattee, Jean Seidler, Nancy Brumberg, Diane Tanzi, Pat Orvis, Robert Barth, Roy Kelley, and John van Blarcom.

The dancers who were coached by Miss Martha Howe, of the Women's Ph. Education dep't., will dance to 'Green Sleeves' as specially orchestrated by Frank Carr.

The stage manager and assistant stage manager are, respectively, Marcia Mockridge and Marilyn Fear. The prompter is Joanne Murray, and the scenery is supervised by Marilyn Wakefield. Pat Orvis is in charge of props, and Louise Phelps, costumes. Roz Rosberg is publicity director.

James B. Walker received his B.S. in mechanical engineering from North Carolina State College in June 1954, and he's presently working for his M.S. at the same college. By asking pertinent questions, Jim is making sure that the position he finally accepts will be the right one for a fellow with his training.

Jim Walker asks:

Can a mechanical engineer make real progress in a chemical firm?

H. M. Pickering, Jr., received a B.S. in M.E. and E.E. from the Univ. of Minn. in 1940. He gained valuable technical experience at Hanford Works, in Richland, Washington, and in Du Pont's Fabrics and Finishes Plant at Parlin, N. J. Today he is Works Engineer for Du Pont's Seaford, Del., plant, where nylon comes from.

"Pick" Pickering answers:

Well, Jim, that's what the lawyers call a leading question, and the answer leads right into my bailiwick. I came to Du Pont in 1940, after taking a combined mechanical and electrical engineering course. So I had what you might call a double reason for wondering about my future with a chemical firm.

I soon learned that the success of a large-scale chemical process is vitally dependent upon mechanical equipment. And the success of this mechanical equipment—especially for a new process—depends on (1) Research, (2) Development, (3) Plant Engineering, and (4) close Supervision. The net result is that a mechanical engineer at Du Pont can progress along any one of these four broad highways to a top-level position.

My own Du Pont experience includes mechanical engineering work in fields as varied as atomic energy, fabrics and finishes, and nylon manufacture. Every one of these brought with it a new set of challenging problems in construction, instrumentation, and power supply; and every one provided the sort of opportunities a man gets in a pioneering industry.

So, to answer your question, Jim, a mechanical engineer certainly has plenty of chances to get somewhere with a chemical company like Du Pont!

active thinking

Now that the editorial policy of the CYNIC has managed to alienate the fraternity bloc on this campus, a few observations may be in order.

-We are not anti-fraternity

-We are not anti-IFC

Why, then, the sudden outburst of pedantry on the part of the Editor as regards drinking, selectivity clauses, and cooperation of fraternities with the University?

The answer is simple. It is acceptable to us; we hope that you agree.

Drinking by minors, discrimination by fraternities (national, if not local), and " cooperation "are problems whose scope is not limited to any one fraternity, not any one educational institution. They are problems which face every University in this nation, particularly the eastern seaboard. We had hoped that by pointing out the existence of the three above questions, that the people on this campus would turn a little more to the consideration of the problems. We had hoped furthermore to institute active thinking on the topic.

That a problem exists is one thing; that people realize it is another; that though be applied to its solution is still another. Unfortunately, too many people interpreted the purpose of our editorials as an attempt at the destruction of the fraternity system on campus. We are sorry that so many individuals took this defensive attitude.

Fraternities can be fine when they want to be. Many is the time that they have helped out the people of the state; many is the time that fraternities lead the field in blood donations or monetary contributions to humanitarian causes. Many is the time that fraternity men are the prime supporters at University functions. Fraternities provide housing and food for a great number of University students. It is doubtful that the University under its present set-up could accomodate these same individuals.

B U T.....

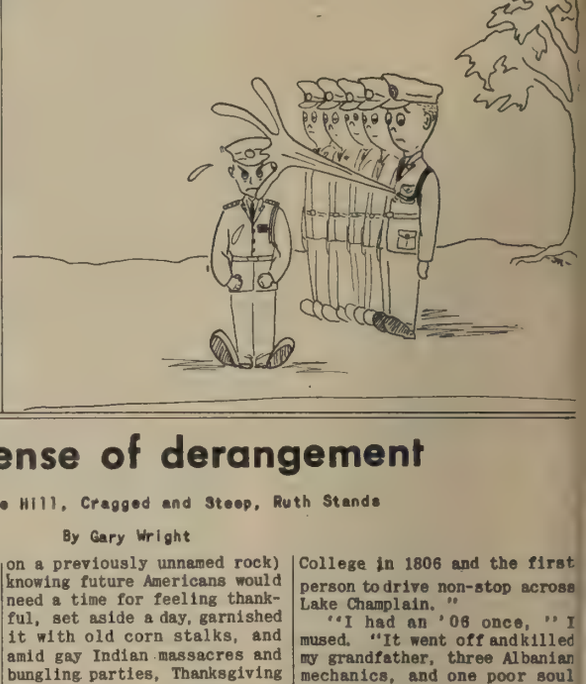
Fraternities are not perfect. Anyone who can stand up and tell us that they are, is living in a world of delusion or, possibly, pure stubbornness.

We commend fraternities for the good that they do ...we condemn them for the harm (the good that men do is oft interred...) We also condemn them for turning their faces on the now familiar " problems."

Yet, a number of the " Greeks " are coming around to our way of thinking...at one time no selectivity clauses existed in the charters of these fraternities, yet a " gentleman's agreement was adhered to. However, we see that even these "gentleman's agreements" have been broken this year.

It is this spirit which we would like to see permeating all the " Greeks." Perhaps we are getting some active thinking...let's have a little bit more on the part of those that still maintain selectivity clauses in their national charters. Let's have a little bit more on the relation of the fraternity to the university. Let's have the consideration of these questions originate on the student level, from the fraternities themselves instead of waiting for the " higher-ups" to start the ball rolling.

letters to the editor



To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I feel that the usual quality of "CYNIC " editorials has been degraded, and regarding the editorial of November 11, 1954, I might say that I have not come across a poorer piece of logic or construction in a long time. The main item of consideration at the beginning of the article was a discussion of the recent Supreme Court decision on the "discriminatory clause " debate against fraternities in New York State. Next, it went to a cogent consideration of this problem and the proposed solutions to the problem as they exist here at UVM --- all well and good.

But from that point on, the paragraph beginning "Ideally," I am lost in the editor's ambiguity and mental vagaries. He speaks of the ideals of fraternity, of how they must function in the larger framework of the university; then of the fact that they are indeed imperfect on this campus, fail to live up to this ideal, and are far from their goal. This may be a point --- but not one that is vital to the argument of discriminatory clauses.

The next move was to go way out into left field and drag in the problem of social life in all the forms in which it exists here. A vital issue, indeed, but one which pales considerably when viewed in the light of the discriminatory

On a Huge Hill, Cragged and Steep, Ruth Stands

By Gary Wright

Thanksgiving, a custom dating from pre-war days, is one of our most honored institutions. (tuition: unknown) It is undoubtedly responsible for low-calorie beer. It was introduced in a blinding snowstorm by the harried Pilgrims (barbers being much in demand) and handed down through many, many generations. This constant handling has resulted in much damage. So much, that the original is hardly recognizable today.

To fully appreciate Thanksgiving we must first understand the Pilgrims and the period in which they lived. (There is an excellent book on the progress of these people written by the famous Paul Bunyan.)

These were perilous times. Hudson, La Salle, and De Soto had not yet formed the first Big Three, and the savage Sioux were plotting on how to contend with the future Custer. Paul Revere was experimenting in pots and pans, Washington was critically judging various rivers, and Lafeyette was looking for a suitable cornerstone. Events were everywhere waiting to take place.

The far-sighted Pilgrims, (this accounts for their missing Boston and washing ashore on a previously unnamed rock) knowing future Americans would need a time for feeling thankful, set aside a day, garnished it with old corn stalks, and amid gay Indian massacres and bungling parties, Thanksgiving was born.

Today, all scheduled events having taken place, we still celebrate this day.

SCENE: CAFETERIA IN WATERMAN-TIME: YESTERDAY.

"What's tomorrow? asked Jacque.

"If it's anything but the eighteenth I'm going to complain to my advisor, " I half choked.

"When I want stuped advice, I'll supply it myself, " he sneered.

"Roger, fox seven. Over. " I placed tense fingers on my headset.

" He'll never make it!" cried Jacque. "It's murder to send a boy up in a crate like that!

There was a roar, an explosion, and silence.

"Where are you going for Thanksgiving?" I casually asked.

"Probably over to my Aunt Posey's in Fort Tyconestoga. A dear old DAR. She was beauty queen in Nausea Electorial College in 1806 and the first person to drive non-stop across Lake Champlain. "

"I had an '06 once, " I mused. "It went off and killed my grandfather, three Albanian mechanics, and one poor soul who wasn't even in the story."

"A crying shame, " he weeped, hanging a wreath on a passing coed. "And where are you spending Thanksgiving. "

"Don't mention spending! " I screamed.

"Oop! " he apologized.

"Well, if I can find ten or twelve riders to St. Grievance who will defray all expenses, wash the motorcycle, and heed the new seat cover. I might consider a new record. "

"Grandly cheesers match-lock! " he blurted. "A new record! "

The word raced like french-fries from table to table. Ears and eyes, antennalike, swung ponderously in our direction. Wise heads nodded.

"He'll never make it. "

"It's murder to send a boy up in a crate like that. "

I kicked self-consciously at a piece of toast, donned my helmet, and garnished with old corn stalks, stumbled out the door, Cries of, "Good show Reggie, " and, "Come back and pay your bill, " drifted plaintively on the brisk air.

intercollegiate roundup

There is always some humor to be found in a campus situation. The drinking problem is one of our major controversies, but look what a psychology professor at BRISTOL UNIVERSITY (England) has done about it. He puts his students at ease by serving free cocktails before each lecture. The professor, who serves as bartender, says he's testing his students on the effects of small doses of alcohol....

Testing

300 CENTRAL STATE (Oklahoma) College students asked in a survey about tests had the following to say: 70% felt that at least 3 to 9 test should be given during a semester before a semester grade was given. 69 students felt that "sneak " quizzes should be given while 271 did not. 218 considered true - false tests as not being adequate to measure the knowledge of the student, and 191 felt that the test had been frequently written for last year's classes, and were not in complete keeping with what was taught in the current year. Many advocated that study sheets should be given which tell exactly what work the test will cover.

Quote Of The Week

" I have always believed that a university, to be any good, must be the center of constant controversy. To eliminate the controversy means the end of a great university. " - Dr. Lawrence A. Kimpton, chancellor of the UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO.

clause issue with which the editorial was headed. The editor seemed to have forgotten what he was writing about when he almost hysterically called down the wrath of the entire university upon the heads of the fraternities for a situation with which he apparently wasn't dealing. In short, the argument was presented for our consideration and was basically explained, but in no way was a conclusion reached or the attempt made to even present a conclusion.

I believe that the editor missed a fine opportunity for presenting the thoughtful students of the university with the facts of a problem of grave concern to us all. Why did he not begin a series of articles presenting the pros and cons for this consideration of the University of Vermont to ban all fraternities with discriminatory clauses? Why does he not give the viewpoint of all concerned?

I hope that clearer thinking will prevail in subsequent articles dealing with this topic, and that, even if we don't have political parties on our campus, we can at least go to the polls with a sound basis of knowledge as presented by our student press.

Yours truly,
Gilbert Miller, '56.

Editor's Note:..Thank you for your observations, Mr. Miller. You have jumped the gun on us as concerns a series of pro's and Con's on the question of discriminatory clauses. An entire series has mapped out to commence after Thanksgiving recess. Purpose of previous Editorial was to start people thinking about it. Readership reaction seems to indicate that quite a few people are thinking. We decline to say what they think.

Another Dialect

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

As four men from widely separated sections of this state, we were very much interested--and amused, by the colloquialisms attributed to natives of Vermont in the last issue of the CYNIC.

Pooling the knowledge gleaned in twenty-plus years as residents of Vermont, we were unable to come up with "Quavering sheets", hell-bound wheelbarrows", or even a "six-foot Indian up to his ankles in snow". Are you sure that these and the other colloquialisms quoted in the articles are not native Brooklynite expressions?

At the present time there are more out-of-staters on our campus than there are in-staters, so we can understand how the reporter could more easily have overheard some "foreign" expressions. Certainly if these phrases have been "handed down from generation to generation", somebody goofed!

However, while on the subject of "picturesque dialect," we think it would be a propos (that is French, not native Vermont) to draw attention to the type of language which invariably assails the ear of a native as he approaches the Student Lounge or Coffee Shop For anyone who is deaf, and therefore has not heard or noted the strange jargon of the more Metropolitan areas, we have enclosed a typical conversation.

First He: Hey, whatchadoin'?

Second He: Nuttin' much, jus' lampin' that skirt.

First He: Whatcha say doll?

Blushing Co-ed: Ah, drop already!

That is the general drift of conversation. Of course, the reader will have to supply the high-pitched denasal drawl which cannot be reproduced on paper.

So we would suggest that while the language given in the article is certainly different, for " dese guys 'it just "ain't representative ". Let's check the facts, all right already?

'Who's Drunk!'

To the Editor of the Cynic:

Today I picked up this week's Cynic and proceeded to read the articles. I naturally was especially interested in your comments about last weeks game with Massachusetts. All the articles were interesting and reflected the wonderful spirit that presided last Saturday. And then as I was about to comment on the good articles I came upon an article entitled "Vermont Title To Be Decided In Tradition Tilt." It started out wonderfully and continued until the last paragraph, line twelve. At first I thought maybe it was just a joke, but I read it over. I really felt discouraged and I'm sure many other students shared my thoughts.

It was such a success last week to have a game, with lots of cheering and not a field of drunkards. Everyone was so interested in the game and gave the boys such support. And very few complained about the restrictions made about liquor. In fact if you joined various groups this week you might have observed that the main topic of conversation was the wonderful improvement made at the games. And now, before our last game, what is printed in our school paper? A remark that may change the whole surge of spirit and prove U.V.M. can't fight for their own team.

If there are a group of students who cannot keep away from the bottle for two or three hours we wish they would not even bother to come to the games. They are the ones who have ruined our school spirit.

I amssure that Mr. Smith did not mean to start what we just had overcome - the terrible spirit at our games. Maybe he didn't realize that there are a good group of us who want Vermont to be known as the University with the most spirit and loyalty.

I hope there won't be too many more articles of that sort in the Cynic.

Sincerely yours,

A Cynic Reader

'Calfy Coeds' Are The Result Of Walking From Redstone

By Peggy Richter

"My boy friend will never speak to me. " "Mother will be shocked. " "My friend will oust me. " "Oh dear, oh darn, they don't call me Calfy Cookie for nothing. " "Oh, disaster! "

Such is the plight of the newcoming co-ed at UVM. And now what is the real reason (not good reason) behind this monstrous situation? Why has Cookie all of a sudden become Calfy?

You see on page seven of the little used green rule book entitled "University Regulations For Students, 1954-1955 " there is a charming little rule that states that "...undergraduate women residing on campus are not permitted to have cars..."

Over Hill

Perfectly innocent combination of words you are first led to believe. Oh, but the trouble! Most Redstone girls we find, before college matriculation, are unused to real hiking. College life and studies were never connected in their minds with walking. Naturally they picked UVM over other schools. There aren't enough places to hike at NYU and the hills at Cornell are not for our young miss. She likes the pretty picture of Redstone Campus in the catalogue and she chooses the

DECEMBER AND MAY: ACT II

Synopsis of Act I: A middle-aged English Professor named Phipps has fallen desperately in love with a rosy-kneed coed named McFetridge. Phipps doesn't know how to go about courting Miss McFetridge, for, after all, he is a professor in the autumn of his life, and she is a coed with rosy knees. Professor Twonkey, who shares an office with Phipps, proposes the following plan: Phipps will ask Miss McFetridge to come to his office for a conference late in the afternoon. He will be urbane and charming and make frightfully witty remarks about English lit, and Miss McFetridge will laugh and laugh. After an hour of this high-type hilarity, Phipps will look at his watch, exclaim at the lateness of the hour, and insist on driving Miss McFetridge home. On the way home, he will pass a theatre that shows French movies. They'll see the movie, then have an exquisite French dinner, and Miss McFetridge will be so enchanted that she cannot but yield to his suit.

So at the beginning of Act II, we find Phipps in his office awaiting the arrival of the poor young innocent. His hair is brushed; his nails are clean; he has new leather patches on his elbows. There is a knock on the door. He opens it and admits a gorgeous creature with blue eyes and pink kneecaps.

PHIPPS: Ah, Miss McFetridge. Come in, my dear. Won't you sit down? Cigarette?

MISS MCF: Ooh, Philip Morris! I think they're marvy, don't you?

PHIPPS: I do indeed.

MISS MCF: Hey, prof, would you mind opening a fresh pack?

PHIPPS: But I just opened this one a little while ago. It's perfectly fresh.

MISS MCF: I know, prof, but I like to hear the snap when the pack opens.

PHIPPS: Very well, my dear.

(He opens a fresh snap-open pack of Philip Morris. Miss McFetridge claps her hands delightedly when she hears the snap.)

MISS MCF: Hey, that fractures me! Man, I flip when I hear that crazy snap! Do another one.

PHIPPS: All right.

(He snaps open another pack of Philip Morris)

MISS MCF: (Ecstatically) Isn't that the living, breathing end? Do two at once.

PHIPPS: Well, if you insist . . .

(He does two at once)

MISS MCF: More! More!

PHIPPS: I'm afraid that's all I have.

MISS MCF: Oh . . . Well, what's up, prof? What did you want to see me about?

PHIPPS: Oh, nothing in particular. Just wanted to have a little chat, find out how you're enjoying the Shakespeare lectures.

MISS MCF: I don't know, prof. By me Shakespeare is strictly a square.

PHIPPS: Indeed? Well, I must say I find your attitude refreshing. One is so inclined toward slavish admiration when it comes to the Bard. People forget that in many quarters Shakespeare is regarded quite critically. Take, for example, the opinion of Shaw.

MISS MCF: Artie?

PHIPPS: George Bernard...You know, of course, his famous words.

MISS MCF: I sure don't, dad.

PHIPPS: Shaw said he would like to dig up Shakespeare and throw stones at him.

MISS MCF: Did he dig him?

PHIPPS: No, I don't believe so.

MISS MCF: I don't dig him either.

PHIPPS: (Looking at watch) Good heavens, I had no idea it was so late. Come, my dear, I'll drive you home.

MISS MCF: No, thanks. I always walk home. It's good for the circulation in your legs. I got the best circulation in my legs of the whole sophomore class. Ever notice how rosy my knees are?

PHIPPS: As a matter of fact, yes . . . Look, you sure you don't want a ride home? There's an excellent French movie on the way.

MISS MCF: Not me, dad. I hate French pictures. The sub-titles always disappear before I can read 'em. But if you want to go to the movies, there's a new Tony Curtis picture downtown — a real gut-buster. Tony plays this beggar, see, but he's really a prince only he doesn't know it on account of his sneaky uncle who switched babies when Tony got born. Then Tony finds this magic lamp, see, and he gets into the palace where he meets this crazy girl, only she's engaged to the fake prince, but then they have this mad sword fight, and Tony licks about a million guys, and then he finds out he's the prince and it's real crazy. Wanna go? I've only seen it three or four times.

PHIPPS: As a matter of fact, I just remembered a previous engagement. Sorry.

MISS MCF: That's all right. Thanks for the Philip Morris. 'Bye.

(Exit Miss McFetridge. For a moment Phipps sits in stunned silence, mopping his brow. Then a smile appears on his face. He is a happy man again — out of love. Contentedly he lights up a Philip Morris.)

Two Education, 1954, Graduates Return To Tell Future Teachers Of Experiences

Two 1954 graduates of UVM's College of Education and Nursing who are now teaching elementary grades in the Burlington area returned to UVM recently to meet with a large group of UVM senior girls who plan to enter teaching next year.

The two teachers, Miss Sara Upton of Burlington, who is now teaching fifth grade at the Flynn School in Burlington, and Jean Joslin of Waitsfield, sixth grade teacher at South Burlington's Central School, returned to UVM to give some 45 would-be teachers the benefit of their collective experience as new teachers. Both young women gave brief reviews of their experiences to date and then answered a variety of questions fired at them by the senior girls currently enrolled in elementary education courses.

Miss Upton told the group that "I was lucky to get a class of only 24 children, and was fortunate enough to have desks for all of them." She told of the plight of another new teacher who had 33 pupils in her class, but only 24 desks.

Miss Upton told the future teachers they would probably meet a shortage of materials when they got out into teaching. "We need pictures and display materials to put up on the bulletin board and around the room." she said, adding that " I nearly went broke at the Teachers Convention buying pictures, which the kids love."

She also said that she has to pay "out of my own pocket for any films I want to show my class," and advised the UVM students to begin now to clip magazines for pictures for use later. "Clip airplanes, tractors, farm scenes, anything, she said, "You'll be glad that you did."

The Burlington teacher told the UVMers that "my kids are all wonderful," and said, in answer to queries about discipline, that she had not experienced any particular problems. She described the only occasion on which she kept any of the youngsters after school.

" They came in froma play period," she said, " and didn't settle down. I just waited, watching the clock and not saying anything. They finally caught on after about 10 minutes, and I kept them after school for 20 minutes. I haven't had any talking problems since, and I haven't had to stay after school since."

Like Miss Upton, Miss Joslin also described herself as "lucky". She said she was teaching in a new school where new books and new desks were available for all members of her class of 12 boys and nine girls. "The surplus of boys is very nice," she confided.

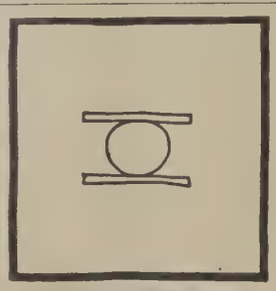
Unlike Miss Upton, she said that discipline bothered her at first, and advised "I think when you start out, it is better to stick to strict discipline."

She said that, at the outset, she permitted the children to pair up for study and work, which involved moving the desks together in rows of two. When it became obvious that the children were taking advantage of this privilege, Miss Joslin moved the desks back into single rows and then left it up to the pupils as to whether they kept the desks in rows or whether they could pair up again. The pupils chose to pair up and respected their re-won privilege, the South Burlington teacher reported.

Miss Joslin agreed with Miss Upton in telling the UVMers that "you can't have enough materials for the bulletin boards," and she recommended encouraging the pupils to bring in good pictures which they find in magazines at home as one means of keeping up a good supply.

She also advised that "you can never have enough for them to do," and said that it was important to try always to have a little stock of things ready for pupils who got ahead of scheduled activities.

Describing units of work, Miss Joslin said " right now I'm on Africa, and I have to keep track of everything. For instance, you have to know who governs the Union of South Africa and this means keeping up with current events since some of the texts you will have will be out of date. And of course," she added, "you can't teach out of date materials, so it means you have to keep up on your courses."



She concluded by saying that she had been treated "wonderfully" by the other teachers of her school who offered their help whenever she wants or needs it.

On the question of how much instruction ought to be written out, both young women agreed that "it helps to have what you want to say written out," but both cautioned against planning too far ahead in too much detail.

"Little kids can't be lectured to," Miss Upton declared. " They put up with a little of it, then begin to talk and wiggle. You've got to get them to participate," she concluded.

One of the student teachers asked Miss Upton and Miss Joslin how big a step they found it to be from practice teaching in the senior year at UVM to actual teaching following graduation. Both teachers replied that they found it "Not a big step at all," and both credited the teachers who supervised their student teaching as being responsible for making the jump easy for them.

The UVM seniors are making final preparations for their student teaching assignments under the supervision of Thomas C. King, dean of the College of Education and Nursing, and Leo W. O'Neill, assistant professor of education.

Lack Of Faculty Chaperons Hits Fraternity Functions

By David A. Spector

A breakdown of the new chaperon list, issued by the COSA office last week disclosed many pertinent facts about faculty attitudes towards student social functions. The list, the result of a questionaire answered by about half the faculty members, indicated the majority of the faculty does not want to chaperone any social functions undertaken by fraternities or sororities. For instance, our of the 194 individuals or couples who sent back the questionaire, 91 flatly refused to chaperone any function. A further breakdown revealed that 52 individual teachers, or couples, would be willing to attend fraternity house affairs; 58 would come to sorority house parties; 30 to mixers; 43 to campus informals; 48 to teas; 54 to beffets; 46 to exchange dinners; only 8 to outing club hikes; and probably most serious of all, only 26 would chaperone fraternity Kake Walk parties.

Kake Walk Problem

On the Kake Walk problem: each housd must have four chaperones (two couples). With 14 fraternities planning parties, and only 26 faculty volunteers to act as chaperones, a serious problem has arisen. Unless other members of the faculty decide to serve, obviously some fraternities will be unable to give parties.

Two main reasons have been advanced for this lack of response on the part of the faculty. The first is the lateness of the hour at which these parties are started. The second is the fact that most faculty members have full intention of following university and state laws which forbid giving liquor to minors.

Dean George V. Kidder stated "it is a comment on the types of Kakewalk parties given in the past, and also a comment on campus social affairs in general." Dean Kidder added that the faculty members who volunteer their services as chaperones feel responsible for what goes on in the parties." The whole question revolves around the use of liquor at these parties " "Under the best of conditionx the chaperon is not an honored guest, but merely a vestige of the university." He added that there is still no definite solution planned, not only on this campus, but on the national collegiate level.

Fraternity Opinions

Others are of the same opinion concerning the lack of available chaperones. Joseph Aidala, president of Kappa Sigma fraternity felt that " is you solve the drinking problem, the chaperone problem will solve itself."

Frank Carr, Social Chairman at Acacia, mentioned "the drinking problem is by far the greatest deterant to obtaining chaperones on this campus."

A Great Help

Donald Hardy, Coordinator of Student Affairs, also reaffirmed this concensus of opinion, and added that "it was unfortunate that more faculty members did not answer the questionaire to give a fuller picture of just who is available for what." He added that in his view "the faculty chaperone list is a great help to both teachers and students alike in that the students will contact only the willing

Rain, Rain, Go Away, or; Singin' In The Rain

By Barbara Zack

We happened to be taking our daily stroll around the airport one fine day last week, when some slight drops of precipitation soaked us to the skin and gently swept us into the red brick building. Wringing our our hair and flooding the floor with some odd form of moisture dripping from our newly acquired second-skins (better known as slickers), we presented quite a sight.

Rain

An absurd thought struck us! Could it be....?? Shamefacedly and heartbroken we had to admit to ourselves that it could be RAIN. We grabbed our trusty "Sunshine Club" buttons and leaped upstairs to find out if we could possibly be mistaken. A sign--U.S. WEATHER BUREAU stared us in the face. (If it were up to me, I wouldn't advertise a fact like that, but they seemed to be proud of it.) With a very blase air, we sauntered over the threshold, shaking for fear that our conviction could be correct. The impressive maps, machines clanging away untouched by human hands, and overall dignity of the office convinced us that this was the place to uncover in all its ugliness that nasty word R--N. A cheery weatherman (he hadn't looked out the window) greeted us. I shudder to recall the ensuing events.

Reign, Rein, Rain

I (meekly): "Excuse me, I wonder if you know anything about the --uh-- the -- rain (there, I said it!) that I've heard so much about?"

Cheery W.M.: "Reign, you say, rein?"

It didn't seem to ring a bell at first. Then his eyes lit up and a frost-bitten hand reached for a dictionary. Nothing there. Happily, we (continued on page eight)

Students Said "Yes" On Alma Mater Vote; No Plans Made

By Shirley O'Neill

Three weeks ago the student body, by a vote of 454 to 164, passed a referendum calling for a new Alma Mater to replace "Champlain". Today the situation is at a standstill. The students as a whole have expressed a feeling that UVM should have a new Alma Mater, but no definite plans have been made to carry this suggestion into effect.

Three years ago, a group of students began a movement to collect a repertoire of Vermont songs and make them available to the Student Body. This group, headed by Josephine Norton, '52, had no specific idea for the adoption of a new Alma Mater, although it was felt that a suitable song might be included among the different ones submitted. There was also no thought given to the judging or rating of the various songs submitted.

Student interest in the movement gradually declined until last year. Then a letter was sent out to the Alumni asking for suggestions or songs. However, none were submitted, and interest again died down until the recent passage of the referendum.

And now things are again at a standstill. However, some definite action must be taken soon in order to satisfy the wishes of the students. According to Professor Howard G. Bennett, the Music Department would be glad to help in the judging of any songs that are submitted, for some sort of professional advice might be helpful. Professor Bennett also emphasized the need for all songs which are being considered to be performed before the student body. For the success of a new Alma Mater will depend upon whether the students really accept it, like it, and, most important, sing it.

Professor Bennett also pointed out the difficulty of writing an Alma Mater, a type of music which can be neither a pep song nor a hymn. He declared that if any students feel they have a song, but cannot put it down on paper, the music students would be glad to help them.

Miss Betty Bandel of the English Department, who was faculty adviser to the committee of three years ago, commented, "I still like very much the idea of increasing the number of Vermont songs available, and I think we would make much more progress if we had that idea uppermost in our minds." She offered the suggestion that any student who is able to write only the words might consult the music of the Hopkins brothers, all UVM alumni, who were composers of church music and hymns. Miss Bandel feels that their music, which can be found in almost any Protestant Episcopal hymnal, would be admirably suited for an Alma Mater.

The students have expressed their opinion; some campus group must now translate this proposal into definite action.

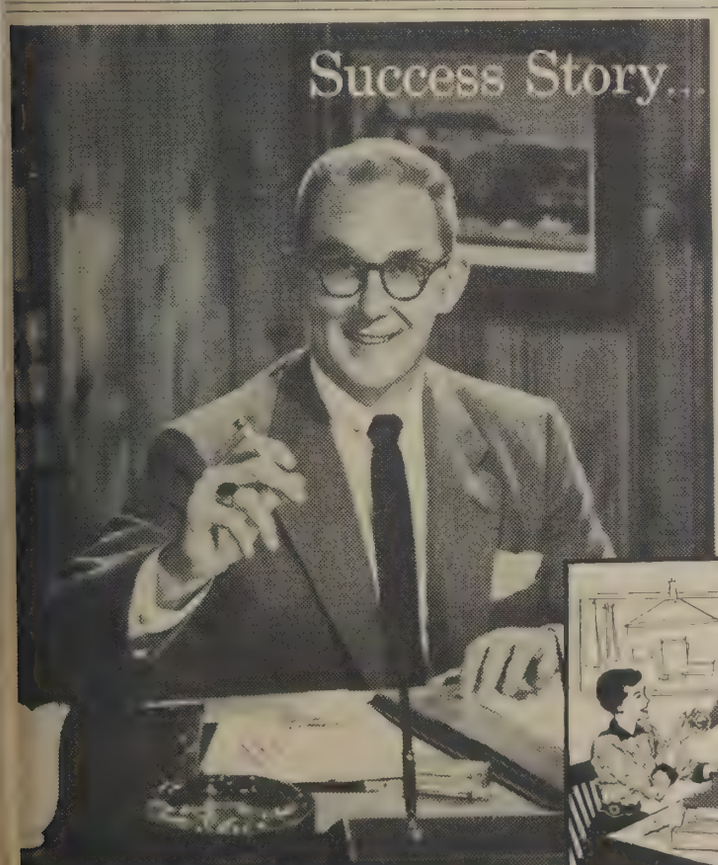
Newman Club Retreat To Begin December Third

This year the Newman's Club Retreat will be held from December third to the fifth at the Bishop De Goesbriand Chapel and is open to anyone who wishes to attend. Father Ford will be this year's Retreat Master.



The Retreat is what is known as an open Retreat where a priest comes here and gives sermons or talks to the students on applied religion and problems we are apt to meet. You are then given time to collect your spiritual thoughts and think about them. The Retreat Master conducts four or five conferences and you can go to him at any time to talk to him. The difference between the open retreat and a closed retreat is that at a closed retreat you don't talk to anyone.

The purpose of the retreat is "to increase our spiritual power and to replenish the energy of our perseverance and resistance."

Publicity Chairman, Judy O'Connor, speaking for the Newman Club said, "We feel all will benefit from this retreat and therefore, urge you all to attend." The Guardian, the paper published by the Newman Club will be out before the Thanksgiving recess.

they can to make the guests feel welcome. It is also amazing that the tournament always runs on time and very few hitches of any kind are encountered anywhere along the line.

"Printed results are always prepared quickly, which is no mean task in itself. This is one of the largest, if not the event of its kind in the country, as far as number of debaters is concerned. "

Vermont Varsity

Professor Charles Helgeson will handle the UVM teams in the tournament. The UVM varsity includes: Affirmative; Claire Battles and Leonard Kronman, Herb Simons and Max Ansbacher, Cynthia Wooster and Pat May, and Negative; Ed English and Herzl Spiro, Leonie Strachan and John Burgess, and Marv Levy and Marshall Kroot. The UVM novice teams will have fourteen people on a variety of teams.

Vassar, City College of New York, Fordham Education, and Holy Cross, one of the strongest debate teams in New England will be participating in this tournament for the first time.

Five Rounds

There will be two rounds of debate on Friday, one at 7 PM and one at 8:45 PM. Saturday there will be three rounds, one at 10:30 AM, one at 1:30 PM and the last one at 3:30 PM. The tournament will end with a banquet in Waterman Cafeteria at 6:45 PM Saturday evening. After the banquet the debate coaches will have a Chit-Chat Hour at Huber's Shideway at Pine Haven Shore in Shelburne.

The main purpose of this tournament is to learn how to debate. There will be no winner, although each team will have a record of wins and losses. The results will be announced at the banquet on Saturday evening.

One of the main features of the tournament will be the transportation system of "Walkie-Talkies ", a system which is unique from coast to coast. The central operating point will be the second floor of Waterman and all arrangements will be made from there. The registration desk and headquarters for the tournament will be there, and any problem will be taken care of within minutes. Cars will be provided for guests.

Chairman of the tournament will be Jerry Quinn, with Susan Wakefield as Assistant Chairman. Rusty Clark will be Banquet Chairman and Rudy Deetjen will be chairman of the coaches' Chit-Chat Hour.

Another feature of the weekend will be a breakfast on Saturday morning at eight o' clock of the ten schools who are members of the North Eastern District of Tau Kappa Alpha, the Honorary Forensic Fraternity.

Rain Reigns

Perhaps we meant the precipitation that occurred 22 days in the month of June, 1954, 22 days in July, 20 in August, 21 days in September, and only 18 days in the dry month of October--Perhaps this meager coincidence was what we were referring to as "rain ". If we were going to be so technical, they insisted, they would concede that we were right. If we meant Carol, Edna, and Hazel, and the fact that the "rainfall " above normal has been averaged to 5.31 inches recently, again the Bureau said they would consider using that word. But, after all, what's twenty days of rain out of thirty---when the normal is one day out of four?

Reins Reign Rain

Convinced that it hadn't really been raining so much anyway, we expressed our thanks and opened the door. To our astonishment it was the wrong one--it lead to a large chamber packed with water-filled balloons set up with a highly intricate system of straight pins prepared to explode over our fair city of Burlington, at the fancy of our cheery weatherman.

A blood drawing will be held in the Student Lounge on December 6. A quota of 200 pints has been set. The drawing is being sponsored by Key and Serpent and Staff and Sandal.

Court Squad Readies For Opener Thirteen Days Away

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

I stood there on the campus green, watching old Ira Allen for a few moments. His "Beck like" legs stood in a rigid position. His "Semans" hands didn't stir an inch. He had a smile on his face. A sort of "Ed Donnelly after the 1954 Football Season" smile. He was pleased.

Ira's eyes were gleaming. I could see the reflexion in his eyes. It wasn't an oval shaped reflexion, but rather a rounded one. Then his face became serious and he expressed a wondrous look. I knew then that he had turned his thoughts toward basketball, toward Fuzzy Evans and the ensuing season. I read his thoughts!

Ira couldn't quite promulgate an over all opinion of this years court squad. Too many question marks! "With only two ballplayers having more than a year of Varsity Competition (Jampolis and Steinman) its hard to give my boys the nod experience wize", Ira seemed to say. "Don't forget Steinman was out for a half of a year."

"As for as condition is concerned we usually have some footballers on our squad, but this year all of the boys are starting from scratch."

"We lost starters like Captain Al Malinverni, point score breaking Nat Campana, Cynic's most valuable player Jerry Samuels, and versatile Marv Wolff. That's a mighty big chunk off of the hard woods all at once."

"We've got our big question marks too! Bill King, a big boy, showed some snap last year, and he could come around big this year, and yet. . . ."

"Billy Mann and Skippy Burkhardt last years, Mr. Inside and Outside, of the freshman team, have yet to taste Varsity competition."

"Bob Lovejoy, a bear off the backboards, is back, but we face some pretty big boys this year, and his lack of height may curtail his backboard strength."

"We've got potential in Stone. He's got speed.""Every turn brings a question mark"."Tough schedule we have this year", thought Ira. Some pretty tough battles coming up, Not a "breather" in sight." Then Ira's serious look faded and his broad smile returned. I knew he was thinking that Fuzzy's boys would shape up! "There are a lot of question marks now, but the team should do well," Ira thought. And so do I.

Gold plated footballs go to Ed Donnelly for his move which prohibited drinking at Football games. After this prohibition was installed, freshmen could even bring their parents to games. Students made much more noise, directed toward the field. Spirits were high instead of the students or to quote the coach", spirits were on the outside instead of the inside."

Harvard followed suit last week by placing the same ban at their gridiron encounters.

Taking a wide eyed view this football season was a winner in more ways than one. Spiritually, it raised the campus one mile up.

Apology for one of the football articles of two weeks ago. It was an unexplainable slip up which occasionally happens in newspaper work, and it is embarrassing to all concerned.

Coach Picks Twenty Frosh On Court Team

By Ron Smith

The Freshman Basketball team under Coach Ralph Lapointe will open its 11 game season Dec. 3 at Spaulding High School. At the present time there are 20 men on the squad after the first cut on Monday.

Lapointe has his hands full with twenty men and most of them out of condition except for the large number of football players on the team. Coach Lapointe in his second year at the helm of the Frosh team stated that conditioning and fundamentals are always the most important part of Freshman sports.

Tough Opponents

This year the Frosh have an eleven game schedule that shows home and home arrangements with the Dartmouth Frosh, Middlebury Frosh, Norwich Frosh, St. Michael's JV's, Lindon STC, and one game away with Spaulding High School "5". The schedule is especially tough because of the lack of height on the team.

Coach Lapointe hopes to improve on his mediocre record of 5-5 of last season.

WRA

Meeting

The October meeting of the Women's Recreation Association was held in the Southwick Lounge Thursday, October 28. Joan Armstrong '57 was elected Vice President, and Mary Alice Leete '56 was elected Junior Representative. At the meeting the Constitution was revised and accepted. President Joan Tindall presided over the meeting. Those attending the meeting were the members of the executive council, sports representatives, and women's physical education instructors.

Sports Day

The Fall Season was concluded with a trip to Skidmore College for a play day. Vermont sent its hockey team, two tennis players, and two archers. Other colleges attending the meet were Russell sage, Green Mountain Junior College, Middlebury College, and Albany College.

Hockey

Katie Warren '57 of Chatham, New Jersey was elected manager of the hockey team for the 1955 season.

New Season

The first winter season began November 1. The club schedule for this season is as follows:

Badminton	-	M W F
Basketball	-	T Th F
Bowling	-	Th 3:30
Dance	-	T 7:30
Sq. Dance	-	T 7:30
Swimming	-	M 3:00

Ed Beck Ties With Sticka For New England Scoring

Eddie Beck, UVM's little All American Candidate, scored seventy two points this season, enough to give him a tie with Charlie Sticka, of Trinity College, for the New England individual scoring title.

Both men played seven games, scoring twelve touchdowns apiece for a better than ten points per game average.

Sticka Scores Finale

Going into last Saturday's game with Weslyan, Sticka needed one touchdown to even the count. Since UVM had finished it's season the week before, Beck had run his time out. Sticka scored in the last period of the Weslyan game which incidentally gave his team an undefeated, untied season. UVM had a 5-1-1 season's record.

Century Sid Watson, of Northeastern took third place honors on nine touchdowns and ten after touchdown conversions.

The showings of Beck and Sticka were even more remarkable considering the fact that many New England schools play eight game schedules while Vermont and Trinity get seven game tries for the goal line.

Beck's Fabulous Record

Beck carried the pigskin 105 times gaining a total of 620 yards rushing, 68 yards passing for a total of 688 yards gained. This, along with his 72 points scored, set new records for an individual Catamount in seasons play. Beck, a junior, will be back next season much to the dismay of his opponents.

Umass Places Five On Vermont 1954 All Opponent Team

Five members of the University of Massachusetts football team were selected to UVM's 1954 All-Opponent team, it was announced.

The Vermont team, which was polled on Monday following their closing 30-6 win over Middlebury, named Don McPhee (U- Mass.) as the most outstanding all-around player they faced in '54, and rated the Massachusetts team their toughest opponents of the season.

McPhee, a guard who impressed most observers in his visit to Burlington, is being considered for Little All America recognition by area writers. An interesting note in the "toughest team" selection was that only two teams were mentioned. U-Mass. collected 19 votes, and the Dartmouth "B" team 13. That placed the Big Green Jayvees above such teams as Maine, Middlebury, Norwich and Rochester in the opinions of the Catamount squad.

Beside the five Redmen on the Vermont All-Opponent eleven, there were two representatives from Maine and Rochester, and one each from Middlebury and Norwich.

The selections were: ends - George Stampfli (ROCHESTER U.), and Frank McDermott (MASSACHUSETTS); tackles - Lou Kirsch (MASSACHUSETTS), and Hal Higgins (MIDDLEBURY); guards- Don McPhee (MASSACHUSETTS), and Little All American Tom Golden (MAINE); center - Bruce McPherson (ROCHESTER U.); halfbacks - Dick Wright (MASSACHUSETTS) and Don Paasalacqua (NORWICH); quarterback - John Noble (MASSACHUSETTS), and fullback - Ernie Smart (MAINE).

Honorable mention went to backs Tom Gibbons (ROCHESTER) and Sonny Dennis (MIDDLEBURY), QB Reed of Union College, end Ken Woodsum (MAINE), and tackle Tom Bechler (DARTMOUTH "B".)

Vermont ended the '54 season with a 5- 1-1 record, with their only defeat being a three point decision to Maine.

New Hampshire, 4-0, Wins Yankee Conf. Football Laurels

The University of New Hampshire Wildcats clinched the Bean Pot (Yankee Conference) with a spotless 4-0 record. Rhode Island took second by defeating UConn last week.

New Hampshire's big gun Billy Pappas burned up the league again this year by completing over 70 passes, for over 1000 yards, and 14 touchdowns.

At the northern end of the conference, Maine and Vermont were nailing down their respective state series championships with consummate ease, the former winning over Bowdoin 27- 13, and Vermont rolling over Middlebury 30-6. Each had a clean sweep in State series play, after breaking even in their conference engagements.

Hal Westerman's Maine Bears closed out a successful 5-2 record, losing only to Rhode Island and New Hampshire. Vermont, under Eddie Donnelly, finished only three points away from an undefeated season, their lone defeat being a 23-20 loss to Maine. The Catamounts were tied by Union but won their last five games.

Massachusetts closed a season, which started with three straight wins, including its first over Harvard, and then ran into four straight defeats, against Tufts at Medford last week-end.

New Hampshire, beaten only by Delaware 19-13, finished with at 7-1 record at the expense of Springfield in the 29th meeting of these traditional foes at Durham's Cowell Stadium.

3-2 Offensive Says Fuzzy Evans; Fifteen On Team

By Mark Bernstein

For the past two weeks Coach Fuzzy Evans has been conducting tedious drills and scrimmages in order to cut his squad down to the fifteen minimum men and also prepare the team for its first game, December 1. Last Saturday amidst the flashing of cameras and interested reporters and spectators, fifteen men stood on the gymnasium floor representing this years 1954-55 Catamount team. Art Burkhardt, Ray Flannery, Bill King, Bob Lovejoy, Bill Mann, Earl Steinman, Herb Brown, Keith Jampolis, Jack Lafave, Dick Stein, Barry Stone, Roland Massimino, Dick Dennis, Art Lambert, Hal Moore.

This years team boasts of a fine offensive team with plenty of height. Coach Evans stated that the team is in top condition and is hustling and showing more spirit than clubs previous to this one. Offensively the Cats will play a 3-2 type of ball. Three men on the outside and two on the inside, leaving the inside open. Coach Evans feels that this type of ball is best suited to his personnel. As of now Burkhardt, Mann, King, Steinman, Jampolis and Lovejoy form the nucleus of this years team.

Defensive progress will be further exploited over the Thanksgiving vacation. While most students go home the team stays here and holds two practice games with the Ethan Allen Air Force base. One practice game has already been played between the first and second club with the first team holding a 30 point spread.

CATNIPS: Sophomores Burkhardt and Mann setting the pace. . . . . Offensively the team is a threat but Fuzzy is not satisfied with shooting. . . . . .Emphasis is being placed on foul shooting, last year five out of the seven games were lost on the foul line. .

Sgt. Stockard Sees Good Year For AF Riflers

By Norm Fishkin

Under the leadership of Sgt. Stockard, the Air Force Rifle Team is looking forward to another successful year. The boys have already defeated Dartmouth in an early season meet.

Tough Schedule Ahead

This year looks tougher to the marksmen than those in the past as the schedule bears such schools as: Dartmouth, U. of Conn., Colby, Tufts, Montana State, U. of Penn., Florida State U., Purdue, Holy Cross, Yale, Cornell, and Brown.

Freshmen Excell

The majority of the members of the team are inexperienced freshman who, although they lack past performance, have the makings of great marksmen according to Stockard. These youths, although talented, have a tough standard to uphold as last years team left a glamourous 10-2 record. The team will shoot here at UVM and mail the results to the opposition while the advasaries do the same at their respec- schools.

Hearst - Biggest Meet

The Hearst Tournament , at which the teams will appear in person, is the biggest national meet which the team will enter. Last year the UVM entry placed third in the New England Area.

The big Four!! (Bottom) Larry Damon and Bill White (Top), Frank Evans and Bill Battles are the nucleus of Ski Coach Charlie Traverse's Ski Team which is looking forward to one of its most successful years this coming season, which is incidentally, just around the corner!

Battles, Damon Lead Skimen In Daily Work

By Dick Lewis

The University of Vermont Ski Team began workouts last week in preparation for the 1954-1955 season. Co-captains Bill Battles and Larry Damon have been leading the daily workouts as the boys get in shape for their first meet of the season - the Giant Slalom and Cross-Country Race at Franconia, N. H. on December 11-12. The workouts, light up until now, have included calisthenics and running which serve to develop the wind and strengthen the legs.

Good Nucleus

Other returning lettermen include Clint Thompson, Frank Evans, Gerry Baril, Don Grady and Al Duval. Besides the lettermen named above, a large number of freshmen and sophomores have been working out with the team. Charlie Traverse, UVM Ski Coach, has the nucleus of a good all-around team that has the potentialities that are needed to beat such strong competition as Middlebury and Norwich.

Big Schedule

The Varsity Ski Schedule is a busy one for the coming season. As of the first of the year, the Catamount Skiers will be on the move every weekend, competing in scheduled meets as well as in USEASA sanctioned tournaments for individual honors. Perhaps the biggest test that the team will face is at the Middlebury Carnival where the tryouts will be held for the NCAA Championships to be held at Norwich University on March 5 & 6, 1955.

Help to support your UVM Ski Team by attending a showing of Hans Thorners film, SKIS AND STRANGERS, to be shown in the UVM Gym on Tuesday evening November 30.

"Skiers and Strangers," a 90 minute colored sound skiing movie produced and presented by Hans Thomer of Manchester's Bromley ski area, will be presented in the UVM gymnasium at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 30.

Vermont's ski coach, Charlie Traverse, said that the Catamount ski team had made arrangements to bring Thomer's movie, taken in Europe during the last two winters, to Burlington.

World champions will be shown in action during actual events with a highlight of the picture featuring Andrea Mead Lawrence's championship slalom run of two years ago in Austria.

S A Council Ran Up Deficit Last Year, Recent Audit Reveals Assumed Surplus Existed

By Bradley Gordon

Money, money, who's got the money?

A recent auditing of Student Association accounts has revealed that the Council overspent its budget last year by $5,738.84. Of this amount, $4,398.09 was tied up in the Student Union Fund when the Council and Student Association Treasurer somehow assumed that a surplus existed. George Clerkin, Ass't. University Treasurer revealed last week that while the students assumed a surplus, in reality a rather large deficit was incurred.

The revelation has set off a flurry of controversy which revolves around the present Student Association Treasurer, Carl Brown, and, the Council President, George Lucchina. Lucchina was SA Treasurer last year, when the deficit arose.

Legality, Wisdom

The main currents of the debate revolve around the legality and wisdom of leaving the "surplus" in the new Student Union Fund.

Although the Council has voted to leave the money "as is", a number of Council members are opposed to the decision. It is Brown's contention that the money should be withdrawn from the Union Fund to help defray the deficit. Council members in agreement with Brown found themselves in the minority when a vote was taken on the question.

Following Lucchina, the majority of the Council, however, voted against the withdrawal. It is their plan to approach the University Administration in an attempt to change the present manner of transferring the Student Activities Fee from the Administration to the Student Association account. If the Administration concurs, the Council will have an extra $5,000.00 on hand this year to defray the amount that they are behind.

Present And Proposed Systems

At present, approximately $37,000 a year is paid to the University by students in the form of the $7.50 per semester Activity Fee. The Administration withholds approximately $6,000 per semester and turns it over to the Student Administration account the following semester.

Under the suggested plan, the University would withhold only $1000 per semester. Therefore, last semester's $6,000, which has already been transferred to the student account, would be combined with this semester's $6,000 which is being withheld for next semester plus that which would ordinarily be withheld next semester for the first semester of the 1955-56 season.

It all seems rather complicated, but in substance SA will have an extra $5,000 at its disposal this semester. This amount would bring down the deficit to practically nothing and the money in the Student Union Fund would not be needed to defray the difference.

The University started withholding one-third of the semester's activity fee in 1945 when a very large number of veterans were on campus and were paying their fees through the Veterans Administration. The VA was usually slow in paying the University and it was economically sound to hold back the approximate $6,000 so that SA would not fall behind in their budgeting.

It would be this original $6,000 which was withheld from the 1945 SA budget at the inception of the present system which would find its way back into the Student Association account.

It is only at the changeover from the present system to the suggested new plan that the total income for the year would be greater than normal. The total derived from Activity Fees would still be the same, and future Councils will still get the same amount.

Council members will meet with President Borgmann soon to work out the intricacies of the suggested new system.

Kappa Phi Kappa Initiates Nine

The Alpha Gamma chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, professional education fraternity, initiated nine students last week. The initiation ceremonies were held at Southwick.

Those initiated were Richard A. Lafreniere, '57; Robert Jersen, '55; Melvin L. Dunphy, '57; George J. Giffen Graduate School; Frank Lucarrelli, '55; William H. Davis, Graduate School; Basil J. Cook, Graduate School; Robert Hope, '57; and Joseph Kivlin, '55.

Six of the initiates are Vermont residents. The other three are from the states of Maine, New York, and Ohio.

Debaters Tie For Top Spot At Hall Of Fame Tournament

UVM, in a three-way tie for first, placed second by points, in the Hall of Fame Tournament debates at New York University Heights last week. With such outstanding schools as Wake Forest, George Washington University, Dartmouth, Harvard, St. Peters, Wesleyan and Temple University present UVM ended in a three-way tie with Georgetown University and St. Johns University, each winning six, losing two. The tie was broken by counting individual points which gave Georgetown first, UVM second, and St. Johns third.

For UVM the affirmative team was Herb Simons, '56, and John Travis, '58. The negative team was Marvin Levy, '57, and Marshall Kroot, '55.

The Affirmative team met and lost to St. Johns in the first round. In the second round, they defeated Harper College. In the third round they defeated Hamilton, and Fordham met the same fate in the fourth round.

Declare Tie

The Negative team met and defeated Morgan State, Temple University, and Wesleyan in the first, second and third rounds respectively. In the fourth round St. Johns nosed out UVM by small margin.

At the end of the eight rounds, the Tournament Chairman declared a three-way tie. Georgetown, St. Johns, and UVM tied with six wins and two losses. The tie was broken by adding up the team's point records which ranked UVM second.

Squad Victory

The coaching for this tournament was done by Prof. Robert Huber, head of the speech department, and Prof. Charles Helgesen, director of debate. Prof. Helgesen said that "The key to the success of Vermont in this tournament was not only a result of the hard work of the boys who debated, but also the result of the assistance that they received in their preparation for the tournament from Herzl Spiro, Ed English, and John Burgess. This was a squad victory rather than a team victory."

Howard Thurman, Dean Of BU Chapel Here After Recess

Dr. Howard Thurman, a prominent Protestant minister who is Dean of the Chapel of Boston University, will be at UVM on the 7th and 8th of January. His visit has been arranged by the Student Christian Association in cooperation with the Burlington Protestant youth groups.

Outstanding Preacher

Howard Thurman is described as, "a pioneer, mystic, scholar, poet -- all the titles are his. Many people, thinking of his ideal -- the easing of all barriers between God and man -- have added another: prophet." The above is from the lead article in the "Atlantic" of October last year by Jean Burden. The article continued, "Dr. Thurman has been recognized for years as one of the country's outstanding preachers."

At noon, there will be a student-faculty luncheon, in the faculty dining room on the 3rd floor of Waterman. The first address of Dr. Thurman will be given at this gathering. Tickets are $1.00 per person.

During the afternoon, an informal discussion will be held in the Student Council Room. It is reported that as the excess of students arrive the discussion and Dr. Thurman will move up to room 36 Waterman.

At 6:00 p.m. there will be an informal supper followed at 8:00 p.m. by a discussion in the Student Lounge which will be concluded by Dr. Thurman's own worship service.

At 8:00 a.m. on the 8th of January there will be an informal discussion period. Individuals can see Dr. Thurman personally in the Student Council Room between 9:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon.

According to the "Atlantic," Dr. Thurman's humor is as famous as his eloquence the unself-conscious grin the rollicking laughter, particularly at himself, the mischief that always seems to lurk behind his eyes. His favorite distraction after a hard day's schedule is reported to be reading detective stories.

The students who have headed the committees which are bringing Dr. Thurman to UVM are: Stanley Rossier steering committee; Glen Dewey, publicity; and Marilyn Royal, finance.

SA Cuts Debate Club Budget; Drop Funds For Faculty Coaches

By Max Ansbacher

The Student Association Council heatedly debated the question at its meeting last week "Resolved: that the Lawrence Debate Club be granted the full amount of its proposed budget." The debate appeared to go to the affirmative when the Council voted the Club 99% of its budget and passed a resolution urging the University to pay a meal allowance to coaches who go on Student Association sponsored debate tournaments.

Over half of the meeting was spent discussing the proposed budget for the Hall of Fame tournament, and most of this discussion was over the item of $40 for meals. The amount had been approved by the Council in the Spring and placed in contingency for this purpose.

Emotions Show

For a while the discussion seemed to become quite emotional. Those in favor of granting the full amount to the debate club were voted down at first, but by using their knowledge of parliamentary law the proponents of the budget managed to get the matter voted upon for a total of four times, finally winning the last vote.

Carl Brown, SA treasurer, was prompted to remark, "It seems that after having decided upon semething the council members become emotional and then vote again after having changing their minds. I wonder if we will ever cut the budget using this method."

Huber — Commitments

The Student Association Council also voted the Student Christian Association $100 for the Christian Weekend in January at which Dr. Howard Thurman will speak. Four hundred and thirty dollars was granted to the Round Table for its Christmas Open House. The Debate Club had transferred from reserve to its active fund $120 for its state discussion program, $150 for the Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament, and the $178 plus $10 additional for the already mentioned Hall of Fame Tournament.

According to Professor Robert Huber, chairman of the department of speech, "The Student Association ought to live up to its commitments. Our budget was discussed and passed last year. We counted on that money when we decided upon which tournaments we wanted to attend. If the Student Association is going to renege we just can't operate the debate club the way we are now."

SA Funds to Faculty?

Many members of the Council feel that putting money into reserve for a particular event places no obligation upon the council to put the money into an active account, but rather that the reserve merely gives the council the opportunity to decide at a later date whether the money should be used for that purpose or not.

Most of the discussion was over the disagreement, as to whether the Student Association should give money to members of the faculty. Herzl Spiro pointed that when coaches went along on debate trips they were part of the operational expense, and even saved the Association money by making

WRUV Makes Official Opening After Vacation; Houses Wired

"It took us five years, but we're finally on the air and ready to roll. Believe me, it really feels great." Ted Muller, station manager of UVM's campus radio station, WRUV, was far from unhappy when he informed the CYNIC early this week that the station would open officially on the Monday that classes resume after Christmas vacation. WRUV is on the dial at 570.

The first "official" program will be heard at 7 PM, January 23, a fifteen-minute news show by Dick Hooker, and programs will continue until midnight.

The station has been on the air several times during the year, each instance being a trial period for the staff. The broadcasting and engineering staffs have had plenty of work under actual conditions and are now ready to open officially and permanently.

Closed Circuit

On Monday the Pomeroy Hall studios will beam the shows into the three men's dorms, plus Grassmount, Converse, and Redstone Campus, particularly Coolidge Hall. If the transmitter in Grassmount is strong enough, all the fraternity and sorority houses on Main Street will also pick up the station. The signal is on a closed circuit and only the residences which have direct wires will be able to receive. A transmitter is installed in each of the residences; if it is powerful enough, residences in the immediate area will be able to receive the signal also, even though there is no direct wire.

Those dormitories without transmitters at the present time will be wired into the system in "the very near future."

"There are so many details that the students do not understand about the mechanics of the problems we have faced," Muller explained. "For all we know, we may go on the air January 3, and some of the dorms may be unable to pick up the broadcasts."

Rival Any

The WRUV record collection is equal to, if not greater than, any other radio collection in Vermont. "And we have additions every day of brand-new releases," the station manager said. "Our programs will rival every local station in quality," he added.

According to Muller, the greatest amount of credit should go to the station engineers. "Without them we'd have never come this far so fast. Bob Newcomb, one of our chief engineers, has done a magnificent job. He knows radio inside out," Muller continued. "Ed Nugent, Doc Willard, and Carlton Hesselton also are deserving of a great deal of credit." The engineers have spent several weeks on the production of each transmitter that has been installed to date.

Self-Sufficient

Last week the station was notified that it was accepted into the membership of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System. National advertising is obtained through the Collegiate Radio Corporation.

The station was granted a Student Association allocation last year to start them on their way. Since that time WRUV has become self-sufficient, drawing its funds from national and local advertisers. Campus organizations can sponsor shows or advertise over the campus

(Reading time: 45 seconds)

Here Don Garland makes noise distribution measurements with a Level Distribution Recorder

"My job is to help solve problems of noise and other interference on telephone lines due to power interference. Inductive co-ordination is the technical term for the work.

"First thing the Chief Engineer explained to me was that 'all the answers aren't in the book.' He was right. Most of the problems have required a combination of electrical engineering, a knowledge of costs and generous amount of ingenuity. I like it that way. It's given me an immediate opportunity to put into practice the theory I learned at school.

"In addition to this on-the-job experience, I have attended several special training courses conducted by the company. Now I'm breaking in a new man, just like when I started."

Don Garland's work is typical of many engineering assignments in the Bell Telephone Companies. There are similar opportunities for college graduates with Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation. If you'd like to get more details, see your Placement Officer. greetings & budgets

We know it's that season again. The skiers have been treking to Stowe, and returning at the end of an invigorating day windblown and healthy-looking. Some make it back to campus in good shape. But there are those who return with the now familiar crutches. We got a few laughs the other day when one particular female turned up as a two-time loser.

It's Christmas in the air; it's the season that so many look forward to from the first day of classes; it's snow-time at Stowe.

To all of you...the students and faculty and administration...the entire staff of the VERMONT CYNIC wishes a hearty, warm, Merry Christmas.

As this column was being written we had no idea of how the Student Association Council would handle the question of Lawrence Debate Club allocations at their meeting yesterday. However, a few comments may be in order.

Included in the Debate Budget is one portion of money which is used to finance the meals and travel expenses of the faculty coaches (Professors Huber and Helgesen) who accompany the teams on their debate trips. It is the contention of the Council that faculty expenses should be met by the University, not by Student Association funds. We grant this point to the Council. Student funds should rightly be channelled to students.

However, to pull the allocation out from under the debaters at this time is neither wise, nor just. UVM's Debate Teams are among the outstanding in the nation. Just this weekend the team tied for first place in New York's Hall of Fame Tournament.

Last Thursday it was the intention of the Council to cut the allocation of the Lawrence Debate Club, specifically the portion of the allocation which was to pay for the Coach who was to make the trip.

The Debate Club submitted a budget last year which included an allocation for Coaches' expenses. The Council at that time put its stamp of approval on the figures submitted.

The Debate Club this year justly assumed that the funds would be made available. For the SA Council to do an about face at this stage of the game "just ain't fair." The obligations assumed by the Council last semester should be fulfilled by this year's Council. Any changes in policy should apply to the future.

To the Lawrence Debate Club and the SA Council we make this suggestion: Sit down with President Borgmann and iron out the problem for future years.

To President Borgmann we suggest: The responsibility of the Administration in this case is clear. A sufficient portion of the funds which the University now grants the Lawrence Debate Club should be earmarked for Coaches' expenses. In this event, the SA Council would then make up the remainder of the funds to bring the total University and SA debate allocation (minus the amount set aside for the coaches) back up to the original.

Student Association would possibly then be allocating even more to the Debate Club than they are now. But, their allocation would be covering student expenses rather than faculty.

THE BEST LAID PLANS OF MICE

By Gary Wright

Professor Meebly skated thirty feet, stopped in the position of a football center, and surveyed Billings from between his legs. Coming slowly erect, he extended his left arm, tilted his head, and cautiously advanced his left foot. This action then completed, he assumed the position of The Dying Swan and slowly moved his right foot. With an obscure Comanche Snake Howl, he hurled his briefcase a good forty feet, described a twisting arc, and came to a quivering rest with his head imbedded in the icy sidewalk.

By a magnificent stretch of imagination, I just so happened to chance by this time. Luckily, I had equipped myself for mid-winter campus crossing with pick-axe, crampons, ninety-feet of rope, a large keg of rum (with a small St. Bernard attached), several twists of lemon peel, and a copy of The Bartenders Guide.

I poured a jolt through the professor's clenched teeth and was pleased to see his nose return to its healthy purple.

"Gladstone, my boy, you are a gentleman and a scholar," he wheezed. "Give me three fingers more."

I handed him Three Fingers Moore and he thrashed him unmercifully.

"I didn't know you were compelled to make the Trek," I said.

"Gregory, " he grunted, lifting himself to his feet and brushing his coat with my textbooks. "It has been my lot in the past to attend my office in a leisurely manner, frisking with wads of carbon paper, and generally raising hob in general, so to speak. This year, however, it is my misfortune to mush unceremoniously every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday across this satan-inspired tundra to deliver a class in Unknown Contemporary Sixteenth Century Australian Scenario Writers and Gagmen."

"Sounds as rough as my course in Letters to the Editors Writing," I offered.

"Absolutely no comparison, Gruesby. How about another shot?"

He produced a pistol and fired several times in the direction of the gym.

"Not bad," I observed. "You drilled the begger clean."

"Gunga Din," he grated, handing me a bucket, "You have a shot."

I shied the pail at a bearded senior.

"Too bad," he dronned. "You cleaned the beggers drill."

"Perhaps, Sir, you could tell me how to oust a family of mice from my typewriter," I pleaded.

"Oust!" He roared.

"Yes, sir, oust," I repeated.

"Wouldst be so cruel as to oust?" He spread his hand imploringly.

"But, sir," I cried. "They ride on the carriage, ring the bell incessantly, and add unnecessary punctuation."

"All this from one little family?"

"Little!" I fairly bellowed. "There were twenty-one at last census and Caesar only knows how many more by now. Little indeed! There are ten baby-tads that do nothing but pound the asterisk, get caught in the space bar, and work the belaboring Zeus out of the Miracle Tab."

"The best laid plans of mice and men go ape, Greeley. But I must off," He drew his coat around him in the manner of fashionable togas. "Good day, Georgetown."

"Good morrow to you, dear old Professor Meebly."

I gathered my gear and plunged into the Bush on a trail fraught with adventure and covered with rue.

All I Want For Christmas...

Dear Santa Claus,

I had my first college interview last weekend. Gee, I was scared, but everything turned out okay. Some of the students guided me around campus. It was nice, but hilly and cold. I saw the sand dunes, the Golf course, and battery park. Pretty scenery! Then I had my first college meal at Robinson, Saturday night, baked beans, Later I went to my first fraternity party with a real live fraternity man. It was a rip-roaring affair. Downstairs I couldn't see two feet in front of me and couldn't hear what I was drinking. Upstairs was enticingly different. In one lighted room sat four chaperones playing scrabble. The rest of the rooms were gloomily lit by occasional red lights to scare the wild animals away. Here we danced and danced and danced...? The bell rang at 12 o'clock, and we cleared out pronto. Mt. Mansfield is certainly beautiful at curfew hour. I dashed into the dorm, observed by pincurled girls enviously staring out the window, with but a few seconds to spare. Cinderella was safe! The girls were certainly nice to me; they all inquired about my evening. We talked on and on and everyone compared notes. I went to bed about three A.M. and next morning I was off for home and back to high school.

Honestly, I had a wonderful time and I love school. College will be the life for me, I'm certain.

Santa dear, I just want one thing for Xmas. When I get to college will you pin me so I can be a sweetheart, too. Love, Peggy

letters to the editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

This letter is being written in the hope of commending a gentleman who to my way of thinking is the most unappreciated man on the Vermont campus; Coach John C. (Fuzzy) Evans.

To begin with, let's review the basketball picture for the 12 years that Mr. Evans has been basketball coach at UVM and let the record speak for itself. The record; 139 wins - 69 losses, 8 Vermont state championships and only one losing team, the 1949-50 team which won nine and lost eleven.

All this at a school which follows and is proud of a "Simon Pure" athletic policy. All this with teams playing under a constant height disadvantage (Keith Galli, '51, was the only Catamount starter to reach 6'4"); All this under the same unassuming coach: Fuzzy Evans.

Coach Evans has been maligned crudely and often by the school's "armchair generals". He's received very little credit for the fine conscientious job he's done. For 12 years under "Fuzzy's" tutelage, Vermont fans have enjoyed sharp passing, smart playing, interesting basketball teams. How about that upset win over Rhody State last Saturday night? The boys were great; the coaching, the painstaking study of the opponent's weaknesses from the bench with conferences between players and coach, almost flawless.

We at UVM owe an infinite amount of credit to our boys who "play without pay", but we ought to give a bit more credit where so much of it belongs ... to Coach Evans.

We can't expect miracles o this year's team after losin four of last year's starter but speaking for myself and hope the majority of th Vermont campus, I'd like t say; Coach, we appreciate th very able job you've done an win or lose, we're behind you

Sincerely,
Edward Willard, '56

Tree Lights Mark Season At U V M

The lights are on fo Christmas at UVM as a variet of Christmas trees have bee put up on campus and in Uni versity buildings.

Occupying the place o honor in UVM's Christma decoration is a larg balsam put up on the Colle Green in front of Waterma A second, smaller tree ha been installed inside th main Waterman entrance, a the Student Lounge, Facult Lounge, and the Flemin Museum have also been grac with trees brought in fr Vermont's woodland. Altc gether three balsam and t spruce have been decorated.

Many sororities, fra ternities, and dormitori also offer traditional dec oration as well as a round parties for Burlington a area youngsters.

The trees on campus we brought in from Warren, Vt by Delbert Labounty of th Department of Buildings a Grounds, which put up th trees. Labounty met W. Lo of Warren two years ag while on a hunting tr in the area, and arrang ments to get the trees we made through Long.

The electrical departme decorated the trees whi will be lighted evenin through Christmas.

The tree on the Colle Green will be the center f Christmas Caroling Wednes evening at 7 p.m.

Phi Delta Theta assured 41 children of Merry Christmas when they put on their nnual party last weekend.

Gamma Phi Beta, aided by Kappa Sigma, treated thirty underprivileged children to games and refreshments Saturday.

Kappa Alpha Theta sorority was assisted by Sigma Alpha Epsilon in bringing some happiness to thirty underprivileged children last Saturday.

Yes, it's all yours...Alpha Delta Pi irls froliced with these underprivileged hildren at their sorority house last eek.

It was singing, eating, and gift opening time at the Sigma Phi Epsilon party for underprivileged children on Sunday.

UVM fraternities and sororities opened eir hearts to the city's underprivileged ildren last weekend. Sigma Nu fraternity ene, above, was typical of the parties t other houses.

Anxious look was brought to the faces of these children as they met Santa Claus at the Tau Epsilon Phi House.

'The Medium', By Menotti, On Screen At Fleming Jan. 8

As a sufficient number of persons have now expressed their interest to see "The Medium" by Gian-Carlo Menotti, the Cinema-Art Club has tentatively scheduled a public showing of this film on Saturday, January 8, 1955, at the Fleming Museum Auditorium, at 8 PM. The admission price will be 75 cents, payable at the door. "The Medium" is one of the most popular and possibly one of the best operas by this young American composer; it is said to combine ideally the dramatic power of the Theater with the lyric qualities of the Opera. It was filmed in Italy by Alexander Hammid, one of the most creative American moving picture directors, under the personal supervision of Gian-Carlo Menotti, and features Marie Powers, Anna Maria Alberghetti, Leo Coleman and other members of the original cast.

CLOTHES MAKE THE BMOC

A few weeks ago I discussed fashions for coeds. I pointed out then that any girl who really wanted to go places on campus had to be bold and ingenious when it came to clothes. This is no less true for the male student.

Believe me, men, you'll never get anywhere if you keep skulking around in those old plus-fours. What you need is some dash, some verve, some inventiveness in your apparel. Don't be imprisoned by the traditional conservatism of men's clothing. Brighten up your appearance with a single earring, or a cavalry sabre, or a gold derby.

However, guard against gaudiness. If, for instance, you are wearing a gold derby, do not also wear a cavalry sabre. This is too much. Wear a dagger instead, or, for informal occasions, a Bowie knife.

(Speaking of Bowie knives, I wonder how many of you know what a great debt this country – indeed, the whole world – owes to the West Point class of 1836? You all know, of course, that Colonel James Bowie of the Class of 1836 invented the Bowie knife, but do you know of the many other important contributions to cutlery that were made by classmates of Colonel Bowie's? Are you aware, for example, that Colonel Harry Clasp invented the Clasp knife? Or that Colonel Harry Jack invented the Jack knife? Or that Colonel Harry Putty invented the Putty knife? Or that Colonel Harry Cannon invented the towel?

By a curious coincidence, every member of the graduating class at the U. S. Military Academy in 1836 was named Harry, save for Colonel James Bowie. This coincidence is believed unique in the history of American education, though, of course, quite common in Europe.)

But I digress. We were talking about men's campus fashions. Let us turn now to a persistent rumor that a garment called the "suit" is on the verge of making a comeback. Some of you older students may remember the "suit." It was an ensemble consisting of a jacket and trousers, both of which – this'll kill you – both of which were made out of the same material!

The last "suit" ever seen on an American campus was in 1941 – and I ought to know, because I was wearing it. Ah, 1941! Well do I remember that melancholy year. I was an undergraduate then and in love—hopelessly in love, caught in the riptide of a reckless romance with a beauteous statistics major named Harry Sigafoos. (She is one of the two girls I have ever known named Harry. The other one is her sister.)

I loved Harry though she was far too expensive a girl for me. She liked to eat at fancy restaurants and dance at costly ballrooms and ride in high priced cars. But worst of all, she was mad for wishing wells. It was not unusual for her to drop coins into a wishing well for two or three hours on end. My coins.

Bit by bit I sold off my belongings to pursue this insane courtship – first my books, then my clothes, until finally I was left with nothing to wear but a "suit." One night I came calling for her in this garment.

"What is that?" she gasped, her lip curling in horror.

"That is a 'suit'" I mumbled, averting my eyes.

"Well, I can't be seen around campus with you in that," said she.

"Please, Harry," I begged. "It's all I've got."

"I'm sorry," she said firmly and slammed the door.

I slunk home and lit a Philip Morris and sat down to think. I always light a Philip Morris when I sit down to think, for their mild vintage tobacco is a great aid to cerebration. I always light Philip Morrises when I don't sit down to think too, because Philip Morris is my favorite cigarette, and I know it will be yours too once you try that crazy vintage tobacco.

Well sir, smoking and thinking thus, my eye happened to fall on an ad in the campus newspaper. "WIN A COMPLETE WARDROBE" said the ad. "Touhy's Toggery, the campus's leading men's store, announces a contest to pick the best dressed man on campus. The winner of the contest will receive, absolutely free, a blue hound's tooth jacket, a yellow button-down shirt, a black knit tie, a tattersall vest, gray flannel trousers, argyle socks, and white buck shoes with two inch crepe soles."

My mouth watered at the thought of such a splendid wardrobe, but how could anybody possibly pick me as the best dressed man on campus – me in my "suit"? Suddenly an inspiration struck me. I seized pen in hand and wrote a letter to the editor of the campus newspaper:

"Dear Sir, I see by the paper that Touhy's Toggery is going to give a complete wardrobe to the student picked as the best dressed man on campus. What a ridiculous idea!

"Obviously, to be the best dressed man on campus, you must first have a lot of clothes. And if you have a lot of clothes, what do you need with another wardrobe?

"Touhy's Toggery should give a new wardrobe to the worst dressed man on campus. Me, for instance. I am an eyesore. There isn't a crow in town that will come near me. Three times this month the Salvation Army salvage truck has picked me up. Esquire has cancelled my subscription.

"I submit that a vote for me is a vote for reason, a vote for equity, in short, a vote for the American way."

With a flourish, I signed the letter and sent it off, somehow feeling certain that very soon I would be wearing a complete new wardrobe.

And I was right – because two weeks later I was drafted.

Students Leave Today; Travel In All Modes Of Transportation

By Myron Lench

This is the season that the airlines, railways, and travel bureaus have been looking forward to most eagerly. It is the time of year when the custom of going home for Christmas is brought to mind. It begins with the release of the college student from his studies.

After having had their appetites whetted during their short Thanksgiving recess, the UVM out-of-staters have been thinking of little but home since.

Planes, trains, cars, and buses will be the main means of transportation, with dogsleds and skis being considered by some.

Planes

Planes seem to be the most preferred mode of travel despite the fare, which is twice that for any other transportation. The reason for the popularity of air travel is, apparently, the swiftness with which it delivers its passengers to their destinations. One can have breakfast in Burlington, pack, and be in New York or Boston for lunch.

Trains

If your parents have received your scholastic warnings, and you are in no particular hurry to get home you might consider taking a train. Although the trip is long, the trains are modern and comfortable, and the fare is reasonable.

Cars

A share-the-gas automobile ride is probably the least expensive method of getting home and it is quicker than the train. However, it is not the safest means of winter travel, and the two-week supply of clothing, plus the passengers, may limit the space to the point of discomfort.

Thumbs

Those of us who have done our Christmas shopping early this year may find our pockets empty on departure day. Students from UVM, as well as students all over the country, will be lining the highways with thumbs pointing in the direction of home.

Hail Christmas Open House As Most Successful

"The most successful Christmas Open House ever," is the way Assistant Dean of Women Margaret Wing described the affair held this Sunday under the chairmanship of Professor Truman M. Webster of the German Department with the assistance of Joan Breslin, and Max Ansbacher.

Over 700 people crowded into the Fleming Museum after the Christmas Concert to eat their fill of sliced turkey, ham, cranberry jelly, bread, pickles, olives, coffee and cookies, and to enjoy the Christmas program of music.

Joint Sponsorship

This year's Christmas Party differed from previous ones in that 1) it was sponsored jointly by both the Round Table and the University Club, 2) only cold foods which required relatively little preparation were used, 3) admittance was by ticket.

The result of these changes was a more efficiently produced party with less effort for those sponsoring it. According to Max Ansbacher, Round Table President, "The success of the party was due to the willing assistance of so many of the University family. I think almost everyone enjoyed it."

The program of Christmas music was supplied in part by the University Choir under the direction of Professor Howard G. Bennett. Professor Betty Bandel of the English Department was in charge of the program.

Decorations

Mr. Donald Hardy, Coordinator of Student Affairs, and Mr. Richard Oppfelf of the Speech Department were in charge of decorations. The boughs used in the decorations were brought by the Outing Club. The decorations were put up by sorority women. Miss Carrie Power did the table decorations. Members of many fraternities cooperated in setting up the furniture. According to Professor Webster Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi, and Tau Epsilon Phi were especially helpful.

President Pleased

President and Mrs. Borgmann both said that the party was very successful, and that they had enjoyed it very much.

Professors Esther L. Knowles and Claire Williams were in charge of the purchasing an serving the food. The turkey and hams were cooked i various living units o campus, and were carved b members of the faculty c Sunday afternoon. The Hos Economics club did the actu serving.

Two trail-blazing transports... both Boeings

America's pioneer transcontinental airline passenger plane, the 40A of 1927, was a Boeing. Today, America's first jet transport is another Boeing, the 707. This quarter-century of commercial design leadership is paralleled by military design leadership ranging from the old B-9 bomber to the fighter-fast Boeing B-47 and B-52 jet bombers of today.

For 38 years Boeing engineers have blazed exciting new trails in design, research and production. They're blazing them today in jet aircraft, guided missiles, and research in supersonic flight and the application of nuclear power to aircraft.

If such new-horizon engineering appeals to you, Boeing offers a rewarding career, whether you are in civil, mechanical, electrical or aeronautical engineering, or a related field. Boeing is expanding steadily, and employs more engineers today than even at the peak of World War II. Boeing also promotes from within, and holds regular merit reviews to give you individual recognition.

At Boeing you'll find an unusual range of opportunity, from applied research to production design, from work with new materials and techniques to contacts with a cross-section of industry through the company's vast subcontracting program. Boeing employs draftsmen and engineering aides to handle much routine work, thus freeing engineers for more stimulating assignments.

Boeing engineers enjoy stable careers —46% having been with Boeing for 5 years or more; 25% for 10, and 6% for 15. Many engineers have been here 25 years, and 7 have been with Boeing for 30.

Boeing helps engineers continue their graduate studies, and reimburses them for tuition expenses.

Catamounts Ram Rhode Island In 80-77 Thriller; Lovejoy Breaks Up Yank Conf. Rivals 'Way Of Play'

UVM Combines Fine Defensive, Offensive Play

By Mark Bernstein

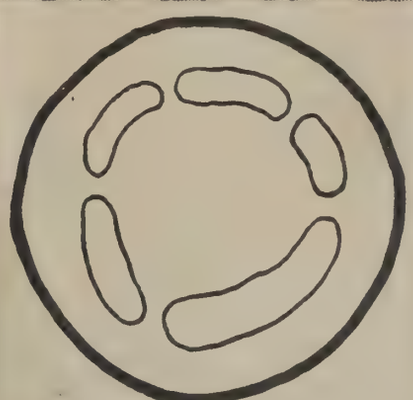
Combine outstanding shooting with exceptional defense and you've got yourself a victory over a tough Rhode Island basketball team. Thats what the UVM Catamounts accomplished last Saturday night when they scored an 80-77 win to shatter the Ram's four year string of consecutive victories. Memorial Auditorium shook as UVM students came to life cheering a team that has improved more and more with each passing game.

The Catamounts were 10 point underdogs going into the game but proved the critics wrong. The Rams quickly jumped off to a quick lead as the first half began. With 12 points down at the 14 minute mark the Cats came alive as Bob Lovejoy sparkling on defense led a surge that brought Vermont to 42-36 halftime lead. Lovejoy was superb as he intercepted pass after pass from the fast breaking Rams and cleared backboards despite the R.I. height advantage.

As the second half got under way Coach Jack Guy's Rams looked like a determined ball club. No time was lost as the Rams whittled away on the Vermont lead till they were one point down with ten minutes to go in the game. But the Cats were not to be denied as Mann, Jampolis, and Burkhardt took charge of the scoring situation.

With a minute left to go Bill fouled out and was replaced by Dick Dennis who was later to be the item of controversy on every Auditorium spectator's lips. The score read 79-76 as R.I. completed two foul shots with 19 seconds remaining. Jampolis called time out to move the ball to half court for Vermont and it was at this time the referee called a technical foul against UVM because Dennis was said to have not reported. Rhode Island scored the technical but missed the tying field goal and while attempting a rebound fouled the possible "goat" of the game, Dennis. Tension mounted as Dennis missed the first shot, but hearing the silence of the crowd and heart of Coach Fuzzy Evans he redeemed in admirable fashion scoring the clinching point. The Rams last second attempt failed as a victorious Catamount team was carried off amidst the cheers of their well-wishers.

CATNIPS. . . . . In the locker room, Coach Fuzzy Evans: "The team has been coming along great, not just for R.I. game but its been like this all along." Captain Keith Jampolis: "A pleasure to play with all the boys pulling together as one." Earl Steinman: "A team victory all the way, everyone hustled and played their best." . . . . Lovejoy without a doubt played his finest game in a Catamount uniform, not enough can be said about his brilliant play. . . . . Bill Mann led the scoring with 21 for Vermont while Marozzi led the Rams with 19. . . . . .



Meet Bob Lovejoy, who is appropriately pictured here in a defensive position. No one can deny that his "heads up" defensive play against VRI last week, was the finest ever witnessed at Memorial Auditorium. Lovejoy, a Burlingtonian, is in his third year at UVM and his second on the Varsity. He's twenty-two years old, 6'1", 180 lbs. Bob was a former star at Cathedral H. S. where he gained Vermont All-State Honors. He spent two years with the marines.

Everybody helps in Vermonts Team Victory over Rhode Island last Saturday night. Skippy Burkhardt (3) - we got it right this time - Bill King (25) and Keith Jampolis (13) team up to overcome Rhody height advantage under the boards. Photo by Wagreich SPS

Everyone fights for the "Neck" in Catamount's tussle with Rhode Island's Rams last week. Vermont Captain, Keith Jampolis, gets "neck" workout from three U.R.I. players in closely contested game. Actually players are fighting for the ball which photographers camera was unable to focus. Jampolis' smile indicates that he won the tussle.

Intramural Review

By Fred Solomon

During the past week there was a great amount of activity in both the basketball and bowling leagues.

BASKETBALL

In basketball SPE has shown a great deal of improvement and is definitely a contender for its league title. SPE has beaten LI and TEP by the scores of 74-18 and 46-22. Knapp with 20 and 17 points respectively lead the scorers in both games. KS continued on its winning ways by downing PSD by the score of 32-22 and AEP 30-20. KS was paced by Glacione with 10 points and McLam with 11 points, while Grossman with 14 points, lead PSD and Rosenthal with 15 points paced AEP. SN also kept its undefeated string in tact by downing DP 44-31 and SP 50-16. SN was lead by Sharkey who tossed in a total of 34 points in these two games. PDT crushed Acacia 48-23, however Acacia's Williams took scoring honors with 17 points. TEP downed TC 53-34 as Carr of TEP hit for 18 points. PSD shaded SAE 37-34, Colodney of PSD lead with 18 points followed by Parks of SAE with 17. Lead by Brailford with 12 points, DP dumped TC 44-30.

In the dormitory league Chittenden 1 and 2 downed Wills 3 and 4 43-26; Buckham 1 and 2 defeated Buckham 3 and 4, 31-21; and Chittenden 3 and 4 edged Wills 1 and 2 by the score of 20-17.

BOWLING

In bowling SP took PSD 3-1, Howard of SP hit 116 and Goldberg of PSD scored 110. SAE, still undefeated, took PDT 4-0, Heald's 140 lead the winners. TEP downed TC 4-0 with Winer's 118 being tops. ATO lost to SN by the score of 4-0, Smith's 112 took the scoring honors. Then SN followed with a 3-1 victory over DP. AEP won by forfeit from ATO and SAE again took 4 points by downing KS. PSD downed DS 3-1, Borofsky lead the winners with a 102 total. Correction Please: Sigma Phi Epsilon defeated Phi Sigma Delta last week.

UConn President Not In Favor Of "Big Time" Ball

President A. N. Jorgensen told a group of 200 attending the University of Connecticut Fall Sports banquet that he was not interested in "going big time at the risk of becoming professional."

He added that he was neither "alarmed or concerned over losing records in football and soccer."

Keep Pace

"I merely expect our athletic development to keep pace with the rest of the growth at the University. I feel that eventually we will win our share of games," he continued.

He said that a big enrollment does not necessarily mean big time athletics. In answer to criticism of the "so-called big time schedule" that the Huskies played this past fall, President Jorgensen stated that it was the responsibility of the coaches and athletic director to arrange the schedule.

Small College Player Has A Phenomenal Free Throw Night

Charleston, W. Va. - Carl Hartma did more than help Alderson-Broa dus win a basketball game la week, 131-92, when he made go all 23 of his free throw attempt

The 5-foot 11-inch senior fr Ridgeley, W. Va. topped a colle record for consecutive free throw although his performance again Salem College won't go into t record books.

The records of the Nation Collegiate Athletic Bureau show today that the major college reco is eighteen of eighteen.

Vermont Meets N H Wildcats Tomorrow Night

Heading into their fourth Yankee Conference game in three weeks, the University of Vermont Catamounts invade Durham, N.H. to take on the Wildcats of the University of New Hampshire tomorrow evening at the University Field House.

UVM has won two out of its three YC games to date, rolling over Maine 80-65, and tripping Rhode Island 80-77. The Wildcats, holding a slight height advantage, are rated as strong offensively, with Billy Pappas, who averaged 21 points per game last season, pacing the club.

The tilt is the first of a home and home duo scheduled this season with the Wildcats.

Student Questionnaire On Frat. Discrim. Clause

The CYNIC is presenting this questionnaire to the students previous to registration so that they may familiarize themselves with the questions and discuss them extensively before expressing their opinion. This is not a binding vote, only an expression of opinion.

Before it takes action on the following resolution, which has been recommended by the University Senate, the Board of Trustees has resquested an expression of student opinion.

"Resolved, that no fraternity or sorority at the University of Vermont shall receive or retain its charter if its constitution contains any clause which restricts its membership by some requirement as to race, religion, or national origin. Resolved further, that a period of seven years be allowed for all fraternities and sororities to make appropriate adjustment of their constitutions.

1. Please check the statement which most closely reflects your opinion:

——A. I believe that the Board should adopt the resolution in its present form.

——B. I believe that the Board should adopt the resolution in its present form, except that the time limit should be changed to ——— years.

——C. I am in favor of eliminating restrictive clauses, but I do not believe that the University should ban an existing fraternity from this campus if the national chapter does not remove its restrictive clauses.

——D. I believe that a national fraternity should have the right to place such restrictions on membership as it chooses.

——E. None of the above reflects my opinion; instead, I recommend———————————

——F. I have no opinion on this question.

Ralph Marterie

Ralph Marterie, the man "Born for the Horn" and his famous nineteen-piece orchestra, the Nation's dance band favorite, will be featured at the annual Kake Walk Ball, February 17, it was announced today by the Kake Walk Directors.

MARTERIE, the recording star of Mercury Records, has in the last two years become one of the top record bands in the country. His famous million record sellers include "Pretend," "Caravan", "Crazy, Man, Crazy" and his latest "Skokiaan", all of which have made the long climb to the very top of the Hit Parade.

The band recently acquired billing as Ralph Marterie and his Down Beat Orchestra when Down Beat magazine, the music enthusiasts Bible, conducted an independent survey of leading Colleges and Universities to determine the students favorite band. MARTERIE and his Orchestra were acclaimed winners by a landslide of votes. Down Beat adopted him as their "favorite son" and awarded him with the sought-after honor of "Band of the Year."

Named Top Leader

MARTERIE was recently named as top leader by the National Ballroom Operators when he tied with Ray Anthony for second place in the favorite swing band of 1954 category. His other honors include the selection as the Headline band for 1954 by the Billboard Magazine.

"The public wants good, sweet, and tastefully arranged music with a dancable beat - that's what my band is prepared to give them," says Marterie.

PDT, PSD, SAE, TEP Skits Get Nod For Showing

By Shirley O'Neill

Plans for KakeWalk continue to shape up, with the announcement of the four fraternities whose skits have been accepted for presentation to the KakeWalk audience. Four members of the faculty participated in the judging of the skits over the Christmas vacation. The winning fraternities and the titles of their skits are: Phi Delta Theta, "Getting Back to Nature"; Phi Sigma Delta, "Grime Doesn't Pay"; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, "Comically Speaking"; and Tau Epsilon Phi, "Mamboramba".

Poster Deadline

The deadline for the submission of posters for the Poster Contest is tomorrow, January 14. Rules for the contest have been sent to all living units on campus. The prize for the winning poster is a cake and a trophy to be awarded the nights of the walking.

Meanwhile, the rules for the campaigning for KakeWalk King and Queen have also been announced. Any sorority or fraternity is eligible to run one candidate for Queen or King, respectively. Each candidate must be an active member of the group sponsoring his or her campaign as of December 16, 1954.

Rules for the campaign are as follows:

1. Campaigns must be confined to the UVM campus.

2. Bulletin board space will be provided for a poster of each candidate in East Hall, Waterman, Old Mill, Williams Science Hall, and Hills Hall.

3. All posters will be 22" x 14" except those in Waterman, which may be 22" by 28".

4. Posters may be placed outdoors around the campus, but no nails, staples, tacks, etc., may be used on trees; and no posters may be placed on the exteriors of buildings.

5. No hand bills will be allowed in the classrooms.

6. Campaigns or publicity for a candidate must not include the use of vehicles in buildings. They also must not include Kake Walking.

7. No candidate shall exceed an expenditure of $150 for campaign expense. Upon the presentation of receipted

Student Advisory Calls For Inter-Semester Rushing

By Michael Abramson

Fraternity and Sorority rushing should be held during intersemester recess, Vermont's Student Advisory Committee recommended earlier this week.

The recommendation was forwarded to the University Council on Tuesday. The Council postponed decision until next week.

According to the Student Advisory, recommendation, which was sent to the Council along with IFC and Pan-Hellenic plans, the first day of intersemester recess until the first day of classes would be set aside for rushing. Banquets, formal bidding and pledging would be included in this period.

The plan proposed by Pan Hellenic called for an extension of the intersemester recess from four to six days. Their outline of the rushing schedule was as follows: First day-guided tours which entail visits to all eight houses as a means of introduction. Second day- The first of two invitational parties in the afternoon lasting one hour and a half. Third day- open houses-Rushees select four houses they wish to visit. Fourth day- the second informal party. This is also invitational. The fifth and sixth days (the two days of registration) will terminate the rushing period. Banquets will be held on these nights. The bids will be sent out on the first day of classes.

Inter Fraternity Council submitted a plan which corresponded closely with the Pan Hellenic proposal.

Negroes Dislike 'Black-Face', Questionnaire Study Proves

By Bradley Gordon

Negro students on the University of Vermont campus object to the make-up used by the walkers in Kake Walk, UVM's winter carnival, according to the results of a questionaire administered jointly by the Religious Activities Committee and the CYNIC, official student newspaper.

The six students in the survey included all the Negroes enrolled on the Undergraduate level of study. Although not unanimous in their feeling, the survey showed that four individuals objected and two felt no discomfort.

According to Raymond Hall, Professor of Religion and Faculty Advisor of the Religious Activities Committee, these results "seem to bear out the investigation made by the Committee several years ago. At that time five out of six expressed objections."

Two of the four who objected said that they were "vehemently opposed." The other two reported that they felt "very uncomfortable." All four were in favor of eliminating the present make-up.

Endorses CYNIC Endeavor

"In view of the results of this questionaire and the previous investigation it would seem appropriate for Administrative, Faculty, and Student groups to discuss the means of bringing about a change in the practice in question," Professor Hall stated.

The Religious Activities Committee has already endorsed the CYNIC's efforts to promote a change in the "black-face" stereotype make-up.

"In view of the fact that Negro students, prominent Negro guest lecturers, and Negro organizations object to the use of this make-up, it is the sentiment of the majority of the Religious Activities Committee that "black-face" make-up be eliminated," Frank Thurston informed the CYNIC. Mr. Thurston is Chairman of the RAC, a student group comprised of representatives from Student Christian Association, Hillel, and Newman Club. A representative of Student Association Council is also on the Committee.

Opinions In Questionaire

It was the general feeling of all six students who answered the questionaire that no actual intention of discrimination is involved. It was felt, however, that a principle of democracy was important in considering the problem.

One student wrote, "...many wrong impressions are drawn from stereotyping. It tends to upset movements such as integration...and prevents a better understanding among the different races of the United States and the world."

"...not that it is such a grave problem on this campus, but it seems to contradict the ethics of social advancement among groups...elimination would mean another small step toward improving the situation for a minority group which has been a scapegoat..." Such was the feeling of another.

A further expression of opinion was, "I see no point in undermining the walking itself by employing a feature that opens the dance to strong criticism...must live in the present and hope for a brighter future, but we should not blemish the present or future with anything that was done in

Bobby Hackett KW Jazz Band

By Dick Lewis

Bobby Hackett, one of the top ten trumpet players in the 1954 'Down Beat' Poll will be featured at this years Kake Walk Jazz Concert on February 18th. One of the greatest traditional jazzmen in the country, Mr. Hackett will bring his all-star aggregation to Burlington for possibly one of the best jazz concerts that will ever be presented in this area.

The trumpet playing of Bobby Hackett is distinguished by its clarity and expressiveness, by a sort of relaxed excitement. When the music is sweet, Hacke't plays it sweetly. When the music is hot, Hackett is hot too, but with a sense of control that is absolutely remarkable. Hackett's repretoire include the great Dixieland classics such as the Royal Garden Blues and the St. Louis Blues through the swing style of jazz to the old standards such as Tenderly and Moonlight in Vermont. Hackett is perhaps one of the few great jazz

A Weekend With Dr. Howard Thurman

By Robert W. Smith

Dr. Howard Thurman, Dean of the Chapel at Boston University was at UVM last week as the guest speaker at the annual All-Christian Conference. The program was divided into four parts, beginning with a luncheon on Friday noon, an afternoon seminar, an evening address and worship service, and a Saturday morning informal discussion period.

The luncheon was held in the faculty dining room in Waterman. More than 110 people were present to hear Dr. Thurman give his first address entitled "In Quest of Fulfillment." Faculty and administrative personnel comprised the major part of the attendance at this meeting, although some students were present. The luncheon was planned and handled by the UVM Food Services and Catering Service under the direction of Miss Ruth Godfrey and Mrs. Agatha Atwood.

The theme of the conference was "Life More Abundantly", as suggested by Dr. Thurman himself, and he carried the theme through the entire week-end. His first address was centered about the thought that "We must find a radical test for our lives in the light of which it emerges who we are."

Radical Test Is God

"The radical test for the individual's life is God," he said. "Sooner or later there comes a time in the life of the individual when he must face the scrutiny of God. There comes a time when status, equipment, prestige are laid bare and a man stands in the essence of what he is before God.

"It follows that we also are seeking the kind of faith and/or belief that can be honestly and intelligently held so that in affirmation of my faith or commitment inspired by the character of my belief I will not have to do violence to my mind. It is only the inside of religious experience which can do anything to the texture of human beings to make a lung through which God can breathe."

At the seminar held in the Student Association Council Room in the afternoon Dr. Thurman was more interested in what the students had for questions than in a formal address. Twenty-five or more students spent two and a half hours firing questions and keeping up a good discussion which caused Dr. Thurman to remark about the fine interest and apparent forethought of the group.

The main address of Friday evening is presented elsewhere in the CYNIC. This is the address at which more than two-thirds of the audience, estimated to be over two-hundred fifty, was students. The worship service was brief and effective, and the singing of the last hymn contributed to the mood of worship.

Saturday morning Dr. Thurman spent two hours chatting informally with any and all students who dropped into the Council Room, after having breakfast with several of the local ministers.

The conference was sponsored by the Student Christian Association and the local college age student clubs of the various churches. A steering Committee with Stan Rossier as chairman handled the week-end very smoothly so that there were no hitches. Your reporter acted as personal guide to Dr. Thurman during his visit.

By Max Ansbacher

"If you wish to have life more abundantely, you must surrender yourself to God," Dr. Howard Thurman, Dean of the Chapel of Boston University told a near capacity audience in the student lounge last weekend. "If one wishes to live more abundantely, one must become a channel through which life can flow," he said.

"To surrender to God is to receive everything." Dr. Thurman continued, find "your own altar and surrender to your own God. If you do, movement of the life of God will take your little life and make it the living sacrament of the living God."

A Face Will Tell

Dr. Thurman began his talk by quoting the book which says, "His name shall be on their foreheads." This means that "Men will see in you what you love most. Your face will become like the parchment of a historian; showing your mental habits, your emotions, sense of duty, your thoughts of man and of God."

The clue to the meaning of life according to Dr. Thurman does not lie in outside experience, but rather in the mind of the individual. As the chapel dean said, "The clue to the outer lies in the inner." This point was illustrated by a short story, as were many other topics of the adress.

INNER Life vs. Outer

This same thought was expressed by Jesus when he said, "The kingdom of God is within." Dr. Thurman listed some undermining attitudes which tended to keep people from obtaining the kingdom of God.

The first deterant to the kingdom of God is the "terrifyingly" large distance which sometimes lies between the outer life and the inner ideals. If there is too great a difference between, them the outer life will lose all joy because the inner life has no meaning. As an example of this effect, Dr. Thurman cited Macbeth after he had committed his murder.

Don't Miss the Common

Because of the advantages of knowledge man may come to forget that he is a member of the human race, and that his body is only a human body no matter how much education a man's head may have. Under this point Dr. Thurman cautioned his audience not to miss the commonplace, and pointed out that such a commonplace person as a cobbler could know the whole works of Shakespeare by rote.

Dr. Thurman concluded with the statement that the way to life more abundantly is to "surrender life to a goal which can inspire willingness to sacrifice. Your tragedy if you do this will be that nothing can ever happen to you."

Stan Rossier introduced Dr. Thurman. Robert W. Smith accompanied the audience for two hymns, "Spirit of God," and "Dear Lord and Father."

Foreign Study Opportunities Listed For Year

Opportunities for foreign study in fifteen countries are listed in Foreign Study Grants, 1955-56, pamphlet published today by the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York City.

Study awards at the University of Ceylon, the University of Teheran in Iran, and the Free University of Berlin are described, as well as other awards administered by the Institute. Universities, private groups, and governments in Europe, Asia, and Latin America have offered fellowships to American students for the 1955-56 academic year. More detailed information on these grants is available from the offices of the Institute.

A Campus-to-Career Case History

"Always something new"

"Different types of work appeal to different men," says Donald O'Brian (A.B., Indiana, '50), in the Traffic Department with Indiana Bell Telephone Company. "For me, I'll take a job that keeps me hopping. And that's just the kind of job I have.

"You'd think that after two years I'd have all the variables pinned down. But it doesn't work that way. When you supervise telephone service for thousands of different customers whose needs are always changing, there's always something new coming up.

"I started with Indiana Bell in 1952, after two years in the Army. My training program exposed me to many different kinds of telephone work—customer contact, personnel, accounting, operations. I saw a lot of jobs which looked as interesting as mine. As much as I like the kind of work I'm doing now, I bet I'll like my next spot even better."

Don's enthusiasm for his job is pretty typical of how most young college men feel about their telephone careers. Perhaps you'd be interested in a similar opportunity with a Bell Telephone operating company, such as Indiana Bell . . . or with Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric or Sandia Corporation. Poetry Reading Featured Student, Faculty Speakers

by Ruth Zindler

The National Collegiate Players' Poetry Reading was held December 14 at Southwick. Elli Levin, president of the National Collegiate Players was the organizer of the program in which both faculty and students read poetry.

The professors who read were: Professor George Dykhuizen of the philosophy department who read translated selections from Greek; Professor T.M.Webster of the German department read translated selections from the German; Professor M.S.Parker of the French department read translations from contemporary French poets. Several of these translations were his own; Dean R.H. Kroepsch read selections from the new translation of the Bible.

Students who read were: Sally Weinstock who read translated selections from the Hindu Bible, Bahgavad-Gita; and Marsha Pearl who read a speech and two versions of a play. One was a translation of an original Greek play and the other was a translation of a French adaptation of it.

This was the first year that the poetry reading had a theme. It was poetry and translation. It was also the first time that the dance group performed. They did a dance called poetry in motion to "On Beauty" from the Prophet by Kalil Gibran, which was read by Diane Tanzi. Betty Mitchell and Lenore Weinstein were the dancers.

The poetry reading was followed by a coffee hour during which an informal discussion took place and tea was served. Judy Patton, Rusty Clark, and Marsha Mockridge poured the tea.

The National Collegiate Players have two poetry readings a year; one in the fall, and one in the spring. The purpose of the National Collegiate Players is to develop an informed audience and the poetry reading is their method of developing this interest on the University of Vermont campus. The members of the National Collegiate Players are: Elli Levin, Judy Patten, Louise Phelps, Marsha Mockridge, and Gregg Falls who is also their director.

Leighton Addresses Phi Beta Kappa

By Marvin Nierenberg

At Phi Beta Kappa's meeting on December 8, Lawrence B. Leighton stated that Americans' interest in a unified Europe is largely due to "organization of sentiment by propaganda."

The retired professor who now contributes to literary magazines and writes editorials for the Burlington Free Press entitled the address given in the Waterman Building "Unity of Europe--An Attempt At A Pragmatic definition."

Departure From Tradition

Mr. Leighton first noted that this mass movement for international idealism "is a departure from older American traditions which asserted the independence and isolation of the United States from the affairs of the old world."

Several reasons for this sudden interest in European Unity were advanced by him.

One strong factor, although an invalid one, he feels, is the "emotionalizing of the issue by our newspapers. They have taken advantage of the sudden burst of international idealism in the last fifteen years as well as Americans' tendency to be attracted to a crusade."

Leighton pictured the United States as "...a grown-up child who rediscovers his mixed-up, endangered parents and has the do-as-I-do attitude."

Selfish Motives

Examining the more rational aspects of Americans' interest in European unity, he suggested that our underlying motives are more egocentric that the superficial news reports would have us believe. Among these motives are:

1. Desire for economic effeciency. Revomal of boundaries would solve many economic problems for us. Unity would give us a market place free from a country's countrol.

2. Need for adequate military defence against Russia. Mr. Leighton questioned whether our fear of Russia is justified.

3. Guilty Conscience. This is due partly from our not joining the League of Nations and from our poor handling of Russia after World War II. We're Now trying to make up for it, Leighton feels.

4. Belief that Europe would prosper as the Thirteen Colonies did in the eighteenth century if it became a unit. Mr. Leighton asserted this is rediculous because we haven't considered the deeply rooted European traditions and hatreds in politics.

"A more realistic way to unify Europe would be in the fields of science and trade," he said. Using Augustus as an example, Leighton pointed out that the great work in unifying civilizations was accomplished by spreading culture throughout the areas involved. Thus he feels that "a spirit of sameness should exist among the educated men of these countries." Other steps in the right direction would be increased volume of trade, better communication between these countries, and steps like President Eisenhower's atoms-for peace-plan.

Summer Study Offered In Many British Schools

Summer study at British universities is open to American students in 1955, according to an announcement made today by Kenneth Holland, President of the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York City.

Six-week course will be offered at Oxford, at Stratford-upon-Avon, and at the capital cities of London and Edinburgh.

A limited number of scholarships is available. Award and admission application forms may be secured from the Institute of International Education in New York or any of its regional offices. Completed applications should be returned to the Institute in New York by March 28, 1955. A limited number of steamship passages on Cunard ships are reserved for successful candidates.

British Universities have combined annually since 1948 to organize a special program of summer schools. Courses are planned to serve the needs of well-qualified undergraduates in their junior or senior years or of post-graduate students. In the past participants have come from fifteen to twenty-five different countries. Although two-thirds of the students at previous sessions have come from English-speaking countries, the opportunity to live in a university community with fellow students of similar interests from many nations has become a feature of the courses. The courses attract those ranging in age from 20 to 50. Interests vary from those of the teacher and professional to those of the scientist and business men.

The Edinburgh School, arranged jointly by the Scottish Universities, will have an historical theme, tracing the development of modern western civilization. In London the galleries, museums, records, and buildings serve as special source material for a study of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The course at Stratford-upon-Avon focuses on the literary and theatrical aspects of Shakespearean and Elizabethan drama. Contemporary politics and literature are studied under widely known lecturers and tutors at Oxford.

ChaplinHitsEducationSystem; GoodStudentNotEncouraged

"I would abolish all fraternities, sororities, spectator sports, and most student extra-curricular activities, in a Utopian college," Professor James P. Chaplin told the Hillel Foundation at its brunch Sunday.

Professor Chaplin, chairman of the department of Psychology at UVM, spoke on "Values in Education." He said that most present-day college graduates are essentially failures because they are ignorant in many areas, have poor attitudes, and will not follow up their studies after graduation.

No Help for the Needy

Professor Chaplin wished to abolish the institutions mentioned above because they helped those who didn't need help, and neglected those who did. As an example he said that fraternities take those who are well mannered, in the social graces, while rejecting those who need some guidance.

Our schools give too much attention to the average and poor student, and not enough to the above average, said Chaplin. Other complaints are that there are many people in college who should not be, and these drag the real students down. The anti-intellectual attitude so prevalent, and an anti impracticalism which asserts itself in planning the curriculum are also reasons for the failure of many college graduates to be educated.

An ideal educational program, according to Professor Chaplin, would start with the first grades. Every child there would be given a series of intelligence and special aptitude tests, and psychiatric interviews. On the basis of these findings, and scholastic achievement, there would be a sharp dividing in the 8th grade between those going and those not going to college..

Those going to college would be able to have an accelerated course due to the absence of the slow pupils. The last two years of high school would be equivalent to the present first two years in college. Junior colleges would be developed for those who wished to get a B.A. degree, and those who were to go into professions would have a four year liberal arts education.

"Black-Face" : Restatement Of Case

We ask you to stop for a moment and think. We ask you to think seriously, clearly and unemotionally. We ask you once again to turn your attention to the make-up used by the individuals who perform the Kake Walk in Vermont's winter carnival.

Let us first establish the following: It is not the claim of the CYNIC that any discrimination, prejudice, or offense is intended by those who chose to wear the make-up in question.

It is our claim, however, that unknown to the Kake Walkers they are producing an effect which IS offensive. It is offensive to the Negro. That this statement is true, and not merely a figment of the imagination of CYNIC Editors, is borne out by the results of recent investigations. In other sections of this paper appear the results of a questionaire circulated among the Negro underclassmen at UVM, and the commentary of the noted Protestant Negro clergyman, Howard Thurman, Dean of the Boston University Chapel.

Unquestionably, it is shown, Negroes object to the use of the "black-face" sterotype as portrayed in Kake Walk make-up. They object to the exaggerated facial features. They object to the exaggerated lips and eyes.
They object to the make-up itself as an exaggeration of their true color. That this is so, we mention merely to dispel all arguments to the contrary.

That several Negro students on the UVM campus object to the use of this make-up, however, is only a partial reason for our asking you to consider removing "black-face" from the UVM scene. As Howard Thurman so aptly phrased it, "black-face" is but one symbol of a much more complex problem. It is but one symbol of the stereotype of the American Negro as shiftless, foolish, and irresponsible which Thurman "has been fighting for twenty years to invalidate."

It is our thesis that the removal of this controversial form of make-up is one more step toward an unbiased and better understanding of the Negro, toward the betterment of relations between races; it is a step in the elimination of discriminatory and or prejudicial symbolism; it is an act of that way of life which we call Democratic.

We are fully aware that "black-face" has long been a part of Kake Walk. Many of you are completely satisfied to have it remain so. BUT are our own immediate satisfactions that much more important than the lasting effect which can result from elimination of the degrading stereotype in question?

We are college students and college faculty. Our discrimination or sensitivity to values should inform us that the latter is the truly more important.

Let us think, further, of the effect that "black-face" has on the University. Negro lecturers who visit the University are amazed and distressed to learn that such procedures are condoned, both by the student and the faculty. We are not an island unto ourselves. Organizations and individuals on the national scene also object to the practice, as evidenced by the letters of criticism received by the University after the coverage given Kake Walk by LIFE Magazine in the Winter of 1952.

Certainly this is undesirable from the public relations angle. What can outsiders think of the values possessed by a learned faculty which condones the perpetuation of such symbols?

The question of "black-face" has been discussed for some ten years. It is now time for a crystallization of these discussions.

It is time for a solution to be reached through the combined efforts of IFC, Student Advisory Committee, and the University Council and Senate. But to discuss the question on emotional levels will only serve to cloud the true issues. If a mature mode of discussion, rather than low-level argumentation is resorted to, we believe that a solution can be effected.

To fall back once again on the words of Howard Thurman, "Unfortunately, those who defend this stereotype see the question only in the small concept of tradition in the little world of the campus."

And, so, we ask you to stop once again and reflect. Is not the use of this particular make-up in Kake Walk actually of the minutest importance to the execution of the dance itself? The beauty of Kake Walk is in the dance, the excitement in the music and atmosphere. The make-up serves merely as a disguise. Any other combination of colors and designs could be substituted with no loss of effect, we are sure.

Let us become conscious of the "slings and arrows" which are hurled at others; let us lose some of our callousness and supplant indifference with sensitivity; let us help to destroy the false Negro stereotype which "black-face" make-up tends to perpetuate.

Let us strike a blow for the democratic ideal of equality and fall into step with social and racial progress.

Let us assert our learning; let us abolish "black-face" make-up.

NAACP Takes Dim View Of Make-Up

This letter was received a few years ago by the President. It is reprinted this year so that the freshmen may know the policy of Nat'l Assoc. for Advancement of Colored People.

"We should like to call your attention...to the Kake Walk ceremony as a "black-face" show. Needless to say, we are indeed shocked and surprised to find the extra curricular activity of college students today on such a level. It is difficult for us to conceive of any group of enlightened Americans in this day and age sponsoring and presenting such shows, and it is particularly difficult for us to conceive that such activity would be allowed, condoned or passively acquiesced in by modern educators.

"It is hardly necessary for us to point out that the perpetuation of the pattern and stereotype inherent in the so-called minstrel show is not consistent with the clear function and purpose of education today.

"The revival of this pattern of entertainment particularly by individuals to whom the rest of the community look for guidance and thought and action, can only give new life to a stereotype that is both derogatory and insulting to the Negro American.

"We are fully aware that the common denominator of thinking about the Negro in America if we may call it thinking-is done in stereotypes.

"...One or more of these stereotypes enter into the forming of ideas about Negro Americans held by the average white American. Some of the most persistent of these stereotypes were formed on the minstrel stage. For nearly three-quarters of a century "black-faced" minstrels were the chief and most popular form of American entertainment. Hardly a hamlet in the country was too small to be visited by minstrel shows. And it was from the minstrel shows that millions of white Americans got their conception of the Negro character. On the minstrel stage the Negro was presented as a shuffling happy-go-lucky, banjo-picking, singing, dancing "darky", whose only dietary delights were watermelon, 'possum, and chicken, and whose social outlet was a jamboree at which the chief diversion was expert razor slinging. To the minstrel stage can be traced the difficulty which white America finds in taking the Negro seriously.

"We are writing to you confident that you as an enlightened educator and college president will know how best to deal with this problem, and particularly to convince the student body that the Kake Walk celebration is not in keeping with the present day concepts and purpose of education, not with the fundamental democratic philosophy to which our country is dedicated."

Howard Thurman Criticizes UVM's Use Of "BlackFace"

By Diane Tanzi

Dr. Howard Thurman, Protestant minister and Dean of the Chapel of Boston University, managed to find a half-hour to spare for us last week during his visit to the University.

We broached to him the question of the "black-face" stereotype as portrayed in the make-up used by the walkers during Kake Walk week-end.

His reaction was one of astonishment and disbelief when we showed him the make-up on the walkers in the UVM Date Book pictures.

"One can not traffic in stereotype without becoming immune to social consciousness," he told us.

Sounds Familiar

"There are usually two defenses used by those who seek to maintain stereotypes such as these," he continued. "Either they claim that they have no intention of hurting anyone by the use of the stereotype; or they fall back on tradition, on established habit."

We informed him that we had heard both defenses used extensively in the past year.

"But whatever may be the innocence behind its use, I can not accept this as a valid defense," he flashed back. "I don't believe in the innocence when it shows a persistent naivete. If one has never heard the question raised before, then innocence is valid. But once informed of the issue, a person can not validly used ignorance as an excuse.

The Effect

"The awareness or unawareness, however, has nothing to do with the effect on individual or group being stereotyped in this manner. For the effect is not only the perpetuation of the stereotype, but a dulling of sensitivity to more violent manifestations of the same basic underlying motive."

Then how do we attack the problem, we asked him.

"First of all," he suggested, "the defenders of this tradition and those seeking change should find a common point upon which to argue. It would seem that in this case, as happens quite often, those who desire the change are arguing from the effect of the stereotype in question, while those for the status quo are arguing from the standpoint of tradition and innocence on intent. If both argued the effect a solution could be reached in time."

Terrible Thing

We asked Dr. Thurman what he thought of such circumstances existing in a college community.

As if to admonish us, he quickly picked us up on the question.

"It is not only on a college campus that these things exist. This occurs on all levels and in all places. We have been working for twenty years to invalidate the stereotype of which black-face make-up is only one symbol.

"I have been victimized by that stereotype. I think it is a terrible thing. I am unconditionally and constitutionally opposed to it.

To Promote Democracy

"It is an awful thing that makes it possible for a person to quite unconsciously behave toward other people in a way that even his self-respect would not countenance if were not a part of his behavior.

"Unfortunately, those who defend this stereotype see the question only in the small concept of 'a tradition in the little world of the campus.' It must, however, be seen in the wider context of what we are saying and doing to promote democracy this very day."

We thanked Dr. Howard Thurman and turned to leave. And then we thanked him again.

At Princeton University Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, stated that "The enemy of learning at the university level is the text book, the class room lecture, and the course system." He feels that too often the professor merely lectures on the material covered in the text book. Dr. Gallup would put more emphasis on outside reading assignments to make the student want to learn on his own initative.

in defense of derangement

Gary Wright

A strange and benumbing mood has permeated the rooms and ivory colored walls of the Houses on the Hill. Semi-yearly, laughter ceases. Twice a season, Deans confer. The dreaded days approach us at thousands of miles per second.

They call it Dead Week.

I walked into Hitchcog's room without knocking and found a strange and eerie scene. A small fire was smouldering in the waste-basket, the smoke curling up and around him as he stood with his head back, entoning an ancient chant and holding a pin to a figurine.

"Whatcha do'n, Hitch? " I asked. Of course, I knew, but one simply has to observe certain formalities.

"What's it look like, " he whispered. Great guy, Hitch, always asking riddles.

I came closer to examine the figure.

"Looks like Professor Springcrouch, " I answered. Indeed, it did; even to a hatchet shaped birth-mark on its left ear lobe.

"Ol' buddy, " Hitch looked around and lowered his voice. "I'm gonna pass Inter-planetary Economics this year, or else. "

"Or else? " I asked.

" Or else! " He sai emphatically. "A sweet little New Orleans girl taught me this trick. She claimed it can't fail. "

"I remember what I learned from a New Orleans girl..."

"Quiet! "

"Yes, sir," I said meekly. He started to chant again.

"Say, I know that, " I offered. "It's from an old cowboy movie. "

"Really? " He looked at me coldly. "Why don't you go downtown and sing it for me? "

"Can you hear me from there? "

"If I open the window, " he said, showing me the door.

"What a nice door, " I exclaimed. "Have you had it long? "

He closed his eyes and I leaned close and whispered in his left ear.

"Have you tried burning a model of the Gymnasium? "

He looked hurt as he hurled me into the hall and closed the door.

What a nice door, I thought to myself. That was not my private opinion either, for at that time several small

Two Unopposed

The two who were not opposed felt that no insult was meant. One of these two individuals, however, suggested that as a Negro she would be apt to dislike the make-up because of its exaggeration. She attributed this to the fact that, "... We are a very sensitive people because of prejudices which have long existed, which have stemmed from no other characteristic than the one "black-face " exaggerates..."

Neither of the above two individuals went into the question of the general area of which the make-up is but one symbol.

Museum Brings Surrealism To Fleming Screen

On February 9, the fifth in the Museum Motion Picture Series will be shown in the Museum Auditorium at 4:10 and 8 p.m. The theme of this program will be "Surrealism" and one of the earliest Surrealist films - "Cabinet of Dr. Caligari ", A German film made in 1919 - will be shown followed by two modern examples, " Fragment of Seeking " and " The Cage."

For students who wish a quiet place for reading and study, the Museum has convenient rooms available at all times. These rooms have desk space and smoking is permitted; the Museum welcomes all students who wish to take advantage of them.

Calls Campus Locale Of Racial, Religious Exclusion

(The following selection comprises a major portion of an article by Professor Alfred McClung Lee which appeared in the October issue of "The Committee Reporter. "Professor Lee is Chairman of The National Committee on Fraternities in Education.)

The college campus today is the locale of one of the nation's most blatant systems of racial and religious exclusion. And the existence of Roman Catholic, Jewish and Negro fraternities, originally created in "self-defense, " often reinforces the segregation policy that motivated their establishment.

These exclusionary policies date from the early 1900's when students from minority religious and ethnic groups began to attend college in appreciable numbers. To keep out the newcomers, fraternity leaders built membership restrictions deep into fraternity constitutions ... Today, in a completely changed world, it is the graduates of these years - now powerful alumni - who dominate fraternity policies and shape them to their own archaic views ...

America's educational system which is dedicated to democracy's advancement, paradoxically is thus the setting for a virtual school for prejudice.

In general, reform efforts stem from three sources: the fraternities themselves, the college administrations and the students.

In 1949, moved by undergraduate pressure, the National Intrafraternity Conference recommended that member fraternities review and eliminate all discriminatory provisions. But since then alumni spokesmen have resumed control and the Conference's most recent resolution calls for "fraternity autonomy " which really means: National fraternities will determine membership standards, colleges please keep hands off.

When non-conforming chapters try to exercise real autonomy by insisting on their right to select their own members without outside interference, they have been slapped down hard by alumni groups...

Further complexities are revealed by the National Committee on Fraternities in Education study which shows that the move to amend written racial and religious restrictions in fraternity constitutions, once thought to be crucial, is relatively unimportant. In the past six years, thirteen of twenty-five restrictive fraternities have removed all written restrictions but there has been no corresponding improvement in practice. One such fraternity, Kappa Delta Rho, struck out the written exclusions and then substituted a secret ritual that restored them. Others with no restrictive clauses, like Phi Kappa Psi and Phi Sigma Kappa, have suspended chapters for violating tradition by pledging "non-aryans. "

More success has attended the reform efforts of the college administrations. Dartmouth intends to meet the problem head-on by requiring the elimination of discriminatory standards in fact as well as on paper. This raises the difficult question of how to assure compliance. The college does not intend to require a representative membership, for this would limit the chapter's freedom of choice. However, Dartmouth will make a case-by-case determination where it suspects that prejudice is at work.

Only a few schools have taken so firm a stand according to a survey of 125 "fraternity colleges " by the National Committee on Fraternities in Education. A more typical position, held by perhaps two dozen schools bans new discriminatory societies, but permits those already on campus to remain provided they make a "sincere effort " either to reform their parent organizations or to gain freedom of action. Although 80 per cent of college presidents were on record opposing racial and religious fraternity restrictions, three-quarters of the schools surveyed had done nothing to achieve this goal.

The most vigorous and successful efforts at reform to date, have come neither from the colleges nor the national fraternities but from the student members themselves...

But in most cases unfortunately, this pressure from within local chapters is usually insufficient alone to overcome the resistance of entrenched alumni groups. Only when reinforced by determined college administrations have the students been able to retain major gains...

Seven colleges have shown the way. Amherst, the University of Connecticut and Princeton have gone far toward the elimination of racial and religious discrimination. Columbia, Dartmouth and Wisconsin have set important target dates to be reached in six years. The University of Chicago policy becomes operative this year. Their example has lighted the clear road ahead for wise and farsighted college administrations who wish to remove a long standing blight on the fraternity system, the colleges and the nation.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: No. 1

In this day and age, as I like to call it, everybody should know something about science. Unfortunately, however, the great majority of us are majoring in elocution, and we do not get a chance to take any science. But we can at least learn the fundamentals.

Though this column is intended to be a source of innocent merriment for all sexes and not to concern itself with weighty matters, I have asked the makers of Philip Morris whether I might not from time to time use this space for a short lesson in science. "Makers," I said to them, "might I not from time to time use this space for a short lesson in science?"

"Bless you, lad!" cried the makers, chuckling. "You may certainly use this space from time to time for a short lesson in science."

They are very benign men, the makers, fond of children, small animals, community singing, and simple country food. Their benevolence is due in no small measure to the cigarettes they smoke, for Philip Morris is a cigarette to soothe the most savage of breasts. I refer not only to the quality of the tobacco — which, as everyone knows, is amiable, humane, and gracious — but also to the quality of the package. Here is no fiendishly contrived container to fray the fingernails and rasp the nerves. Here, instead, is the most simple of devices: you pull a tab, a snap is heard, and there, ready at hand, are your Philip Morris Cigarettes. Strike a match, take a puff, and heave a delicious little rippling sigh of pure content.

So, with the cordial concurrence of the makers, I will from time to time devote this column to a brief lesson in science.

Let us start today with chemistry. It is fitting that chemistry should be the first of our series, for chemistry is the oldest of sciences, having been discovered by Ben Franklin in 123 B.C. when an apple fell on his head while he was shooting the breeze with Pythagoras one day outside the Acropolis. (The reason they were outside the Acropolis and not inside was that Pythagoras had been thrown out for drawing right triangles all over the walls. They had several meetings outside the Acropolis, but finally Franklin said, "Look, Pythagoras, this is nothing against you, see, but I'm no kid any more and if I keep laying around on this wet grass with you, I'm liable to get the break-bone fever. I'm going inside." Pythagoras, friendless now, moped around Athens for a while, then drifted off to Brussels where he married a girl named Harriet Sigafoos and went into the linseed oil game. He would also certainly be forgotten today had not Shakespeare written "Othello.")

But I digress. We were beginning a discussion of chemistry, and the best way to begin is, of course, with fundamentals. Chemicals are divided into elements. There are four: air, earth, fire, and water. Any number of delightful combinations can be made from these elements, such as firewater, dacron, and chef's salad.

Chemicals can be further divided into the classes of explosive and non-explosive. A wise chemist always touches a match to his chemicals before he begins an experiment.

A great variety of containers of different sizes and shapes are used in a chemistry lab. There are tubes, vials, beakers, flasks, pipettes, and retorts. (A retort is also a snappy comeback, such as "Oh, yeah?" or "So's your old man!"

(Perhaps the most famous retort ever made was delivered by none other than Noah Webster himself. It seems that one day Mr. Webster's wife walked unexpectedly into Mr. Webster's office and found Mr. Webster's secretary sitting on Mr. Webster's knee. "Why Mr. Webster!" cried Mr. Webster's wife. "I am surprised!"

("No, my dear," he replied. "I am surprised. You are astonished."

(Well, sir, it must be admitted that old Mr. Webster got off a good one, but still one can not help wishing he had spent less time trifling with his secretary, and more time working on his dictionary. Many of his definitions show an appalling want of scholarship. Take, for instance, what happened to me not long ago. I went to the dictionary to look up "houghband" which is a band that you pass around the leg and neck of an animal. At the time I was planning to pass bands around the legs and necks of some animals, and I wanted to be sure I ordered the right thing.

(Well sir, thumbing through the H's in the dictionary, I happened to come across "horse." And this is how Mr. Webster defines "horse"—"a large, solid hoofed herbivorous mammal, used as a draft animal."

(Now this, I submit, is just plain sloppiness. The most cursory investigation would have shown Mr. Webster that horses are not mammals. Mammals give milk. Horses do not give milk. It has to be taken from them under the most severe duress.

(Nor is the horse a draft animal, as Mr. Webster says. Man is a draft animal. Mr. Webster obviously had the cavalry in mind, but even in the cavalry it is men who are drafted. Horses volunteer.)

But I digress. We were discussing chemistry. I have told you the most important aspects, but there are many more—far too many to cover in the space remaining here. However, I am sure that there is a fine chemistry lab at your very own college. Why don't you go up some afternoon and poke around? Make a kind of fun day out of it. Bring ukeleles. Wear funny hats. Toast frankfurters on the Bunsen burners. Be gay, be merry, be loose, for chemistry is your friend!

Alums, Faculty Advisors Oppose Clauses

Alumni Advisers Favor Abolition

"Democracy should assert itself in educational fields as well as all over the nation and therefore fraternity discriminatory clauses should be done away with," said Mr. Dudley Davis, advisor to Delta Psi.

Phi Sigma Delta

Mr. Wally Lash, alumni advisor to Phi Sigma Delta fraternity, when questioned on what he thought of the repeal of the discriminatory clauses in fraternity charters said, he was in favor of their abolition since, "discrimination of any tyne on a university campus is one of the more shameful things prevalent in America today." Mr. Lash continued saying that, "the university students, as well as faculty members, are considered our most intelligent group and, therefore, are expected to set an example for others. Mr. Lash felt that the clauses existed today not because of the feelings of the active members in different chapters around the country, but rather that, "it is the national administrative officers who are more bigoted and enforce the clauses."

Theta Chi

Mr. Paul Viens, alumni advisor to Theta Chi, said that he, personally, had many friends of different colors and faiths and was not at all in favor of discrimination. He believes that, 'f what discrimination such a social organization feels as necessary can be taken care of within the group rather than through charter clauses, thus doing away with the need for such clauses."

Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta

Mr. Joe Corbitt and Mr. Benjamen Schweyer, advisors to Kappa Sigma and Phi Delta Theta respectively, were both in favor of the repeal of the now existent discriminatory clauses. Mr. Corbitt stated that, "we live in a democracy which preaches brotherhood and fellowship and these principles should be practiced realistically and not just talked about idealogically." Mr. Schweyer, who practices law in Burlington, said that his whole background in law made him reject any tyne of discrimination. He also felt that, "discrimination serves no purpose in advancing the fraternity as far as public acceptance is concerned."

Several other alumni advisors were questioned, however those who served in advisory capacities for fraternities with discriminatory clauses would not comment.

Fraternity Faculty Advisers Oppose Principle Of Clauses

By Joan L. Ross

"There is no place for racial or religeous discrimination in any democratic system. However, to merely legislate against discriminatory clauses in fraternity, or sorority, constitutions will not solve the problem. Since the dawn of history men with common interests have organized into groups for one purpose or another. Those with common interests frequently had similar racial or religious backgrounds. Similarly, those with common interests today will tend to associate together.

Any progress, leading to a more democratic system, can come only when both majority and minority groups are willing to join forces for the good of all, and not through imposed legislation." These were the words of Professor Crooks, faculty advisor at Acacia Fraternity, when questioned on what he thought of the proposed repeal of the fraternity discriminatory clauses.

Professor Bogorad, advisor to Alpha Tau Omega, said, "Since The University itself does not discriminate against its students on the basis of race, creed, or color it is inconceivable to me that it should tolerate any organization that does so discriminate."

Clauses Undesirable

Professors Daggett and Gregg, faculty advisors to Delta Psi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon respectively, felt that it would be desirable to remove discriminatory clauses in fraternity constitutions. Professor Gregg further stated that, "In theory in a democratic society we should not have any undemocratic organizations. Since we think of our society as a democratic one, such organizations should not be tolerated."

Captain Meurlin, advisor to Theta Chi, is also strongly in favor of the repeal of discriminatory clauses. However, he feels such action might be hampered by feelings of national fraternities with Southern chapters.

Several advisors havd desired not to be quoted when queried. However, it seems that the consensus of opinion among the faculty advisors favors repeal of discriminatory clauses as they now exist.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

All U Congress

At Minnesota the top student governing board considered the question of fraternity clauses in February, 1949. A recommendation was made that any fraternities that had not made "substantial progress" in removing its clause by January 1, 1951, would be removed from campus. More than half of the Congress members were in fraternities or sororities at the time. Later the Congress endorsed the University policy which contained no deadline.

The Minnesota Daily

The student newspaper has been very much interested in removing clauses. In 1948-49 it was in favor of the University's flatly "outlawing such clauses." In 1949-50 it favored the present University policy of placing with the fraternities the responsibility to get the clauses out. In 1950-51, it strongly favored the University policy.

National Students Association

The NSA, representing over 750,000 students in 315 colleges and universities in the United States, has an active human relations program. In its booklet "Human Relations in the Educational Community" NSA has stated:

> The fraternities and sororities on the American campus should face realistically the principles found in their rituals and

Nat'l Interfraternity Council Recommends Elimination

1949 REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS

Many member fraternities in the National Interfraternity Conference have never had and do not now have clauses restricting membership in their fraternties. On the other hand, some of the member fraternities at their inception adopted selectivity clauses providing that membership be confined to a sectional or religious or other qualifying group.

The Conference recognizes that it has no authority with respect to membership provisions of member fraternities and that selection of their members is entirely the responsibility and privilege of the individual fraternities.

However, since the question is one which has interested a number of college officials, likewise a number of fraternity men, both undergraduate and alumni, it is the conclusion of this Committee that the subject should be covered by an appropriate resolution at this Conference.

"RESOLVED: That it is the sense of this Conference that (1) it recognizes that many member fraternities have had and now have no restrictive provisions; (2) it recognizes that the question is of concern to many interested parties; (3) it calls these facts to the attention of all member fraternities, appreciating that membership is an individual fraternity responsibility (4) it recommends that member fraternities that do have selective membership provisions consider this question in the light of prevailing conditions and take such steps as they may elect to eliminate such selectivity provisions."

In 1948, the National Interfraternity Conference emphasized a fraternity's right to discriminate if it wanted to, but added that "The fraternity system will flourish better if the character and personality of the individual are regarded as paramount, rather than his race, color, religion, or nationality."

In 1947 the Conference chairman defended restrictive clauses in a speech to the delegates:

> If you or I want to form a fraternity whose membership shall be limited exclusively to bow-legged men, it is our privilege to do so....Our bow-legged fraternity does not infringe on the rights of the knock-kneed man.... because they, too, are free to form their own groups..
> I would sing the praises of discrimination. I love the discriminating tongue, the discriminating eye, the discriminating ear, and above all, the discriminating mind and the discriminating soul... To be indiscriminate is to be common, to be vulgar. I am fed up with Soviet semantics.

The change in attitude shown by the above 1949 statement represented a milestone in the life of the American college fraternity, according to the New York Times. "The old die-hards have been defeated; the younger students have taken a stand more in keeping with the nation's democratic traditions."

How Are Other Colleges Reacting To Elimination?

Many interfraternity councils, student councils, student newspapers, and college administrators from coast to coast have called for an end to bias clauses in fraternity constitutions. An incomplete survey shows the following:

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCILS

Dartmouth IFC – led a movement at the National Interfraternity Conference's Undergraduate Conference in November, 1949, to urge fraternities to eliminate bias clauses.

Syracuse IFC – wants clauses removed and no new fraternities with clauses allowed on campus.

NYU and Penn State IFCs – are all working for removal of restrictive clauses.

Michigan State IFC – a bill introducted into the Michigan State Legislature proposed that no state funds would be used to support a college or university with fraternities which have discriminatory clauses. Thus, both the IFC and the Student Council voted that all organizations which still have clauses by 1956, must present a letter from their national or regional group to show that they have actively tried.

Minnesota IFC – removed previous objection to Clause 6 of the University Policy (reprinted on page 14) and went on record stating that no new fraternities with discriminatory clauses should be allowed on campus.

STUDENT COUNCILS

Ohio Wesleyan – After a student referendum, the student council declared itself "in favor of the removal of the so-called 'restrictive clause' from constitutions, regulations, etc., where they exist, by such means as the organizations concerned may themselves devise."

U of Michigan – Fraternities having discriminatory clauses must show evidence that the fraternity has petitioned to have the question brought up on the floor of the national convention or that they have petitioned their national fraternity to call a national convention to act upon their discriminatory clauses. The Student Affairs Committee will deny recognition to fraternities having clauses after September, 1956.

Columbia College – The Board of Student Representatives has proposed that fraternities be given until October, 1956 to get rid of all written racial or religious restrictive clauses.

U of Wisconsin – The Student council has asked that clauses by removed by the second national convention of each fraternity.

Dartmouth and U of Connecticut – Student referendums urged the removal of clauses.

STUDENT NEWSPAPERS

The Penn State Daily Collegian, the U of Vermont CYNIC, the U of Cincinnati News Record, the Oregon State Daily Barometer, the Cornell Daily Sun and papers on most campuses where IFCs have taken action all favor elimination of bias clauses.

COLLEGE ADMINISTRATIONS

U of Connecticut – must remove by September, 1951. Some eight fraternities have petitioned for an extension.

boys passed and in unison exclaimed,

"What a nice door! "

I sat on the icy steps and my thoughts returned to last year. How well I remembered the exam week. I had two exams in one day. On the same hour, in fact. I remember leaping from seat to seat in order to work on them both. Flunked 'em, too, by Jove. I remembered finding the note in my exam booklet. It had read:

Dragear's Dandy Donuts are Deliciously Dipped in Potassium Sulfate.

Well, there's them that needs it, I thought. On closer examination, however, I found the note to be a code. What luck! I applied an ancient Persian Army code and transferred the symbols. It read them:

Lapjaw's Laundry Likes Lukewarm Lichens.

I speedily scanned my exam. No place for lichens. Anyway, there were some on the wall if I had needed then:

Quickly, I applied the Egyptian alphabet, a secret code of Caesar's, the present rate of exchange of Philippine pesos, and a score from a Gilbert and Silllvan musical. It had read:

All ye who enter here, hail; for ye shall find in these papers your destiny. Treat them with care, intelligence, and fortitude. The future of Islam's Ink Company depends on likes of you.

Bill Zartman wants to know:

What effect would an advanced degree have on my opportunities for advancement at Du Pont?

William N. Zartman is studying for a B.S. in Chemical Engineering at the University of Illinois. Last summer he worked in the Technical Laboratory at Du Pont's Chambers Works to gain industrial experience. He has not yet selected a permanent employer, however; and right now he's asking the kind of questions which will help him select the right job and plan a successful career.

Dr. Sheldon Isakoff received his Ph.D. degree in Chemical Engineering from Columbia University in 1952, doing his graduate research work on the problem of heat transfer in liquid metals. Since graduation he's been engaged in fundamental research work at the Du Pont Experimental Station, Wilmington, Delaware. Dr. Isakoff is now a Research Project Engineer in the Engineering Research Laboratory.

Sheldon Isakoff answers:

An advanced degree would undoubtedly have a favorable effect in technical work, Bill, but let me enlarge on that just a little. In my own field—chemical engineering—a doctorate is considered to be evidence of demonstrated ability in carrying out original research. An advanced technical degree is therefore helpful in obtaining work in research and development, where that skill is definitely important. You might say it gives a man a head start in proving his ability in those areas.

It's less important in some other areas, though. For example, in production or sales work a manifest ability for handling human relationships is just as important for advancement as technical competence. If an engineer is sold on production work or sales, a graduate degree in marketing or business administration might be more helpful to him than advanced technical training—in getting started.

But I've noticed this at Du Pont. Once a man lands a job in his chosen field and actually begins to work, his subsequent advancement depends more on demonstrated ability than on college degrees. That's true throughout the entire company—in scientific work, administration, or what not.

So an advanced degree is not a royal road to anything at Du Pont, Bill. But when coupled with proved abilities, an advanced technical degree is unquestionably helpful to a man in research and development work. It often gives him a chance to demonstrate his abilities more rapidly.

Are you interested in research work?

About 2000 Du Pont scientists are currently engaged in research, aided by some 3500 other employees. Laboratory facilities of the highest quality are available at the Du Pont Experimental Station near Wilmington, and elsewhere throughout the country. Full information about research work at Du Pont is given in "The Story of Research." Write for your copy of this free 28-page booklet to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Seemingly happy WRUV executives Hydra (President of Radio Workshop), Lewis (faculty adviser), Coen (traffic manager and secretary), Ted Muller (station manager).

Held Opening Last Monday

By Myron Lench

"Five...Four...Three...Two...One...You're on the air." With that WRUV, the campus radio station, began its' first official broadcast day on January 3, at 7 p.m.

The first program was a news show. The news, taken from the station's United Press teletype, was as timely as any major network newscast.

After a transcribed Paul Whiteman musicale, a special opening night program, "Ted Muller Introduces the Staff," was heard. Station manager Muller presented his staff of disc jockeys, as engineer Cardin Hessleton played their theme songs in the background. The program was concluded with interviews with Carol Coen, traffic manager; Professor Bill Lewis, faculty advisor; and Tony Vydra, head of Radio Workshop, of which WRUV is a sub-division.

Credit Engineers

WRUV, which was five years in the planning, is self-supporting after a $3,000 investment by the Student Association. The station is a member of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System.

"The credit for the work being done here belongs to the engineers, who put the station together, and the broadcasters, who give much of their time in preparation for these shows," said Muller in reference to his fifty-man staff.

WRUV, 570 on the dial, broadcasts from 7 p.m. to midnight, Sunday through Friday. The station now reaches 1500 students in all of the dormitories and plans for fraternity and sorority house coverage are in process.

New Home

Although a campus radio station is new to the current UVM student body, UVM once had a WRUV studio downtown. This station was bought out by private interests, and most of its' student workers were kept on after graduation. This station now broadcasts under the call letters of WCAX.

Pomeroy Hall is now the home of WRUV. Located there is the main studio, control room, engineer's office and laboratory, and a teletype news room.

The music library contains the largest collection of records in Vermont, 6,000, according to Muller. This collection has a selection ranging through every notable form of music.

The broadcasters have been carefully selected through auditions seeking professional standards. The staff is experienced having practiced since the beginning of the semester and some have had outside experience through part-time jobs on radio stations.

GAMMA PHI BETA

The Gamma Phi girls celebrate two engagements which took place over the Christmas vacation: Beryl Oliver, '55, to Dan Manson, '54, of Delta Psi (now doing graduate work at the Institute of Paper Chemistry in Appleton, Wisconsin) and Peggy Purinton, '56, to Gerry Crouther, '56, of West Point.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The Thetas are wishing their best to Frannie Kidder, '55, of Burlington and Nelson Stiles, '55, who became engaged this Christmas. Other best wishes go to Claire Battles, '55, who was pinned to Dan Hart, '54, Lambda Iota, now a student in the UVM Med School and to Hilary Hyde, who was pinned to Dan Klein, Jr., '56, of Union, who hails from Baltimore, Maryland.

SIGMA PHI

In a pre-vacation ceremony two new Sig sisters were initiated. Jerry Aske, '55, got around to making his wife, Nancy (nee McBride), a sister and Teddy Howard, '55, got pinned to Cynthia McClure, '55. Immediately following the initiation the Sigs had a tea for the grads, faculty members and students. Congratulations go to Brent Beer, '56, who recently married Sherry Young, '57, Gamma PHi. The newly-weds are now living in Hollywood, Florida, where "Brew" is employed as a golf pro. Tom Mundie, '54, became engaged to Katy Melby, '55, New Year's Eve. Tom is in the army and stationed at Fort Meade, Maryland. Hank, '54, came up for the Christmas formal to spend his last weekend as a civilian. Hank donned his khakis and is now taking basic training at Fort Dix.

Lambda Iota News:

The Owls, in true Christmas tradition, blended their voices and spirits as they sang carols to the co-eds on the campus the evening of December 17. As has been their custom for many years the Lambda Iota's visited all sororities and women's dormitories, raising seasonal tones of dubious harmony.

On Thursday, January 6, the Owls held an exchange dinner with Pi Beta Phi sorority. Arrangements were handled by Jim Johnson, '55 of Portland, Maine.

Debate Club Begins Discussion Program For State Orgaization

The Lawrence Debate Club will begin their annual programs of discussion next semester by which the members of the Debate Team can meet and discuss problems with the people of the State of Vermont. Pamphlets put out by the Debate Club have been sent to some 5 0 organizations and clubs which include PTA's, church and business groups, and granges. In the pamphlets which were distributed the Lawrence debate Club announced the discussion problems and the National debate question.

The discussion problems for the season will be--1. Vermont's responsibility for the higher education of her youth--how and to what extent, and 2. Censorship of comics, periodicals and books--how and to what extent. The National debate question this year is--Should the United States extend diplomatic recognition to the Communistic Government of China?

Many Groups

Debate groups of three members to each group will appear before thirty or forty different organizations in Vermont. There will be three phases to each discussion period. They are 1. What is the problem? 2. How great is it? and 3. What are possible solutions to it?

A half an hour will be devoted to the students for the discussion of the problem after which members of the audience will be free to ask questions or to contribute to the analysis of the problem under discussion.

A discussion leader will supervise the program. His duties will be to introduce the topic, outline phases of the discussion, introduce the speakers, open the program to the audience after the discussion period and finally to summarize the entire discussion.

Cooperative Venture

In an interview with Charles R. Helgeson, Professor of Speech and Adviser to the Debate Club, he states, that this new program will be a "cooperative venture of both students and the audience in an attempt to find possible ramifications on the topics. It will also help the participating students in their delivery before large audiences and one of the most important phases in the program is that it will give the students opportunity for well-rounded personal development."

This semester every member of the Debate Club--both Novice and Varsity--has been action in at least one debate and a large schedule is planned for next semester.

Placed High

UVM made an excellent showing at the Tufts Tournament in Boston where they placed in the number three position. Dartmouth placed first and Harvard second. Each team won 4 out of 5 debates. Claire Battles, Herzl Spiro, Ed English, and John Burgess participated in the debate.

At the Hall of Fame Tournament at NYU UVM tied for first place in wins and losses along with Georgetown University. Affirmatives in that debate were Herbert Symond, and John Travis; the negative team was manned by Marvin Levi and Marshall Kruch. Each team won 3 out of 4 debates; with a total of 6 wins and 3 losses.

The Freshman debate team coached by Leonard Kronman, Senior Varsity Debator, attended the St. Anselms College Tournament where they placed third; with 4 out of 6 wins. On the affirmative team was Robert Sagor and Tony Jannicky and on the negative team--Lloyd Thomas and Robert Grimm

In February UVM will journey to Dartmouth. This debate will be unique in that both teams will debate on both sides of the question. Attending the Dartmouth debate will be John Burgess, Lenny Kronman, Herzl Spiro and Ed English.

Rocket Expert To Address Sigma Xi This Tuesday

Clarence N. Hickman, research consultant for the Sandia Corporation of Albuquerque, N.M., will speak on "Why and How Rocket Development Became Important" in a Tuesday evening, January 18, lecture sponsored by the Society of the Sigma Xi.

The 8 p.m. lecture in the Auditorium of the Hills Building is open to the University Family.

Dr. Hickman's interest in rockets dates to World War I when he worked with Dr. R.H. Goddard on development of rockets in 1918. During the Second World War, he worked with the National Defense Research Committee to develop rockets for war purposes.

During 1942-45, he served as consultant to the Army in research on rockets at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. In addition to the administrative work connected with U.S. rocket developments, Dr. Hickman was responsible for the technical design of many rockets, including the Bazooka target rocket and airplane rockets.

It was necessary for him to develop measuring techniques for the study of the internal and external ballistics of rockets and, in connection with the latter, he developed the Ribbon Frame Camera which has been of "inestimable value" in the study of rockets.

be in the know - go STOWE

"Friday is a magic word" ...these days "The Green" (and that's a pretty silly color) for January is fairly a ghost campus, -and all roads lead to the bottom of the chair lift (or Spruce's new double-darling). The Stowe set is at it again' Are you a member? Do you know every year an estimated 4,000,000 people go stark raving mad crazy from November until May? Do you know why the fuss over two boards of hickory and some snow under them (preferably)? Don't you wonder why running downhill or traversing an open slope is referred to not simply as a sport but- "a way of life"? Look into the glowing eyes and sun-tanned faces just returned from Aspen, the Laurentians or just the weekend in a trailer (or two) you may've heard about on the Stowe Road. There's your answer.

Sound silly? or dramatically overdone' You don't like it...You've tried it once and it really showed you nothing' Who wants to get his head broken sailing off a mountain, anyway?"Now I ask You' "I'm not crazy enough to stick a pair of slats on my feet and shove off downhill again' Head over teakettle in a snow drift before I knew it"! Okay boy...of that's the way you feel about it. We wouldn't dream of trying to sell you something you're so dead-set against. We'll never tell you again about how incredibly beautiful the winter landscape can be as you round an open turn and see the breath-taking peaks rise majestically above the tiny village below. We promise not to rave about the parties and the warm companionship and friendly atmosphere everybody seems to thrive on after the ski day is done. We'll never ever try to do justice to the thrill that comes when you finally get speed control on that tough trail you couldn't master last season. Honest, we won't' Cross our hearts! Because.....

We'll be too busy winging down Rhythmic (we hope) turns through miles of white velvet, and, as the shadows lengthen, we'll be ending our day to the tune of the "Skier's Requiem;" "... There's hot buttered-rum at the day's end, a good song and many a jest...". And...we'll miss you!

KAPERS

Kappa Sigma

Al Stevens, '55, of Essex Junction, is awfully good, the Mainstreeters find, at keeping a secret. Al managed to keep hidden that he had gotten pinned over the Christmas vacation to Ann Daigel from Winooski. The jigs up Al! Congratulations.

We join the Kappa Sigs in a farewell to "Hooks" Burrell who leaves for the "Southern trip" with his rich Uncle Sam today. Come back soon. Have you noticed 'Lefty" McAllister shining up his pin lately? What could it mean??? hmmm?

Lyman Hall

The Lyman Ladies announce that one of their number took the fatal step during the vacation. All of the very best wishes to Beverly Rohr, '55, of Long Meadow, Mass., and Frank Kelly '54, a Sigma Phi Epsilon now a Lieutenant stationed in Albuquerque, New Mexico in the Air Force. Mrs. Kelly will join her husband after final exams and finish her senior semester at the University of New Mexico.

Apologies to Carol Coen, '56, a Tri-Delt from Clifton New Jersey and Lew Dan, '55, of Phi Sigma Delta and High View, New York for not announcing their pinning of more than a month ago...For you're the kind of combo, it's really grand to know... and though it's late I'll pick this date so as to tell you so.

DELTA DELTA DELTA NEWS

On December 8, Tri Delt had its annual Apple-Polishing Party when each girl invited her favorite professor. Refreshments were served, which included brightly polished apples. It was the usual great success, enjoyed by both the professors and the girls.

Monday, December 13, was a big day for the Tri Delts. During the day the girls sponsored a Food Sale, and later that evening the Alums gave the actives and pledges a Christmas Party, which added greatly to the holiday spirit.

Even though vacation is over, there are still many shining faces down at the Tri-Delt house. Could it be the reflection of those beautiful diamond rings. The girls who received them and are announcing their engagements are:

Jane Morrison, '55, St Danielson, Conn., to Bill Battles, SAE, '55, Rutland.

Marty Young, '55, Somers N.Y., to Peter Morse, US Army.

Peg McGown, '55, Trenton N.J., to Pete Lauderback, '55 Sig Nu.

Ellen Pirie, '56, Barre, to Joe Wark,'56. Delt Psi, Barre.

Lee McBride,, '56, Snyder, N.Y., to Ray Flannery, '56 Phi Delt.

Jerry Feyrer, '55, Chatham N.J., to Dudley Baker, UVM MED student.

Shirley Behrens,'57, Snyder N.Y., to Bruce Quinby, '56 Delt Psi.

(Mr. Moon - You've really been busy coming out from behind " that tree " lately.

Ed.

The Beta Sigma Chapter of Sigma Nu accepted four new pledges into the house recently: Larry Shufeldt Bellows Falls; Dexter Jones Red Bank, New York; Bob Dawson, Burlington, Vt.; Phil Levine, Gardner, Mass.

The weekend of December 10-11 Sigma Nu held their Christmas formal. It was hailed as a big success. On Saturday afternoon the fraternity held a Christmas party for the orphans from St. Joseph's Orphanage. Christmas presents and refreshments were given to each child.

The highlight came on Friday night during the formal party, when Ronald Ward pinned Diane Johnson of Tri-Delt. Congratulations to them both.

STUDENTS ARE ECSTATIC about Luckies. That's the word, straight from the latest, largest college survey ever. Again, the No. 1 reason Luckies lead in colleges over all other brands, coast to coast — border to border: Luckies taste better. They taste better, first of all, because Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. Then, that tobacco is toasted to taste better. This famous Lucky Strike process tones up Luckies' light, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. So be smart, like the student in the Droodle above, titled: Lucky smoker swinging in hammock. Swing to Luckies yourself. Enjoy the better-tasting cigarette . . . Lucky Strike.

Broadcasting Scholarships Available

The National Academy of Broadcasting in Washington, D.C., is offering a valuable scholarship to college and university trained students wishing to prepare for a career in broadcasting.

According to Miss Alice Keith, President of the Academy, which trains and places its graduates, there is a greater demand now for trained writers and announcers than ever before.

The scholarship, worth $300, pays for one semester's tuition. College graduates with a background in English, speech and languages can obtain a professional certificate upon completion of a semester's study atthe Academy.

Applications should be made to the National Academy of Broadcasting, 3338 - 16th St., N.W., Washington 10, D.C.

AFROTC Offers Weekly Flights To UVM Cadets

Students enrolled in the AFROTC program at the University of Vermont are participating in weekly aircraft orientation flights under the guidance of a veteran instructor whose 19 years civilian and military flying experience total up to 6500 flying hours.

Lt. Col. Tom Schepis, assistant professor of Air Science at UVM, reports that AFROTC Cadets at the University have the opportunity to fly twin and single engine aircraft "under close supervision," and are introduced to basic aircraft maneuvers during 45-minute flying periods. Planes used are the AT 6, and more recently the C-45, a light, twin engined transport-type plane. These aircraft are made available to the AFROTC program by the Air Force and National Guard units at Burlington AFB. In addition, all seniors in the program will have the opportunity to fly jet trainers at summer camp.

Cadet Major Ed Nemer, captain of the '54, football team and all-state fullback, is one of the cadets who has had jet orientation flights at Otis Air Force Base during summer exercises, and Col. Schepis, who was himself a varsity football player and swimmer at the University of Miami, Fla., from 1935-39, reports that it is his experience that students with athletic abilities have an advantage over non-sports participating cadets.

"Cadets who exhibit exceptional coordination in flying activities," he states, "are usually those young men who have developed a fine sense of balanced muscular and mental coordination, usually through varsity or intramural sports participation."

"The attitude of the cadets in this introductory flying endeavor is gratifying," Col. Schepis states.

Cinema Group To Show Four Films This Saturday

The Cinema-Art Club of Burlington announces its next meeting on Saturday, January 15, and Sunday January 16, 1955 at 9 P.M. sharp, at 75 Bilodeau Court (off East Avenue, at end of street).

"Analogies No. 1", by Jim Davis, creator of numerous abstracts and experimental films. The first half of the film shows by means of inventive photography how abstract or near-abstract patterns may appear in familiar objects; the second half uses similar patterns as they appear in modern Art. Four musical numbers have been intercut to provide a novel accompaniment by Frank Lewin. 9 minutes, color.

"Matisse". Produced in 1946 in France, this film shows the Master at work and some of his representative works. 25 minutes.

These two films will be discussed by Professor Francis Colburn, Chairman of the UVM Art Department.

"Rhythm of Africa". A film of great beauty, directed by Jean Cocteau and presenting the simplicity and dignity of the African People of the Chad region. Cocteau's poetic narration is preserved in Langston Hughes' translation, spoken by Kenneth Spencer. An outstanding sequence of dances, accompanied by music recorded on the spot, shows a formal courtship dance a dance at which women imitate birds, demon dances at a funeral ceremony and a glimpse of a puberty ritual. 15 minutes.

"The Feeling of Depression". A psychological film showing the business and home life of a conscientious and industrious man whose feeling of depression originates from his blaming himself personally for his business reverses. 32 minutes.

Tryouts for Three Bears

Tryouts for "The Three Bears" will be held February third and fourth. Watch the University Players bulletin board for time and place. A copy of the play is on reserve in the library. Parts consist of two women, two men, and four bears.

'Lavender Hill Mob' Shown On Fleming Screen

"The Lavender Hill Mob," a J. Arthur Rank picture, starring Alec Guiness, the celebrated British actor, was shown in the Fleming Museum auditorium at 2 p.m. last Saturday by the Audio-Visual Services Department. The showing was made possible by a grant from the Kake Walk Dispositions Committee.

The Story

Mr. Guiness portrayed a forty-five year-old bank clerk who decides that instead of watching the gold bullion at the bank, he would rather take it for self-keeping with the intent of disposing of portions of it, attempting to achieve greater benefits.

Having been identified as the thief of the bullion, he emigrates rapidly to South America and a new life of extravagance. However, in the midst of all his pleasure, Scotland Yard, walking abroad, finds the poor bank clerk and carries him back over the wild blue sea to a dark prison cell.

The picture seemed to be very well enjoyed by those who went for there was much laughter during the time the film played on the screen. Slips of paper were passed out to determine the feeling of the students concerning free movies such as "The Lavender Hill Mob." Response was 100% affirmative.

Mr. Eldred, chairman of the Audio-Visual Services Department said, in a conservation with this reporter, "I was very pleased with the cooperation of the numerous students who came. More of this pictures will be planned for the future by a student-faculty committee."

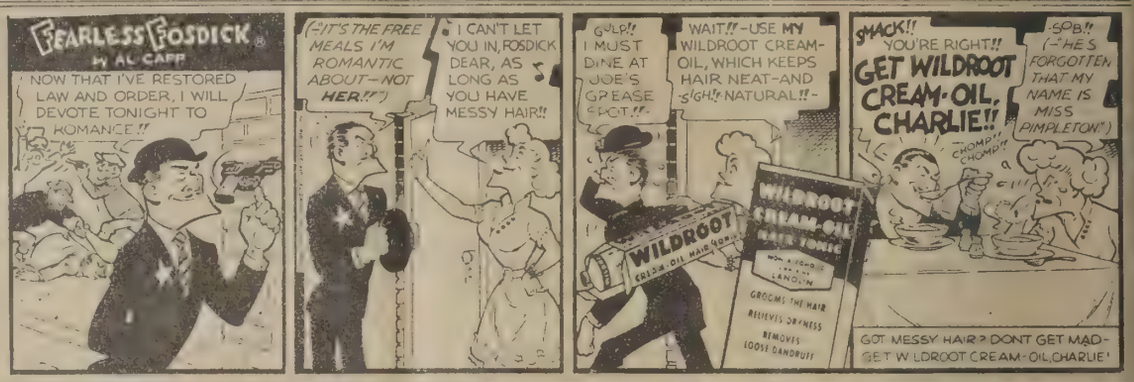
Intense Beauty Created By Menatti In Opera, 'Medium'

By Diane Tanzi

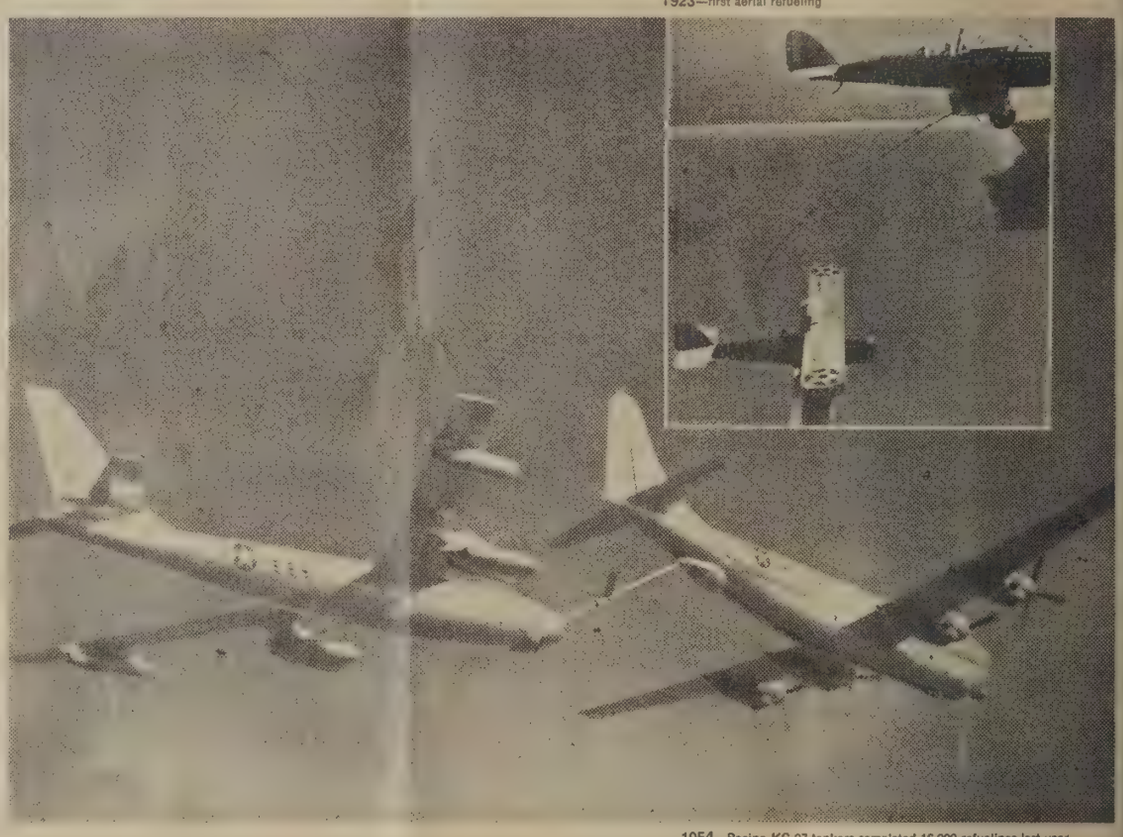
Drained of all emotional energy we left the small theatre, which for a short time had given us one of the most sensitive and artfully creative evenings of the year. There seemed no way to convey to one another the intense feeling we had for the film we had just seen, and somehow silence was the best expression of appreciation.

Menatti's Opera, "The Medium" was the first contact many of us had had with any opera done completely in English, and also as a movie. The intensity with which the composer strove to create beauty out of a language so common in everyday use, but so rare in opera, with its standard German, French and Italian, was more than a success. With the few moments of conditioning we received it seemed perfectly natural to be listening to solos and duets in English, and after the newness of it had worn off, the effect was not as one might expect; it was thoroughly pleasing to the ear.



To reveal the theme of the opera is necessary for an understanding of the characterization which was so beautifully done. The story ntered around a woman caught between the world of the unreal and that of reality. She is forced by poverty to hold seances, and finds that her cheating has created in her conscience a feeling of being pursued by something, some force which she cannot put down. In her confusion and struggle between her two worlds she accuses the one person who seems harmless, a young mute, whom she has taken into her house when he was stranded by a band of gypsies.

In this accusation she frightens the boy into acting fearful, and this fear which she sees in his eyes is interpreted as guilt. The woman's daughter, who sees the injustice of her mother's confusion and false accusation defends the mute. He is her sole mate in a world of imagination and beauty, the one person whom she is fond of through pity, and in the naturalnees of any child.



The mute is "The Medium", for it is through him that the inner emotions of the opera are revealed. It is through him that the audience feels the intensity of the story, finds a correlation of the story to the beauty of music. He is a beautiful creature whose only avenue of expression is through his face, which creates love, happiness, fear, confusion, pain, and a multitude of human emotions.

There were definite faults in the filming of "The Medium". The most obvious of these was the distraction created by the somewhat too powerful orchestration, sometimes leaving the words and voices of the characters lost to the listener. This might have been due to the placing of the recording instruments. It was an experiment, however, and we must leave room for error in such an experiment. The movie proved its value as a new medium for opera. For incorporated in the movie were all those added touches that do not exist in traditional opera. Here was a sequence of story, the visualization of the continuity of scenes, and especially the art of acting brought a new vitality and enchantment to the opera.

It can be said that Menatti is a true artist in the realm of opera, and for a contemporary composer he has a deep sensitivity of style in his music which is part of the success of composers in the contemporary scene, who seem to have found, along with Menatti the lush beauty of tone and quality which creates in the imagination of the listener, the feeling and emotion behind the composition.

1923—first aerial refueling

1954—Boeing KC-97 tankers completed 16,000 refuelings last year

30 years of progress in aerial refueling

Boeing pioneered aerial refueling tankers and equipment. Further, during its 38 years, it has constantly pioneered trend-setting designs in commercial and military aircraft. This has meant such continuous growth that Boeing now employs more engineers than ever before, including the World War II peak. Boeing offers stable careers to engineers of virtually EVERY type: civil, mechanical, electrical and aeronautical. The company employs draftsmen and engineering aides for routine work, thus freeing engineers for more creative assignments.

Boeing engineers enjoy long-range careers—46% of them have been at Boeing 5 or more years, 25% have been here 10 years, and 6% for 15 years.

In addition to stability, Boeing offers an unusual variety of research, design and production opportunities, including work with new materials, guided missiles, jet bombers and transports, and research in nuclear-powered aircraft and supersonic flight.

Boeing makes it possible for engineers to take graduate studies while working, and reimburses them for all

Spring Hinted In New Paper

'ere we are, deep in the snows of winter, with nary a sign of a crocus or rosebud, as the saying goes. We were mullin over this unhappy state of affairs the other day while trudging over to Waterman for a cup of hot java to thaw our frozen bones. And there, as we were seated in the coffee shop, a ray of hope came to us. Someone believes in Spring, judging from the new decor of the cafeteria and coffee shop. Green shrubs, and warm sunshine flooded the walls and atmosphere of the rooms. This addition came just in time, for it seems that many of our students had given up entirely and were convinced that there was no Spring. Let this serve as a constant reminder that Spring is really just around the corner---and a few blocks down.

The rooms were decorated as a metter of building maintenance, designed to give the students a more attractive place in which to eat. This is the first time wallpaper has been used, although it has been requested for many years. These improvements have been done for you, the students, so why not show your appreciation by saying that you've noticed and liked the job?

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

Steps in are now being taken to improve the health of intra-murals in this state. A plan is now being formed for the addition of intra-mural competition between colleges in this state.

A few weeks ago we recommended to the Interfraternity Council, that the champions of the UVM intra-mural basketball league play the Middlebury Champions in a post season game. This was put into a motion and tabled so that each fraternity house could discuss the proposal.

The following week, the motion was passed unanimously by all fourteen houses. We were appointed as a committee of one to represent IFC in carrying out this proposal.

Archie Post, director of intra-murals at UVM, has already obtained favorable comment from President Borgmann. He has contacted Middlebury officials and they are interested. Work has already begun on the ironing out of details.

This game will be played at the expense and responsibility of each individual involved.

We hope that various aims may be accomplished by this proposal.

To mention the most important:

1. Give UVM intra-murals a "shot in the arm".
2. Increase inter-scholastic relations between schools, on a student level.
3. Stepping stone toward increased inter-mural activities.

In regard to the last point, we hope that the success of this first game will spread to include other sports, other schools (Norwich, St. Mikes) and perhaps develop into a kind of inter-state inter-mural league.

A notch has already been chipped. It will be interesting to note what develops.

Captain Keith Jampolis needed but sixteen more digits last night to surpass Nat Campana's all-time UVM scoring record of 855 points set last year. No Vermont hoopster has ever hit the 1000 point mark. Both Jampolis and Earl Steinman are within striking distance with more than half of the season remaining.

CAT - TALES

Steinman is making a strong bid for All-Yankee Conference honors. He has scored 25, and 34 against Maine and UNH respectively, putting him among the leaders. . . . . Brandeis, whom the Catamounts encounter later on, is scoring at a 92 points per game average. . . . . .Clarkson, another UVM opponent, won its first seven games. . . . . .The downtown sportswriters are getting high blood pressure competing for sensation sports splashes. . . . . .Fuzzy Evans' lifetime record against state teams is won 70, lost 9. This string runs back to 1939. . . . . .The immigration service seems to have displaced a few aliens since it situated its offices in Memorial Auditorium Basement. . . . . .Gym says this is just another argument for his coming to UVM soon.

Norwich Wins After Halftime 39-39 Deadlock

The first state basketball game unfolded last week when the UVM Catamounts lost to the Norwich Cadets 78-68, at Northfield, Vermont. Vermont's record going into the contest was 3 wins and 4 losses. The last game played by the Cats was December 17 against New Hampshire where the Cats rebounded to win after their previous defeat against AIC.

Norwich proved too much for Vermont as they pulled away in the last minutes of play to take the first game of two between these state rivals, 78-68. The Cadets used a zone defense which proved effective until Earl Steinman found the range with his deadly set-shot. For Norwich it was little Chet Szwejkowski who did all the damage as he took scoring honors with 22 points. The first half was closely fought all the way with both teams leaving the floor with the score resting at 39-39.

Fouls Hurt

The Evansmen had their work cut out for them because starters Bob Lovejoy and Bill Mann were sitting on the bench with 4 and 3 fouls respectively. Reserves Bill King and Barry Stone filled in with Jampolis, Burkhardt and Steinman rounding out the team for the second half. Throughout the game the difference in point spread was not more than 3 points until the last 6 minutes. At this point Norwich began to pull away with freshman Howie Davis shooting from inside sinking clutch baskets as the Catamounts fought desperately to catch the fleeting Cadets. Lovejoy fouled out and points became scarce in the final minutes of play.

CATNIPS. . . . . .Steinman, Burkhardt and Jampolis all hit double figures with 17, 15 and 17 respectively. . . . . ."Skip" Burkhardt's consistency and all around fine ballplaying makes it a pleasure to watch on the court. . Captain Jampolis needs a 157 more points to hit the 1,000 mark, topping the 4 year scoring mark. . .

In The Coaches Corner

"The boys missed their shots at crucial times". . ."10 out of 18 isn't too good on the foul line". . . "When Szwejkowski starts throwing in sets from 30 feet out, there's just so much you can do. . . . . .

KS, SN, SPE, Chit Carry Spottless Court Records

By Fred Solomon

The Athletic department is conducting three four wall handball tournaments as soon as the second semester begins. There will be a singles and doubles tournament, both running at the same time. The third tournament will be for beginners only. This is a new idea at UVM and Archie Post hopes enough interest will be shown in it. All those interested sign up by Saturday the 15th of January. This is the last date for entrants to register. The purpose of this early registration is the desire by the athletic department to have the tournament start at the beginning of the second semester. Medals will be presented to the winners.

Badminton Tournament

There is also the possibility of a badminton tournament, however this idea is not definite as yet. The success of this will depend upon the students themselves. Archie Post has contacted Middlebury College and there is a good chance of getting the two top UVM badminton players to meet Middlebury's best duo in in both singles and doubles.

League Leaders Undefeated

During the past week there has been a great deal of activity in both intra-mural basketball and bowling.

In basketball KS with McLam accounting for 29 points downed PDT 43 to 25; SN sneaked past 530 41 to 40, Rossuck and Henderson hit for 24 points for SN and Carr and Roth did the same for TEP; ATO with Reilly's 19 point performance downed Acacia who was paced by Cuvenge's 11 digets; Benair with 20 points and Knapp with 16 led SPE over TC whose Olson and Havilan hit for 26 points; PDT downed AEP with Harisamovicz getting 12 for the winners and Rosenthal cornering ten for the loosers; Henderson led SN to a 58 to 14 win over LI; SAE defeated PDT 34 to 27, Park, O'Brien and Mead each had 10 points for the victors; DP dropped TEP 38 to 29, DP was paced by Shuttle's 17 digets and was followed by TEP's Goldman with 11 points; PDT downed PSD 34 to 28; and SAE trounced Acacia 70 to 28 with Park and O'Brien cornering 34 points; LI forfeited to TC; Chittenden 1 and 2 forfeited to Chittenden 3 and 4; Buckham 3 and 4 forfeited to Wills 1 and 2; SP forfeited to TEP; ATO forfeited to KS; and Chittenden 1 and 2 forfeited to Wills 1 and 2.

Bowling in Full Force

In bowling SPE paced by Klem's 104 defeated DP 4-0; SN downed SP 4-0, the victors were paced by Ireland's 110 game; Acacia dropped LI 3-1; SAE took TEP 4-0, Heald led the winners with 109 and Roth paced the losers with 106; PSD led by Walker's 117 trip SN 4-0, Ireland's 109 was tops for the losers; SPE beat AEP 4-0, Martin of SPE and Shapiro of AEP both hit 109; LI downed TC 3-1;

Cats Split Over Holiday; Steinman Scores 34 At UNH

By Ed Willard

The Vermont Catamounts, playing their last home game before the Christmas vacation, were beaten from the Aces from AIC by an 89-56 score on December 15. They made up for this however, as they downed New Hampshire, for their third straight Yankee Conference win 98-89 as the Cats set a new all-time Vermont point high with dead eyed Earl Steinman passing in 34 points to set a new scoring mark for the New Hampshire field house.

UVM Bad Night

The American International game gave the Cats a chance to get a bad game out of their systems which they did handily as the Aces built up and held a 20 point lead for most of the game with the exception of the first part of the last half when the Cats closed the gap to eight points. From here on in, however, AIC rolled as Dick (25 points) Clark controlled both backboards with deadly John (17 points) Jones dropping in some beautiful set shots. Captain Keith Jampolis and Bobby Lovejoy had 10 points each to top the Cat scorers.

Steinman Shines

The UNH game, played two days later, saw a fired up Vermont five led by Earl Steinman who sank 8 out of 10 set shots in the first half defeat their third Yank on foe 98-89. Vermont's previous high game total had been the 95 points they scored over AIC in 1953. Earl Steinman also set a mark as he broke a Lewis Field House (UNH's home floor) mark with 34 points. Captain Keith Jampolis followed on Steinman's heels with 29 points.

Bobby Lovejoy played a brilliant defensive game as New Hampshire closed Vermont's 10 point halftime lead while he was temporarily held out of the game on four fouls. Billy Pappas, UNH great and last year's Conference high scorer scored only 12 points as John McLaughlin led the Wildcats with 30. This game ended Vermont play until after New Years.

Damon Leads Skiiers In Successful Season Debut; Hoopsters Average 73.5; Steinman Leads Scoring

Jampolis Needed 16 Digits To Break All-Time Record

By Dick Schatten

The scoring statistics of basketball games played up to and including January 6, show the UVM Catamounts averaging 73.5 points per ball game, while their opponents are scoring a little better than 82 points a game.

Jampolis Sixteen From Record

Earl Steinman continues to lead the individual scoring parade with an average of a little better than eighteen points per contest. Earl, the New London, Conn. senior, has 145 markers in eight games. If he continues to his present scoring pace he will break Nat Campana's all-time record of 855 points. Captain Keith Jampolis, the team's second scorer is pouring a little better than thirteen points a game through the hoop and will also break Campana's record if he continues his present rate of scoring. Keith, who has 108 points thus far, may also become the first Vermonter ever to amass 1,000 points. "Jamp" needed just sixteen points last night to become Vermont's new all-time high scorer and 160 to reach the 1,000 point mark.

UVM's number three point getter is Art "Skippy" Burkhardt, the Cats' prize sophomore. Not only has the "Skipper" averaged close to thirteen points a game, but he has been the team's most consistant rebounder all year.

The fourth scorer is also a soph. Bill Mann has ninety-seven points in eight contests, for a slightly better than twelve point average.

Bill King, the 6-4 junior, has a 6-5 average and has been Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' replacement for Burkhardt and Mann thus far. Bill has come through with some very timely baskets for the Evansmen in close contests.

Divide forty-eight points by eight games and one invariably comes up with six points per game, or Bob Lovejoy's average for the first part of this season. Six points a game -- doesn't sound too potent, does it? But put the University of Vermont basketball team on the floor without Bobby Lovejoy and they are just about one half as effective. Bob is sixth in scoring, but he is surely the team's defensive ace. He is also the squad's best playmaker and one of it's top rebounders.

Frosh Win Second Game At Norwich JV

By Ron Smith

The Freshman basketball team won its second straight game in three starts last Friday night as they topped the Norwich JVs by a 56-44 score in a preliminary game at Northfield. Ron Bouchard led the scoring parade with 20 points, all from the field.

Yearlings Come From Behind

Coach Ralph Lapointe's squad was behind at the half, 23-25 but the boys began to get the feel of things in the second half and they went on to win going away. Coach Lapointe remarked that the team was beginning to get the pre-holiday feeling at the end of the game.

Top Lyndon

In a game played just before the end of vacation, the Kittens topped Lyndon State Teachers by a 72-49 score. Bill Treene and Bob Lovell led the scoring parade then as they score 20 and 19 points respectively. Coach Lapointe said that the boys played their best in the Lyndon game as they had about three weeks of unbroken practice behind them.

Dartmouth 5 Tonight

Last night the Frosh played host to Middlebury at the downtown gym. Tonight, the Kittens travel to Hanover and they play the Freshman Braves of Dartmouth. The game tonight is scheduled for the Frosh before Feb. 9 when they play host to the Norwich JVs again.

Skiiers Lead In C.C. Race; Break Skis

In the meet held during the Christmas holidays, Larry Damon, co-captain of the UVM Ski Team swept into second place in the first cross-country race of the season. He was beaten by a Norwegian skier - and by very little. In the same race, Al Duval placed 32nd in a field of 125 competitors. The Giant Slalom was held on the following day on Cannon Mt.. Once again Larry Damon led the UVM Skiers - placing best among all the men on the team.

Odds and Ends With UVM Skiers

The Orvis Trophy Race was held at Big Bromley this pas weekend. At press time the results were not available.

Paul Smiths College was the host for the New York State Cross Country Championships on January 8. Larry Damon and Clin Thompson, both classified as "A" cross-country racers were well ahead of the field for si miles when fate intervened. Bot men had the unfortunate luck o breaking their skies, thus puttin them out of the race. In the Class "B" division, Cataskiers Bil Purcell and Al Duval placed thir and fourth, respectively.

The Hanover Invitational Rela Cross-Country and Jumping Cham pionship will be held this comin weekend. The feature of thi meet will find Varsity Skier Larry Damon, Jerry Baril an Bill Purcell taking to the air fo UVM. The Frosh jumpers includ Dave Michael, Jack Buck, Bar Larrow, Charlie Gee and Roge Piper.

On Sunday afternoon the Ion grind over hill and dale in th cross-country relay will tak place. Team number 1 is mad up of Larry Damon, Clint Thomp son, Bill purcell and Al duva with Jerry Baril and Don Grad as alternates. Team number tw has Ronnie Hill, Jack Stetson Hugh Sinclair and Pete Adams i the competition for UVM.

House Passes UVM Charter Change

It Was A Long, Hard Road

By Susan Wakefield

The future of the University of Vermont hinged on the vote of the Vermont House of Representatives yesterday. The bill H.R. 60 would revise the charter of the University to clarify its position as a bonafide state university. These changes would clear the way for state appropriations to lower the tuition at UVM, possibly to $225 for Vermonters and $425 for out-of state students.

The bill for the proposed charter changed was introduces in the House of Representatives on January 13. President Carl W. Borgmann urged that the UVM legislative program be adopted to provide lower cost education for Vermont youths, giving them the same opportunities as other students in America. Those opportunities, he said, are not now available. (Vermont is the only state in the Union that does not have a state university.)

Opposition Raised

Opposition to the charter changes was expressed by Research and T.V. Education, Inc., a newly-organized non-profit corporation backed by lawyers, a Brattleboro newspaper publisher and a farm leader. Their opposition was based on four premises:

1. Lack of information available to the Legislature and public on the true effects of the charter changes.
2. Fear that present endowments, particularly Wilbur fund, and alumni support would be endangered.
3. Fear that future endowments and support of UVM graduates would be prohibited or impaired "by a public confession of law that UVM is a public institution and state responsibility.
4. The changes would make UVM a "favored university" to the detriment of Norwich University, Middlebury, and St. Michael's College.

Borgmann Answers

The Administration answered these objections in a special CYNIC interview as follows:

1. G.R. Hopwood, Director of public Relations, stated in regard to the charge of a lack of information. "The proposals have been actively discussed for

The Vermont Legislature voted this week to accept a proposed change in the charter of the University.

The proposal calls for the establishment of UVM and SAC as an instrumentality of the state, with three additional Trustees representing the State.

A Roll Call vote on Wednesday showed the House to be in favor of the measure to the tune of 208 - 24. A voice vote Friday showed approximately the same division.

The Bill was previously recommended for passage, 12 - 1, by the House Education Committee.

Senate approval and gubanatorial signature are still necessary for final approval.

If final approval is gained, the way will be cleared for passaged of a bill for an appropriation by the State of funds sufficient to lower Vermont resident tuition to $425 from its present $700.

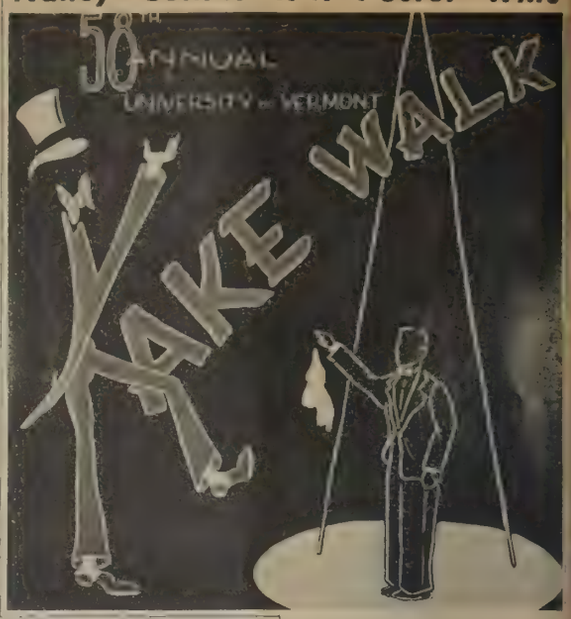
By Michael Abramson

Ralph Marterie will be featured in "Cinderella's Ballroom" for the Kake Walk Ball, announced the Kake Walk Directors this week.

For the first time in Kake Walk history, a professional decorator has been hired to design Memorial Auditorium for the Kake Walk Formal. He will erect a full ceiling of evening blue fabric that will be attached in the center to the girders and extend across the gymnasium floor to the front of the balconies. Underneath the fabric ceiling the decorator will hang four lighted chandeliers, while draped from the ceiling below the blue fabric will be vertical drapes of white material. The balconies on both sides and also the balcony at the entrance side will be decorated with a royal blue material with a pink edging at the bottom.

Ralph Marterie



Tricks With Lights

At regular intervals in front of each of the side balconies, the decorator will place translucent cloth columns that will extend from a base on the floor to the ceiling. In the base of the column the decorator will place an automatic revolving colored floodlight that will be focused up through the center of the column, creating a very attractive color. The lights change color automatically all evening, and therefore change the colors of the translucent columns, creating colorful colanade effect.

As a background for the Marterie orchestra, the decorator will erect a red fabric at the top of which will be placed a regal white overdrape. In the center of this red background there will be placed a replica, of King Arthur's shield.

Recently, Ralph Marterie and his orchestra received top billing in Down Beat Magazine, the Bible of popular music enthusiasts. They were elected winners in an independent survey of leading colleges and Universities to determine the students favorite band.

Nancy Collins KW Poster Wins

By Shirley O'Neill

A three-color poster highlighted by the figures of a walker and a director has been chosen the winner of the Kake Walk poster contest. The winning poster was designed by Nancy Collins, '55, of Alpha Chi Omega. Nancy, a Burlington resident, is majoring in Elementary Education.

Poster

Her poster was chosen from among the twenty entries submitted, and will be used to announce the many activities of the Kake Walk weekend. It is done in three colors, with red and white lettering and outlining on a black background. On one side is the figure of a director, done in white outline, dropping a white handkerchief. There is the figure of a walker in traditional costume, done in red, on the other side.

Sculpture

The rules for the snow sculpture contest have been announced. The sculpture rules for the 58th annual Kake Walk will remain the same as in recent years, in that all sculptures will be made of snow. Ice and artificial coloring will be permitted. No visible wooden or other materials shall be used as supports for the sculptures, as has been done in the past, unless these materials cannot be seen.

Judging

Judging will be based on originality and execution. The decision will be awarded not on a point-for-point basis, but on the over-all effect. The judging will take place on the morning of Saturday, February 19. All groups competing in the contest must submit their names to the Kake Walk office by Tuesday, February 15.

"Dress" Pruett wants to know:

What type of training program does Du Pont have?

DRESSLAR M. PRUETT expects to receive his B.S. in Industrial Engineering this summer from Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater, Okla. He is president of the local student branch of A.I.I.E. Naturally, he is interested in selecting the best job opportunity for a successful career based on his technical training.

DONALD C. MILLER received his B.S. in Chemical Engineering from Ohio State University in June 1937. During the following month he started work with the Organic Chemicals Department of Du Pont at Deepwater Point, N. J. Since then he has received and given many kinds of technical training. Today Don Miller is a general superintendent at Du Pont's Chambers Works—well qualified to answer questions about training programs for college men.

Don Miller answers:

Training has many facets in a big firm like Du Pont, Dress, and a great deal of thought has been given to make it truly effective. We look upon training as a very important factor in a man's career. We think that the best way to train a college graduate is to give him a maximum of on-the-job responsibility in a minimum length of time. That's the general guiding policy at Du Pont, Dress.

Of course, each department varies this general policy to suit its special needs. A new man being trained for production supervision may first spend a year or so in laboratory or plant development work. Or he may spend his training period as a plant operator. Thus a man obtains firsthand knowledge of his process, and establishes a bond of mutual respect with the men he'll be working with on his first major assignment.

A young man interested in sales is often first assigned to a plant or laboratory dealing with the products he will later sell; or he may join a group of trainees to learn selling techniques right from the start.

An engineer, chemist, or other technical graduate is usually chosen for a specific job within his major field of study. Such a man brings specialized knowledge and skill to his job, and he is encouraged to put them to use promptly. But at Du Pont his experiences on the job are supplemented with lectures, conferences and discussion groups. In a very real sense, new technical employees continue training in their specialties after joining the Company.

To sum it all up, Dress, Du Pont's training program is individualized to provide a new man with specific opportunities to learn from contacts with more experienced men. The prime objective of Du Pont training is always kept clearly in mind—to develop men for future advancement and effectiveness in the organization.

NOW AVAILABLE for student ASME chapters and other college groups, a 16-mm. sound-color movie—"Mechanical Engineering at Du Pont." For further information write to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), 2521 Nemours Bldg., Wilmington 98, Delaware.

Many Groups Set To Produce "Oklahoma"

The University of Vermont Players will join with the University's Music Club, Dance Workshop and the University Orchestra in producing the musical comedy, "Oklahoma," in an April 15, performance set for Memorial Auditorium.

The presentation will be uncut and feature all the original music from the play which ran up a record success on Broadway and on tour. Auditions for acting, singing, chorus and orchestra parts will be open to all interested persons, according to Greg Falls, who will direct the production.

Prof. Howard Bennett will direct the soloists and chorus, and Prof. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis will conduct the orchestra. Martha Howe will do choreography and direct the dances for the presentation which will be in musical circus style in the round.

Audition Schedule Set

Auditions for the orchestra will be held on Friday from 3:30-5 in the music building at UVM. Soloists will be auditioned Tuesday and Wednesday from 3:30-5:30 in the music building, and dance auditions will be held Tuesday from 7-9 p.m. at Southwick.

Chorus try-outs will be held on Friday, Feb. 25 from 3:30-5:30 in the music building.

Solo Tryouts

Soloists will be asked to audition for the following parts and songs: Curly, a baritone, "Oklahoma," "People Will Say We're in Love," and "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning;" Laurey, soprano, "People Will Say We're in Love," and "Many a New Day;" Will Parker, baritone, "All or Nuthin';" and "Kansas City;" Ado Anne comic alto, "Can't Say No," and "All or Nuthin';" Jud Fry, bass," Poor Jud is Dead;" Aunt Eller, Soprano, "Kansas City," and "People Will Say We're in Love;" and Old Man Carnes, baritone, "Kansas City," and "The Farmer and the Cowman."

All the soloist parts call for "medium voices," according to Prof. Bennett, who will conduct the audition for soloists and chorus.

The production will take the place of the annual spring play put on by the Players, and of the annual spring operetta.

President Says New Dorm Is Key To Development

Carl W. Borgmann, president of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, said today that UVM's proposed $1,800,000 women's dormitory is "the key to the University's long-range development program," because University facilities now being used to house women students will be freed for "more efficient use."

Construction of the new dormitory will enable UVM to take the first step toward the eventual shutdown of East Hall which was erected after the war as a temporary solution to UVM's greatly increased enrollment. One section of East Hall is presently used as a women's dormitory, and this would be discontinued once new dorm facilities become available, Dr. Borgmann said.

Other facilities which would be released by the construction of the proposed dormitory include a wing of the Old Mill now used as a women's dorm, and facilities in Converse Hall, also used as a women's dormitory. Space gained in the Old Mill would be returned to classroom use, while Converse would be left free to house married students and some upperclassmen.

Construction To Begin This Summer On Dorm

The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College tentatively plans to break ground this summer for a new, $1,800,000 dormitory which will house 400 women students, President Carl W. Borgmann has announced.

The new dormitory, which is to be located on the Redstone Campus of the University, will have four dining rooms with facilities for 600. Featuring three units connected at the west corners of the main unit, the proposed dormitory will have a reinforced concrete frame with brick exterior and steel sash. It will be accoustically treated.

Close Small Units

Construction of the dormitory will permit the University to discontinue use by women students of dormitory facilities in East Hall, Converse, and the Old Mill on the main campus. In addition, the present proposal calls for the closing of Elmwood, Roberts, Claggett, Sanders, and possibly Lyman, Halls, with their sale expected to pay part of the cost of the new dormitory.

Financed Through Bonds

Although no financial arrangements have been made as yet, it is tentatively planned to finance the new dormitory partly using unrestricted gifts received by the University, partly by the sale of University property in Burlington, and by a self-liquidating bond issue. In connection with this, the Board of Trustees of the University have authorized President Borgmann to submit a bill to the Legislature which would have the State guarantee the bond issue.

In 1946, when three men's and one women's dormitory were constructed, the State appropriated $200,000 and also guaranteed the University's bond issue to finance the remainder of the costs. The State will not be asked to appropriate any money for the new women's dormitory, President Borgmann said, but only to guarantee the bond issue.

The new dormitory will be constructed on three levels, following the contours of the land and running approximately south from Coolidge on the Redstone Campus.

If the University is able to complete present plans for the financing of the dormitory, it is expected that work can be gotten underway this summer, adding to the fairly active building outlook for the Burlington area.

EDITORIAL

A vote of thanks is due to UVM's roving ambassador and good will agent, Carl W. Borgmann.

Those who have followed the progress of the University's attempt at a charter revision will agree that the untiring efforts of Dr. Borgmann spelled the difference between possible defeat and probable victory. It is quite possible that the recent overwhelming affirmative votes in the House are direct reflections of the time and energy expended by the President.

Although his office has been extremely busy all during this past year, Mr. Borgmann still managed to tour the state, speaking at club meetings, town meetings; making Radio and Television appearances; speaking directly with legislators.

All this time he was selling the idea of better higher education for the youth of Vermont at tuition rates which were more in line with other land grant Universities throughout the nation. All this time he has fought for a charter change which will make the University of Vermont, in essence, an instrumentality of the state. If his efforts are eventually successful, Vermont will catch up to the rest of the Union insofar as they will then possess a State University.

If final success is met, thanks will be due this man from the future unborn men and women of this state. Many times in the past has the effort been made to define UVM as a State University. Many times, obviously, the attempts failed. If the pattern of acceptance in the Upper House of the Vermont Legislature is the same as in the lower, Carl W. Borgmann will have succeeded.

We recently spoke with one of the Justices of the UVM Student Court. He tells us that the faculty is not taking advantage of the service offered by this organization. We stand in basic agreement with the purpose of the court. We feel that it serves a definite function on this campus.

We were further reminded that it is the present intent of the court that students be able to prefer charges against other students for University academic violations. Let's take advantage of this Court. It would be a shame to see it go by the boards as an unsuccessful venture.

Commencing with this issue of the CYNIC, students and faculty will find a new feature---UVM CLIPPINGS.

CLIPPINGS has for a number of years been a publication of the Public Relations Office which was distributed only to faculty and administration. With an eye on bringing faculty affairs closer to the student, CLIPPINGS has found its way into the pages of the CYNIC. Public Relations will continue to gather and write CLIPPINGS. Only the vehicle has been changed. Content will remain the same. Hope you all like it!

The Faculty Speaks

Prof. John Lockhead On "High School Preparation"

Each year at UVM a certain number of students confess to some of us members of the faculty a particular type of tragedy. I am sincerely touched by these tales of woe, but usually there is little that I can do to help. Perhaps best known of these tragedies are the cases of students who have failed to gain admittance to Medical School. Obviously many other similar failures must occur, often kept secret by the students concerned. All of these failures seem tragic at the time, but some of them are actually rather fortunate. If the student knows deep down in his conscience that he has honestly done his best while at UVM, then he will soon come to realize that his talents are really not suited to the career he was trying to enter. In the end he will be much happier in some other job. The real tragedies are the cases of students who have not been doing their best, and who might have been able to follow the career of their choice if only they had worked harder. Usually such students do not admit the true situation. But their conscience must tell them, and I often wonder what happens to them in later life. Do they all nurse secret sorrows, or do they try to smother that bothersome conscience, with startling effects on their psychologies?

A person usually is content in a job if he had some freedom in its choice, and if he feels that his native ability is being reasonably will utilized. But he will be unhappy if he feels that he was made for better things, even though he may know that it was his own fault that he missed the bus.

A student who graduates with an academic record worse than he should have achieved, not only cannot pursue the career of his choice, but will find the variety of jobs that are open to him considerably reduced. He may be faced with some such dilemma as having to choose between keeping his self-respect as an impecunious schoolteacher, or selling his soul to the devil in advertising or salesmanship.

If we ask just why a particular student has done worse academically than he should have done, we may find that he was lazy, or that he was led astray by the temptations of social life, or that he was too late in comprehending the standards expected of him. Basically the trouble in all such cases is that the student has been too slow in growing into maturity from adolescence.

Most of our freshmen arrive from high school with very little idea of the meaning of serious study. Actually this is not necessary. In many foreign countries, especially in Europe, students in high-schools are made to study much more seriously and for much longer hours than is customary here. Work poorly done has to be done over again, several times if necessary, so that the student comes to know the difference between merely parrotting back something learned in a hurry; and really knowing and understanding it. Such intensive studying by teenage children does not seem to do them any harm, physically or psychologically, and of course arrive at the university with a mature concept of the standards expected in academic work.

Some of our freshmen who have not had the benefit of such a schooling, nevertheless seem to have acquired the proper concept. In many of these cases it turns out that there was one teacher in high-school who insisted on high standards, refusing to accept shoddy work, and regularly assigning home work of a sort that could not be dashed off in a hurry. The subject taught by this teacher may have been latin, or chemistry, or some other subject perhaps not continued by the student at college. All that seems to be important is that the subject was taught in such a way as to require really serious and prolonged mental effort by the student.

Many faculty members at U.V.M., and at other colleges, frequently urge that something be done to intensify serious preparation for college in our schools. University administrators sometimes make similar pleas. Students perhaps think that there is little that they can do about such a problem. However, I am going to close by suggesting that some of our upperclass students may be able to produce a more immediate impact on the schools than could be achieved by any of our faculty or administrators. If you are a senior now doing well academically, after a bad start as a freshman, and perhaps a misspent sophomore year as well, why don't you sit down and write a letter to your former high-school? Tell them how you now wish that you had been compelled to study more intensively when in school. Offer any special suggestions that seem to you of value. Point out that though you are hoping soon to embark on a chosen career, you are fearful that you may fail to get into this career because you will be in competition with other students who have good four-year records. Urge that high-school students planning to come to college should try to accustom themselves to some really serious study while they are still in school. And, of course, elaborate in any other way that seems to you appropriate.

I know of one student who wrote just such a letter, entirely on his own initiative. When he told me about it I felt that he deserved a medal. Perhaps some of you would like to deserve medals too?

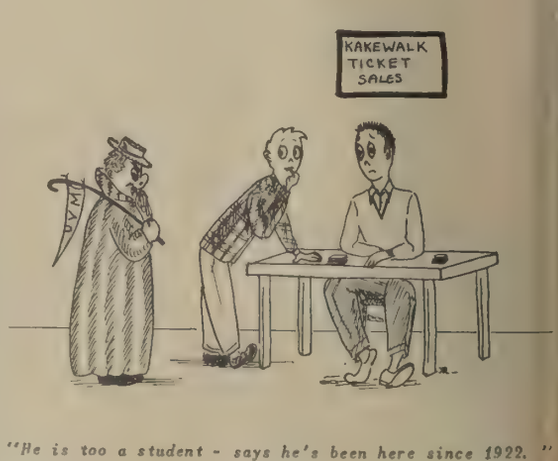
Hypocritical

To The Editor of the CYNIC:

The Cynic's campaign to abolish black face make-up from Kake Walk makes interesting reading, but your arguments carry little weight because you are hypocritical. Wiping off the burned cork won't wipe away the negro stereotype. "Cotton Babes". the walking uniform, the dance itself, and the very term "'walkin' fo' de Kake" will still remain, all with sharp negro connotations. You must fight for the abolishment of all of Kake Walk to be wholly true to your antistereotype crusade.



But Kake Walk needs not abolishment, but simply unemotional evaluation. Kake Walk is not a Minstrel Show; the negro is not ridiculed; there is no comedy at his expense. The walkers attempt to emulate, not caricature, an exciting, strictly negro dance. It's not a cartoon, but a serious ceremony. (Witness the expressions of a Kake Walk audience).

My kid brother lipsticks his face, fashions a feathered headband, a loincloth, a bow and arrow, and goes into a whooping war dance. Malicious stereotype of the American Indian?

Gilbert and Sullivan needled orientals in the Mikado. Who objects to Nanky Poo with his made up slant eyes, yellow skin, exaggerated features?

No, Kake Walk is a thoroughly healthy affair. The memory of a pair of high-stepping walkers, blackface and all, lingers long after the rest of the weekend has faded into the oblivion of a thousand other college parties. It's admittedly great! But remember, "Walkin fo' de Kake" was a negro tradition long before it came to U.V.M. It will remain negro thru and thru, blackface or no.

Sincerely.
Willard J. Morse, Jr.

In a State that put an anti-discrimination clause in its constitution it seems a shame that Vermont is about the only state in which many organizations depend on a Minstrel Show to raise funds for their various activities.

I wish that this year might see an end to "black-face", but it must come eventually.

Frosh Likes It

To The Editor of the CYNIC:

The very day I entered this college the first thing I noticed was that somebody or something called "Kake Walk" was a very important thing on this campus. The first Kake Walking that I saw was done at the Frosh Pep Rally and from that time liked it very much. As I was rushed from one fraternity house to another "Kake Walk" seemed to be the topic of conversation. And as the days of "Kake Walk" draw nearer I hear through my dorm window some record or some energetic whistler pounding out the tune "Cotton Babes." Though I am not a pledge at any fraternity and though I have never seen "Kake Walk", inside of me the expectation to see those two minstrels that I have seen on posters at Fraternity houses, with their hands waving and those bright red satin suits is almost unbelievable. But why is it that I want to see it. Is it because of tradition, the thought that I can say I have seen the same thing that many have seen before me? I don't think so.

What I have heard is that to "Walk fo' de Kake" takes precision and good muscular coordination. I have heard that to see it is the most beautiful thing. (I have heard that "Kake Walk" is a holiday never to be forgotten.

Now I have read that four negro students or our undergraduate school object to the "black face" stereotype. What more can I say than that they are right, if this is what they think. But thoughts and opinions of one are only the reflection of another's. What if I told these four students that not once when I looked at the faces of the Kake Walkers' did I think of a "shiftless, irresponsible, foolish" negro. Believe it or not I thought only of a white man. I thought of the minstrel days, yes. But I thought of the talent and the wonderful performers that have arisen from those days. The minstrel days were a wonderful period in our country. It brought negro culture to an audience that did not understand the negro. It made people aware that behind it was a human being. The rhythm, the coordination, the wonderful agility that the negro possesses is brought to a place of honor. But we have "Kake Walk" not only to honor the negro but to enjoy it. A play does not have the same spice if acted out without a back drop. We are not trying to say that the negro culture is the whitemen's, for if we did we would not bother with the "black face" stereotype.

All this publicity has aggravated a subject that in my opinion wasn't worth all the furor and frienzy. For if anything has made me aware of the "black face" stereotype this subject has.

Roger H. Madon, '58.

Dartmouth Same

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

....I have by no means taken a "survey" of Negro students here, but I have talked to several of them. The reactions were only of two different types. Several felt, despite efforts to accept the blackface makeup as only an entertainment device, that it was still offensive. They were all very mild, though, at the same time, positive in their reaction. Most of them I felt, had considered the matter before, probably in connection with minstrel shows or some other use of blackface, and simply had difficulty in considering the makeup merely a state effect.

Another group of the fellows I talked to had never considered the matter and weren't concerned when I asked their opinions. Not as large a number as the first group, they felt that blackface is only a type of makeup and not offensive at all to the Negro race.

I hope this helps you somewhat, and if I can be of any further service please let me know.

Sincerely,
Joseph D. Mathewson

The Dartmouth

Conn. Problem

NAACP on Minstrels

To The Editor of the Conn., Campus, Aug. 9, 1950.

At the last meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the University of Connecticut it was decided that a formal statement be issued against the advent of a minstrel show to the campus of the University.

We, as a group, strongly support the tradition and the idea of the Chest drive but we cannot condone its use of a minstrel show, however lofty its aims may be.

The group had planned to participate in the carnival and would have done so but for an oversight on the part of the carnival committee. Nevertheless, our hearts were in the spirit of the occasion.

We feel that the minstrel show is not in keeping with the highest traditions that have made college humor the bulwark of American humor in that it is based on stereotyping one group for the enjoyment of others. Such shows tend to present the Negro in a childlike position and stereotyped as slow-witted, illiterate, noisy and a clown in general. As subtle as these characteristics may be presented they tend to further certain basic misconceptions that are so instilled in the American youngster from an early age that many older people fail to realize the harm that can be done by something so "trivial" as a minstrel show. The University of Connecticut should screen its talent in such a manner as to take the lead in higher types of entertainment.

One of the functions of the N.A.A.C.P. is to discourage the use of stereotypes of any majority group when they are not truly representative of the Americans of our times. We would object just as strongly if any group other than the American Negro were so ridiculously depicted for if we are ever going to live as true Americans, the time to start is now.

The chapter is aware of the fact that this protest comes after the harm has been done but we sincerely and strongly urge that the showing of a minstrel be removed from the plans for the next Community Chest Carnival. Should such a show be included in next year's plans we will find it extremely difficult to participate.

The Executive Committee.

"Pollsters"

To The Editor of the Cynic:

Dear Sir:

Now that the CYNIC has the services of an experienced "pollster", I propose that it encourage this expert to other fields of investigation. Such topics as students' proficiency of school songs, students' opinions of expansion of athletic and living facilities and several similar subjects would tend to unite the student body in true school spirit; instead of creating ill-feeling and friction.

Perhaps in these fields of study, more than a half dozen would be willing to be interviewed.

Yours truly,
J.M. Fitzpatrick
Burlington, Vt.

Voice From Afar

Dear Mr. Editor:

In reading a 13 January 1955 copy of the Vermont Cynic, I find many statements concerning the use of make-up (black-face) at Kake Walk which cause me a great deal of concern.

This issue, if it can be termed that, arises annually as a result, it would seem, of a crusade by a few. It is obvious that they are determined to attempt to eliminate one of the integral parts of Kake Walk; i.e., blackface, by the use of all means within their grasp. This does not preclude the use of a school publication to further their views.

Could it be that those who are the leaders of this publication are also the ones who are seeking to abolish blackface?

It was stated that of six Negroes who were interviewed, four were of the opinion that blackface is what amounts to a degrading stereotype of the Negro race. This is not the intention of blackface, nor, until recent years, was this interpretation applied to it. Indeed, blackface cannot be thought of as a method by which Kake Walkers mock the Negro, by those who are willing to think sensibly. Petty people may promulgate this view in an effort to place themselves in the limelight and thus further their own ambitions. They might even resort to the use of misleading, carefully phrased statements in order to gain the desired results.

Kake Walking is an old "dance," originated, it is assumed, by the Negro. It came to UVM as such. It was felt that students could mimic this dance, as have Negroes of dances originally foreign to their culture, to the extent of being able to provide entertainment for others. This entertainment was not intended to ridicule anybody. As stated, it was simply an effort to please an audience. As it grew to greater and greater proportions, resulting from its popular reception, so grew criticisms applied to it. Some have been justified; others have been the work of cranks. It is the opinion of many that this issue is just that - the work of cranks.

It is to be wondered whether or not the four Negroes who expressed dissatisfaction over the use of blackface realize that this might be an attempt to retain a fine Negro dance - that the use of bright costumes and make-up, making the Walkers resemble Negroes, is merely a furtherance of this.

Audiences do not laugh at the Walkers when they appear Rather, they cheer and applaud wildly, in anticipation of a fine exhibition of skill and precision. In all of the years that I have attended Kake Walks, I have never heard the phrases "degrading", "racial predjudice", discriminating", etc., applied to the Walkers or their make-up. There are many who resent this attempted application now.

I am curious to know if the Dean of the Boston University Chapel, Howard Thurman, has attended a Kake Walk. The editorial of the CYNIC leads one to believe that Mr. Thurman states that this particular use of blackface" is but one symbol of the stereotype of the American Negro as shiftless, foolish, and irresponsible." I doubt that Mr. Thurman would make this statement if he has seen a Kake Walk, It is my firm conviction that nothing involved in the Kake Walking leads one to this conclusion. Many persons have stated that they wished they were capable of Kake Walking. Surely, one does not seek to have himself made out to be shiftless, foolish, and

A GUIDE FOR THE DATELESS

With the cost of dating rising higher and higher (seems the only pleasure that costs the same these days is Philip Morris), it is no wonder that so many of us men are turning to discus throwing. Naturally, we would prefer nuzzling warm coeds to flinging cold discs, but who's got that kind of money? Prices being what they are, the average man today has a simple choice: dating or eating.

Unless the average man happens to be Finster Sigafoos.

Let me tell you how Finster Sigafoos, a man no smarter, no richer, than you or I, solved his dating problem. Finster came to college with the normal ambition of any average man: he wanted to find the prettiest coed on campus and make her his. He looked long and carefully, and at last he found her — a tall job named Kretchma Inskip, with hair like beaten gold.

He asked her for a date. She accepted. He appeared at her sorority house that night, smiling, eager, and carrying a bouquet of modestly priced flowers.

"Now then," said Kretchma, tossing the sleazy flora to a pledge, "where are we going tonight?"

Finster was a man short on cash, but long on ideas. He had prepared several attractive plans for this evening. "How would you like to go out to the Ag campus and see the milking machine?" he asked.

"Ick," she replied.

"Well then, how about running over to the dental school to fool with the drills?"

"Bah," she replied.

"Well, what would you like to do?" he asked.

"Come," said she, "to a funny little place I know just outside of town."

And away they went.

The place was Millionaires Roost, a simple country inn made of solid ivory. It was filled with beautiful ladies in backless gowns, handsome men in dickeys. Waiters scurried about bearing costly eats on flaming swords. Original Rembrandts adorned the walls. Philip Morris trays adorned the cigarette girls. Chained to each table was a gypsy violinist.

Finster and Kretchma were seated. "I," said Kretchma to the waiter, "will start with shrimps remoulade. Then I will have lobster and capon in madeira sauce with asparagus spears. For dessert I will have loads of out-of-season fruit."

"And you, Sir?" said the waiter to Finster.

"Just bring me a pack of Philip Morris," replied Finster, "for if ever a man needed the soothing, steadying, beneficent aromas of mild vintage tobaccos, it is me now."

So, smoking the best of all possible cigarettes, Finster watched Kretchma ingest her meal and calculated that every time her fetching young adam's apple rose and fell, he was out another 97¢. Then he took her home.

It was while saying goodnight that Finster got his brilliant idea. "Listen!" he cried excitedly. "I just had a wonderful notion. Next time we go out, let's go Dutch treat!"

By way of reply, Kretchma slashed him across the face with her house mother and stormed into the house.

"Well, the heck with her," said Finster to himself. "She is just a gold digger and I am well rid of her. I am sure there are many girls just as beautiful as Kretchma who will understand the justice of my position. For after all, girls get as much money from home as men, so what could be more fair than sharing expenses on a date?"

With good heart and high hopes, Finster began a search for a girl who would appreciate the equity of Dutch treat, and you will be pleased to hear that he soon found one.

Today Finster goes everywhere and shares expenses fifty-fifty with Mary Alice Hematoma, a lovely three legged girl with sideburns.

Alpha Epsilon Pi Has Home Patrick House Holds 28 Men

Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity recentli established residence when they moved into the stately Patrick mansion.

The Zeta Pi corporation acting for the Zeta Pi Chapter of the Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity formally took possession of the late Roy Patrick home at 275 South Willard Street on Wednesday, January 26.

Initial plans for the purchase were made this past summer by corporation officers, Sumner Berenson, S. Harrison Kahn, Jacob Temkin, and Hyman Abraham, Mr. Abraham is the alumni advisor and trustee of the local unit.

There are twenty eight men living in the house. Meals will be served six days a week, starting on Monday, February seventh. Stuart Gordon and Martin Kaufman are the stewards. Marshal Kroot is the house manager.

Gold Neon Sign

The pledge class purchased a brass door plate with the Greek letters AEPi on it and mounted it on the front door of the house. Mark Gold made a neon sign with the Greek letters AEPi on it. The sign hangs over the door, on the second floor of the house, and is lit at night.

There are three fireplaces in the house, one in two of the three living rooms and one in the master bedroom on the second floor. The house is heated by hot water circulation through radiators. There is a washing machine and dryer in the basement for the use of the fraternity members. This part of the Bendix Home Laundry was left for the fraternity along with drapes, curtains, and window shades by the Patrick attorneys.

In the spring parties are planned to use the open porches and the half acre of land behind the house which includes a summer cottage. From the third floor you can see across the lake to the New York mountains.

Open Classes To Guest Students To Widen Scope

The Curriculum Committee of the University Senate recently invited faculty members from all the Colleges of the University to open selected lectures in their courses to any and all students of the University.

Some of the lectures planned for the coming semester are: "use and effects of brain operations and shock therapy in behavior disorders," "The origin of the Earth," "Viruses: their nature, history and classification," "Human blood groups; RH-factor and its inheritance," Existentialism as a literary movement," "The structure of the Russian language," "Backgrounds of international Communism."

To open the series, Dr. W.B. Durrell of the Department of Pathology will welcome students interested in attending his lecture on Monday, February 14, on "Pre-disposing causes of animal diseases." The class will be at 1 p.m. in Room 236 of the Hills Science Building, and Dr. Durrell states that 20 additional seats will be available.

Other lectures open to all UVM students will be announced in The CYNIC in the future. It is the feeling of the Curriculum Committee that the opening of selected lectures to all students will afford students the opportunity to gain some insight into course material they would not ordinarily encounter. In addition, visiting students will have a chance to acquaint themselves with instructors they would not ordinarily meet in their own courses, as well as with their fellow students enrolled in courses which do not take them into classrooms of all the Colleges and departments of the University.

Charter Change

more than 10 years. Within the past year every effort has been made to acquaint the public with every phase of the problem and every university decision. President has made innumerable trips to all parts of the state to explain the proposals."

2. The University, with the advice of its legal counsel Frederick P. Smith, denies that its present endowment and trust funds, including the Wilbur fund, will be endangered by the acceptance of the proposals. President Borgmann adds, "My observations have been that the alumni of other state universities are both loyal and financially generous to their alma maters."

3. UVM points to the fact that all state universities have endowments, gifts, and buildings built with private funds. In other state universities, as pointed out before, the alumni continue to give loyal and generous financial support.

4. " The favored university' argument can only be raised if a bill appropriating funds sufficient to reduce UVM tuition for Vermonters is passed. If such an appropriation is passed and if one can call a publically supported school-be it graded, high school, or university - 'favored', explained President Borgmann.

What effect would this have on Norwich, Middlebury, and St. Michael's? I sincerely believe that it would have but little effect. Good private colleges in every other state in the United States thrive along side state universities. I'm sure that these institutions will continue to thrive and grow and make their important and unique contributions to higher education."

Other Opposition

Former Attorney General F. Elliot Barber Jr., president of the Research and T.V. Education, Inc., privately suggested a plan to split UVM and SAC, combining the Agriculture College and the Medical College. He would establish UVM as a private institution, diminishing state grants until the university reached the same par as other private educational institutions in the state. To provide for needy students, state scholarships of up to $500 would be granted.

Guiness Movie Enthralls Group At Fleming

By Marvin Nierenberg

Where were six hundred UVM students last Saturday afternoon? Why were several dignified members of the faculty seen in the halls of the Fleming Museum perched on the backs of tottering chairs? Why did many students complain of aching abdomens Saturday night? After four days of constant probing by UVM's liquor inspectors and vice squad, the culprit has at last been apprehended.

The villain is a witty Englishman by the name of Alec Guiness. Mr. Guiness has been found guilty by the UVM Student Court of appearing in the film " The Promoter " last Saturday afternoon in the Fleming Museum's Theater. Accomplices to Mr. Guiness are the Kakewalk Disposition Committee and the new Department of Audio-Visual Aids who are alleged to have co-sponsored his appearance free of charge to the University Family.

Charges

The charges confronting the clever Britisher were: 1) overcrowding the Fleming Museum Theater with six hundred otherwise apathetic UVM students 2) causing same students to laugh profusely and continuously, provoking extreme form of hilarity in some cases 3) creasing the seats of certain English professors' trousers the wrong way.

Chief Justice J. Arthur Rank recalled before handing down his decision that Guiness appeared last month before the court under similar circumstances. The film he appeared in then was The Lavender Hill Mob.

The courtroom (coffee shop) was hushed as Justice Rank announced his decision... "Guilty of humor of the first degree. Sentence: a warm invitation to return to the UVM campus in the near future."

UVM Debators Placed High At TKA Tourney Last Week

A UVM debating team captured second place at the annual Northeastern Regional TKA held at NYU during the weekend. The team of Max Ansbacher, Pat May, John Travis and Sandy Winterberger won seven out of eight debates, to lose to Dartmouth with a perfect record.

Max Ansbacher was awarded a certificate for being the third best speaker on the negative side. 28 schools competed in the tournament, one team coming all the way from Utah.

Negative Undefeated

The affirmative team of Pat May and John Travis beat Rutgers, Amherst, and Clark, but lost to Washington and Lee. The negative team, Max Ansbacher and Sandy Winterberger won all four rounds, defeating MIT, Georgetown School of Foreign Service, Fordham education division and University of Rhode Island.

Prof. Charles Helgessen, district governor of the northeastern region and director of debate at UVM accompanied the team. In a welcoming address which he delivered to the contestants, Professor Helgesen said that as the leader of the free world, Americans had a special responsibility to live up to the objectives of TKA. These are to make speech " responsible, intelligent and effective," he said.

Informal Colorful "Ariel" To Be Ready In A Few Days

The 1955 Ariel will be within a few days featuring 194 pages with color work, a brand new 16 page introduction, and an expanded senior section. According to Ariel editor Tony Rockhill, "The style is very informal this year. We were trying to get away from the stiffness of the past."

Working with approximately the same budget as last year, this year's staff has produced a yearbook with almost a thousand pictures, the same number of pages, and a format which is described by Rockhill as being "quite a bit different from last year."

Tony Rockhill

Symbol of Spirit

A new figure to the UVM campus will be introduced in the Ariel this year. His name is Charlie Catamount and is supposedly symbol of the spirit of the campus.

The introduction will present with color work and drawings a review of what college has meant to the editor. It is believed that this is the first time that an introduction of this type has appeared in a UVM yearbook.

2,600 Editions

The book was finished last June and has been in the hands of the printers, Bradbury, Sayles & O'Neill, since that time. There are to be 2,600 copies of the 266 page book. The Ariel staff started work on the book in the fall of 1953.

Miss Genevieve Dugan was the original faculty adviser of the book. However, when differences developed between her and the editor, Rockhill resigned as editor. The staff of the Ariel sought another editor, but re-elected Rockhill to the job. Mr. Richard Hopwood, director of the Public Relations Office, was elected as faculty adviser.

The Ariel assistant editor is Viv Menky who was a general assistant to the editor, and who according to him did "a phenominal job."

Joe Aidalla was in charge of the activities section and is said to have done "an outstanding job livening up an ordinarily dull section." Many of the photographs are by the Student Photography Staff or by Roger Conant. Lorrie Beuhler was in charge of the layout for the fraternity and sorority section.

Valerie Kubler was the assistant to the photographers.

Nurses Visit Boro Of "Dem Bums"

Five University of Vermont nursing students recently spent eight weeks with the Visiting Nurse Association of Brooklyn to gain experience in Public Health Nursing, and they report that Brooklyners are friendly and hospitable people.

The five nursing students are Mary J. Corley of South Burlington, Mary A. Newhall of Canaan, Rhoda L. Nicholson of Massapequa, N.Y., Marlene Posner of Pittsfield, Mass., and Joyce L. Wheeler of Del Rio, Texas.

At first, they relate, they had difficulty finding their way around Brooklyn's subways on their way to visit patients in their homes. But Brooklyn people, and especially the policemen, were so helpful and courteous that UVM's student nurses soon found it "easy" to carry out their day's assignments.

The students report that visiting patients in their homes rather than in the hospital gave them a good opportunity to understand how a patient's home and family life can contribute to or sometimes hinder his recovery. Working in homes also offers a better chance to meet the patient as an individual and leads to a better understanding of people, according to the students.

While three of the five UVMers are out-of-staters, all of them agree that they missed the snow, trees and hills of Vermont for which Brooklyn's tall buildings and courteous policemen didn't quite compensate.

Jospe Has Plans For 1955 Israel Summer Program

Dr. Alfred Jospe, national director of the B'nai Brith Hillel Foundations, has announced completion of plans for the Seventh Annual Israel Summer Institute.

The Institute is scheduled for July and August 1955 and will include a visit to every part of Israel, two weeks stay and work in an agricultural settlement, and a program of planned lectures, seminars, and group discussions.

American and Canadian students, teachers and others between the ages of eighteen and thirty, in good health are eligible to enroll for the institute. The total cost per person for the institute is $795. This includes round trip transportation between New York and Israel, accommodations and all meals in Israel and while in transit, the full program while in Israel, and a stop over in Europe with organized sightseeing.

The tours and lectures will be conducted in English. Hebrew instruction is part of the institute program. All those interested in the Institute program are urged to contact Prof. Kahn, 220 Waterman, for further information.

Lianne Amasses Amazing Record Here

Lianne Tryon

By Barbara Zack

Seldom do we find a person who makes the most of all hwr time, and puts her very best into everything she does. Imagine such a person with a host of accomplishments, varied interests and ambition...and we bet you'll be thinking of Lianne Tryon. It's hard to say just what she is most noted for on the UVM campus, but, as Lianne puts academic work above all else, we could start by mentioning her outstanding 96.5 average, granting her membership into Alpha Lambda Delta.

University Player

Anyone who has had any connection at all with University Players will think of Lianne in relation to her art and dance work. As a freshman last year. Lianne did much of the art and poster work for the Players. Of course we all remember her as one of the Unicorns in the garden, in this years' Varieties, and can still picture the dancers' heads which she made. When "publicity in a hurry" was the order, Lianne whipped up a number of beautiful posters in a suprisingly short time. In addition to working with the Dance Workshop, and being an active member of Gamma Phi Beta and Sophomore Aides, this busy girl manages to devote much of her time to her greatest interest, atomic physics research.

Research Assistant

Lianne is presently working with Professor William N. Ellis, on radio-activity This experimental work started last year when a classmate heard that Mr. Ellis was looking for someone to help with his new microscope. Radio-active elements on slides from Brookhaven are coated with an emulsion, sensitive to nuclear exposure, and with the aid of this 'scope, the amount of energy is measured and the radio-active element can be determined. This original research has opened up a whole new field for Lianne. She plans to continue physics work in a graduate school, while doing atomic physics research or rocket technology research. Lianne's father is slightly connected with this work, as he is a civil engineer for the Army.

Nation-wide Traveler

Because of her father's occupation, the Tryons have led an even more interesting life. Lianne was born in Connecticut, moved to Seattle after two years, attended grade school in Norfolk, Va., lived on an island off North Carolina for a year, was graduated as valedictorian from a Seattle High School, spent some time in Maryland, and most recently was living in Oklahoma. Lianne came to school at the other extreme, weather-wise, of the country mainly because both her parents are graduates of UVM, and also for a longing to see her native New England. She likes it "fine, except for the weather" and tries her hardest to keep warm on these sub-zero days.

Lianne was featured on "Spotlight on UVM" in an interview with Ann Terry a few weeks ago, and gave many of us a chance to hear about the fascinating work being carried on. Needless to say, Lianne "likes to be busy" and has learned the secret of taking advantage of opportunity to get the most out of precious time.

Regulations Set For Kake Walk Social Weekend

The following regulations have been established by the Joint Social Activities Board for the 1955 Kake Walk.

1. The Kake Walk Ball shall close no later than 1:30 a.m. on Friday February 18th.

2. Fraternities may schedule a maximum of four social functions in the six times available. These times are as follows:

Thursday, Friday, Saturday Buffets - 6 to 9 P.M.

Thursday - Open Houses 11 P.M. to 1:30 a.m.

Friday, Saturday - Open Houses - 9 P.M. to 1:30 A.M.

3. Non-fraternity groups may also schedule social functions within the provisions of item (2).

4. Overnight permission in the Burlington area shall not be granted to University women for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Feb. 17, 18, and 19th.

5. "Open House" teas on Sunday are to be restricted to women's residences.

6. Skit presentations are restricted to Monday and Tuesday, February 14, and 15th, from 4 to 6 P.M.

7. Each fraternity shall familiarize its members and guests with these regulations, and shall post a copy of them.

8. Copies of these regulations shall be sent to the fraternity presidents, to the Women's Student Government Association, to the faculty advisor of each fraternity, and to the chaperons of these events.

EACH FRATERNITY WILL BE HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR SEEING THAT NO WOMEN GUESTS ARE IN ITS HOUSE LATER THAN THE HOURS STATED ABOVE.

Additional Copies of these regulations are available in the COSA OFFICE.

Boeing offers engineers long-range careers

Throughout its 38-year history, Boeing has consistently pioneered advanced new types of military and commercial aircraft, and new methods of production. This history of leadership has meant continued growth for the company. It means continued opportunities for Boeing engineers to move ahead according to their ability in Research, Design and Production.

Today Boeing is producing the jet age's outstanding bombers, the B-52 and the B-47. Other Boeing projects that mean continued growth and stability include: America's first jet transport (the Boeing 707). Research in nuclear-powered and supersonic flight. And one of the nation's major guided missile programs. These and other new-horizon projects are expanding at such a rate that Boeing now employs more engineers than even at the peak of World War II.

The high inherent interest of these programs, together with the stimulation of expanding opportunities, add to the stability of careers at Boeing. One measure of stability is given in this chart.

It shows that 46% of Boeing engineers have been with the company for five or more years; 25% have been here 10 or more years, and 6% for 15 or more years. Another measure is the increasing proportion of engineers to total employees. Fifteen years ago the figure was one to 16. Today one out of each seven employees is an engineer.

Boeing promotes from within and holds regular merit reviews to assure individual recognition. Engineers are encouraged to take graduate studies while working and are reimbursed for all tuition expenses.

Boeing has openings for virtually all types of engineers—electrical, civil, mechanical, aeronautical and related fields, and for applied physicists and mathematicians with advanced degrees.

Letters

irresponsible. Rather, he seeks to gain admiration by showing ability to do that which the Negro has established on a high plane.

Perhaps the four Negro students at UVM are not proud of their race, and, consequently, wish to divorce themselves from any association with it. Perhaps they do not believe that Kake Walking, something whose origination most would claim with pride, is a tribute to the Negro. Perhaps, also, they do not want to have this attempt made to traditionalize a fine dance. Frankly, I do not pretend to know or understand. Obviously, however, someone or some group has cried wolf and thus attempted to create the impression that blackface is a horrible effort to ridicule colored people.

It has been suggested that another color be used for make-up. This would result in heaping a grave indignity upon the Negro. How many red, blue, or green Negroes have Kake Walked? It is assumed that the Negro would prefer to be depicted as he is, rather than as a blue monstrosity.

The University may have received letters of criticism of the use of blackface after Life Magazine publicisized Kake Walk in 1952. However, they were not brought to the attention of the Directors, to my knowledge. At least, as one of the Assistants in 1952 and Directors in 1953, I never saw these letters. It would seem that something is phony when documents of this nature never reach the people most concerned with them.

Let us hope that the people responsible for this farce have seen the light by the time that this letter reaches its destination. I am honestly disappointed that the CYNIC would print such trash.

Sincerely,
R. Bruce Carroll

Platform
For The Students:

1. Coffee served by faculty wives in all eight O'clock classes.
2. Neon lights flashing late minutes in front of all women's dorms, with a bingo gong when the jackpot hits fifteen.
3. Engineering students shall have an expense paid trip to Florida to study curves.
4. Home Economic girls will have a special trip offered to them so they can go to Harvard to learn how to cook for men(?).
5. The agricultural students will have new visual aids for certain classes, including a movie called, "A Farmer Takes A Wife."
6. A date with Marlon Brando for all coeds; and for the men, a date with Doris Day, or Marilyn Monroe (if you prefer).

GOOD LUCK

Phyllis

I would like to make a suggestion that another system be arranged for Kake Walk ticket selling. Probably I am looking at this from the woman's viewpoint, but we cannot leave our dorms until 6:00 which means, our choice of tickets is decreased still another time because the Alums have theirs already. Next, is there any necessity for the non-fraternity men to have to wait three and four (and more!) hours to insure good seats for their dates and themselves. I think that tickets could be sold using the same system that we do at registration, allowing an equal amount of all types of seats to be saved for each group. Possibly someone else may have a better suggestion but I am sure that the Walking would be just as enjoyable if we didn't have to brave Vermont weather so early in the morning for tickets.

2. Kake Walkers walk with no faces, to bring harmony back to campus.
3. Import more people so that the 55 census shows more people than cows in the state.
4. For the man of destinction, Budweiser to replace Champlain water.
5. For intelligencia no 8 o'clocks, no classes before noon; in fact no classes except on alternating first Mondays of the month.
6. For the gals, nights out at their own discression--enough said? But to add to this--lectures (when we must have them by Marlen Brando)
7. For the poor freshman girl--a subway from Redstone to Waterman with builtin Horn and Hardart dispensary.
8. Bring about the impossible--lower tuition.
9. Finally and most sincerely a really great Kake Walk for each and every one in '55.

Ed

With an eye to the welfare of the students and improvements on campus, Ed, if elected, promises:

1. To have the University supply cars for all students maintaining an average of 55.837 or higher.

UVM ON TELEVISION

"Across the Fence," the Vermont Extension Service's new educational television program, went on the air Monday, Feb. 7. The weekly program will be carried over Vermont's television station, WMVT, Channel three, at 7:45 p.m., as a public service feature of the station.

How-to-do-it demonstrations will be highlighted with "Across the Fence" discussions with farm people, research and educational workers at the University's College of Agriculture and the Vermont Extension Service. Lloyd Williams, Extension television specialist, will be master of ceremonies.

Mr. Williams reveals that, "although there's some doubt that cows will appear on the program, there will be plenty of live talent on the show. Baby chicks, sheep and even growing plants will serve as special guests. Special events will be filmed by the Extension Service for use on the show.

Dean Joseph Carrigan was featured in an interview on the opening show in the series.

Alan Gowans is another University staffer to make use of television. Mr. Gowans has a weekly show on WMVT every Wednesday evening at 8, offering an informal discussion of the Arts.

George Little, Adam Skapski and James Chaplin recently appeared in WMVT as panelists in a special discussion of the Formosa situation.

President Borgmann also made his TV debut when, some weeks ago, he appeared on WMVT's program, "You Can Quote Me," answering questions about UVM's proposed charter amendments.

UVMers attending included Malcolm Daggett, Stuart Johnston, Kessel Schwartz, John Whittemore, Malcolm Parker, Muriel Hughes, Sam Sogorad, Herbert McArthur, Jack Trevithick, Benjamin Wainwright, Fred Marston, Fred Carpenter, Truman Webster and Harry Kahn. The latter three also attended the meeting of the American Association of Teachers of German held in New York, Dec. 30.

Paul Evans was also in New York at this time attending the annual meeting of the American Historical Association.

Alumni Notes

A Long Island, N.Y., principal has some high praise for one of his teachers who graduated from UVM last year.

F.C. Stone, principal of School No. 5 in Oceanside, N.Y., recently contacted Dean King's office to inquire if UVM could recommend another teacher, "just like Nathalie Frank," to begin teaching this semester. Dean King had to inform Mr. Stone that no new teachers would be available until June of this year.

Mr. Stone indicated he would be interested in hiring three or four teachers at that time, adding that he hoped they would be "just like Miss Frank."

Miss Frank, a native of Ogdensburg, N.Y., majored in elementary education at UVM, graduating in 1954. She began teaching at the Oceanside school this past fall.

At UVM, she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi, a member of Sophomore Aides and Staff and Sandal, and was active in Radio Workshop, Ariel and Student Association.

Andy Gerber, editor of last year's Ariel, was a recent visitor to UVM (and Stowe). He is studying law at Cornell and reports that Don Forst, last year's editor of CYNIC, is doing graduate work in journalism at Columbia.

'Our Town' Held Audience; Cast Lived Each Character

By Marsha Pearl

Friday evening's release from the age of lavish productions brought to the Southwick stage Thornton Wilder's familiar "Our Town". In the short inter-semester break, Greg Falls called together members of the University Players and Burlington Theatre Club for the Arena Theatre Benefit fund production.

It was definitely an "under the circumstance" presentation. One: lacking in rehearsal time, it became a play "reading"; Two: because of the noted cast, the house was quite filled; and Three: because of Thornton Wilder's ingenuity, the stage was quite barren except for music stands and lecturnes.

"I don't mean boldness or oddity for their own sakes," Wilder wrote to a friend, "but merely as almost indispensable reinforcement and refreshment of a play that was never intended to be interesting for its story alone, or even for its background."

Audience Captivated

The audience seemed aware of Wilder's intentions and quickly accepted the characters on a stage without props. Although the play was to be read by the actors, many had memorized their parts and convincingly drew the audience into the abstract plot.

Gilman Rood, leading the cast in the role of the Stage Manager, warmed his audience with the consistant ease and familiarity in which he introduced the opening jig-saw puzzle scene. The New England viewers had no difficulty in imagining Grovers-Corners, New Hampshire, as the setting.

Cast Did Fine Job

The actors relayed their roles with boldness and honesty compatible with the dialogue. Little subtlety was necessary for the impressionistic small town inhabitants. Director Greg Falls enacted the youthful George Gibbs with perceptive spirit, captivating the audience; Jean Falls shone in the simplicity and naturalness with which she captured Emily Webb; Mrs. Carl Borgmann enjoyably aroused the audience in her portrayal of Mrs. Bibbs; and Professor Willard was a brief but delightful characterization by Sam Bogorad.

In the first act the absence of a strong dramatic situation hadn't completely succeeded in drawing the audience from its interest in the novelty of the presentation. The second act marriage preparation gained significant approval and created many familiar memories. As Mrs. Webb, Wilnetta Taggart's technique was exceptionally well received.

Full Cast On

From the wedding to the completion of the play, Wilder's triumph rose. Any reading of parts, which may have been done, went entirely unnoticed. The audience became fully enveloped within the plot.

The funeral scene showed the cast-en-masse upon the stage tying together many of the earlier scenes: the dejection of Dr. Gibbs portrayed by James Carney in contrast with his former piece; Dean Harris as Mrs. Soames-----, making a mood of sudden oddity emerge from the reminising of her amusing babble at the wedding; Herb McArthur as Simon Stimson, the drunken church organist who had committee suicide - the morose dialogue of those who had relinquished earth-associations and their previous importances emitting a strange relationship to the living.

On stage supporting members were Jack Little (Mr. Webb), Tom Marks, J.E. Pooley, Fred Marston, Don Hardy, Eugene MacLean "as Emily's younger brother), and Judy Patten, (a lively Rebecca Gibbs, sister to George."

Special thanks go to those members of the Burlington Theatre Club, and to the Vermont faculty, who contributed so much towards the U.V.M. Arena Theatre fund. And to Greg Falls, may we have many more "under the circumstance" jobs.

India Ripe For Communism, Says Moses

"India needs the help of America and the other free nations of the world," Dr. David G. Moses told a mixed student - faculty audience last week.

"If India is not to fall in step with the Communists," the World Friendship guest from India said, "financial aid must be forth coming."

Moses, principal of Hislop College in Nagpur, India, explained that his government is attempting to "telescope three revolutions into one, and that they are attempting to do it within the present generation. He cited political, economic, and social reforms as necessary changes.

Fertile For Communism

The ignorance of the people of which 80 percent are illiterate, in addition to conditions of disease and poverty, "make India ripe for Communism" should aid from the free world not be forthcoming, the Indian educator warned.

Because of the necessary reforms, India must take a neutral stand between the two great power blocs, Russia and America, he stated. "If we spend money on arms for a war, how can India bring about reforms which will improve the plight of her people? he asked his audience.

Even since her independence, India has played the role of the neutral, "a very dangerous policy," Moses suggested, "for there is no neutralism in the world of reality, only in the academic world of thought."

Democratic Sympathy

Indian neutrality, he explained, is not "middle of the road" neutrality. "It is, rather, a neutrality which does not allow the nation to side immediately with one power or the other. India faces each problem as it arises."

Dr. Moses reassured his audience that India "believes in Democracy, even though most of the people do not understand the system. Of 3.278 representatives in government, only 205 are Communists.

With her policy of non-aggression, siding neither with Russia nor America, and refusing to prepare for war, the necessary reforms are being carried out in India. "The independent rights o man have been opened to all.

A new spirit pervades the people, "the speaker said. "They are not interested in the glory that was India, but are thinking of how to build the new India, now."

The Hislop educator warned that "atomic war will leave no distinction between victor and vanquished. There is no defense against atomic weapons. An atomic war can only accomplish a reversion to some primitive age."

Speaker Had BusyWeekend

Dr. David G. Moses of India was "World Friendship Guest" at the University of Vermont last Sunday and Monday, Feb. 6-7.

Dr. Moses, who is this year serving as the "Henry W. Luce Visiting Professor of World Christianity" at Union Seminary, was the guest preacher at the First Methodist Church in Burlington at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Indian Students Indifferent To Religion, Educator Says

By Marvin Nierenberg

As part of UVM's Brotherhood Week celebration, Dr. David G. Moses spoke on Sunday night after a Student Fellowship Dinner on "Religion and the Indian Student." Dr. Moses is the principal of Hislop University in Nagpur, India. He has taken his degrees in India and the United States.

The dinner, sponsored by the Religious Activities Committee, was held under unpremeditatedly romantic circumstances due to a lengthy power failure in Southwick Hall. Several dozen candles provided the light white Dr. Moses provided the intellectual stimulation.

Dr. Moses emphasized the fact that the only differences in Indian and American students is their conditioning, or their total enviroment. The major influences in the Indian Student's enviroment, he stated, are the practice of passive resistance, the recent political liberation of the Indian people, and the rise of scientific thought in Indian culture.

An effect of these influences is that the Indian student today is "indifferent towards his religion, Hinduism." Dr. Moses proceeded to summarize the main characteristics of Hinduism, one of which was its wide latitude of metaphysical beliefs. The cast system was also briefly explained to the audience of about fifty students.

"An undisciplined attitude in the present day Indian student is the result of the part he took during the Indian effort to gain independence. Often the students would walk out of school if one of their 'independence' leaders were imprisoned for sedition by the British."

The financial plight of the Indian student was indicated by Dr. Moses' mentioning that the average college student's father earns the equivalent of about thirty dollars per month. Accordingly, however the tuition is low: about twenty-five dollars per year. The audience was surprised to hear that even after obtaining a Master's Degree, the Indian still has an extremely difficult time finding a job.

appeared as guest lecturer in philosophy and religion classes at UVM Monday morning. Also on Monday, he spoke to faculty and students at a luncheon in the faculty dining room in Waterman.

His visit to UVM was sponsored by the Religious Activities Committee of Student Association.

Dr. Moses was born in the Madras Presidency of India and is a graduate of Madras University. He has studied at Union Seminary, at Yale Divinity School, and has received the Ph.D. in philosophy from Columbia University. He has been principal of Hislop College in Nagpur since 1939, and this year served as a delegate and consultant at the Evanston Assembly of the World Council of Churches.

A Campus-to-Career Case History

His territory:

TWO CITY BLOCKS

James O'Hara, Stevens Institute of Technology (M.E. '51), is an installation foreman for the New York Telephone Company. His present assignment is two city blocks between 45th and 47th Streets in the middle of Manhattan.

"It doesn't measure very big horizontally," Jim says. "But vertically it makes up a lot of telephone business—7500 telephones to be exact. My eight-man crew does everything from installing a single telephone to working on complete dial intercom systems for some of the nation's biggest businesses.

"I've got to know about each of these jobs that my men do. My training with the telephone company took me through the installation, repair and testing of the various types of telephone equipment and service for which I am responsible. I even had a chance to do a little experimenting of my own and developed a new way of preventing oil seepage on automatic switching equipment. I understand it's being written up for use throughout the Bell System.

"That's what I like about telephone work. Even two city blocks are full of opportunity."

You'll find that most other college men with the telephone company are just as enthusiastic about their jobs. If you'd be interested in a similar opportunity with a Bell System Telephone Company—or with Sandia Corporation, Western Electric or Bell Telephone Laboratories, see your Placement Officer for full details.

GradWasOnArizonaFaculty Before They Joined Union

A University of Vermont graduate has retired from the University of Arizona after fifty four years of service..

Dr. George Edson Phillip Smith, a native of Vermont, was graduated from UVM as a member of Phi Beta Kappa in 1873 with a BS in civil engineering. Two years later he received his degree of civil engineer from this university. In 1929 the degree of doctor of engineering was conferred upon him by the Board of Trustees of the same University. Dr. Smith joined the University of Arizona faculty in the fall of 1900 and since then has established himself as one of the pioneer educators and scientists of that institution.

And pioneer is certainly the word for it, when one considers that Arizona did not enter the Union until 1912.

Fifty-four Years of "Firsts"

In his fifty-four years of service to the University of Arizona, Dr. Smmth counts the following "firsts": He designed and supervised the construction of the first sewage system on the university campus in 1903. He was responsible for the installation of the first automatic water supply system on the campus in 1916.

He was the first to advocate the wide spread use of well water for irrigation and developed the cement cassion well adopted by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. This discovery promoted much of early Arizona agriculture.

State Water Code

He was the first to advocate the need for a state water code and wrote the first code to be enacted by the Arizona legislature in 1919. It was adopted verbatim as prepared by Dr. Smith and few changes have been made in the basic document since then.

Dr. Smith has published 109 papers dealing with irrigation and ground water supplies in the southwest, engineering problems of the Colorado river and the relation of ground water supplies to the physiography.

Dr. Smith was head of the department of agricultural engineering in the agricultural college of the University of Arizona. He is a past president of the Arizona section of the American Society of Civil Engineers and a member of the American Association of Engineers, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and Western Irrigation and Drainage Association. He is a Mason and a K.T. Shriner and a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Bridge Tourney OpensOnCampus In Mid-March

UVM has been invited to participate in the National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament, sponsored by the Association of College Unions. The tournament will be held from March fourteenth to eighteenth. The hands will be played on campus.

Any undergraduate student may participate in this duplicate Contract Bridge contest. Cups will be awarded to the national winners, while the individual campus champions will have their names inscribed on a plaque awarded to each college entering the tournament. A minimum of sixteen players is required if UVM is to participate. All interested bridge players are asked to leave their name and campus address in the COSA office, room 40 Waterman by Friday, February eleventh.

DidYouKnow?

.....That it was the students of UVM who saved the school after its original "Old Mill" burned to the ground in 1824? While the faculty stood beside the ashes of a quarter of a century's work and dreams, and came close enough to despair to advise the students to go elsewhere for the rest of their college years, the students began a vigorous campaign in Burlington and throughout the state that raised the money necessary to rebuild their college building. The new College (the present Old Mill) was dedicated in 1829 by the Marquis de Lafayette when the aging French patriot revisited America. Of this incident Zadock Thompson, UVM graduate and renowned historian, later said, "Thus it would seem that as the gabbling of geeseonce saved Rome so the babbling of sophomores and others saved the university."

Hebrew College Offers Courses To US Students

The Hebrew University in Jerusalem is offering a special one year course of studies for American students for the academic year 1955-56.

The program has been designed to fill the needs of university students from the United States and Canada who are interested in studying in Jerusalem for one year, in order to acquire and extensive knowledge of the Hebrew language, to be introduced to the fundamentals of Jewish thought, history and literature and to learn about modern Israel in its Middle East setting. Students will be able to continue with their present studies in the broad range of subjects offered by the University.

Eligibility

In order to be eligible for the program, a candidate must be a student at an American college or university of recognized standing, or eligible for admission to such an institution. Students working for advanced degrees are also eligible. Knowledge of Hebrew is not a prerequisite for admission to the program as a four month intensive training course in Hebrew will be given before instruction in specific subjects commences.

The total cost for the trip is estimated at $1700. This amount covers travel from New York to Jerusalem and return by air, dormitory and meals, tuition fees, tours around the country, and medical insurance.

Applications may be obtained from: Professor Oscar I. Janowsky, American Friends of the Hebrew University, 9 East 89 Street, New York 28, N.Y.

Freshman Gal Has Tough Time At Registration

By Peggy Richter

If you happened to be a sly observer while your lusty friends corrupted registration, perhaps you felt pain, or was it conquering joy? If you are a friend of a friend, you landed no eight o'clocks, no afternoon classes, and of course, no Saturday classes. And what's more, if you're a senior in Education, sleep is the order of the day for a few weeks.

But then, there is the poor, distraught soul who landed a mess. Prime example is a typical college co-ed, everything is going along just fine at registration until she comes to the last class. "Sorry we're all filled up, have to give you Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday." She groans, and leaves. She switches her lab to force her aggressor into week-day classes, complains to her friends, and trots back to the little desk. Again she is informed of the hilarious news, "Sorry, filled up." She shudders, sighs, and trys to talk the little man behind the desk out of her predicament and at last collapsing, she is forced to agree. Innocently enough she stammers from her down-trodden position. "Who is teaching this course." And, quite naturally, the little man behind the desk gleams and says "I am." (Utter frustration ensues.)

First day of classes but actually it's lounge day! So many people were there, one was led to believe it was Freshman Week all over again.

Catamounts Claw U N H 92-71 In Conference Play

the GOLD MINE
by Gerald Goldman

With more than half of the current hoop season in history, it seems that Evans and Company are on the verge of a losing record. Ah! but all is not lost until the final bell rings. For this month Vermont plays some New England cuties who could fatten the stomachs of the Catamount faithful if commendable victories could be accomplished. We refer to such class as Williams which has bowled over all of its opponents so far this season, including Dartmouth. There's also Clark, which boasts a fairly strong combine, and Brandeis, again loaded with talent. And don't turn your noses on the remaining state games coming up, for in our three years experience, we know that not even Pearson would dare to predict the future of the Green Mountain "league" games.

We've got the money honey, so what's holding up the payoff? From this angle it seems as though Fuzzy's boys are not cashing in on the old "Screen" and "Pick" plays. When you've got an " eye " like Steinman's you've got to give him that split second to set. He doesn't get enough of those intervals to get his shots away and therefore many of his shots are rushed. Much of his high scoring has been due to driving. The same goes for good "eyes" like Jampolis, Mann, Burkhardt and Lovejoy. The second problem is the pick for the drive. Most of Burkhardts drives carry two opponents all over him, but when he gets that rare one ahead step caused by a "picking" teammate, he gets you a beauty too

In our estimation that this years club has the material, that is all except for height. But if more advantage is taken from the "Screen" and "Pick", Vermont can still salvage a decent season.

Everything is right with Ralph Lapointe. We swear to it. Just the other day we saw him substitute his eyeballs. In one empty socket he placed a hard, round, stitched, Spaulding. In the remaining nitch the sultan inserted a little green light-light (pronounced lite). His arms were stretched "Louisville Style". Now this oddity needs some obvious explanation. You see, despite the "white" outside, our baseball coach has given the go ahead sign(green light) for his boys to start throwing the apples on the inside. The cage has been converted (and we mean converted) to a spring training camp. If things go according to prediction, Lapointe will be a happy man come June. This should be a baseball year at UVM. The feature attraction of this season's diamond schedule will be a home clash with Dartmouth - at night. Hofstra, Wagner, and Upsala will give Metropolitan fans plenty to root for, this southern trip.

Back to the present: To the many students who have asked, and for those who have not, (that takes care of everybody) the CYNIC will again sponsor a most Valuable Player Contest this year. There will be a story in next week's (Kake Walk) issue with full details. February 25 is the voting date.

Along the line of awards, we think it would be a fine idea if UVM did something about its Athletic heritage. Such names as Little, Killick, Campana, and many many others should have some permanent place in UVM's recognition of past performances Many other schools have set up an Athletic Hall of Fame. Why not here? More about this some other time.

A local doctor named Jacobs has a lot on the ball this year, but I think he's taxing his patients a bit to much, and in doing so he is over working his skill. Could not the good doctor have utilized his reserve strength two Wednesdays ago at Memorial Gym?

Everybody wants a piece of the ball in action between UVM and UNH in Yankee Conference game at Memorial. Last Saturday. Herb Brown (23), Jack Lafavre (15) reach for ball. Barry Stone (10) looks on. Cats won scramble 92-71.

Jampolis Sets School Mark In Loss To Purple Knights

by Mark Bernstein

The University of Vermont Catamounts dropped its third straight state game last Wednesday night to the Purple Knights from St. Michaels, 88-66.

Captain Keith Jampolis, though, was the bright spot in the losing effort. After four years of breaking records he finally hit the jackpot as he surpassed the the player with the highest total points at UVM, Nat Campana. Nat's record was 855 points and Keith by scoring 10 points against St. Mikes broke the record by 4 points. With 11 games left in the season Captain Jampolis has a chance of possibly breaking the 1000 point mark, a magic number in basketball scoring circles.

St. Mikes in Early Lead

The first half of the game told the story for many a UVM student as the Purple Knights opened up. The old nemesis Bob Young along with Bill Kuchar and Tom Lemanewicz plagued the Cats by all hitting the double figure mark early in the encounter. At the half the Knights held a 20 point lead, 48-28.

At the beginning of the second half the Evansmen tried to quickly get back into contention, but the Winooski rivals expanded their lead to 25 points with 10 minutes left. At the 9 minute mark Coach Evans took out his starting five and cleared the bench. Final score read 88-66.

CATNIPS . . . . . .

Shooting was at its lowest ebb. . . . . Coach Evans prospects for next season are dim, once again no height. . . . . A fact for some Monday morning quarterbacks; out of 12 years of coaching Fuzzy Evans has won 139 and lost 68; eight state championships; and only (1) losing season. . . . . Seasons record stands at 3 wins and 7 losses. Three state games remaining. . . . . .

Steinman Paces 4-1 In League Second To UConn

The UVM Catamounts tangled with the New Hampshire Wildcats last Saturday night at Memorial Auditorium and it appears that the Cats did most of the clawing for the second straight time, 92-71, the victory gave Vermont a 4-1 Yankee Conference record and second place behind Connecticut in the standings. We do not play UConn this year. The home club, led by Earl Steinman' 21 points and Bob Lovejoy's 18, built up a 37-30 half-time lead and were never headed.

McLaughlin in Nations Top Ten Scorers

The visitors used a variation of the 2-1-2 zone defense most of the way but switched to a loose man to man occasionally The New Hampshire scoring was led by 6-1 sophomore Francis McLaughlin, who displayed a terrific variety of shots in the process of scoring 22 points high for the game. McLaughlin' average for the season is close to 26 points per contest; it was evident to most of the people at Memorial Auditorium on Saturday it is no accident that McLaughlin is one of the top ten scorers in the entire nation. Five foot six inch Billy Pappas was second scorer for the visitors with 1 points.

Steinman Sets 21

The Vermont scorers were led by Earl Steinman, the team's top point getter all year, and Bo Lovejoy, who turned in his best offensive effort of the season scoring 18 points. Following Steinman with 21 markers an Lovejoy were Bill Mann wit 16, "Skip" Burkhardt with 1 and Vermont's new all time high scorer, captain Keith Jampoli with 12.

Lack of height on the part o New Hampshire helped the Cat greatly. The Wildcats' 6-3 cente Ken Emery was ineligible to pla which gave the Vermont cagers height advantage they do no very often have.

Mad River Glen Reports Successful U V M Competition

On the Saturday previous to exams, Mad River Glen held the first of what is hoped will be an annual event. The area was opened to the University students and faculty, and a giant slalom was held on the Porcupine Trail. The field of 30 entries was broken into 4 categories- -racers, non-racers, and men and women.

RESULTS:

Damon Headlines Vermont's Fourth At Dartmouth Cats Face Williams Club Tonight; Tops In N E

Team Travels To Try Upset

Vermont carries its overbalanced loss column into tonights tussle at Williamstown determined to start its last stand, on the road to the 500 mark. The Catamounts face Williams College tonight, with a 4-7 record. (not including Wednesday's Norwich game) This will be the first time, in a few years that the Evansmen face Coach Al Shaw's Ephs. Vermont holds a 4-3 edge in the short series record.

Ephmen Undefeated

The Ephmen have a spotless 9-0, record this year. They have won big ones against Dartmouth and UMass, both of whom have defeated Vermont. Coach Evans feels that this game could change the tide for his hoopsters and and the team is giving it all they've got. The guy to watch is top scoring Bob Buss.

Clark on Wednesday

Wednesday the Cats are off again, this time to face Clark at Worchester Mass. UVM won last years encounter, 69-44, but the home team is reported to be stronger than last year, particularly in the height department.

The following day, Vermont appears at Manchester, New Hampshire, taking on St. Anslems, another newcomer to the schedule. St. Anslems is running a seven game losing streak up to this printing.

The Cats have their work cut out for them this week and they're hoping to cut a slice of wins this trip, before they take on Trinity in the Kake Walk game.

BOWLING

Eleven teams representing seven sororities and four women's dormitories have been divided into two leagues - Tuesday and Thursday.

Ski Coach Charlie Traverse elated over last week's UVM ski showing at Dartmouth Carnival.

Vermonter Tops Field In C. C. Race; 42 : 54

by Dick Lewis

Larry Damon, 21 year old, Burlington and UVM skier took top honors in last Friday's cross-country race held at the Dartmouth Carnival, as the Catamounts took fourth place, behind Dartmouth, Middlebury and New Hampshire. Leading a field of 32 competitors, Damon went around the eight mile course in 42 minutes, 54 seconds, one minute faster than the second man, Dick Osgood of the University of New Hampshire. Damon placed second in the Nordic Combined (jumping and cross-country) with Bill Purcell in 7th place, Clint Thompson in 11th place and Jerry Baril number 17. In the overall nordic combined scores, Vermont placed second to a strong New Hampshire Team.

On Saturday the scene shifted to Mt. Sunapee State Park where the alpine events were held on a trail which showed some bare spots and rocks. The Dartmouth Team swept the first four places in both races, thus assuring themselves of their fourth consecutive victory in carnival events.

Cataskiers Show Well

The UVM team placed fourth in the alpine events, behind Dartmouth, Middlebury and Norwich. Cataskier Frank Evans was 8th, Larry Damon 15th and Bill Battles 19th in the slalom. In the downhill event, Frank Evans won sixth place with a time of 2 minutes 3/10 seconds followed by Bill Battles and Larry Damon in 20th and 22nd places, respectively.

The excellent 4th showing by the Vermont team is proof of the forward movement of Green and Gold ski competition in the past few years.

Final Standings

Dartmouth	579.8
Middlebury	554.1
New Hampshire	542.7
Vermont	539.4
Norwich	517.2
St. Lawrence	515.2
Harvard	496.2
McGill	433.1

Kittens Spot 3-4 Record; Add Height

The UVM Kittens have a 3-2 record with losses to the Dartmouth Frosh and to a strong Spaulding High team. Thus far this season, the Kittens have victories over Lyndon TC, Norwich JV, who they played again last night, and the Middlebury Frosh.

Ed Sperling on the list

Coach Ralph Lapointe announced the addition of Ed Sperling to the Frosh team. Ed is six-four and has a number of years experience. Sperling is a possible starter with Treene, Bouchard, Lovell, and Ibshin. These four are the top four scorers on the team, respectively. Treene has 68 and Bouchard has 62.

Two Games Added

The St. Michaels Frosh have been added to the schedule. Both Knight games will be played in the teams respective gyms on Feb. 10 and 16. The first game will be played at Winooski.

Coach Lapointe added that the Freshmen Knights have a strong team and will provide excellent competition. Foul shooting, a weak point for the Kittens is the order of the week. To date, the Frosh have been able to shoot only a little better than half of the charity shots through the hoops. A quick look shows that the Kittens have scored 121 field points and 69 foul shots. The Frosh have had opportunity to score on better than 130 charity tosses.

NOTICE!!! All handball tournament entrants!!! The schedules of Tournament Play are posted on the gym bulletin board. Close attention should be given to forfeit dates. In order to keep the tournament moving, play matches as soon as possible.

All Track men!!! Meet Monday, Feb. 14, in back armory (cage) at 4 P.M. Practice instructions will be given. This meeting includes Freshman and Varsity participants.

Eight Greeks In Hoop Play; Four On Alleys

As the second semester begins the top eight fraternities start the second round of league play. According to past performances in the first round KS and SPE should be the teams to beat, but TEP defeated SPE rather convincingly and this will prove a definite hurdle for them to overcome. Thus, KS, in winning its first playoff game, must be considered the favorite for the championship. SAE has looked very strong in its win over SN and DP and may cause a lot of trouble. There have been two major upsets thus far, TEP's trouncing of SPE and SN's downing of PDT. PSD in losing two games seems to be out of contention, but the Fern Hillers have the manpower to bounce back and could very easily defeat some of the leaders.

SAE Wins Opener

SAE started the ball rolling by downing SN by the score of 47-31. SAE was led by Mead with 20 points and Parks with 13 digits. Then PDT paced by Maccini and Walgren with a total of 34 points dropped PSD by the count of 55-31. PSD's Reishe hit for 16 points leading his teams scoring. KS with McLam and Rex each getting 10 points defeated DP who was led by Shuttle's 14 point performance. The score of this game was 44-26. TEP downed SPE 44-30. Goldman of TEP and Bemis of SPE each had 12 points. SN led by Harrell downed PDT 32-26, Maccini of the Delts scored 12 points. SPE squeezed past PSD 31-30, Bemis with 12 digits and Reishe's 10 paced the losers. SAE dropped DP 37-31 O'Brien's 13 took scoring honors for the winners, while Shuttle's 11 did the same for the losers.

Bowling Finals This Week

The bowling finals will take place this coming week. Three teams have qualified thus far they are SAE, SPE, and TEP. The fourth position will be determined after a playoff between SN, SP, and AEP. The top four teams will have a round-robin tournament to decide the championship. The defending champion SAE, must be considered the top heavy favorite, because of their undefeated record in league play. They finished with a 24-0 slate. SPE in winning its league will offer some very stiff competition and TEP who continued to improve as the season progressed is considered the dark horse.

HANDBALL

The handball tournaments have started, but only one match has been reported, that was Hoffman's win over Lee. The winner of the singles tournament will receive a medal; medals will also be awarded to the winners of the doubles tournament. There are eleven men entered in the singles competition and six teams in the doubles play.

UVM LOOKS TO FUTURE WITH NEW DORM

GroundBreaking Set For Summer

The University of Vermont and State Agricultural College tentatively plans to break ground this summer for a new, $1,800,000 dormitory which will house 400 women students, President Carl W. Borgmann has announced.

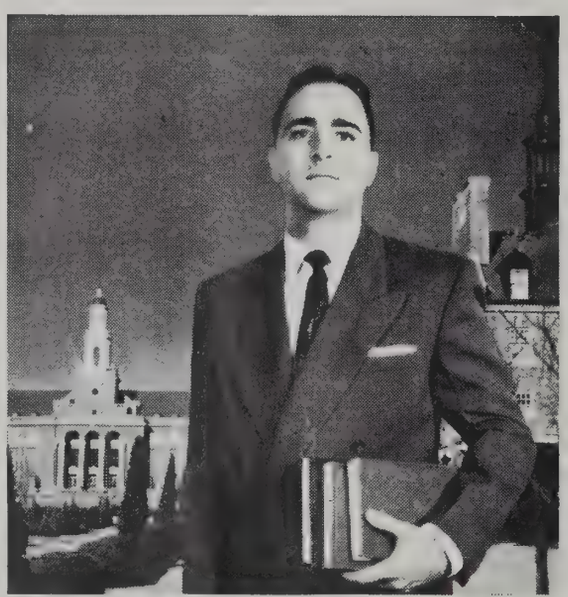
The new dormitory, which is to be located on the Redstone Campus of the University, will have four dining rooms with facilities for 600. Featuring three units connected at the west corners of the main unit, the proposed dormitory will have a reinforced concrete frame with brick exterior and steel sash. It will be accoustically treated.

Close Small Units

Construction of the dormitory will permit the University to discontinue use by women students of dormitory facilities in East Hall, Converse, and the Old Mill on the main campus. In addition, the present proposal calls for the closing of Elmwood, Roberts, Claggett, Sanders, and possibly Lyman, Halls, with their sale expected to pay part of the cost of the new dormitory.

Financed Through Bonds

Although no financial arrangements have been made as yet, it is tentatively planned to finance the new dormitory partly using unrestricted gifts received by the University, partly by the sale of University property in Burlington, and by a self-liquidating bond issue. In connection with this, the Board of Trustees of the University have authorized President Borgmann to submit a bill to the Legislature which would have the State guarantee the bond issue.



In 1946, when three men's and one women's dormitory were constructed, the State appropriated $200,000 and also guaranteed the University's bond issue to finance the remainder of the costs. The State will not be asked to appropriate any money for the new women's dormitory, President Borgmann said, but only to guarantee the bond issue.

The new dormitory will be constructed on three levels, following the countours of the land and running approximately south from Coolidge on the Redstone Campus.

If the University is able to complete present plans for the financing of the dormitory, it is expected that work can be gotten underway this summer, adding to the fairly active building outlook for the Burlington area.

"Dress" Pruett wants to know:

What type of training program does Du Pont have?

DRESSLAR M. PRUETT expects to receive his B.S. in Industrial Engineering this summer from Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater, Okla. He is president of the local student branch of A.I.I.E. Naturally, he is interested in selecting the best job opportunity for a successful career based on his technical training.

DONALD C. MILLER received his B.S. in Chemical Engineering from Ohio State University in June 1937. During the following month he started work with the Organic Chemicals Department of Du Pont at Deepwater Point, N. J. Since then he has received and given many kinds of technical training. Today Don Miller is a general superintendent at Du Pont's Chambers Works—well qualified to answer questions about training programs for college men.

Don Miller answers:

Training has many facets in a big firm like Du Pont, Dress, and a great deal of thought has been given to make it truly effective. We look upon training as a very important factor in a man's career. We think that the best way to train a college graduate is to give him a maximum of on-the-job responsibility in a minimum length of time. That's the general guiding policy at Du Pont, Dress.

Of course, each department varies this general policy to suit its special needs. A new man being trained for production supervision may first spend a year or so in laboratory or plant development work. Or he may spend his training period as a plant operator. Thus a man obtains firsthand knowledge of his process, and establishes a bond of mutual respect with the men he'll be working with on his first major assignment.

A young man interested in sales is often first assigned to a plant or laboratory dealing with the products he will later sell; or he may join a group of trainees to learn selling techniques right from the start.

An engineer, chemist, or other technical graduate is usually chosen for a specific job within his major field of study. Such a man brings specialized knowledge and skill to his job, and he is encouraged to put them to use promptly. But at Du Pont his experiences on the job are supplemented with lectures, conferences and discussion groups. In a very real sense, new technical employees continue training in their specialties after joining the Company.

To sum it all up, Dress, Du Pont's training program is individualized to provide a new man with specific opportunities to learn from contacts with more experienced men. The prime objective of Du Pont training is always kept clearly in mind—to develop men for future advancement and effectiveness in the organization.

NOW AVAILABLE for student ASME chapters and other college groups, a 16-mm. sound-color movie—"Mechanical Engineering at Du Pont." For further information write to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), 2521 Nemours Bldg., Wilmington 98, Delaware

Poster Was Last Minute Job: Inspired By Former Creation

By Ruth Zindler

Nancy Collins, a senior from Burlington, and a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority is the winner of the 1955 Kake Walk Poster Contest.

Nancy has never had actual art instruction, but she has taken art courses that are related to elementary education. Nancy said her course in related art, which she took this year, really helped her. She was art editor of her high school yearbook, did scenery for the high school plays, did charts and graphs for the public relations office at UVM, and did signs for registration and for Town and Country Days.

Sans Make-up

The winning poster is black with red lettering outlined in white. The capital "K" of Kake is a stylized Kake Walker, complete with top hat and polka-dot bow tie. This is counterbalanced by a silhouette of a Kake Walk director giving the signal for the Kake Walkers to begin. According the Nancy, "Due to the controversy over "blackface" make-up this year I attempted to avoid using it in the poster and still get over the full signifigance of Kake Walk." The poster is black Nancy said because when she was still in high school and knew nothing about Kake Walk, the black-poster always attracted her most.

Bolt of Inspiration

Nancy, who is now a student teacher at the Adam School teaching a combination of first and second grade, had not planned to enter the contest because she did not feel she had sufficient time to do a good job. When she started looking over the pictures of last year's Kake Walkers and their poses she noticed that their figures seemed to resemble the letter K and worked on this idea.

The poster which has been printed by the George Little Press was started and finished by Nancy in one evening.

She will receive a cake Friday and Saturday evening at walking and the trophy, which she will present as a gift to the sorority, will be presented to her at the same time.

Skit Production Is No Easy Undertaking; Men Put In Time, Effort For Perfection

By Carol L. Chase

The four 12-minute skits which are presented at Kake Walk represent much work and strain--both mentally and physically. Each fraternity that has had their skit accepted has worked many long hours to perfect their presentation.

This year Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Phi Delta Theta, and Phi Sigma Delta have the honors. Let us glance behind the scenes to see just what goes into the making of a skit.

The SAE's began their rehearsals during the inter-semester vacation under the direction of Tom Harney, '56, who is author of the skit, "Comically Speaking." The idea for the skit originated when Tom lay indisposed in our beloved infirmary and after two weeks and a complete night before the skits were due the material was finally completed. (They just made the deadline!)

Too Big To Manage

Most of the props were completed during the semester vacation. One of the props which they made was so enormous they could not remove it from the cellar.

The SAE's have been trooping over to Southwick for rehearsals and have polished it off and put the finishing touches on in the Fleming Museum. They had ten "scheduled" practices, each one lasting approximately three hours.

Tom, when asked for a comment on his experience as a skit director had one word to offer--"Nerve-racking"!

The TEP's began to work on their skit, "Mamborama", February 1, working every day for a minimum of four hours and a maximum of nine hours. The directors, Jerry Kobre, '56, and Joel Berke, '56, wrote the skit in four days--working 13 hours each day. Most of the rehearsals took place at the house and toward the end they rehearsed in the Waterman Student Lounge where there is ample room.

There! We've Done It Again!

The fraternity was not asked to remain in Burlington during the semester recess, consequently after vacation it was necessary for them to work diligently and constantly. The directors felt that if they worked on the skit too long it would become dull and that with concentrated effort the end product would be much better.

Jerry Kobre stated that each year they vow they will not present a skit the following year, however, their enthusiasm runs away with them and they find themselves in the same situation when Kake Walk time rolls around.

Phi Delts Revised, Restaged

Over at the Phi Delt house actual rehearsals began the beginning of the second semester under the direction of Frank McCrane, '56, and Gene MacClean, '56, who was in charge of the dancing. "Getting back to Nature" was written by Bob Gorman, '56.

Unfortunately it doesn't end there since there was much revision in the dance routines and staging that had to take place. Similar to the SAE's schedule the Phi Delts

Here's The Story Of The Skits

By Joan L. Ross

Four fraternities will present skits at Kake Walk this year. Those participating are Tau Epsilon Phi, Phi Sigma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

TEP Skit

The Southland gave birth to the blues and Cuba has recently given birth to the latest of the popular dances, the Mambo. In their skit, Mamborama, Tau Epsilon Phi, with the aid of Mambophonic Sound tells the story of six bewildered! UVM students at the Senior Prom who are confronted with doing the dance. Using Yankee ingenuity the sextet quickly decides to leave the prom and takes a hasty course of instruction at a dance studio. When the six finally return to the prom having accomplished their mission a new trend is started at UVM as everybody learns to do the Mambo.

PHI Sig Skit

The proverbial Sophomore Slump, a usual threat to the social life of a coed is replaced by an even greater threat. The members of Phi Sigma Delta portray the threat that high tuition rates at UVM will bring to the coeds. However, when Big Business comes to the aid of the fair damsels in distress through the Collegiate Soap Company Phi Sigma Delta proves that Grime Doesn't Pay.

PHI DELT Skit

A typical Green Mountain Camp is the setting for Phi Delta Theta's skit, Getting Down to Nature, the story of two UVM students employed at the camp for the summer and their charges. This might be the story of any one of the thousand of boys and girls who leave the security of their parents' arms for a summer of fun, or of any of the thousands of college students who leave the security of their campus and books to guide these children for two glorious months.

SAE Skit

Sigma Alpha Epsilon looks to the future in presenting their skit, Comically Speaking. Here we have a story woven around the problems of Figment, an innocent freshman, caused by the Revised University Rules and Regulations.

And There Are Those Who Travel HereOnSnowshoe

By Peter Laibson

The influx of dates, parents, relatives and friends at Kake Walk time brings to mind the Westward movement in '49. Train, plane, bus and car are the more popular means of transportation but they tell of two hardy souls who one year skied down from McGill. And too, there is the legend of the Bennington lass who failing to make proper reservations, had to snowshoe up to Burlington.

Snuggly snowed in here at UVM it is hard for us to picture the difficulties involved in reaching this part of the world in mid February for our Kake Walk weekend. Plane reservations are filled early and prayers are said each night that the flight will not be cancelled. The most heart rending situation occurred not too long ago when a flight from New York was grounded in Albany leaving fifty lovely ladies and gowns isolated at the Albany airport and fifty stag gentlemen at the Ball.

Those driving by car have not found the path easy at times either. Just imagine being stranded in a three foot drift in Hoosick Falls while Ralph Marteri is blowing a hot trumpet in Burlington! Travel by train has it's drawbacks also, although the Rutland Railroad as a passenger conveyance no longer run those infamous day and night trains. Still the Central Vermont has been known to get people where they desire to go, the same week they board the train. Ah, progress.

If we may suggest a way of insuring anyone's transportation for the Kake Walk weekend, let us suggest bringing them back with you after the Christmas vacation. This avoids long nights at the Burlington airport, no sleep at the Essex Junction railroad station and no phone bills when they call you for help from Fairhaven.

Well, I don't know . . . there's no rule about that yet.

in defense of derangement

By Gary Wright

Once, overseas, in a hospital, I saw a Negro who had lost his leg just below the knee.

"How's it going, Tex?" I asked.

He grinned.

"Man, I hope I never die again."

I have often thought of that and wondered what I would say if the situation were reversed. I don't believe I could be that optimistic.

Did he give us Kake Walk? I think so. He and thousands just like him. People who could laugh to please themselves, not others. They made music for the fun of it; not money. They were people who danced for the sheer joy of dancing, not for show.

Without their music and laughter, we would be a rather stodgy people. They built tradition, built it from the ground up.

They gave more to America than America gave to them. We were the snickering audience. They were the people in the spotlight. They didn't care if we looked or not.

This is Kake Walk. Let's not forget where it came from. Traditions don't fall under death or taxes, so they must change. Like a suit, alteration makes a better fit.

It may be 'walking for the cake', it may be anything. It means, I'm glad I'm alive.

King, Queen Spent Last Year's Weekend In Unexplainable, Wonderful Daze

Ex - Royalty Reminisces

By Lenore Weinstein

What is it like to be King or Queen of Kakewalk week-end? Walter Johnson, last year's winner told us "Being crowned King of Kakewalk was a most memorable and unforgettable experience. It was a great thrill to be part of the royalty for the week-end."

This wonderful dream only came true after many weeks of careful preparation which started right after Christmas vacation. From Pops night on until the following Sunday, Walt said that he only averaged about three hours of sleep a night. During this time there was a tremendous amount of worrying and tension over the campaign. There was always the question of how the skits given in the coffee shop went over. Rumors flew around the campus quickly and in abundance, but, Walt said that these had to be ignored if he was to stay in his right mind.

Center of Attraction

After acting in a few of the skits at Waterman he became used to being in front of a lot of people and being the center of attraction. However when the curtains opened in Memorial Auditorium in order to present the King and Queen Walt said, "The feeling I had at the time couldn't be put into words," All at once he felt happy, proud, and excited. Although he knew what was going on during the procession to the throne and the crowning he said he still felt in a slight daze.

Throughout Kakewalk he was continually being congratulated by people whom he knew and whom he didn't. People just filed by the throne forming practically a receiving line. " Everywhere I went a camera was snapping pictures. After awhile my face actually became tired from smiling," said Walt.

SAE Atmosphere

The Kakewalk atmosphere around his fraternity house, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, was more wonderful than any other normal year and unlike any other. There was a definite feeling of closeness and cooperation among the boys formed from the weeks of campaigning together. "The house was just jammed with people celebrating from Thursday night on, "Walt said.

If he had it to do all over again he'd be glad to. All the working and worrying was worth it. " It was just the greatest Kakewalk for me and one of the best times of my life."

Queen Bev

1954's Queen of Kake Walk, Beverly Chase, graduated from UVM last June and now lives with her husband, former UVM'er, Lieutenant Jack Burke, at Fort Benning, Georgia, where he is stationed. The CYNIC sent a special telegram to Bev asking her for her impressions of Kake Walk week-end. Here they are:

It's almost here - - Another Kake Walk! I can well imagine the hustle and preparation now taking place. There's nothing to match it.

I received a telegram from Lenore Weinstein requesting my impressions of Kake Walk. Of course, this made my thoughts fly backward a year to KW '54. My most memorable one. And this is truly a wonderful memory. Everyone of you will have something to reminisce about after Kake Walk has come and gone.

Traditions, excitement, work and fun - all the ingredients blended to make a Vermont Kake Walk. One isn't able to single out any ONE that makes Kake Walk what it is. I can only say that it's wonderful, it's unique, it's exciting and it's February 19th and we won't be there!

There are so many here at Fort Benning from UVM that Jack and I have invited them all to come to our house for Kake Walk. The Gages have movies of last year's walking and we have "Cotton Babes" so - - we're going to be with you in spirit, anyway. By the way, Everyone is welcome.

The very best of everything to all the Walkers, the candidates (who must be all worn out by now) and the directors, who, as usual, must be doing a splendid job.

In reading this over I discover my impressions of Kake Walk are missing. Guess I wandered a bit from the subject. My impressions have been written and rewritten countlessly for they are the impressions of every UVM'er who has ever seen Kake Walk.

So - May I say I hope Kake Walk is a happy, happy time for each and all.

Very sincerely,
Bev Burke

King Walt Johnson (l) and Queen Bev Chase (r) are joined by last Kake Walk's band leader, Richard Hayman. Walt is still around campus; Bev is with her husband, Jack Burke, in Georgia.

Fraternities And Sororities Divert Tax Bill

A bill which would subject fraternity and sorority property to annual reassessment was unfavorably voted out of committee due partly to the efforts of UVM students. Five students visited the Ways and Means Committee in Montpelier and succeeded in changing its vote.

The committee had previously voted in favor of the bill with twelve in favor and only one against. Because the final vote was unfavorable, the bill will not come up for discussion in the legislature unless it is specifically called for.

John Aldridge To Speak On UVM And Education

The John Dewey Club will present at 8:00 P.M. on February 23rd in the Student Lounge. Professor John Aldridge of the English Department, who will speak on "Four Years of What? "

Professor Aldridge's subject will be Education at UVM and its value to the student. He will generally refer to his major field of study but every student will benefit by this fitting discussion and evaluation.

Remember, 8 P.M., February 23rd, Wednesday, in the Waterman Student Lounge to hear Prof. John Aldridge speak before the John Dewey Club.

THE TREEHOUSE OF THE AUGUST MOON

Spring is just around the corner, and with spring, as always, will come tree-sitting contests. This I applaud. Tree-sitting is healthful and jolly and as American as apple pie. Also it keeps you off the streets.

Tree-sitting is not, however, without its hazards, as you will presently see when I tell you the dread and chilling tale of Manuel Sigafoos and Ed Pancreas.

Manuel and Ed, friends and room-mates, were walking one day past the folk music room in the School of Dentistry and Fine Arts. Suddenly they stopped, for coming through the door of the folk music room was a clear and thrilling alto voice singing the lovely folk tune, I Strangled My True-Love with Her Own Yellow Braids, and I'll Never Eat Her Sorghum Any More.

When the last shimmering notes of the ballad had died away, Manuel and Ed rushed into the room, and there they thought their swelling hearts must burst asunder. For the singer was as beautiful as the song! Fair as the morn she was, doe-eyed and curvilinear.

"My name is Manuel Sigafoos," cried Manuel Sigafoos, "and I love you madly, wildly, tempestuously!"

"My name is Ed Pancreas," cried Ed Pancreas, "and I love you more than Manuel Sigafoos."

"My name is Ursula Thing," cried the girl, "and I've got a jim-dandy idea. Why don't you two have a contest, and I will go steady with the winner?"

"What kind of contest?" cried Manuel and Ed.

"A tree-sitting contest," cried Ursula Thing. "Natch!"

"Done and done," cried Manuel and Ed, and they clambered up adjoining aspens, taking with them the following necessaries: food, water, clothing, medicaments, bedding, reading matter, and – most essential of all – plenty of Philip Morris cigarettes.

We who live on the ground, with all the attendant advantages, know how important Philip Morris cigarettes are. Think, then, how much more important they must be to the lonely tree dweller – how much more welcome their vintage tobaccos, how much more soothing their mild pure flavor, how much more comforting to know as one sits in leafy solitude that come wind or weather, come light or dark, Philip Morris will always remain the same dependable, reliable, flavorful friend.

Well supplied with Philip Morris, our heroes began their contest – Manuel with good heart, Ed with evil cunning. The shocking fact is that Ed intended to win the contest with a Machiavellian ruse. It seems that Ed, quite unbeknownst to Manuel, was one of three identical triplets. Each night while Manuel dozed on his bough, one of Ed's brothers – Fred or Jed – would sneak up the tree and replace him. Thus Ed was spending only one-third as much time in the tree as Manuel. "How can I lose?" said Ed with a crafty giggle to his brother Fred or Jed.

But Ed had a surprise coming. For Manuel, though he did not know it himself, was a druid! He had been abandoned as an infant at the hut of a poor and humble woodcutter named Winthrop Mayhew Sigafoos, who had raised the child as his own. So when Manuel got into the tree, he found to his surprise that he'd never felt so at home and happy in his life, and he had absolutely no intention of ever leaving.

After four or five years Ed and his brothers wearied of the contest and conceded. Ursula Thing came to Manuel's tree and called him to come down and pin her. He declined. Instead he asked her to join him in the tree. This she could not do, being subject to acromegaly (a morbid allergy to woodpeckers) so she ended up with Ed after all.

Only she made a mistake – a very natural mistake. It was Jed she ended up with, not Ed.

Ed, heartbroken at being tricked by his own brother, took up metallurgy to forget.

Crime does not pay.

It's Swing To Bobby Hackett At Friday Afternoon Concert

By Dick Lewis

Bobby Hackett and his swinging sextet move into Memorial Auditorium on Friday the 18th of February for the greatest of all Kake Walk Jazz Concerts. Hackett brings to Burlington, an up and coming jazz town, a group of well known musicians who can play both hot and cool sounds.

Known as the "trumpet players trumpet player," Bobby Hackett was voted one of the top ten trumpet men in the recent Down Beat Poll along with such other greats as Chet Baker, Louis Armstrong and Dizzy Gillespie. One of the the star performers at the Newport Jazz Festival last summer. Hackett has performed with the greatest names in the jazz world. Being an accomplished musician, Bobby Hackett can play all forms of music, from jazz to the classics, as heard in his recordings with the Jackie Gleason Orchestra.

Appearing with Bobby Hackett at the Kake Walk Jazz Concert will be Hank D'Amico, a Red Norvo alumnus who has recorded with Bob Crosby, Cozy Cole and Mildred Bailey. Much of his recent work has been with studio bands, but he plans to spend more time with jazz henceforth. He is a musician of skill and sensitive good taste whose clarinet has been heard with some of the best jazz musicians in the world.

Another of the better known jazz musicians appearing with Bobby Hackett is Lou Stein, tickling the 88's in his own inimitable fashion.

The other personnel appearing with Bobby Hackett include Ray Diehl, who appeared here with the Max Kaminsky All-Stars, on trombone; Bob Carter on bass; and Morey Feld, an ex-Goodman and Bob Crosby man, on drums.

K W Teams Strive For Own Trade Marks In Months Allotted For Preparation

By Helen McKuskie

Perhaps one of the greatest thrills of our winter carnival is the actual Walking for the Kake, the major event of our annual Kake Walk. As a matter of fact, it is very often impossible for anyone to give a description of his emotional feelings and thrills when he does see the Kake Walk; yet we are able to give a physical description of this walk which is descendant of an old Negro dance.

In general, the UVM Kake Walk is an attempt to overemphasize and accentuate the actual walk. However, each team of walkers adds its own routine and trick steps to give them the individuality and recognition they deserve as a team. Each team, consisting of two walkers, strives to develop some characteristic which will distinguish their routine from those of the other fraternities.

Distinguishing Marks

For example, the walkers from SAE have always tried to achieve a high bounce to look as though they are high in the air, whereas those from Acacia are characterized by their wonderful and high kick. Other examples are the Phi Sigs who strive for precision, and the Kappa Sigs who are known for their excellent routines and exacting team work.

Even though all this is noticed by the audience, there is a great deal that the spectators don't realize about the preparation for the walking and the personal feelings of the Walker who is waiting for the big night when the handkerchief is dropped onto the floor of a large, but very quite auditorium.

Gradual Process of Development

The preparation often begins as far back as just after Thanksgiving recess, for the new team must work out only a short time daily in order to avoid pulled muscles. The work-out continues daily from then on, with the team's trying to acquire rhythm, rather than working on the actual routine. During this time the Walkers are continually trying to assume polish and stamina, for this is the most difficult part of working-out. For after they have achieved this, the routine and trick steps come easy and need to be concentrated on only a few weeks before Kake Walk.

During this period of work-out, the walkers may find several places where they can practice. For instance, some spend their time at the gym, others at Southwick, while others prefer to stay at their own fraternity houses if there is ample space.

Lend A Helping Hand

One very interesting fact is that when there is more than one team at the gym or at Southwick, there are never any hard feelings amongst the walkers. On the contrary, the teams are very often willing to help others out, and there is always a very friendly atmosphere while working-out. Another interesting fact pertaining to the working-out is that the Walkers seldom use music, for they feel that when they do hear the music, it will give them that extra burst of energy that they especially need on the night of the Walking.

It Doesn't Pay To Import City Girl; Or Does it?

By Mary Davidson

Upon pondering the comin weekend - Kake Walk - on must take into account th various discrepancies tha go along with it; namely th monetary angle. But this i an inevitable situation whe you consider the presen state of the economy. Now don't lose your mind! W have the vital statistic for you to pursue at you leisure. They are:

Ball tickets	$ 3.6
Flowers	5.0
Jazz Concert	2.0
Tuxedo	6.0
Walking tickets . . .	4.0

Fraternity assessment ranging from 10 to 25 dollar take care of such things a buffet suppers, refreshments and decorations.

The added costs when th date is an "import" ar about $ 7.00 per night fo room for three nights, an about $ 10.00 extra fo meals.

Results: Total for co-ed $ 31.6

Total for import $ 62.6

If nothing else than mer expediency, it "pays" t date a UVM coed for Kake Walk.

Directors Spent Full Year To Bring You 'Best Time Ever'

By Linda McKerely

"Kake Walk " is the easiest word to pronounce but if we were to talk to a few special people on campus we might find that it is much harder to produce.

At this time of the year we are apt to hear the names of several students mentioned more often than others and among these are seven students, without whom, there would be no Kake Walk. Accepting the responsibility of the many jobs to be done to make "Kake Walk " really come alive are the three student directors: Bob Hylton, George Plender and Stan Stein.

BOB HYLTON is in complete charge of the Band. This consists of hiring the band for ball, hiring the jazz concert groups, all contract work and clearing all transactions through the Union men.

GEORGE PLENDER handles the production angle. He co-ordinates everybody's job into a whole body, all working together in a smooth pattern.

STAN STEIN takes care of the financial end of Kake Walk which is self-explanatory. Anything requiring the do-re-mi, Stan is the man to see.

Working with these three men are four students accepting the title of assistant directors.

BRUCE CHAFFEE is the "3-P " man. He has the responsibility of all the programs, posters, and publicity.

ED HEBB has charge of all Kake Walk tickets and the awards. The ordering of and the presentation of these awards must be cleared and arranged before the big night. This is his job.

ALAN TYLER is the man concerned with the King and Queen and the Walkers. Al checks on and makes arrangements for all campaigns and he makes possible the contact between WRA's Penny Carnival and Kake Walk. He is the answerman for any questions on problems concerning the Walkers.

KEN WADLEY has charge of the hiring and decorating of the auditorium. He has several committees working under him doing decorating work for Kake Walk and the Ball, which is truly a tremendous job.

There is one more deserving of praise for her work in this production job.

MARY HARGREAVES - A sophois acting as secretary for the directors and assistant directors. Mary handles the typing and general correspondence for this group.

It is quite evident these people aren't twirling their thumbs for want of something to do at this time of year and they certainly deserve all the praise from the student body that they can get. They're making it possible for us to have a great time this Kake Walk.

Science Group Grants Money To Dr. Inskeep

The National Science Foundation has granted $17,500 to Dr. Richard G. Inskeep, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, University of Vermont.

The grant is for the purpose of supporting Dr. Inskeep's studies of intermolecular forces in such substances as alcohols, amines and other organic substances. This study is a continuation of the infrared spectroscopic investigations made possible by a grant from the Research Corporation in December, 1953.

Earlier Work

This earlier work, summarized in two papers to be published in the Journal of the American Chemical Society, was carried out in co-operation with Dr. Clinton D. Cook, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, UVM; Mr. Arthur Rosenberg, Teaneck, New Jersey, a senior; Mr. David Kuhn, Burlington, a graduate student; and Mr. Earl Curtis, White River Junction, a former UVM student, now a graduate student in chemistry at the University of Minnesota.

Present Study

Associated with Dr. Inskeep in this present study are Mr. Paul McMahon, Burlington, a graduate student, and Mr. Willard Howe, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a senior.

Dr. Inskeep joined the University of Vermont Department of Chemistry in September, 1953, after receiving his doctorate at the University of Illinois, and doing postdoctorate study at the University of Minnesota and Brown University.

Weekend Packed With Parties; Formals, Informals Hold Sway

By Shirley O'Neill

Beginning tonight, the cry of "Party, party!" will be heard all over campus, as all of the fraternities and sororities begin a ceaseless round of parties, buffet suppers, teas, and open houses in celebration of Kake Walk.

The brothers of Sigma Nu and their dates were guests at a buffet supper and party last night. The house was open after the Kake Walk Ball and there will also be open houses Friday and Saturday nights after the skits and the walking.

At Fern Hill, Phi Sigma Delta staged a formal buffet tonight, which was attended by the brothers and their dates, alumni, parents, and members of the Administration. The Phi Sigs have three parties scheduled over the weekend.

TEP Has Two Buffets

Kappa Sigma also has three parties planned, one each night to follow the Ball, the walking, and the skits. The Kappa Sig's are also considering having an open house on Sunday afternoon, but the final decision has not yet been made.

Moving over from Main Street to College Street, we find that something new has been added at the Tau Epsilon Phi house. The Tep's have planned not one, but two buffet suppers. The buffets will take place before the skits and the walking on Friday and Saturday nights, with open houses being held after these events.

Farther up the hill, the brothers of Phi Delta Theta and their dates attended a buffet supper and party yesterday before the Ball. The Phi Delts also have three parties scheduled.

Across the street at the Sigma Phi house, we find practically the same schedule that the Phi Delts will be following.

Over on Summit Street, the Delta Psi's put on a buffet supper before the dance, with a coffee hour afterwards. The Delts also have open houses planned for tonight and Saturday night.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon has three parties planned, one on each night, as do the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon, that is, if the chaperone problem can be successfully solved for Saturday night.

On South Willard Street, Alpha Epsilon Pi Fraternity opened their new house with a formal banquet Thursday night before the ball. Parties will be held both Friday and Saturday nights. Saturday night the second banquet will be held. No open house is planned for Sunday.

On the other side of the picture, seven of the eight sororities on campus -- Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, Gamma Phi Beta, Alpha Epsilon Phi, Alpha Delta Pi, and Sigma Gamma -- are planning teas and open houses on Sunday afternoon. The one exception, Delta Delta Delta, put on an open house last Sunday, and has nothing planned for this weekend.

Penny Carnival formally ushered in Kake Walk by introducing candidates for the 1955 King and Queen last Saturday. A series of memorable skits was presented to the delight of a large and enthusiastic audience, who met the mood of excitement for the entire week. Prior to the crowning of the royalty.

Tree Men

Before campaigning could officially start, we were well aware of the fraternities' and sororities' efforts to gain student support, through their hard and tiresome work. Not lacking in patience were the Kappa Sigs, who, as you may have noticed, kept a careful eye on the trees opposite Waterman. No one was going to get that precious poster space! Just to make sure of this, they started their four day vigil on 10 A.M. February 9 and didn't leave until 12:01 A.M. February 13, alternating guard every two hours during the day and at three hour intervals through the long, cold, stormy nights.

Free Rides, Skis

Campaigning burst into full swing early Monday morning when Joe's taxi service and bus, and Kahlo's cabs were ambitiously awaiting co-eds at Redstone who were seeking rides to "Waterman and all points west." These gentlemanly chauffeurs were well-appreciated but there's one drawback--how are the girls going to get used to walking again?(h t). Adding a new twist to the campaign season were the Delta Phi's, who ran a free skiing school for all students interested.

Inducing us to "shine with Liz," the Pi Phi's polished many a pair of shoes in the halls of lower Waterman, and we were given a chance to talk more of Elaine over cups of hot chocolate, served by the Alpha Chi's. Although Kake Walk wouldn't be the same without them, it wasn't actually the individual campaign of each house that made the excitement rise. It was more the buzz of activity in the halls and in the Lounge, friendship shown among the candidates; spirit and enthusiasm on the part of all students.

Better Skits

As in previous years, campaign skits were presented in the coffee shop, but with different regulations this year. To prevent cuts in too many classes, the skits were scheduled from four to six on Monday and Tuesday, instead of running throughout the day. This new system seems to have a varied effect on the students. They found the skits much better organized, more fully planned, longer and more enjoyable, because of the limited number each house presented. The crowding of so many spectators into the small coffee shop at one time added a great deal of confusion and discomfort, however.

Looking over a collection of autographed pictures of Ed, Clem's churchkeys and combs, Phyl's "Stick with Phyl" gum, Barb's calendars and pictures; and with fond memories of hot cocoa, rides around campus, wonderful skits and serenading in the dorms, we realized the difficulty of choosing only two of the eight likeable and well-qualified candidates.

Around The Greener Grass

GREETINGS and WELCOME to KAKE WALK all you IMPORTANT IMPORTS! We're glad that the wind blew in Kake Walk (and enough room for some really promising sculptures) brought you all, too. We hope that the spirit that descended upon us here at UVM officially last Saturday night at Penny Carnival (though many of us were bitten by the Kake Walk Bug (by necessity) long before) will soon take hold of you as you enter into what we think is the happiest kind of a Winter Carnival.

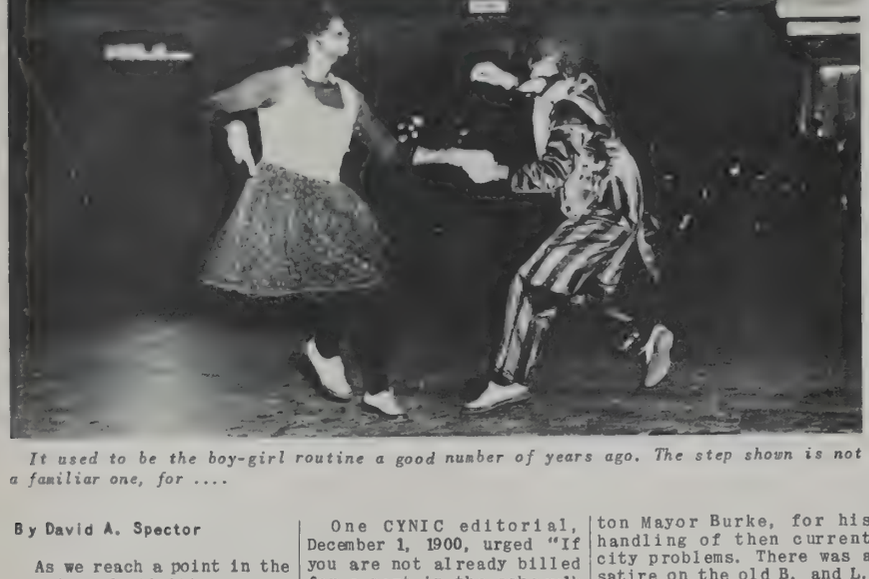
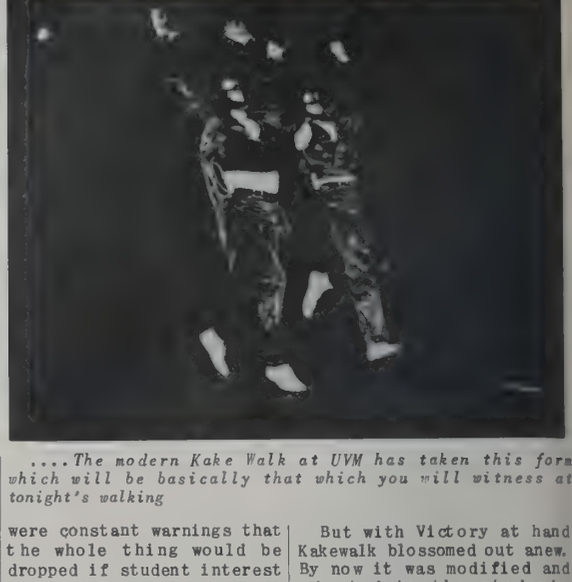
IT TURNED UVM UPSIDE - DOWN



Lask week's snow turned campus into a wonderland for Kake Walk, but oh, what it did to traffic. Photo - Levine, SPS



The UVM Band and Joe Lechnyr, the real unsung heroes of all Kake Walks. To Joe, we wish a Happy Birthday; may you have very many more. See story, page 16.

Kake Walk History Shows Varied Past

It used to be the boy-girl routine a good number of years ago. The step shown is not a familiar one, for ....

....The modern Kake Walk at UVM has taken this form which will be basically that which you will witness at tonight's walking

By David A. Spector

As we reach a point in the evenings festivities we reflect on earlier Kakewalks, and what they must have been like.

Like most institutions, Kakewalk started small. But it has increased in stature until it reached its present peak of excitement and near perfection. Its early beginnings are shrouded in a curious mixture of fact and myth. There is the report that several enterprising students, tired from their exams, met on Washington's birthday by the Chapel for a period of "grand jubilation and frolic." The whole student body showed up in costumes and masks. There is the report that a keg of beer, hidden in the loft, sprang a leak, dripped on the rafters, and discolored the walls.

Early Start

Perhaps a more reliable report on its early formative start is the true one. This report says that a scheduled Military Ball failed to materialize, and the dissappointed students then put on their own show. This was in December 1893. Within a few years this developed into a campus tradition, and it was not until much later that the date was shifted to February. Everyone could partake in the festivities. There was the Grand March in which all the students were invited to join. All that was required was a costume and mask.

One CYNIC editorial, December 1, 1900, urged "If you are not already billed for a part in the cake walk (note the spelling) it is not too late yet. Of course you will be there, but if you are not concerned with any speciality, get a striking costume and go into the Grand March. Don't be afraid of making yourself conspicuous or ridiculous- that is the business of the night."

Cotton Babes

In 1904 Cotton Babes was introduced into the proceedings. Kakewalk began to assume its traditional form. As Kakewalk grew its following and fame also increased. Therefore the walking moved from the Armory to the Old Opera House to the Gymnasium. to its present site of Memorial Auditorium. By the 24th Kakewalk attendance had grown so large as to necessitate it being presented for two concurrent evenings. As it grew it also suffered growing pains. The question was raised in the March 2, 1907 CYNIC that "should not someone be appointed to find out beforehand all about each 'stunt' and act as a sort of censor, recommending that certain parts be left out in the final presentation?"

Early Stunts

The nature of these stunts were really quite harmless; some spoofed the school administration, and more than one picked on poor Burlington Mayor Burke, for his handling of then current city problems. There was a satire on the old B. and L. Railroad of the time that "served" Burlington. Kappa Sigma, in one of the earlier skits, presented a stunt entitled "Uncle Sam's Customary Custom House Customs" which dealt with "trustmagnates bribing officials, tramps and Chinamen being vigorously sent back, and travelers emerging, sadder and wiser, and with decidedly less luggage and raiment." This was typical of the skits; the winner receiving the coveted Briggs Trophy.

Private student groups could also enter skits, as could the Medical School and other branches of the University.

Gradual Change

Later Kakewalk underwent a gradual change. Fraternities took over the presentation of skits and did all the walking; in earlier shows any couples could take the floor for their turn. During the first few walkings only three couples partook, but gradually the number increased.

The Grand March was for some reason dropped. It was, at the time called the "Peerade" and it was probably felt to be better to keep it for another holiday later in the Spring. But for whatever the reason the spectators became more passive and were satisfied to watch the whole affair being conducted by a relatively small group. There were constant warnings that the whole thing would be dropped if student interest was not maintained. Each Kakewalk Committee pleaded with the students to make "this Kakewalk the best of all," and every year their wish came true.

Modifications

Kakewalk rode with the times. When the First World War came the proceeds were donated to the Red Cross. The tone of the demonstrations evolved to a patriotic feeling, and this was reflected in the skits. The Depression presented a more sober Kakewalk, and no longer was it carried to such excesses as had previously existed. For example in the past there was a huge collapsible dirigible that was floated from one end of the gym to the other.

Crisis

The Second World War brought severe trials to the tradition. With a greatly restricted male enrollment naturally the fun was reduced. In 1944 a vote was taken to see what should be done about the holiday that year and 189 student asked for a smaller, substitute Kakewalk, while 78 wanted "Kakewalk as usual", and 55 were willing to give it up entirely for the duration. That year's Kakewalk was the least festive in its long history. The War, and the casualty lists put a damper on the affair, and only a small dance was held.

But with Victory at hand Kakewalk blossomed out anew. By now it was modified and adapted to the students wishes and needs. Many features have disappeared and new twists were added. Black-faced usherettes used to help visitors and guests to their seats, but this was dropped for other diversions.

Now Kakewalk is put on by the fraternities for the enjoyment of the whole school. The Kakewalk Dispensation Committee allots the profits for projects that are of benefit to everybody.

Watch Tonight

As we watch the walking tonight we are constantly reminded of the present effort and work that went into making this whole evening possible. Everything- the long standing in line for tickets - is worthwhile, and now this evening is the culmination of all that preparation. And so Kakewalk now stands, and continues, as a living memorial not only to those presently concerned, but to those who carried on the traditions from its earliest days. As we witness the exhibitions tonight we realize that this night is only one of a long series of similar, yet strangely different, nights. We also know that Kakewalk will long endure; each year adding to the prestige and tradition of the past.

'Wheels' Back For Another Go On The K W Band Wagon

By Fred Jungmann

With the much awaited Kake Walk here again, UVM's fraternities rolled out the welcome mat for their illustrious alumni. Here is the run down from those of the " Greeks " who had definite plans, in regard to the recent grads that they were expecting back.

Acacia hails the return of John Andrews, '54, last year's Social chairman. Alpha Epsilon Pi will play host to Marvin Teplitzky and Sanford Lyman, both founders of the Zeta Pi chapter and both past treasurers of AEPi.

Delta Psi will welcome the return of Jack Schremley, '53, a former walker; Jim Wallace, Delt Psi's president in '54; Lou Bowers, president in '53, and George Hard, a Phi Beta Kappa, now in the school of medicine.

Kappa Sigma expects Art Pruneau, Kake Walk King in '51, Al Malinverni, '54, Captain of the Baske tball team; Carrol Ham, the Kake Walker who won both nights back in 1952; and Roger Belden, '53, a former president of Kappa Sig.

Returning to Phi Delta Theta are Ray Weber, '53, a past president and Walker; Jack Cowie, a president who will soon return to finish up at UVM; Ken Keating, vice-president in '54; Jack Dalton, president last spring; Don Cutler, a former "veep"; and Paul Theriault, former Kake Walk director, president, and vice-president.

Phi Sigma Delta awaits the arrival of Don Forst, last years CYNIC editor; Mat Baigell and Les Chusid, walkers last year; Karl Greenman, a past justice of the Student court; Dick Levine, S.A. and Round Table; Andy Karp, debater and Student Court Justice; Ed Struhl, former president; Gene Gordman, former president and debater; and Stan Brown, ex-Kake Walk director.

Sigma Nu gave the CYNIC the following list of returnees - Bill Thomson, Randy Muncon, Howie Bouve, John Jackson, John Jacobson, Jack Stienmatzk Earl Wingate, Douglas McSweeny, Frank Pessaro, Conny Clouse, Dave Willey, and John Connant.

Sigma Phi will welcome Henry Allen, a former Kake Walk director; John Clark, Boulder '54, Tom Mundie, President of house in '54; and Ken English, Boulder '54.

Sigma Phi Epsilon will be host to Jaun Liegh, a former president of the house; and Harry Wieser, who recently ran for Kake Walk King.

Tau Epsilon Phi heralds the return of Ed Kruchevsky, a former president; Stan Daitch, another ex-president; also Andy Gerber, Larry Cibley, Bob Ross, and Mike Wagreich.

Theta Chi expects Ralph Pallegra, a former pledgemaster of the house; Bob Stafford, who was a walker and a candidate for king; and Leighton Cox, a former president of the Arnold Air Society.

Past Winners Of 'Walking'

The CYNIC has consulted its files and after muchresearch has compiled this list of groups which have taken "walking" prizes from 1900 to 1954.

Chaplin Likens Carnival To Ancient Bacchian Festivals

By Prof. James Chapin

The explanation of a mass social phenomenon such as Kake Walk lies in the area of social psychology. One aspect of the social psychologist's job is to seek the underlying causes of group behavior patterns demonstrated on such occasions as Kake Walk, business men's conventions, bacchanalian festivals, V-Day celebrations, Mardi Gras and the like.

All such events are characterized by certain psychological processes such as: release of inhibitions; regression (returning to childish behavior patterns); latent or manifest hysteria; gastronomic overindulgence; and in some cases symbolic pageantry.

Why we may ask do otherwise normal people engage in such curious revels and demonstrate in a group, behavior which if found in a single individual, would bring men in either blue or white coats:

The answer lies in something rooted rather deeply in human nature. It is what the psychonanlytically oriented psychologist would call the Dionysian Syndrome. This can be traced back to the ancient Greeks and at the same time offers some interesting modern parallels.

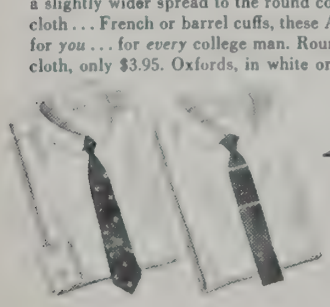
Dionysian festivals were Spring festivals held in Greece in March during which, among other things, crude plays (skits) were put on poking fun at things sacred; guards were present to see that things were not carried too far (Dean Kroepsch and the censorship committee); wine jars were crowned with garlands (King and Queen); and considerable dancing and other revelry best left to the imagination (fraternity parties), was also part of the fun.

KW and Doctor Kinsey

I am afraid that like Polonius, I have rambled on with more matter and failed to get to the heart of the problem. Why these revels whether ancient Greek or UVM Greeks? Since freedom of the press is not absolute, the camplege answer must appear in technical journals in certain two-volume works written by certain professors about certain kinds of behavior in the male and female.

However, the partial answer according to my learned psychoanalytic colleagues, is this: The pain and suffering and work that are an inescapable part of man's heritage, must nevertheless be escaped.

To put it another way, the individual must flee from himself and his responsibilities from time to time in order to maintain his psychological health. There is perhaps, no better way than to seek anonyminity in a crowd for release of inhibitions, to mock the serious and in general to revert for a time to semi-infantilism.



Should a critical note be detected in the above, let it be remembered that the great classic plays of the Greeks grew out of the Dionysian skits. Perhaps in 1984 some Martian sophomore enrolled in Masterpieces of Earth Literature (Earth talk 25, 26), will be studying the Kake Walk skits Evoe!

Museum Shows Ceramic Exhibit

The travelling exhibition rom the 18th Ceramic National eld at the Syracuse Museum f Fine Arts, Syracuse, New ork, was opened to the public t the Fleming Museum this ednesday and will continue hrough March 16th. A preview f the show was held on uesday for Museum Association embers and their guests. Mr. tanley Ballard gave a emonstration of pottery-aking in Art Gallery B and a offee hour followed in the ole Court.

This is the first time that he Ceramic National has been rought to Vermont. The show onsists of 150-200 pieces of ottery, sculpture and enamels ncluding the prize-winning nd honorably mentioned pieces rom the initial showing in yracuse. The first Ceramic ational was held in 1932 hen an exhibition of ceramics as arranged in memory of rs. Adelaide Alsop Robineau, hose famous Scarab Vase was warded the Grand Prize in he International Exposition n Turin, Italy, in 1911.

efore this time, American eramics had not been noticed n European shows and the merican buying public was nterested only in pottery ith an import label. Mrs. obineau inspired other merican ceramists to follow er lead and saved American eramics from possible blivion. The objectives of eramic National are to mprove ceramic art in merica, to educate the merican public to take an ntelligent interest in eramics and to realize that eramics as a major art.

Early Walking Adds Extra Pitch To The Real Thing

By Myron Lench

A Kake Walk preview is held each year, two days before the holiday actually begins, in the form of a walking rehearsal in the gym. In many ways the scene duplicates the actual performance, but the walkers appear in sweat shirts and sweat pants to run through their routines as an enthusiastic crowd packs in to cheer them on.

Does it take the edge off the real thing or does it add to the pre-Kake Walk excitement.

Kappa Sig Opinion

Al Maclam, who is walking for Kappa Sigma for the second successive year, feels that he will be able to take the performance more casually as a result of having gone through it once before. He feels the preliminaries should neither make him nervous nor careless.

George Dacey, the other half of the veteran Kappa Sigma team, expects keener competition this year. He says that the rehearsal should be of particular help to those who are walking for the first time.

John Hubbard, a senior, has been a spectator at every preliminary rehearsal since his freshman year. He feels the same excitement at the rehearsals as he did then. "It gives you an idea of what to expect and builds anticipation," he said.

Acacia

Al Tyler, who with George Hansen, will be walking for Acacia, says that the rehearsal adds greatly to the tension of the walkers, but that the workout with the band compensates for this tension by giving them a chance to iron out their routines.

'Ole Sol' Disturbed Sculptures Last Year; Winners Tell How

By Carol L. Chase

Despite the melting temperatures during Kake Walk weekend, the Phi Delts managed to come through with top honors last year winning the first prize and the Jennings Memorial Trophy with their snow sculpture, "What a Blast". It was especially significant winning the Jennings Memorial Trophy since last year was the first year it was awarded.

The Phi Delts spent many late nights constructing the prize-winning sculpture and the night before judging they worked from dusk 'till dawn. There was much hustle and bustle around the house since the Phi Delts also presented a skit last year. However, with excellent cooperation in this full fraternity project they came out on top.

Half-ton of Snow and Ice

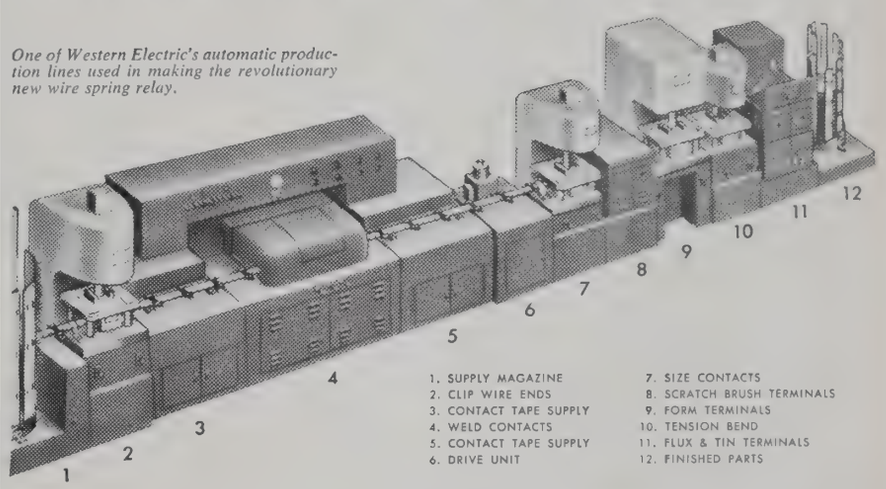
All the snow that could be found plus three truck loads of snow from the City Disposal was put into use. Sleepy Hill estimated that there was about one-half ton in all. Every bit of that snow was necessary since they used a three-story scaffolding. The base of the sculpture was packed with both ice and snow and luckily no overly-enthusiastic Phi Delts were buried.

Finally the morning of the final decision arrived and the Phi Delts had only an hour to complete their work. At last one-half hour before the judges arrived "What a Blast" was completed. Ole Sol also worked enthusiastically that day and melted the Phi Delt's work of art one hour after it had been judged. By evening the sculpture was an unrestorable ruin!

Theta's "Went" Pogo

"I go Pogo", Kappa Alpa Theta's snow sculpture entry took first place in the sorority last year, winning the Dean Simpson Trophy. Like the Jenning's Memorial Trophy this award was presented for the first time last year. Dean Mary Simpson is, herself, a Theta.

One day during the time of bewilderment when the Thetas were racking their brains for an appropriate sculpture a sister walked in while the rest were looking at Pogo comics (See, what I mean by racking brains!?). The recently arrived Theta casually mentioned, "I go Pogo". Everyone looked up in a rather quizzical manner and demanded an explanation. Her explanation soon won the approval of all the girls and at once they set out to work on their sculpture.



Close Call

Although Walt Kelley was not around to pass judgement on his characters, the Thetas made exquisite replicas of Pogo, Alfred the Alligator, and Tommy the Turtle, all in the mood for Kake Walk time. Pogo held the all-important white handkercheif to cue the UVM band, while Alfred and Tommy were ready to do some high jumping with their walking sticks to the tune of Cotton Babes.

AUTOMATION at work

A new design becomes a production reality

One of Western Electric's automatic production lines used in making the revolutionary new wire spring relay.

5. CONTACT TAPE SUPPLY
6. DRIVE UNIT
7. SIZE CONTACTS
8. SCRATCH BRUSH TERMINALS
9. FORM TERMINALS

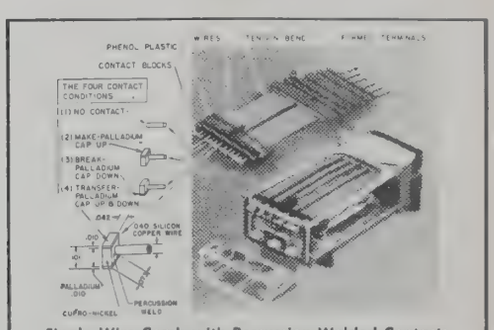
11. FLUX & TIN TERMINALS
12. FINISHED PARTS

So great was the departure in design of the new Bell System wire spring relay as compared with conventional relays that it posed a major undertaking for development engineers at Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System. Indeed, it was an undertaking that called for new machines and new methods because none was available to do the job.



Longer life, higher operating speed, lower power consumption, and lower manufacturing cost were some of the advantages promised by the new relay design. Engineers reasoned that a lower manufacturing cost could be achieved through greater precision in manufacture (which would cut adjustments) and through extensive use of automatic processes.

One of the products of this reasoning is pictured at the top of this page. This battery of equipment, developed by Western Electric product engineers, constitutes one phase of wire spring relay manufacture, which automatically performs several separate operations. Its function begins after one of the fundamental elements of the new relay has been fabricated. This element, known as a "comb," consists of a multiplicity of small diameter wires in parallel array imbedded for part of their length in molded phenol plastic.

These molded elements, of which there are two types used in the new relay, are delivered to this line of machine units in magazines. By fully automatic means they are removed from the magazine, carried by a reciprocating conveyor through each of the several processes and, when completed, placed into another magazine to await further assembly.

Between the first and final magazine the automatic battery of equipment does the following operations: clips wire ends, attaches palladium contacts to wire ends by means of percussion welding, sizes contacts, forms terminal, tension bends wires, fluxes and tins terminals.

Most remarkable of all is the fact that this is a precision operation throughout. For example, the small block contacts, which are percussion welded to the tips of wires of one type of "comb," must be located on the same plane across the twelve contact positions to within a tolerance of ± .002".

Single Wire Comb with Percussion Welded Contacts, Wire Spring Relay Designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories

One type of "comb" element is shown at top while a completed wire spring relay is below. The small blocks of metal on the ends of the wires are cut from a composite tape during the automatic multiple percussion welding operation. "Contact conditions" are determined by the code of relay being manufactured and may vary greatly.

Plenty Of Cake In Store For All Event Winners

By Michael Abramson

The cake is a traditional theme of UVM's annual winter carnival.

It was some years ago in the deep South that the first cakewalk was danced. All the plantation workers, both young and old, gathered at the end of sugar harvest. While one of the older men fiddled, the couples formed a square and stepped high and lively. Several judges considered the precision with which corners were turned, the bearing and carriage of the men, and the grace and ease of their partners as they were swung about. The couples were eliminated one by one, and the last and finest was presented with a highly decorated cake. From these festivities evolved the present fame UVM Kake Walk.

This Year's Baker

This year, Gelineau's Bakery Shop has made 38 cakes for the winter carnival weekend. Although this bakery shop has not made all the cakes in the past few years, it was this shop that baked the first festival cakes, when the father of the present owner was proprietor. The cakes range from eight eighteen-inch, four-tier cakes to ten-inch, one tier cakes. Some of the cakes weigh as little as two pounds, others as much as fifteen pounds.

In 1893, only one cake was given out to the winning walkers. Since that time more cakes have been added as prizes for the winners of snow sculpture, skits, and a poster contest.

The Results Are In The Hands Of Fifteen Judges

It's the judges who have the final word, in Kake Walk, as in anything else.

Those who make the big decisions this year are:

Friday Night Skits
Kessel Schwartz, Larry Van Benthuysen, Leon Dean.

Friday Night Walking
J.E. Pooley, Paul Moody, Ed Greif.

Saturday Night Skits
M.D. Daggett, Ed Bartlett, L.M. Jones.

Saturday Night Walking
Fred Carpenter, Milt Nadworney, E.A. Nyquist.

Snow Sculpture Judges
Donald Gregg, Donald Hardy, Willard Pope.

"Cotton Babes" Is Integral Part Of Kake Walk Tradition

A crash of the cymbals; a blare of the trumpets; a boom of the drum and the throbbing, leaping energy of "Cotton Babes" grips the fifty-eighth Kake Walk audience. What pituitary gland can resist over-stimulation when Joe Lechnyr, UVM Band Master strikes up the traditional Kake Walk melody?

Not only has "Cotton Babes "survived the years (seventy-five of them since it was written by Percy Winrich, a pop's composer), but it's also lived through a disastrous fire.

Survives Fire

Dr. Lechnyr recalls that over twenty years ago, the Band Library burned to the ground and with it went the only existing copy of " Cotton Babes." "I had been playing it for so many years, that I knew it by heart, so I wrote a new arrangement for the band which has been used since then."

Frowns on Doo-dads

In reminiscing about past Kake Walks, Dr. Lechnyr, who has led the band for thirty-three of them, says that " there has been little change in the actual walking, except for the addition of some unnecessary doo-dads."

The things which Dr. Lechnyr considers unnecessary are "posing in front of the King and Queen, and doing all sorts of flip-flops." Says Lechnyr, "This sort of thing adds nothing to the Kake Walk tradition. I'm also opposed to the big white rings used in the face make up, but I feel that blackface is an integral part of Kake Walk."

At any rate, "Cotton Babes " is certainly an integral part of Kake Walk and will undoubtedly continue to be as long as the UVM Winter carnival goes on. Dr. Lechnyr and the UVM band also have been permanent participants in this event since 1921 when he arrived on campus. For the past thirty-three years, he and the band performed "Cotton Babes " for a total of well over one thousand times.

How Many Times

The familiar tune is played thirteen times each night for the individual walkers, then four times for the "Peerade." In addition, there are two dress rehearsals in the gym preceding the big nights. Add 'em up and you've got sixty-eight performances of "Cotton Babes "...but do we tire of it? Never!

Don't 'Kake Walk' In Infirmary, Say Those Who Know

By Peggy Richter

Imagine Kake Walk in the infirmary of all places. It was a reality last year for some very prominent people on campus, namely Bev Chase, 1954's Kake Walk Queen.

If you should happen to know Wilfred " Joe" Pollender or Connie Wilson, ask them " what not to do."

Lucky Connie got to leave her sick bed Friday night, but she had to be back in the infirmary at midnight and of all horrors was greeted at the door by a smiling white cap. This was Kake Walk? Connie had one stroke of luck as she daily envied the happy faces making snow sculptures below; she got to see Queen Bev Chase first hand.

Smiling Joe had a lot less to say about Kake Walk in the infirmary. Apparently he was in for the whole time time and it was much too dreadful to even remember. He thinks he might have had chicken pox but he is too excited about this year's Kake Walk to fret over last.

So-bewary folks and take the advice of these seasoned veterans. "Don't do it."

Skits

worked for three hours each day. The week before rehearsals began the job of scheduling and casting had to take place so that the practices would run more smoothly and everyone would show up at the proper time and place.

The Phi Delt's, "Getting Back to Nature ", helped many boys relive their days as young campers.

Theory Is Professional

Over on Fern Hill the Phi Sigs began preparing for their skit one month to six weeks in advance. Initially for the first two weeks of the six they rehearsed one night a week after which they met three to five times a week.

Hal Greenfader, '55, and Mark Rosenblatt, '55, spent approximately fifty-hours writing their Kake Walk skit, "Grime Doesn't Pay ". The entire rehearsal procedure was run rather professionally on the theory that a production which ran with directors, producers, and crew would run more easily. One week is devoted to line rehearsal then they proceed to floor rehearsals at Southwick auditorium.

In an interview with Hal Greenfader he confessed that he and Mark Rosenblatt were " working on a couple of dandy ulcers. "

So you see that the finished product which we see during Kake Walk means sweat, toil and often turmoil for the fraternities that are presenting the skits.

A TRIBUTE TO FUZZY EVANS -

COACH PICKS ALL-TIME TEAM

"Life is built upon memories - college basketball oaches not excluded, " Fuzzy Evans will tell you.

In tribute to Fuzzy, whose birthday fell this week, thought it appropriate to dedicate this Kake Walk olumn to his memoirs. We are also assured that this eminiscence will bring back memories to many visiting lumni.

Coach Evans has but one scar in his better than welve years as Catamount hoop mentor - his ulcer. therwise, he has compiled a fabulous Won 143 - Lost 8 record which includes but one losing season, that eing in 1949-50. In State play his teams have won ight championships since 1939-40, compiling 70-8, a henomenal phenomena.

We approached Fuzzy at the beginning of the season nd asked him to pick his All-Time All-Star dream team-- job which brings "most high " memories in every oach's heart. The modest, graying coach replied that t would be almost impossible for him to narrow down he field. But we pressed his good nature and finally ucceeded, although Fuzzy still feels that there are ther names which could be added. Nor could the coach nclude players on this year's club for obvious rea- ons -- and rightfully so.

Without further ado, here is Vermont's Basketball oach Fuzzy Evan's All-Time Team:

1. Larry Killick - '47
2. Bob Jake - '49
3. Keith Galli - '51
4. Ed Katlarczyk - '51
5. Al Nieman - '50
6. Ham Livingston - '49
7. Nat Campana - '53
8. Ed Jasinski- '52

Evans calls Killick "one of the most talented thletes I have ever seen. " Larry, a graduate of urlington High School, came to Vermont after a year t Dartmouth. He captained the 1946-47 team, and that ear was chosen to play at Madison Square Garden, in he East-West All-Star game under Coach Nat Holman. illick, 6'-1½", was most deceptive on passing. He cored 733 points in 3 years. Larry is now situated ith N.Y.C. Little Kid basketball.

Bob Jake, who played with Killick, also transferred o UVM, from Northwestern University where he played longside Otto Graham. Jake is a graduate of UVM's Med chool and is now practicing in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, 'I can still see Jake taking that one hand push, and hat a bank man, " said Fuzzy.

"Keith Galli came here with no high school basket- all experience. The 6-4 Long Islander worked hard to levelop a left handed shot from the key. He clicked nd won a starting berth." He also gained All-Yankee onference honors. Keith is now in Grad School at olumbia.

"Ed Katlarcyzyk could do everything but foul out of game," beamed Fuzzy. "He drove, was fast, great on lefense, and scored well." Ed scored 833 points in four ears, fourth in all time UVM scoring. He's now build- ng his own memories as a high school coach in a suburb f Detroit.

"Al Nieman, captain of my '50-'51 club was my choice s top pivot man. Al had a deadly hook shot." Al is ow with Macys in New York.

"Ham Livingston, my '49, captain proved that i' 10'' height was not such a handicap if you had the pirit. The St. Albans Vermonter gets my vote because e was the best' clutch ' player I ever coached, a great ompetitor." Ham is now a coach in New York State.

Reading down the list, Evans discussed Ed Jasinski, abbing him as a 5'9'' "defensive giant with a good uick set shot to boot.

Last, but by far not least in the minds of present UVM faithful, Fuzzy submitted the name of Nat Campana, " Nat was clever. He mixed a set. drive. hook, and one

Jampolis Adds To All Time Point Record

by Mark Bernstein

Tomorrow afternoon Trinity College invades Memorial Auditorium for the 58th annual Kake Walk game. This will be the second meeting between these two clubs as they only began competition last year at Hartford, Conn. Vermont has only revenge in their minds after last years heartbreaking defeat in overtime. The Cats had fought all the way back in the second half only to have the ball stolen away in the last seconds of play; enabling Trinity to tie the score with a push shot from half-court. The overtime told the story though as Coach Oosting's boys from Trinity won.

Trinity Has Rough Year

This year the picture appears to be the same for both Trinity and UVM. Whereas the Cats have only won four games, the boys from Hartford are in worse shape as they have won only two. From all reports it appears that Trinity College is just about ready to set loose as they will be coming into Memorial Auditorium riding a ten game LOSING streak. Its going to be "one of those really big ones".

Jampolis Continues Piling It Up

Turning away from tomorrows annual Kake Walk game we must proceed to make mention of the Catamount who is breaking a school record with each passing game; notably Captain Keith Jampolis. Keith hails from Brooklyn, N. Y. where he played high school ball before entering UVM.

Upon his entrance to Vermont the NCAA rule stating that freshmen were not eligible to play varsity ball had not as yet been put into effect. With this extra year to play, Keith has amassed the highest total of points of any individual player throughout their four years at UVM. The record for four years was previously held by Nat Campana with 855 pts. but that was broken by Keith Feb. 2 against St. Michaels in the tenth game of the season. With each passing game Captain Jampolis sets a new record as he is setting his sights for the magic 1,000 mark. Going into tomorrows game with Trinity, Jampolis will have to average approximately 15 points per game to accomplish his proposed feat.

As we put an end to this article may we make mention of one little fact: . . . . . Captain Jampolis' number is (13).

Earl, Keith, Pledge Allegiance To Coach In Missing KW Ball

By Dick Schatten

For seniors, Keith Jampolis and Earl Steinman, there will be no more Kake Walks as students at UVM. Keith is the highest scorer in Vermont basketball history. Earl is destined to become the school's number two point getter. If the pair ever return to witness a future Kake Walk and thereby attend a Kake Walk Ball, it will be a first for both boys. You may wonder why, after four years at the University neither of them has ever been to a Ball. Well, it seems that each year on the Thursday of the Ball the basketball team plays an out-of-town contest, thereby eliminating the possibility of any varsity player attending the Thursday night festivities.

When asked how they felt about the situation both boys agreed that although they would have liked to see a Ball before they graduate, they owe their allegiance to Coach "Fuzzy " Evans. The boys felt just about the same way concerning the Saturday afternoon game, played during Kake Walk.

Keith and Earl, who are very good friends off the court, will, of course, be sorry to part with each other, Kake Walk and UVM come June.

With respect to this year's team in comparison with those of past years, both "Jamp " and the "Duck " felt that Coach "Fuzzy " Evans had done a great job with a bunch of youngsters. Keith expressed the opinion that in two years from now, and possibly even next season, the team would be a top flight one. Earl added that boys like "Skippy " Burkhardt, Billy Mann, Dickie Dennis and Jack LaFave need only experience to become very valuable assets to the team.

Keith, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Earl, who is from New Britain, Conn., jointly stated that last year's team had the distinct advantage of having several boys who had had at least one year of varsity play behind them, including some who had as many as three years experience.

All in all it should be a great Kake Walk as usual for all concerned. Sorry you can't be there when things begin "Jamp " and Earl, for you will be at Manchester, N.H., playing St. Anselm's after having fought it out with Clark the night before. We'll see you on Friday and Saturday for the rest of the doings, including the game with Trinity on Saturday afternoon.

Woods Sporting Goods Donates M V P Trophy

The Vermont "CYNIC" will again sponsor The Most Valuable Basketball Player Award Contest. Last year the contest was initiated with such great success, that it will become an annual affair.

The Trophy has been donated by Woods Sporting Goods Store, 78 Church St., and it will be known as the Woods Trophy.

The voting will be held February 25 in the Waterman Main hall. All students and faculty members are eligible to place one vote each for their choice. The award is given to the Player who has contributed the most to the all around team play this season. The trophy will be presented to the winner at the last home game of the season which is Wednesday, March 2, against Brandeis.

The Trophy will read:

Top Five Teams To Qualify For Natio als

by Dick Lewis

This is a big weekend for the UVM Ski Team as they move down to Middlebury for the Middlebury Carnival, which will be considered as the N.C.A.A. tryouts. The top five teams at the Carnival will represent the East at the NCAA championships at Norwich on March 4 - 5. Also, any member of the other teams who gains one of the first five positions in any event is eligible for competition in the NCAA meet.

According to reports we have received from Coach Charlie Traverse, the team is in excellent shape. The boys have shown constant improvement and are ready for this weekend's activities.

Cross Country Tops In East

The big showing at the Middlebury Carnival is expected from Larry Damon - one of the top cross-country men in the East and a possible Olympic Squad candidate, Clint Thompson, Bill Purcell and Al Duval. The cross-country men are in excellent shape and will undoubtedly come up with another of their top rate performances.

The Alpine Squad will feature a new man this weekend. He is Bill White, who just returned to school after breaking his leg last year. Others on the squad include Larry Damon, Frank Evans and Bill Battles.

Jumpers Stronger

The men who fly through the air with the greatest of ease - the jumpers of the UVM Ski Team will feature a much improved Jerry Baril who placed 7th at Norwich, Bill White, Larry Damon and Bill Purcell.

Norwich University held its annual Winter Carnival last weekend and as usual the UVM Ski Team came up with a good performance. The results of the meet are under protest and at this writing we are not quite sure of the final results.

Mural Mirror

During the past week the activities in the interfraternity final round of basketball were somewhat curtailed. However, nine games were still played and KS and SAE are now the two league leaders. Both teams have a 3 and 0 record. The league title should be decided when these two teams meet. KS, the defending champion will be the favorite in this contest, but could be upset by the improving SAE squad.
